His Majesty's Commissioners for building new Churches have presented their sixth annual report. The general result of the labours of this commission, and of the measures which they now have in contemplation, may be stated shortly as follows:—From the opening of the commission they have determined upon, and made provision, for the erection of 165 additional churches and chapels, and 64 of that number either have been, or are ready for consecration.—Since their last report 18 churches and chapels have been completed, capable of affording accommodation for 11,690 persons in pews, and for 15,220 poor persons in free seats. Seventeen churches and chapels are now in progress. The committee have received plans for 11 other churches and chapels, part of which have been received; but they have not yet received plans for seven other churches and chapels, which are proposed to be built at places specified. The committee have proposed to make grants in aid of building 66 new churches and chapels, and four of these are now in progress.—The committee are proceeding in that part of their duty which relates to the expediency of dividing parishes, and for obtaining additional burial-grounds for certain parishes. The Commissioners have issued Exchequer Bills to the amount of 777,200*l.*

Shocking Circumstance.—On Friday evening between eleven and twelve o'clock, a young man fashionably attired, was observed walking backwards and forwards in a very melancholy mood, opposite Islington church. Having at length retired to the church yard, he took his seat on one of the tomb stones, and with a pen knife, which he held in his hand, inflicted a desperate wound in his throat. Two gentlemen, who were passing at the time, and perceiving the unfortunate gentleman sitting in such an extraordinary situation, at that hour of the night, proceeded to the spot, when they found the blood issuing from the wound profusely, and the wounded man stooping forward as if to facilitate the flowing of the blood. A surgeon was sent for, who, without delay, dressed the wound, and had him conveyed to the work-house, at Islington, in a most dangerous condition. He refused to give his name or address, and the few words he uttered, expressed his sorrow that he had not done the act effectually, which he was determined ultimately to accomplish. Inquiries have been made, and it is ascertained that he is a Mr. Pearman of Holloway, a private individual, living on his income, and that of late, he has betrayed strong symptoms of a mind diseased, remaining from home for days together, and then returning in a melancholy condition, and refusing to account for his absence.

NEW EDITION, THE TENTH, ENLARGED,
With Observations on the Danger of trusting to Nostrums, as an Internal Remedy for the Cure of Strictures. Illustrated by Cases. Price 3s.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS on STRICTURES of the URETHRA and RECTUM, recommending an improved system for their Treatment and Cure; illustrating its efficacy by numerous remarkable and highly important cases, in some of which, Strictures of from ten to twenty years duration have been totally removed in a few weeks, and its superiority thereby fully established over every other method hitherto practised. By C. B. COURTENAY, M.D. To which are added, Observations and Practical Comments on Gleet, Seminal Weakness, and the miseries occasioned by Self Abuse, for the cure of which a mode of treatment, the result of long and successful practice, and at once safe, speedy, and effectual, is adopted by the Author.

Printed for the Author, Robert-street, Adelphi; and published and sold by Jones and Sherwood, Paternoster-row; Onwhyn, 4, Catherine-street, Strand; Chapell, Royal Exchange; Marsh, 145, Oxford-street; Walker, 90, High Holborn; Chappell, 94, Pall Mall; Sutherland, 9, Carlton-street, Edinburgh; and may be had of all Booksellers.

"We earnestly recommend the cases related by Dr. Courtenay to the perusal of such of our readers as are afflicted with the complaints which the Author has made the subject of these Observations. Several instances are adduced of the recovery of perfect health from states which were considered hopeless by Practitioners of eminent talents, and very extensive experience. We entertain the highest opinion of Dr. Courtenay's professional skill, and congratulate him on his successful and judicious application to these severe and often fatal diseases."—European Magazine.

IMPOSTURE UNMASKED.—The progress of Merit, although frequently assailed, is not impeded by Envy and Detraction. The aggression of ambuscade terminates in defeat; and conscious rectitude ultimately triumphs in the attainment of the grand object—public approbation. The test of experience is the guarantee of favour, and has established WARREN's BLACKING in general estimation; of which there exists not a stronger proof than the tacit acknowledgment of a host of servile imitators, who surreptitiously obtrude on the unwary a spurious preparation as the genuine article, to the great disappointment of the unguarded purchaser, and manifest injury of WARREN, whose character and interest by this iniquitous system are equally subject to detriment. It becomes therefore an indispensable duty to CAUTION THE PUBLIC against the manœuvres of Unprincipled Venders, who having no character to lose, and stimulated by avarice in their nefarious pursuits, aim at the acquisition of money through any medium than that of honour! The original and matchless BLACKING bears on each bottle a short direction, with the signature

ROBERT WARREN

All others are counterfeits; and in many instances the imposition labels are artfully interlined with a different address, in very small characters, between the more conspicuous ones of "No. 30," and "STRAND." It is earnestly recommended to Shopkeepers and others who are deceived by base fabrications of WARREN's BLACKING, to return the detected trash to the source whence it came, and expose the machinations of rascality to merited obloquy.

WARREN's BLACKING is surpassingly brilliant;—it excludes damp; gives pliancy to the leather; retains its pristine virtue in all climates; and combining elegance with comfort, is an article equally of indispensable fashion and utility. Sold by every respectable Vender in Town and Country, in bottles, at 6d. 10d. 12d. and 18d. each.

SWAN WITH TWO NECKS, LAD-LANE, GENERAL COACH OFFICE.

Dover, Deal, Ramsgate, Margate, and Canterbury Patent Coaches Daily Morning and Evening.

THE following ROYAL MAILS depart from the above Inn every evening at half-past Seven, Sundays excepted. Every Sunday evening at Seven.——Bath and Exeter, through Devizes, Taunton, and Collumpton.——Birmingham (in 13 hours), through Stony Stratford, and Coventry.——Bristol, through Reading, Marlborough, and Chippenham.——Carlisle and Edinburgh through Chorley, and Garstang.——Chester through Salop, Ellesmere, and Wrexham.——Exeter, through Salisbury, Blandford, and Dorchester.——Falmouth Royal Mail.——Holyhead, through Wolverhampton, Shrewsbury, and Bangor.——Kidderminster, through Birmingham, Dudley, and Stourbridge.——Liverpool, through Dunchurch, Newcastle, and Congleton.——Manchester, through Northampton, Derby, and Macclesfield.——Milford Haven, through Cardiff, Carmarthen, and Haverfordwest.——Norwich, through Chelmsford, Colchester, and Ipswich.——Plymouth Royal Mail.

The following Post Coaches start regularly at the time specified.

MORNING COACHES.—Birmingham and Holyhead, the Eclipse, through Coventry, at a quarter before 8. Passengers by this Conveyance have the privilege of resting one Night at Birmingham, proceeding next Morning, without additional expense.——Brighton Light Safety Coach, through Riegate, at 9.——Derby Light Coach (in 15 hours, two Coachmen only), at half-past 6.——Holyhead Light Coach through Shrewsbury, quarter before 8.——Leicester Light Post Coach, through Northampton, at half-past 6.——Norwich New Safety Coach (in 14 hours, one Coachman only) at 5.——Nottingham, Times, every Morning at half-past 6.——Southampton Light Coach every Morning at half-past 8, Tuesdays and Fridays at half-past 7, arrives in time for the Guernsey and Jersey Steam Packets.——Weymouth and Dorchester (in 15 hours), at 5.——Windsor and Eton, at 7.

AFTERNOON COACHES.—Birmingham, the Balloon, through Stony Stratford, at half past five.——Bristol, the Regent, through Reading, a quarter before four.——Carlisle, Glasgow, and Edinburgh, through Manchester and Dumfries, a quarter before four. Passengers travelling by this conveyance have the opportunity of resting one night on the road, without additional expense.——Canterbury, the Tally-ho! half-past two (in 7 hours.)——Cambridge Tally-ho! (in 5 hours,) quarter past two.——Coventry 4-inside Coach, a quarter before six.——Derby, the Regulator, (in 18 hours) quarter before four.——Dudley and Stourbridge, 4-inside Coach, at half-past five.——Exeter, 4-inside Coach, through Basingstoke and Honiton, at two.——Edinburgh and Glasgow, through Newcastle, at half-past four.——Falmouth and Plymouth Light Coaches, at two.——Liverpool, the Royal Alliance, (in 26 hours) at half-past four.——Manchester, Royal Defiance, (in 24 hours) at four.——Manchester, the Regulator, through Dunstable, quarter before four.——Milford Haven, through Newport and Carmarthen, at four.——Nottingham, (in 18 hours) through Loughborough, at a quarter before four.——Royston and Buntingford, at half-past two.——Taunton, through Cross and Bridgewater, at four, at reduced fares.——Tenby, Merthyr, and Pembroke, at four.——Warwick and Leamington Spa, at half-past five.——Windsor and Eton, at 4.

Chester and Parkgate, every Morning at a quarter before eight, and Evening at half-past five.——Paris New Light Diligence, by way of Dover, every Morning, at seven, and at half-past six in the Evening.

N.B.—Parcels and Luggage conveyed daily to all parts of the North and to every City and manufacturing Town in the Kingdom.

W. WATERHOUSE & Co. Proprietors.

NOTICE.—No Parcel, or Passenger's Luggage, will be accounted for above the value of FIVE POUNDS, unless entered as such and paid for accordingly.

BIRTHS.—On the 30th of July, at Brighton, the lady of Charles F. Burnett, Esq. of a son.—At Teddington, on the 31st July, the lady of Lieutenant-colonel Monckton Coombs, of a son.—On Friday, the 9th of June, on her passage from Spain, the lady of Charles Chamberlain, Esq. his Majesty's Consul at Carthagena, of a son.—On Wednesday, the 2d of August, in Montague-place, the lady of W. S. Best, Esq. of a son and heir.—On the 27th ult. at Gwyrck Castle, Denbighshire, the lady Emily Hesketh, of a son and heir.—On the 31st ult. in Baker-street, the lady of Hugh Owen, Esq. M.P. of a son.—On Wednesday, the 2d inst. in Mortimer-street, of a son, the lady of Henry Baynes Ward, Esq.—On the 30th July, at Exmouth, the lady of John Sweetland, Esq. of a daughter.—On the 29th July at Downton House, near Kington, Herefordshire, the lady of W. S. R. Cockburn, Esq. of a daughter.

MARRIED.—On Thursday last, at St. Pancras New Church, by the Rev. M. Brackenbury, Mr. Henry Woodley of Cork, to Miss Matilda Caroline Slade, of Kentish town.—On Monday, the 31st of July, at Petersham church, John Collett, Esq. eldest son of Ebenezer John Collett, Esq. M.P. Lockers House, Hemel Hampstead, to Emma, youngest daughter of Sir Thomas Gage, Bart. of Hengrave Hall, Suffolk.—On the 29th ult. at Shiplake church, the Rev. Horace R. Pechell, to Caroline Mary, third daughter of the Right Hon. Lord Mark Kerr.—At Topsham, on Thursday, the 27th ult. Richard Bright, Esq. M.D. of Bloomsbury-square, to Eliza, youngest daughter of Benjamin Follett, of Topsham, Esq.—On Wednesday, Mr. Henry Weigall, of York-street, St. James's-square, to Silena, youngest daughter of the late Richard Smith, Esq., of Hammersmith.—At Parham Park, Sussex, August 1, George Richard Pechell, Esq. Captain in the Royal Navy, to the Hon. Katherine Annabella Bisshopp.—On Tuesday, at St. George's, Hanover square, Lieutenant-colonel Horton, second son of Thomas Horton, Esq., of Howroyde, Yorkshire, to Frances Esther, second daughter of the Rev. Wm. Garnier, of Rookesbury, Hampshire.—Friday, at Belchamp-Walter, Essex, Mr. John Palmer, of Hitchin, Herts, to Lydia, second daughter of Mr. Stubbing, of Mary-hall.—On Thursday last, at St. Giles's in the Fields, Charles Frederick Cock, Esq. to Jane Harriet, eldest daughter of the late Rev. Wm. Whitchurch, of Silchester, Hampshire.—On Wednesday, the 2d inst. at Mortlake, Surrey, John Burton Philips, eldest son of John Philips, Esq. of Heath-house, Staffordshire, to Joanna Freeman Cure, daughter of the late Capel Cure, Esq. of Blake-hall, Essex.

DIED.—On Wednesday, the 2d inst., at his house in South-street, the Earl of Winchelsea, K.G. in his 74th year.—On the 2d inst. in her 66th year, Sarah Walker, wife of Jonathan Barnes, Esq. of Upper Kennington Green, Surrey.—On the 28th ult. Miss Jane Barr, King's-road, Chelsea, daughter of the late William Barr, Esq. of Symons's Wharf, Southwark; and of Camberwell, Surry; aged 48.—At Bombay, on the 1st February last, Edward Baker, Esq. Lieutenant-colonel in the Hon. Company's service, and Commissary-general of the Army.—Colonel Baker was the fifth son of the late John Baker, Esq. of the County of Kent.—On the 1st inst. Mr. John Bittleston, of the Strand.—On Friday, the 28th ult. at the house of Captain Stanley, Jane, second daughter of the late Wm. Barr, Esq. of Nightingale-hall, Shooter's-hill.—On the 31st ult. at Bath, Mr Edward Andrews, of the firm of Adams, Son, Bell, and Co. Bread-street, Cheapside.—On the 1st inst. in her 23d year, Rhoda, the wife of Samuel Richardson, of Denmark-hill.—At Highgate, the 31st ult. Elizabeth, the wife of James Kibblewhite, Esq.—On Tuesday, August 1, aged 16 years, George Gunning, only son of George Potter, Esq. of Nun Green, Peckham; and of the East India House.—At Brighton, on Saturday, the 29th of July, Hugh Merrik, second son of Henry Charles Hoare, Esq. aged 14 months.

London: Printed and Published by [illegible] RICHARDS, at 343, [illegible]

THE AGE.

" THE VERY AGE AND BODY OF THE TIME."

VOL. II. No. 66. SUNDAY, AUGUST 13, 1826. Price 7d.

THEATRE ROYAL, HAYMARKET.—To MORROW Evening, The Actor of All Work, with a comic drama, in two acts, called Poor Relations; or, Who's to Inherit, and Paul Pry—Tuesday, Thirteen to the Dozen, with the Opera of Clari, and other entertainments.—Wednesday, Paul Pry, with other entertainments—Thursday, Thirteen to the Dozen, with other entertainments—Friday, a popular Comedy, with other entertainments. —Saturday, Sweethearts and Wives.

Madame Vestris will commence her engagement at this Theatre on Saturday next, when she will appear in Laura, in Sweethearts and Wives.

The new grand Opera will be repeated every Evening.

THEATRE ROYAL, ENGLISH OPERA HOUSE. —To-morrow, Monday, August 14th, The Oracle, with Free and Easy. —Tuesday, The Oracle, with Lying Made Easy, and Gretna Green.—Wednesday, The Oracle, with The Last Guerrilla.—Thursday, The Oracle, with Amateurs and Actors.

Last week of Le Signora Romanine's performances.

ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE, (ASTLEY'S,) Westminster-bridge. Monday, August 14, and following Evenings, at half-past Six, exact time. Missolonghi, or The Massacre of the Greeks; in the course of the evening the new performances of Signora Rosalia and Signora Veronica Romanine upon the Flying Wire. Equestrianism in the Circle. The academical demonstration of the art of riding as relative to females, by Miss E. Ducrow. Horsemanship by Mr. Woolford. Mr. Ducrow will manage the Turkish mare Beda, and the two dwarf Lapou Horses. The entertainments to conclude with (by desire) Paul Pry on Horseback.

The Box-office is open daily from 11 till 1.

Under the Especial Patronage of His Majesty.

ROYAL GARDENS, VAUXHALL.—The Proprietors respectfully announce the Grandest Gala of the Season, being in commemoration of his Majesty's Birth Day, the August Patron of the Royal Gardens, which will take place To-morrow Evening, Monday 14th August. On this auspicious occasion, and in consequence of the great attraction of his previous Ascent, and numerous applications for a repetition, the Proprietors have arranged with Mr. Green, who will make his Last Ascent at Night, in his magnificent BALLOON!

Which will be beautifully illuminated by a brilliant discharge of Bengal Lights. Mr. Green hopes again to have the pleasure of the company of one or two Ladies or Gentlemen; and assures them that they need not apprehend the slightest danger, Mr. G. having made Fifty-seven Ascents, and in every instance reached terra firma without the slightest accident. He will depart from the Gardens between the First and Second Acts of the Concert; and, as in the two former instances, will no doubt be enabled to return to the Royal Gardens in time to pay his respects to the company. Terms for the Voyage may be known at the Gardens.

The ILLUMINATIONS will exceed, in brilliancy those of this or any former Season; and upwards of 13,000 Extra Lamps, of variegated colours, will be displayed in numberless Trophies, Devices, Mottoes, &c.

The CONCERT will be appropriate, and will include all the celebrated talent in the metropolis, viz. Miss Travis, Miss Love, Miss Helme, Mr. Braham, Mr. Sinclair, Signor de Begnis, Messrs. Robinson, Barker, Taylor, Horncastle and Tinney. Leader of the band, Signor Spagnoletti. Conductor, Mr. Bishop.

The beautiful Moonlight Scene of

THE RUINS OF AN ITALIAN ABBEY,

Produced by the celebrated Mr. Stanfield, of the Theatre Royal Drury Lane will be again exhibited.

The CAMBIA VEDUTA, a series of changeable Views, by Mr. Cooke, with the light and shade effect of the Diorama. The illuminated Grove will be open for the second time this season.

Mr. WILSON on the Tight Rope will exhibit his surprising Evolutions in a complete change of Performances, amongst which an entire novelty, called the Carnival of Venice, or a Masquerade on Two Tight Ropes, by Mr. Wilson, assisted by the Young American, introducing Polichinello and Family, with Comic Dancing, &c.

On this Evening, for the first time, will be performed a New Ballet, produced expressly for his Majesty's Birth Day, entitled Il Coronamente della Roziere, composed by Mons. B. Vestris. The music by Mr. G. H. Rodwell. The scenery by Mr. Thorne. Principal Dancers, Madame Pauline Rossignol and Monsieur B. Vestris; Mesdames Colson, Adelaide, and Bianca; Monsieur Sullivan, and the Two Ridgways; who will Dance an entirely new Grotesque Pas de Deux. During the Evening, Mr. Blackmore will exhibit his usual Evolutions on the Slack Rope. A Military Band will play at intervals, during the Evening, in the Orchestra. The celebrated Southby has had in preparation, many weeks past, the finest Exhibition of

FIRE WORKS

Ever produced in this country, and for which he is paid a large sum extra; the Public may therefore expect a great treat in the Pyrotechnic Art on the present occasion. In the last Grand Piece the Young American will make his Terrific Ascent to the Moorish Tower, and descend amidst Volumes of Fire.

Doors open at Seven.---Concert commences at Half-past Eight.---Admission 4s.

Additional Police are engaged; and the Public are requested to order their servants to attend to the instructions respecting carriages.

Orders will not be admitted, and the Free List and Complimentary Cards will be suspended on this Evening.

ELIXIR VITÆ!

Of all the genial dews that o'er
The heart their influence rain,
Its gladd'ning spring-time to restore,
Give me divine CHAMPAGNE!

Doctors! no more I cross your palms,
Here's one worth all the rest:
CHARLES WRIGHT is mine! the best of balms,
CHAMPAGNE!—PROBATUM EST.

63s. 72s. and 84s. per dozen.—Opera Colonnade.

WINES, RETAIL and WHOLESALE.—Café de L'Europe, No. 9, Hay Market, two doors above the Theatre Royal. This splendid Room, which has been fitted up in the most elegant and costly manner, is opened for the reception of the Public, for the consumption and sale of every description of European wines, both bottled and from the wood; the entire stock has been imported and selected with judgment and liberality, and no expense has been spared to render the whole worthy of patronage. The Morning, Evening, and Foreign Journals, with the popular Periodicals and Pamphlets will be provided.

☞ To LET, a capital House and Shop, enquire as above.

THE LONDON and WESTMINSTER WINE and SPIRIT COMPANY, No. 16, STRAND, opposite St. Martin's Church, have constantly on Sale—

	Per Dozen.		Per Dozen.
Port, Vintage 1820	27s to 30s	Bucellas	42s to 48s
Ditto, Crusted	36s to 42s	Claret, St. Julien	42s to 48s
Ditto, 5 to 8 years in bottle	48s to 56s	Ditto, Lafitte and Margaux	72s to 96s
Sherry, Pale and Brown	27s to 36s	Sparkling Champagne	72s to 84s
Ditto, Amontillado	42s to 48s	Ditto, and Creaming, of the first quality	90s to 96s
Cape, from	16s to 24s	St. Peray, dry and sparkling	63s to 72s
Madeira, West India	36s to 42s	Chablis	50s to 63s
Ditto, East India	48s to 60s	Hermitage, Red and White	72s to 84s
Teneriffe, Lisbon, Vidonia, and Mountain	30s to 36s	Moselle, Sauterne, &c.	50s to 60s

Old Tom, Jamaica Rum, Cognac Brandy; Fern-tosh, &c. per imperial measure at reduced prices.—Bottled Stout, Cider, Perry, Burton and Edinburgh Ales.

☞ All Goods must be paid for on or before delivery.

Letters post paid, to be addressed William Godfree and Co. No. 16, Strand.

BURGESS' ESSENCE of ANCHOVIES, Warehouse, 107, STRAND, corner of Savoy Steps, London.---JOHN BURGESS and SON, being apprised of the numerous endeavours made by many persons to impose a spurious article for their make, feel it incumbent upon them to request the attention of the public, in purchasing what they conceive to be the ORIGINAL, to observe the Name and Address correspond with the above. The general appearance of the spurious descriptions will deceive the unguarded, and for their detection J. B. and Son submit the following caution:---Some are in appearance at first sight "Burgess' Essence of Anchovies;" others, "Burgis's," and many more without address.---JOHN BURGESS and SON having been many years honoured with such distinguished approbation, feel every sentiment of respect towards the public, and earnestly solicit them to inspect the labels previous to purchasing what they conceive to be of their make, which they hope will prevent many disappointments.

Burgess' New Sauce for general purposes having given such great satisfaction, continues to be prepared by them, and is recommended as a most useful and convenient sauce; will keep good in all climates.

Warehouse, 107, Strand, corner of the Savoy Steps.—The Original Fish-Sauce Warehouse

BARNETT'S MONODY on WEBER, (written by W. M'Gregor Logan, Esq.) composed as a companion to his "Not a Drum was heard," 2s. The Highlander's Bride, 2s. by ditto; Two Songs from the "Interrupted Sacrifice," each 1s. The beautiful duet sung by Miss Paton and Mr. Sapio, 2s. The Music of the same opera for the Pianoforte and Flute, ad lib. by Rimbault, 3 books, each 3s. 6d. Do. for the Flute only, by Sausts, 3s. 6d. Do. by do. for two Flutes, 5s. The Opera of do. for Voice and Piano, 22s. 6d.

London: Published by R. COCKS and Co., 20, Prince's-street, Hanover-square. Catalogues Gratis.

NEW SONGS, &c.—"O'er the Valley, o'er the Mountain," sung by Madame Vestris, the words by G. Dailey, Esq. the music by C. E. Horn. Price 2s.

"Lillies of the Valley," the words by T. H. Bayly, Esq. the music by Sir Jno. Stevenson. Price 2s.

"Oh, still where'er my feet shall stray," sung by Mr. Braham, composed by C. M. Von Weber. Price 1s. 6d.

"How sunk is her Eye," composed by J. Willis. Price 2s.

"The Blue Bells," a trio for soprano, tenor and bass, sung with the highest marks of approbation at the Nobility's Concerts, composed by E. G. H. Gibsone. Price 3s.

"What makes this world so fair," a trio for two sopranos and bass. 2s. 6d.

Goss's Parochial Psalmody, containing Psalms, Hymns, Responses to the Commandments, single and double Chants, &c. 1 vol. boards. Price 6s.

Just Published, by J. WILLIS & CO. Royal Musical Repository, 55, St. James's-street, (opposite Jermyn-street,) London, and 7, Westmorland-street, Dublin, where may be found, every variety of Grand, Cabinet, Cottage, Square, and Circular Pianofortes, Harps, &c. from the most eminent makers, at the lowest manufacturers' prices.

NEW MUSIC.—Just published at the ROYAL HARMONIC INSTIUTION, Argyll Rooms, 216, Regent-street.

The Songs, Duets, &c. in The Oracle, or the Interrupted Sacrifice, composed by Winter, newly arranged by Wm. Hawes.

Overture		2 6
The rosy dawn hath driven	Chorus
When battles conch is sounding	Sung by Mr. Atkins	2 0
The trumpet first is sounded	Do Mr. Thorn	2 0
We Maidens mark me	Do Miss Goward	1 6
All hail to the God of our Fathers	Chorus
Now by love and peace invited	Sestett and Chorus
Oh when thine eye is throwing	Duet Miss Paton and Sapio	2 6
All powerful sun	Sung by Mr. Phillips	2 0
There was a time ere sorrow	Do. Miss Paton	1 6
Between my hopes and fears suspended,	Duet, by Miss Paton and Phillips	2 6
When will peace relieve my breast	Do. Miss Hamilton	1 6
How the plaguing varlet teases	Do. Miss Goward and Thorn	2 6
We hail thee Lords of Light	Finale, 1st Act	10 0
Tho' we all can feel thy sorrow	Quartett and Chorus
In what sad hour	Trio
Oh heavens the thought is frightful	Duet
Hast never mark'd the flower	Song, Miss Boden	1 6
The Maid who'd wish to slumber	Quartett	2 6
The Gloomy terrors of the grave	Scena, Mr. Sapio	2 6
Farewell, yet not for ever	Quartett
The evening is descending	Finale	10 0

Burrows's Selection of Airs from Weber's Opera of Oberon, arranged for the Piano Forte, with Flute adlib, in four books, each 4s.

DEATH FETCH.—The music in the admired and popular Opera, composed by C. E. Horn.

I'VE BEEN ROAMING.—Cavatina, sung by Madame Vestris, by C. E. Horn, price 2s.

NEW MUSIC.—Published by GOULDING and D'ALMAINE, 20, Soho-square.

VOCAL.

Buy a Broom, the admired air, sung by Miss Love, at Vauxhall, composed by H. R. Bishop, price 1s. 6d.

I am twining, I am twining, ballad, composed by T. Rawlings, price 2s.

Draw the Sword Scotland, sung by Mr. Braham, at Vauxhall, adapted and composed by G. H. Rodwell, price 1s. 6d.

"Blame me not, my gentle Laddie," sung by Miss Travis, composed by John Parry. Price 1s. 6d.

A Series of popular Songs by Bishop, Braham, Stevenson, Horn, &c. with Guitar Accompaniment, by C. M. Sola.

The Opera of ALADOIN, composed by H. R. Bishop, price 1l. 11s. 6d. or the Songs, Duets, &c. may be had single.

☞ This Opera contains the celebrated air, "Are you angry, Mother?" the Ballads, "The Sun is o'er the Mountain," "My Araby, my noble Steed," &c.

PIANOFORTE.

Select Airs from Meyerheer's Il Crociato in Egitto, in 4 Books.

Rossini's	Zelmira	3
	Semiramide	3
	Il Tancredi	4
	Othello	3
	Aureliano in Palmira	2
Bishop's	Aladdin	3

By I. F. BURROWES, for the Pianoforte, with Flute Accompaniments, and as Duets for the Pianoforte, the books price 4s. each.

☞ The celebrated Opera of "Medea in Corinto," is just published, as arranged for the Harp and Pianoforte, with Flute and Violoncello accompaniments, in 2 books, price 10s. 6d. each, and for the Harp, in 3 Books, price 3s. 6d. each; by N. C. Bochsa; and as arranged for the Pianoforte, in 2 Books, price 4s. each, by C. Dumon.

HARPS and PIANOFORTES for Sale or Hire.

TURKEY COFFEE of the FINEST QUALITY, at the following reduced prices:—Raw, 2s. 6d. per lb.—Roasted, 3s per lb. The Public are respectfully informed, that Government having reduced the Duty on Turkey Coffee, they may now purchase that article at the above-mentioned reduced prices, warranted of the finest quality, at John Marshall and Company's Tea and Coffee-Warehouse, No. 12, Southampton-street, Strand.

TO FAMILIES TRAVELLING, PROMENADING, and ENJOYING AQUATIC EXCURSIONS, &c. &c. are respectfully recommended the following Genuine Articles, which at this season of the Year are indispensable for the preservation of personal attraction;—

ROWLAND'S KALYDOR FOR THE COMPLEXION.

An inestimable, mild, and innocent production, powerfully efficacious in thoroughly exterminating Eruptions, Tan, Pimples, Freckles, Redness, and all Cutaneous Imperfections; producing a delicate White Skin, and a Juvenile Bloom to the Complexion; preserving it from the heat of Summer.—In Travelling, Promenading, or enjoying Aquatic Excursions, it immediately allays the smarting irritability of the Skin, diffusing a Pleasing Coolness truly comfortable and refreshing; affords soothing relief to Ladies nursing their offspring; warranted perfectly innoxious for the most delicate Lady or Infant.

To Gentlemen after Shaving, it allays the irritating and smarting pain, and renders the Skin smooth and pleasant. Price 4s. 6d. and 8s 6d. per bottle, duty included.

To Preserve the Human Hair, during Travelling, Bathing, and Violent Exercise, and to retain it in healthy vigour to the latest period of Life, is particularly recommended

ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL,

The first production of the age, and the Original and Genuine.

A Vegetable Production, possessing salubrious and wonderful nutritive properties, which prevents the Hair falling off, occasioned by excessive perspiration; is pre eminently successful in nourishing the Hair; preventing its falling off or turning grey, &c. and has the unequalled property of giving a most fascinating and delectable appearance to the Hair.—Price 3s. 6d.—7s.—10s. 6d. and 21s. per bottle. The distinguished sanction it has received from Royal and Illustrious Personages, in addition to the flattering testimonials transmitted of its efficacy, places this declaration above suspicion.

CAUTION.—In consequence of the high popularity of the above articles, Flagrant Impostors have made false statements, and counterfeited each; Copying Bills, Labels, and Bottles, which renders it indispensably necessary on purchasing, to ask for "ROWLAND'S," strictly observing that each Bottle of Rowland's Genuine Articles are enclosed in a Wrapper, Signed on the Label, in Red,

A. ROWLAND AND SON, 20, HATTON GARDEN.

Sold by appointment, by Mr. Hendrie, Perfumer, Titchborne-street; Mr. Smith, Messrs. Gattie and Peirce, 57, Mr. Belcox, 158, D. Rigge, 35, New Bond-street; Bayley and Blew, Cockspur-street; Berry and Lloyd, Greek-street; Mr. Sanger, 150, Oxford-street; Mr. Low, 330, Prout, 226, Strand; Butler, Chemist, 4, Cheapside; Barclay and Sons, 95, Fleet Market; Mr. Rigge, 65, Cheapside; Mr. Sutton, Bow Church-yard; Mr. Edwards, 66, and Messrs. Newberry, St. Paul's Church-yard; Mr. Burgess, Holborn-hill; Mr. Kennaby, Bartholomew-close; Messrs. Evans, Long-lane; Messrs. Dunn and Co. Hatton-Garden; and all respectable Medicine Venders, &c.

Just Published, in 3 vols. post 8vo. price 30s,

ALLA GIORNATA;

OR, TO THE DAY. A Novel.

Printed for SAUNDERS and OTLEY, Public Library, Conduit-street.

MORAL AND POLITICAL PHILOSOPHY FOR THE WORKING CLASSES.

This day is published, price Sixpence, and to be had of H. Stemman, and of every Bookseller and Newsman,

THE POOR MAN'S FRIEND, or Companion for the Working Classes; giving them useful information and advice; being the system of Moral and Political Philosophy laid down and exemplified by WILLIAM COBBETT.

 This Elementary Treatise, or Grammar of Moral and Political Philosophy, is sold complete for Sixpence. No copy is genuine which has not the Head in the Title-page. The Publisher will treat with Gentlemen who may wish to take a quantity for distribution: and also with Schoolmasters who may be inclined to introduce it as a Class Book into the National Schools. It contains more instructive matter than any work of the same size and price, that has appeared for many a day. The beautiful wood-engraving is alone worth half the money.

To sail first week in September, for Passengers only, (under engagement with the Hon. East India Company),

FOR CALCUTTA, with liberty to land Passengers at MADRAS, the fine ship CAMBRIAN, JOSEPH BLYTH, Commander. Burthen 700 Tons. Lying in the City Canal. Apply to Messrs. Gazett, Farquhar, Crawford & Co. 71, Old Broad-street; to Capt. Blyth, at the Jerusalem Coffee-House; or to Buckles, Bagster, and Buchanan, 33, Mark-lane.

THE ANTISEPTIC BOTANICAL TOOTH-POWDER—Cleanses, Whitens, and Preserves the Teeth in a manner quite unrivalled and fastens them even if loosened by mercury. Sold in Boxes, 2s. 9d. each, by I. V. SIMPSON (Proprietor) 28, Henrietta-street, Covent-Garden; by Messrs. Stradling, Royal Exchange; Johnson, 68, Cornhill; Anderson, 156, Bishopsgate Without; Pearson, 31, Fleet-street; Prout, 226, and Low, 330, Strand; Bayley and Blew, Cockspur-street; Hawkins, 11, Gattie and Pierce, 57, and Tuaner, 75, Bond-street; Simpson, 21, Piccadilly; Sanger, 150, Oxford-street; Colley, 5, Holles-street; Tosswill, Greenwich; Wright, Hammersmith; Bedell, and Ryder, Islington, and by most respectable perfumers and Medicine Venders throughout the kingdom.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH.—MR. WM. BEACALL and Mr. ROSE, Surgeon Dentists, 13, Newman-street, Oxford-street having with unremitting diligence long made the Science of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, where mechanical contrivance is requisite, their peculiar study, continues to supply the loss of Teeth, with Natural or Artificial, in a superior manner, without the least pain, from a single Tooth to a complete Set, at little more than one-half the usual charges. Teeth cleaned if ever so discoloured, and rendered white and beautiful, without pain or injury to the enamel. Extracting, Stopping, and every operation on the Teeth and Gums.—Attends at home from Ten till Four.

THE BRITISH SPECIFIC, for re-producing and promoting the GROWTH of HAIR.—The principle of its operation is to cool and contract the pores which are opened by a redundancy of heat, occasioning a relaxation of the roots, and render them incapable of retaining the hair; to counteract which nothing is better calculated than the British Specific, as, from its invigorating and oleaginous properties, it almost immediately arrests the falling off, and affords such effectual nourishment to the roots, that persons giving it a fair trial may assure themselves of its speedily restoring it, even where it has become completely bald, however long it may have been so, and, if grey, gradually to restore it to its natural colour. The superiority of this preparation (the invention of a medical man) derives additional recommendation from its being, unlike other compositions for the hair, so extremely clean and agreeable, that its application is a real pleasure, and is only requisite to be generally known to receive the preference of every article in use for similar purposes. To be had only of D. Peden, 15, Burlington Arcade, Piccadilly, in bottles, 6s. each, or cases of four bottles for 1l., forward to order on receiving the amount, post paid.

J. PERRING, of No. 413, Strand, two doors from the Adelphi Theatre, offers to the public HATS at prices accordant with the times, not made up for Sale alone, but warranted of the best materials, such as will do the Seller and Wearer equal credit. To sell cheaper only than other persons is not the end sought for—to produce a good article bearing a small profit for Ready Money, best suits the convenience of both parties. The Proprietor of this establishment has carried on business many years upon such principles, with satisfaction to himself, and a discerning public.

Among the many systems of trade, perhaps this is not the worst at any rate—the purchase of One Hat will ruin no man; those who have confidence to do so, are respectfully solicited to favour the Proprietor with a call. The following priced Hats are particularly recommended to the notice of the Economical:

Good Fine Rich Silk Hats in a variety of shapes, at..... 15s.
Perring's Patent Double-edged Ditto, having an extra quantity of Napping on that part of the Crown most exposed to wear..... 17s.
Good Light Water Proof Beaver Hats, Drab and Black .....20s. 22s. 24s.

An extensive assortment of Youth's and Boy's Hats, Seal, Fur, and Cloth Caps. Young Ladies' Beaver Hats and Bonnets, Gentlemen's Forage and Travelling Caps in great variety. Hats covered with Silk and made double-edged for 12s. 413, Strand, two doors west of the Adelphi Theatre.

SWAN WITH TWO NECKS, LAD-LANE, GENERAL COACH OFFICE.

Dover, Deal, Ramsgate, Margate, and Canterbury Patent Coaches Daily Morning and Evening.

THE following ROYAL MAILS depart from the above Inn every evening at half-past Seven, Sundays excepted. Every Sunday evening at Seven.——BATH and EXETER, through Devizes, Taunton, and Collumpton.——BIRMINGHAM (in 13 hours), through Stony Stratford, and Coventry.——BRISTOL, through Reading, Marlborough, and Chippenham.——CARLISLE and EDINBURGH through Chorley, and Garstang.——CHESTER, through Salop, Ellesmere, and Wrexham.——EXETER, through Salisbury, Blandford, and Dorchester.——FALMOUTH ROYAL MAIL.——HOLYHEAD, through Wolverhampton, Shrewsbury, and Bangor.——KIDDERMINSTER, through Birmingham, Dudley, and Stourbridge.——LIVERPOOL, through Dunchurch, Newcastle, and Congleton.——MANCHESTER, through Northampton, Derby, and Macclesfield.——MILFORD HAVEN, through Cardiff, Carmarthen, and Haverfordwest.——NORWICH, through Chelmsford, Colchester, and Ipswich.——PLYMOUTH ROYAL MAIL.

The following Post Coaches start regularly at the time specified.

MORNING COACHES.—BIRMINGHAM and HOLYHEAD, the Eclipse, through Coventry, at a quarter before 8. Passengers by this Conveyance have the privilege of resting one Night at Birmingham, proceeding next Morning, without additional expense.——BRIGHTON Light Safety Coach, through Reigate, at 9.——DERBY Light Coach (in 15 hours, two Coachmen only), at half-past 6.——HOLYHEAD Light Coach through Shrewsbury, quarter before 8.——LEICESTER Light Post Coach, through Northampton, at half-past 6.——NORWICH New Safety Coach (in 14 hours, one Coachman only) at 5.——NOTTINGHAM, Times, every Morning at half-past 6.——SOUTHAMPTON Light Coach every Morning at half-past 8, Tuesdays and Fridays at half-past 7, arrives in time for the Guernsey and Jersey Steam Packets.——WEYMOUTH and DORCHESTER (in 15 hours), at 5.——WINDSOR and ETON, at 7.

AFTERNOON COACHES.—BIRMINGHAM, the Balloon, through Stony Stratford, at half-past five.——BRISTOL, the Regent, through Reading, a quarter before four.——CARLISLE, GLASGOW, and EDINBURGH, through Manchester and Dumfries, a quarter before four. Passengers travelling by this conveyance have the opportunity of resting one night on the road, without additional expense.——CANTERBURY, the Tally-ho! half-past two (in 7 hours.)——CAMBRIDGE Tally-ho! (in 5 hours,) quarter past two.——COVENTRY, 4-inside Coach, a quarter before six.——DERBY, the Regulator, (in 18 hours) quarter before four.——DUDLEY and STOURBRIDGE, 4-inside Coach, at half-past five.——EXETER, 4-inside Coach, through Basingstoke and Honiton, at two.——EDINBURGH and GLASGOW, through Newcastle, at half-past four.——FALMOUTH and PLYMOUTH Light Coaches, at two.——LIVERPOOL, the Royal Alliance, (in 26 hours) at half-past four.——MANCHESTER, Royal Defiance, (in 24 hours) at four.——MANCHESTER, the Regulator, through Dunstable, quarter before four.——MILFORD HAVEN, through Newport and Carmarthen, at four.——NOTTINGHAM, (in 18 hours) through Loughborough, at a quarter before four.——ROYSTON and BUNTINGFORD, at half-past two.——TAUNTON, through Cross and Bridgewater, at four, at reduced fares.——TENBY, MERTHYR, and PEMBROKE, at four.——WARWICK and LEAMINGTON SPA, at half-past five.——WINDSOR and ETON, at 4.

CHESTER and PARKGATE, every Morning at a quarter before eight, and Evening at half-past five.——PARIS New Light Diligence, by way of Dover, every Morning, at seven, and at half-past six in the Evening.

N.B.—Parcels and Luggage conveyed daily to all parts of the North and to every City and manufacturing Town in the Kingdom.

W. WATERHOUSE & Co. Proprietors.

NOTICE.—No Parcel, or Passenger's Luggage, will be accounted for above the value of FIVE POUNDS, unless entered as such and paid for accordingly.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

PARIS, Aug. 6.—Lieutenant-General Viscount Digeon, Peer of rance and Aide-de-camp to the King, who acted as War Secreary during the journey of the Duke of Belluno to Bayonne, died sterday. He was 55 years of age.

WURTZBURG (BAVARIA), July 25.—We are informed that, in e conferences of Lembach, the King has again, and with much ergy, insisted on the execution of the treaty which secures to avaria the restitution of the Palatinate of the Rhine, on its right nk. Austria pays 100,000 florins a-year to Bavaria, until the ecution of the treaty; but the King has manifested deep regret being still separated from the ancient subjects of his house. His Majesty has refused all the demands of M. de Metternich, r alterations respecting the Liberty of the Press, and the pubity of the Sittings of the Chambers. A piquant saying of the ing is generally talked of. On the departure of a Bavarian bleman, attached to his person, for Vienna, he addressed him so to be heard by the whole Court of Austria, in these words:—When you see Prince Metternich, beg of him from me, not to tertain so much fear to the Constitution of Bavaria, and assure m that I shall never be a King of Jacobins, but that also I shall ver cease to be King of the Bavarians." It is known that . de Metternich, and his intimate adviser, M. de Gentz, give dern Constitutional Kings the nickname of Jacobin Kings.

The Lisbon papers contain a Royal Decree, dated 27th April, Rio Janeiro, granting an amnesty to all such Portuguese as may ve been imprisoned, prosecuted, or exiled, for political opinions, d pardoning, besides all crimes, for which no greater punishent than three years' condemnation to the gallies had been arded: and, likewise, all crimes, where not more than three ars of the sentence remained to be completed at the issuing of decree. Means have been adopted for giving full effect to this licious measure. An official note from Oporto, of the 22d July, tes, that from the prompt and decisive measures adopted against enemies of the state, public tranquillity remained undisturbed. most all those who had endeavoured to excite disturbance had en seized and imprisoned. Among the insurrectionists are mened Brigadier Madureira and Colonel Silva. The gathering of these enlightened few was—"Huzza for Spain, and give an absolute King!"

STATE OF TRADE.

DUBLIN.—In consequence of a resolution, which, we learn, s entered into on Saturday last, by the Relief Committee, from scantiness of the funds in their possession, to reduce the wages the unfortunate weavers who have been employed in making ds in the vicinity of Dublin, sixpence per day, many hundreds them assembled on Monday, in the neighbourhood of the Circu-road, and came in a body into the city; they made a formida-, but, at the same time, a most affecting and melancholy aparance; many of them held their squalid children by the hand, l poverty and despondency to such an extent was depicted in ir countenances, as to be sufficient to excite the commiseration any person whose heart was not callous to the sufferings of his low-creatures. In passing through Westmoreland-street, Daneeet, &c. to the Royal Exchange, where they purposed to present tition to the committee, they distributed a printed handbill to following effect:—

"Fellow Citizens—Do not be the least surprised at seeing so ny of your poor fellow-citizens rambling through your city, in er to ask whether you have given your sanction for us, poor d-makers, to be reduced from one shilling to sixpence per day? ve us bread for our children; so, of the two evils choose the st, for rely on it we will billet them where there is something eat."

"Dublin, August 7, 1826."

Between two and three o'clock they arrived at the Royal Exnge. About half past four, there being no answer given to ir memorial, they became impatient. Mr. Houghton, a rectable manufacturer, residing in Celbridge, on leaving the Exnge, was hooted by them. Mr. Houghton did not know the sc of it; he retired into Mr. Grierson's shop in Parliamentcet; from thence he was escorted by some of the police to the d-office. The reason assigned by those unfortunate people manifesting displeasure towards Mr. Houghton was, from ir understanding that Mr. Houghton was the person who ved the resolution for the reduction of their miserable daily ance. Mr. Houghton stated in the police office that they were lly mistaken on that point—that he did not move any such reution. About five o'clock they began to depart from the Exnge in different parties; some of them went up Usher's-quay, forced open a bakery; others adopted the same course to get visions in Thomas-street, Francis-street, the Coombe, Meathet, &c.; but the largest number assembled in James's-street, with stones or brick-bats attacked the bakery of Mr. Manders. ur of them were, in different places, taken into custody. Before en o'clock, however, by the activity of the police, they were dispersed, We will not attempt to be the apologists for exses committed under any circumstances, but surely the wretched ation of those unfortunate beings and their families, is enough drive them to desperation. Is there a man who has a shilling a guinea to spare, that should not come forward and render se men, in some way or other assistance? If those who possess ans be not actuated by feelings of humanity, they should be by tives of duty; for it is impossible to say in what way they y be visited by the effects of the "distress of the poor."—blin Morning Post.

BLACKBURN.—We are happy to observe that the favourable nptoms mentioned in our last have suffered no abatement in the rse of the week, either as it respects this town in particular, the manufacturing districts in general: here the weavers have ained rather more work, but, we believe, at no better prices. very decided improvement can, however, be said to have taken ce: yet it is cheering to find that there is some hope.—Blackn Mail.

t is worthy of remark, that whilst the Lancashire manufacturers said to be in extreme distress for want of employment, harvest nds are so scarce in the fens of Lincolnshire, that at Doningon Monday se'nnight shearers of wheat were hired at 8s. per , besides their ale.

STATE OF TRADE.—We have the pleasure to assure the public t trade continues gradually to improve in this part of the gdom. On Tuesday last, a more than usual portion of buess was done in our White Cloth Hall, particularly in the ecle, shawls. In the Mixed Cloth Hall, an equal degree of ditional business was not perceptible, but on the whole, the gress towards better times received no check; and a general position to extend rather than restrain confidence begins to vail. As we before stated, however, the principal improvent has taken place in coarse woollens—the manufactures which are mostly of that description of persons incapable amassing large stocks. But as a general proof of increasing siness, we may mention the fact, that one of the first houses Leeds has received such extensive orders lately, as, besides ing full employment to all their own hands, have enabled m to order six hundred pieces of cloth from another mafacturer in a neighbouring village, Bramley. At Bat, the two public mills (manufactories owned by Joint ck Companies, and which work for whoever requires it) now between five and six days per week, and at Birstal, Gorsal, Morley, and other places in that neighbourhood, a like ge is apparent. At Heckmondwike and Dewsbury, where the pet and blanket trade is chiefly carried on, and where, since winter, distress has existed to a truly painful extent, some alteration towards a revival of business has taken place. We are, nevertheless, obliged to state, that in nearly the whole of the district which these remarks embrace, a great number of people are yet, either totally or partially unemployed, and the assistance of the benevolent indispensable. The number of unemployed poor in Leeds and its immediate vicinity, is also great, and we regret to add, that for the present, the Local Committee has been obliged, from paucity of funds, to suspend its weekly allowance to them. In Bradford and Huddersfield, the persons destitute of work, and dependent on casual charity, are very numerous. But we are glad to say, that the masters in the stuff and fancy lines, appear in higher spirits than heretofore, although this is rather the effect of present prospects, than immediate experience of improvement.—Leeds Mercury.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

COURT OF CHANCERY, AUGUST 8.

COVENT-GARDEN THEATRE.

In the case of Const v. Harris, which has been so often before the public,

Mr. HEALD presented a petition on the part of Mr. Robertson, the Receiver, the object of which was, that the Master might review his report, he having disallowed a great number of items in the Receiver's accounts, amounting altogether to a sum of 1,644l. Mr. Heald said he thought it was a very hard thing for Messrs. Const and Harris to call on the Receiver to pay into Court all the balance in his hands, when the items contained in his account, were expenses, without which, the Theatre could not have gone on, such as the payment of the Parochial and Assessed Taxes, and the payment of performers, to whom arrears were due; and, as the Receiver considered they were of great consequence, and that if the theatre was deprived of their services, the business of the drama could not go on, he thought it proper to pay them. The paper, containing the amount of the expenses of the theatre, submitted to the committee, at a meeting appointed by this Court, among other items, contained a charge of 236l. for carpenters' expenses for one week, with various other charges, after all of which had been paid, there remained only a sum of 50l.

Mr. HART, in opposing the petition, observed, it was brought on merely for the purpose of preventing his client obtaining his Lordship's judgment on a motion made some time ago.

The case not being concluded by five o'clock, his Lordship directed it to proceed to-morrow.

AUGUST 9.

CONST V. HARRIS.

In this case, which was partly heard yesterday, Mr. Sugden, on the part of Mr. Harris, contended, that the receiver had no right to have paid the charges contained in his accounts, out of money which, according to the orders of the Court, was not applicable to such disbursements.

The Lord Chancellor said he believed the first theatre which ever got into Chancery, was the Royal Circus, in Lord Thurlow's time. In consequence of that precedent, the Haymarket, Covent garden, the Royalty, and several other theatres, had followed the example of the Royal Circus, and, he had no doubt, if all the time was put together which had been spent in discussing questions relating to the different theatres, it would amount to some years.

Mr. Heald, in reply, observed, he supposed when gentlemen belonging to a theatre once got into Chancery, they liked it so well, as not to be able to get out of it. He thought, as long as Courts existed, they would have something to do with theatres, and he had no doubt they always had: but he believed theatres were of a much more ancient date, than a Court of Chancery. The items contained in the receiver's accounts were mostly small. The largest item was an oilman's bill, 169l.; poor's rates, at different times, 124l., and 111l.; in the whole, amounting to 1,800.; out of which, he believed, the parties could have distrained for above 1,000l.

The Lord Chancellor inquired, if the application to review the report, extended only to items such as he had mentioned, or generally?

Mr. Heald said, only to those items.

The Lord Chancellor said it was impossible that the theatre could go on this way from time to time. This Court had nothing to do with a theatre but as a common partnership; carry it on as long as it could; and if there was any delay on the part of any of the parties concerned to sell the theatre, he would do as Sir William Grant very properly did as to the Opera House, order it to be sold forthwith. He thought all the proprietors ought to be informed, that if these proceedings were to go on in the Master's Office, as they had done, there was no alternative but to sell the theatre. As that was what he considered would be the end of all this, he thought the sooner the Court ordered the property to be sold the better; and perhaps it would be material that it should be sold before the new season commenced. His Lordship said he would dispose of the application on Friday morning.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 10.

MAWMAN V. TEGG.

The Solicitor-General observed, his Lordship had ordered this matter to stand over for the defendant to make an affidavit, but which affidavit had not yet been made, as there was no time limited for making it.

Mr. Horne said, he understood his client was making the necessary affidavit, but, though his clients were authors, they were not quite so quick in compiling affidavits as they were other matter.

The Solicitor-General said, as all the parties were resident in London, he thought they might be able to make the necessary affidavit by Monday.

The Lord Chancellor directed the affidavit to be made in reasonable time.

CONST v. HARRIS.

The Lord Chancellor having gone through the whole of the facts of this case, stated, that unless he formed a different opinion between this and Monday morning, he should order the receiver to pay the money into Court.

The Court then proceeded to hear cause petitions, which occupied the whole of the day, none of which were of any interest to the public.

MECHANICS' MAGAZINE—JUDGMENT.

M'KOY V. ROBERTSON.

On the Lord Chancellor coming into Court on Friday, his Lordship observed, he had looked through the whole of this case, from beginning to end, and he was quite satisfied it was not a case in which this Court would grant an injunction in the first instance. If the parties wished him to state the reasons at length which induced him to form that opinion, he would do so at any time they liked; but he really thought, and he spoke it sincerely when he said so, that he considered both sides very little understood the situation in which they were placed, and, if they would allow him, he would desire them, between this and Monday, to consider whether they had not better call in some common friend to decide the differences between them; he was quite sure if they did not comply with that, the time would come when they would be sorry they had not taken his advice. When he said the Court would not grant an injunction in the first instance, what he meant was, that Mr. Robertson's undertaking to keep an account of the profits of the work, was the very utmost the Court would do.

Mr. Heald, counsel for the plaintiffs, said, he was sure his clients, after what his Lordship had stated, would not wish him to state any reasons for his opinion. If the parties could not settle the matter between this and Monday, he hoped his Lordship would do something which would make the offer of Mr. Robertson, to keep an account of the work, binding on that gentleman. He would, however, take care what his Lordship had stated should be mentioned to his clients.

ASSIZE INTELLIGENCE.

OXFORD CIRCUIT.—GLOUCESTER, AUGUST 8.

BRIMMEN V. RAYER.

This was an action for an assault.

Mr. Chilton opened the pleadings. The declaration averred that the defendant, in and upon the nose of the plaintiff, made an assault on the 22d of May, and gave unto it divers pulls, squeezes, and pinches.—(Loud laughter.)

Mr. Ludlow here remarked that he had mislaid his brief.

Mr. Justice Burrough—Well, never mind that, you can go on without it as well as with it.

Mr. Ludlow—Gentlemen, I have certainly mislaid my brief in this case, but as his Lordship truly says, I can go on as well without it as with it, for I have very little to say to you. You have heard from my learned friend (Mr. Chilton) that this is a complaint made on the part of the plaintiff, for having, among other grievances, had his nose violently squeezed and pulled. Now, though there was a laugh when my learned friend stated what this case was, I really think there is nothing laughable in it, but I dare say those who have exercised their risible muscles think it a very pleasant and agreeable operation to be performed upon any one. In point of taste, I differ with those persons, and do conceive, as I hope you will, that it is a gross outrage, which ought to be punished with exemplary damages. The learned counsel then detailed the facts of the case, as afterwards given in evidence, and concluded by calling on the jury to give such a verdict as would deter the defendant from practices of this kind.

Witnesses being examined, who proved the facts as stated by the learned counsel.

Mr. Ludlow said, that is my case, my Lord.

Mr. C. Phillips—And a pretty case it is, gentlemen, to be brought into a court of justice! A pretty case it is to defraud the Quarter Sessions of, if fit to be brought into a court of any sort. I don't know whether it will be necessary for me to call witnesses or not. That will depend upon an intimation I may perhaps receive from you, after I have mentioned to his Lordship that I cannot dispute the assault in this case. Gentlemen, I unquestionably approve of all the doctrines which my learned friend has so pathetically laid down upon the uses of noses. A nose, unquestionably, is not only an ornament to the human face, but answers several most useful purposes, and, among others, serves as a handle for correction when necessary.—(Loud laughter.) When the proprietor of the nose thinks fit to keep as a near neighbour to it, a very uncivil tongue, as it appears the plaintiff in this case does, from his own witnesses, then I admit that it is a most useful feature on his face. Now, let us see what this case is. (The learned counsel then entered into the details of the assault, and concluded in the following manner:—) I will tell you what I once heard a very learned Judge say upon this subject; and as we are in the habit of listening with reverence and admiration to all that falls from the distinguished and learned persons who fill seats upon the Bench, it made an indelible impression on my mind: the case was exactly similar to the present. The plaintiff had called the defendant a rascal, and the defendant tweaked the plaintiff's nose. When the case was brought into court, the learned Judge recollected and mentioned a similar case, in which the counsel for the defendant addressed the jury to this effect:—"Gentlemen, I cannot deny the assault, and therefore I admit you must give a verdict against my client; but I beseech you let it be only for one farthing, and then I will tell you what the plaintiff had better do with it: he had better go to the next oil-shop, buy a farthing's-worth of soap, and then, when he got into company, if he wishes to indulge in his propensity for calling people 'rascals,' he need only soap his nose well, and he will escape with only part of the punishment his own insolence draws on him."—(Laughter.) So I say, gentlemen, give but a farthing to the plaintiff in this case. I do not dispute that he deserves it; and if he goes to my learned friend, after this trial, and asks his advice what to do with the farthing, I have no doubt, as he always gives his clients the best result of his sound judgment, he will recommend him to lay it out in soap.—(Laughter.)

Mr. Justice Burrough—Well, gentlemen, you have heard this case. You must give some damages: what is your verdict?

After a few minutes' consultation, the jury found for the plaintiff, damages one shilling.

Mr. Phillips—I hope he will lay it all out in soap.

Mr. Ludlow—And I hope your Lordship will certify.

Mr. Justice Burrough—Certainly not.

Joseph Pugh, aged 23, and Wm. Davis, aged 31, were charged with killing and slaying Josiah Dee, at Oxenhall.

Mr. Philpotts conducted the prosecution, and called

Edward Llewyllen, who stated that the prisoners and the deceased were at a public-house at Newent on Sunday night, the 23d of April last, when, in consequence of some angry words, Pugh struck the deceased. They then got up and agreed to leave the house for the purpose of having fresh air to fight in. Then having regularly chosen their seconds and bottle holders, in the presence of a number of other persons they shook hands, and having fought 14 rounds, the deceased was rendered insensible from a blow on the head.

Several persons were examined, and stated to the same effect. On cross-examination, the witnesses admitted that the fight was a fair one.

A surgeon, who examined the deceased, stated that he died almost immediately after the fight, and that he found a large quantity of blood forced into the cavity of the brain; he could not say whether it was the blow or the fall that occasioned the death.

This was the case for the prosecution.

Baron Garrow, in summing up the evidence, said this was not one of those disgraceful occurrences so common heretofore in this county—a fight arising from a love of gain, but it appeared to be an encounter arising from a provocation, which, though unhappily followed up by the death of the one, yet it might be fairly considered by the jury as the effect of accident.

The jury acquitted the prisoner.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 10.

THE IDIOT SMITH.

SMITH V. HODGETTS.

After two days consumed in the speeches of Counsel, and the evidence which had been already before the public,

Mr. Justice Burrough, in charging the Jury, said he had not felt himself equal to the task of summing up the evidence, at the late hour at which the defendant's case had been closed on the previous night. The questions for their consideration were—were the publications given in evidence in the cause, libel or not? Were the matters contained therein true? and if they were of opinion that the several matters pleaded in justification, or any of them, were proved? Many observations had been made with respect to the liberty exercised by the Editors of newspapers. He would be the last person not to acknowledge the inestimable advantages which the liberty of the press was in being a safeguard to the Constitution, but he regretted that the papers had got into a most incautious habit of publishing matters, which brought severe injury to the characters of others, and this, as too often happened, without the slightest foundation in truth. Wherever they acted so, it was the province of juries to award compensation, and that compensation they were also to measure in proportion to any aggravation which was subsequently given to the original act; and he considered placing on the record a justification, that was, that they would prove all the facts, to be the greatest aggravation of which the editor of a paper could be guilty, supposing the justification not strictly proved. The Learned Judge read the libel, which he commented upon past by part. Upon the whole of the case, he considered that there was not a tittle of evidence to support the justification, with the exception of the part in which the Magistrate, Mr. Broughton, and Mr. Eld, went to visit the house. With respect to that visit, there was some colour for the charge; but as to the hesitation which was stated to be shewn by the family in not immediately admitting them into the presence of their brother, it was the natural feeling of persons who knew he was not then fit to be seen. The second libel, published on the 25th of February, threw some light on the first, published on the 11th of February; for, up to that period, they had been circulating slanders in the dark. In that paper it was proved to demonstration that Mr. Smith is the person on whom this atrocious conduct is charged. They commenced by saying they received a communication since they published the statement of the 11th of February. He begged it to be generally understood by newspaper editors, that no matter what communication they should receive and publish, that could be no answer to a charge of libel. It was their duty first to be convinced of the truth, before they published any matter injurious to the character of another, that they might be prepared to justify themselves if called upon to do so. If they were not bound to exercise due caution of this kind, there could be little safety to the public. He was strongly of opinion that the greater part of the facts alleged in the libel, the feeding through a hole in the wall, like a swine, &c. were not proved at all; and that the libel was of the most injurious tendency. It was particularly so, when published, as the last libel was, with a knowledge that some of these circumstances were to be made the subject of legal investigation. In the pleas put in by the defendants, he observed one in which it was stated, that the defendants had only copied the paragraph from another newspaper; whatever answer that might be in a criminal prosecution by indictment for publishing a libel, he wished it to be understood it could be none at all, where there was an action for damages. There was another most abominable plea put in, the last—that the whole matter stated was true; this was abominable, because it should be known it was the duty of the defendant, when pleading his justification, to plead severally to each and every article, specifying distinctly, in what particular instance the facts were true. He did not think from the evidence, there was the slightest foundation for some of the charges, such as the fact of the thigh being broken, and as happening after the lunatic came into the care of the plaintiff. There was no contradiction of a material nature to any of the evidence brought forward, to prove the uniform treatment which the lunatic received after the death of his father. They all stated he was treated as one of the family, and he believed it. The question then was that of damages; for as the defendant had not proved the whole of the libel, as he was bound to do, there must be a verdict against him. Damages were certainly more due when the libellous publications were such as to poison the public mind. They would exercise their judgment coolly and dispassionately, and if they thought the several matters not justified, they should give so fair a remuneration to the plaintiff as would be a compensation to his injured character; and in doing this he recommended them to act with moderation.

The jury consulted some time, when the foreman addressed his Lordship, and said they were agreed on the pleas, but not on the damages.

Mr. Justice Burrough—You had better retire, Gentlemen, and consider your verdict.

A bailiff was sworn to attend them to their room, where they remained about half an hour, and then brought in their verdict for the plaintiff—Damages 400l., costs 40s.

There is a similar action commenced against the Proprietors of the Salopian Journal, in whose paper the libel was first inserted, and which is expected to last at least for two days longer. Some overtures, we understood, were made to have it decided by the result of this, but they were rejected by the defendants.

There is also a prosecution by indictment at the suit of the Magistrates of the county of Stafford, against the plaintiffs, for alleged cruelty to the lunatic. Both these cases must protract the business of the Assizes to the next week.

Mr. Phillips is retained for the defendants.

At the conclusion of the trial, a gentleman said to his Lordship, My Lord, the Foreman of the last Jury wishes to address you on the subject of an attack made upon him by one of the defendants.

Mr. Justice Burrough—Who is he?

The Foreman (Mr. Rayer) came forward and stated he had been grossly insulted on account of the verdict he had given.

Mr. Justice Burrough—By whom? Mr. Bird.

Mr. Justice Burrough directed Mr. Rayer to be sworn.

The witness then said—After the verdict was given, I was walking in the passages of the Court, where the defendant's attorney met me, and said, "I am much obliged to you for your verdict." I walked on, and met him in the street, where he again said, "I hope your verdict was a conscientious one; that I might expect George Smith (the lunatic) to visit my pillow that night." He then left me, and went on a few yards. He came back, and said, "I wish to ask you a question: did you not walk into Court with Mrs. Flint, the wife of the attorney for the plaintiff, this morning?" He repeated, over and over again, that I might expect George Smith on my pillow. I replied I should not, unless he brought him there. He then said, when he next came to Gloucester, he hoped he would meet an honest Jury.

Mr. Justice Burrough asked was the attorney in Court?

Mr. Bird presented himself, and said he hoped to be heard in his own defence. All he had said to Mr. Rayer was, "Let me advise you, the next time you go into a jury-box, not to play the part of an advocate;" and this without any threat, or the intention of it.

Mr. Justice Burrough—Then, Sir, you have behaved extremely indecent.

Mr. Bird—I should be sorry to act indecently, but in my own defence I must say, that being both attorney and defendant in this cause, in the warmth of the moment, having met the Foreman, I said what I did, and I must say, I never met, in a practice of twenty-five years, a Jury who put so many and such questions to the witnesses.

Mr. Justice Burrough—Sir, you are aggravating the offence; my judgment is, that you be committed. Mr. Rayer may, if he pleases, accept a proper apology from you.

Mr. Bird—I am ready to submit to any thing your Lordship pleases, and was proceeding to state further, when he was interrupted by Mr. Justice Burrough—No words, Sir, you may apologize or not.

Mr. Bird—Then, under your Lordship's directions, I am sorry for what I have said; and I beg to say, that I said it with respect to Mrs. Flint, under an impression that the Foreman did walk into Court with Mrs. Flint.

Mr. Justice Burrough—Mr. Rayer, you have acted quite right, to bring this matter before the Court; and you, Sir, also right, to make an apology.

SMITH V. EDDOWES.

This was an action brought by the plaintiff against the Proprietor of the Salopian Journal, for printing and publishing the libel first mentioned in a previous case.

Mr. Campbell, in stating the case, thought proper to advert to the verdict, and to the circumstance of the attack made upon the Foreman of the former Jury.

Mr. C. Phillips, with some warmth, objected to this conduct, and the Court held the objection to be well founded.

The printing and publishing of the libel in question was admitted, and

Mr. Campbell then called an attorney, who formerly acted for the plaintiff, who swore that he believed the person meant in the libel was William Smith.

Mr. Campbell was then about to go into all the evidence adduced on the former trial, but it was deemed unnecessary by Mr. Justice Burrough.

Mr. C. Phillips then made a powerful appeal to the jury, justifying the libel from beginning to end, and contending, that unless clear malice could be brought home to the defendant, he ought to have a verdict in his favour.

With the assistance of Mr. Godson, the learned counsel then called all the witnesses who appeared for the defendant in the last case, and they gave similar testimony. They also proved the will of Isaac Smith, by which the idiot had 50l. a year for life.

Mr. Campbell then replied at considerable length.

Mr. Justice Burrough, we believe, summed up the evidence, but it was utterly impossible to hear or understand him in the place which our reporter occupied.

The jury found for the plaintiff—Damages 100l.

LANCASTER, TUESDAY,—WAKEFIELD'S CASE.

At no former period, within the memory of the oldest inhabitant, is there upon record any instance of this city being so crowded as at present, and that, too, by the congregation of the principal gentry of the county, and indeed persons of rank from every part of England. Every lodging has been taken, and some idea of the exorbitant charges may be formed, when we state, that ten guineas are demanded for the use of two very humble rooms during the Assizes.

As the time for the trial of Wakefield approaches, the interest appears to increase, and every rumour connected with it is devoured with eager avidity. Mr. Turner, his daughter, her governess, and the family suite, arrived in carriages this evening, and have taken possession of the lodgings provided for them on the Castle Hills. Their approach was regarded with much curiosity, and an evident sympathy seemed to pervade those around the carriage for the young lady, as she alighted from it. She wore a close veil, and her features could not be seen.

Mr. Wakefield's brothers are here, and some other friends of his. The brother charged as an accessary before the fact, will surrender upon his bail in the course of the week. The witnesses for the prosecution are all here at private lodgings. They are principally the post-boys, inn-keepers, bar-maids, chamber-maids, &c., upon the line of road through which the elopement took place. Some idea may be formed of the nature of the business of this Assize, when it is computed, that at present there are above one thousand persons who will be called to give evidence in some shape or other during its continuance.

At eight o'clock this eveuing the Judges arrived in town, escorted by J. P. Machell, Esq. the High Sheriff, and an immense cavalcade of horsemen. Their Lordships crossed the Ulverston Sands. The Commission was opened and read in the Crown Court, and their Lordships adjourned until to-morrow, at twelve o'clock.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 9.

POSTPONEMENT OF WAKEFIELD'S CASE.

The Judges entered this town yesterday, and proceeded to the Castle, where the Royal Commission was opened in the usual form.

This morning the Judges attended divine service, after which they proceeded to the Castle, and commenced the business of the Assizes. The greatest anxiety was manifested about the trial of Wakefield, which, it was expected, would be fixed for to-morrow or Friday.

CRIMINAL SIDE.

(Before Mr. Justice Park.)

The Court was crowded to excess at an early hour, particularly by fashionable females.

The usual preliminary forms having been gone through, the following gentlemen were sworn upon the Grand Jury:—

Hon. Edward S. Lord Stanley, Foreman; J. Bolton, Esq.; R. F. Bradshaw, Esq.; Thomas Greene, Esq.; W. Gale, Esq.; C. Gibson, Esq.; J. Hargraves, Esq.; W. Hulton, Esq.; J. F. Hindell, Esq.; T. Legh, Esq.; A. Nowell, Esq.; H. Hornby, Esq.; R. H. Parker, Esq.; M. Sandys, jun., Esq.; Legendre N. Starkie, Esq.; E. B. Wilbraham, Esq.; G. Wilson, Esq.; R. Whalley, Esq.; P. E. Townley, Esq.; J. P. Machell, Esq.; and G. Wild, Esq.

His Lordship proceeded to address the Jury. It had been matter of congratulation to him to observe the state of the calendars in the other counties of the Northern Circuit; but he regretted to say that in the county of Lancaster, with which he was connected by so many public and private ties, that feeling was reversed. It was painful to him, as it must give the Grand Jury pain to observe the number of persons contained in that calendar, involving, as it did, almost every species of crime. But there was one species of crime calculated to inspire both concern and regret—he meant that of rioting and breaking looms, machinery, and houses, for which no less than 66 persons stood committed. The indictments against those unhappy and deluded persons amounted to 30. The annals of the country but too fully proved that extensive and severe distress existed. The contributions entered into by the wise and the good was also proof of the existence of that distress; but they must not too easily listen to their feelings; they must let those persons see that they were not with impunity to destroy those implements of machinery by which they and others could alone hope to get their bread; they must show them, that however pitiable their situation, and God knew that their distresses were great, they must be taught that they had no right to seek relief by acts of violence and rebellion. It was well remarked, by as great a man as had ever sat upon the Bench, that "when we begin to feel pity in our bosoms, we should recollect that there was some pity due also to the community at large." The Learned Judge, after adverting shortly to some cases in the calendar which required the more particular attention of the Grand Jury, proceeded to observe, that there were two cases in the calendar, one of which he should merely glance at, and no more. The Grand Jury would understand him when he said, there were certain charges which, for the sake of public decency, it were better never to enter into, unless where there were probable grounds of conviction, because it was impossible, upon such occasions, to exclude persons who ought not to be present, and details which it would be better, as far as possible, to prevent. The other case to which he alluded, and to which he begged to call their most serious attention, inasmuch as it was not a common occurrence in this country in modern times—it was that of Edward Gibbon Wakefield who stood charged with a felony, though not for a capital felony. It appeared from the calendar, that Wakefield stood charged with having, at Liverpool, feloniously taken and carried away one Ellen Turner, spinster, then a maid, and heir apparent unto her father, William Turner, Esq. for the sake of the lucre of her substance, and afterwards unlawfully and against her will did marry the said Ellen Turner. He (Wakefield) was therefore charged at present with a felony, but whether the indictment would be for a capital felony or not, he had no means of knowing. He felt it necessary to state, that in early times, by the common law of England, if a child was taken from her parents, guardians, or other persons to whom intrusted, by violence, deceit, or artifice, and if afterwards the parties should marry, even by consent, still it was held to be an offence. If the case stood thus at common law, the party might be indicted for an offence, if alone; or, if he committed the offence conjointly with others, for a conspiracy. But this was not thought sufficient for the protection of female chastity and female happiness; for so early as the reign of Henry VII. a statute was passed, which made the offence a felony, subject to relief by clergy. In the reign of Elizabeth, so important a matter was the protection of female children conceived (the crime of taking them away forcibly being then more common) that the offence was made a capital felony, the benefit of clergy being taken away. In the reign of his present Majesty, the statute of Elizabeth was removed, so that the statute of Henry VII. remained; but there were several things necessary to bring the offence under the statute of Henry VII. such as the use of force, and the continuance of force until the parties were married. And there were cases where persons had been acquitted, upon its being shown that though force was used in one county, it had ceased, and the parties had agreed, before they arrived at the place of marriage, and therefore no conviction could take place. There was also another statute, that of Philip and Mary, the preamble of which did not contemplate force, but appeared to consider the sufferings of the parents, rather than the distress of the person more immediately the object of aggression. It ran thus:—4 and 5 Philip and Mary, cap. 7. "An Act for the punishment of such as shall take away maidens that be inheritors, being within the age of sixteen years, and that marry them without consent of their parents: When maidens and women, children of noblemen and gentlemen, and others, as well such as be heirs apparent to their ancestors as others, having left unto them by their father, or other ancestors and friends, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, or other great substances, in goods and chattels moveable, for, and to the intent to advance them in marriage, somewhat like according to their degrees, and as might be most for their surety and comfort, as well for themselves as of all other their friends and kinsfolks, be oftentimes unaware to their said friends and kinsfolks, by flattery, trifling gifts, and fair promises, of many unthrifty light personages, and thereto, by the intreaty of persons of lewd demeanour, and others, that for reward, buy and sell the said maidens and children secretly allured, and now to contract matrimony with the said unthrifty and light personages, and thereupon with sleight or force oftentimes betaken and conveyed away from their said parents, friends, or kinsfolks, to the high displeasure of Almighty God, disparagement of the said children, and the extreme continual heaviness of all their friends, which ungodly dealing, for lack of wholesome laws to the redress thereof, remaineth a great familiar and common mischief in this our commonwealth. 2. For remedy whereof, be it enacted that it shall not be lawful to any person or persons to take or carry away, or cause to be taken or carried away, any maid or woman child, unmarried, being under the age of sixteen years, out of or from the possession, custody, or government, against the will of the father of such maid or woman child, or of such person or persons to whom the father of such maid or woman child, by his last will and testament, or by any other act in his life-time, hath or shall appoint, assign, bequeath, give or grant the order, keeping, education, or government of such maid, or woman child, except such taking and conveying away as shall be had or done by or for such person or persons as without fraud or covin be, or then shall be, the master or mistress of such maid or woman child, or other guardian in socage, or guardian in chivalry of or to such maid or child. 3. And if any person or persons above the age of fourteen years (which his Lordship observed the Jury would find to be the age of consent), shall unlawfully take, or convey, or cause to be taken or conveyed, any maiden, or womau child unmarried, being within the age of 16 years, out of or from the possession, and against the will of the father or mother of such child, or of such person or persons as shall happen to have, by any lawful ways or means, the order, keeping, education, or government, of such maiden or woman-child, every person so offending, being thereof lawfully attainted or convicted, shall have and suffer imprisonment of his or their bodies by the space of two whole years, without bail or mainprize, or else should pay such fine for his or their said offence as shall be assessed by the queen's highness in the Star Chamber at Westminster." His lordship added, that another section gave to the judges of assize the power then vested in the Star Chamber, and also the power of extending the imprisonment to five years; but that was under circumstances, which, according to the depositions, did not appear to exist. From the talent and knowledge of the learned gentlemen engaged, there was no doubt, that the indictment would be so framed as to embrace fully the charges to be made against the prisoner. There was another crime in the calendar—a charge of murder, with intent, it appeared, to rob the house after the inmates were destroyed. But this charge, as well as that he had just spoken of (Mr. Wakefield's case), they would be so good as to postpone for the present. He could not, as one of his Majesty's judges, take upon him to try a misdemeanor, while numbers of poor persons were waiting the coming on of more serious trials. It was said, that he had fixed Wakefield's trial for Thursday, whereas he had never been applied to upon the subject, pro or con., and no person but himself had the power to fix it.

No business of any interest occurred in either the Civil or Criminal Court.

All reasoners on Political Science agree that the least objectional Taxes are those that bear more upon luxuries than necessaries, and which are in the nature rather of voluntary than compulsory taxation. Our Excise Duties, although very productive, have more to do with articles of luxury than of necessity; and, however, some persons, who reason but superficially on subjects, may murmur against Ministers for this or that duty, it is wisdom in Government to repeal taxes of compulsion before they meddle with those of a voluntary nature; and this brings us to question the policy of Ministers in abolishing Lotteries, which we are informed, have afforded to the Revenue upwards of Four Hundred Thousand Pounds a year, and that quite voluntary on the part of the public. In the present state of the country, surely some equivalent, but compulsory tax must be substituted for what will be lost to the Revenue on the 18th OCTOBER, when it is peremptorily ordered that all Lotteries must end for ever.

The Chronicle contradicts a statement in our paper of last week, that the correspondence between Mr. Beaumont and Lord Grey was published "without the consent or knowledge of Sir John Swinburne." We are not, however, inclined to retract this assertion. We are assured that one of the leading gentlemen of the county, and who was himself upon the Grand Jury, called Mr. Beaumont out of the Grand Jury Room, and said that he had authority from Sir John Swinburne to tell him, that the publication of the correspondence was made without his knowledge or consent.—Tyne Mercury.

The new work which is just now exciting so much of the public attention, under the title of "Alla Giornata; or, To the Day;" certainly possesses the rare merit of combining with an interesting story, much of that practical truth, which though all must feel, yet few perhaps could successfully define, as containing the essentials of human happiness; indeed, the whole work has this beneficial tendency, but the incidental remarks will often cause its pages to be resorted to for those hints which cannot prudently be disregarded, especially by the cultivated classes of society.

The largest steam-packet ever built in England arrived in the river on Saturday evening, called the United Kingdom, James Oman, master, 1,063 tons, two engines of 100-horse power each, built by Steel and Company at Greenock; Napier and Company, engineers, of Glasgow. She makes up 100 separate berths; is the most costly and elegant steamer ever built; and, we may truly say, the wonder of the age.

The magnificent portico which adorns the entrance into Carlton-house will be removed to the new palace for the King. The principal apartment in the new palace in the Park will be the picture-gallery—one hundred and ninety feet in length! This gallery will form the centre, and the whole length of the building: doors of communication will branch forth into all the apartments. Except the Vatican and the Louvre, it will excel every thing of the kind

PRICE OF STOCKS UP TO FOUR O'CLOCK YESTERDAY.

BRITISH.

Bank Stock,	Long Ann. 19 5-16¼⅜
Red. 3 per Cent. 79½⅜½	India Bonds, 27 29 26 pm
3 per Cent. Cons. 78⅝¾⅝⅞	Exch. Bills, 16 15 pm
3½ per Cent. Red. 86¾	Do. 500 do.
New 4 per Cent. 94½ 5 4⅝	Do. Small, 15 17 pm
4 per Cent. 1826, 95⅜	Cons. for Acc. 78¾⅞⅝¾⅝

FRIDAY'S GAZETTE.

INSOLVENTS.

J. BOEG, Adam's-place, High-street, Southwark, timber-dealer.
J. HUNTER, Great James-street, Bedford-row, wine-merchant.
M. J. SHORT, Marchmont-street, druggist.

BANKRUPTS.

W. SKINNER, Hatton-garden, apothecary——H. C. ABRAHAMS, Houndsditch, oilman——E. JARMAN, Holcombe-Rogus, Devon, tanner——J. DIXON, Walsall, Stafford, file-cutter——W. TATHAM, Nottingham, lace-manufacturer——R. KENT, Liverpool, surgeon——J. GIBBS, Chard, Somersetshire, ironmonger——P. ALLEN, and J. SMITH, Alcester, Warwick, millers——J. RUBY, Helston, Cornwall, leather-seller——R. MONK, Bispham, Lancashire, maltster——N. M. and A. GOUGH, Manchester, cotton-spinners——G. HODSON, and J. SHEPHERD, Liverpool, hide-merchants——J. CULLEN, Liverpool, boot and shoemaker——A. HOOPER, Worcester, innkeeper——T. HYDE, Portwood, Cheshire, spindle-maker——J. W. SWIFT, Liverpool, bookseller——R. BENTLEY, Bolton-le-Moors, Lancashire, machine-maker——G. and H. POOR, Pavement, Moorfields, breeches and pantaloon-makers.

NOTICES TOCORRESPONDENTS.

L. F. is informed that we cannot go into any detail respecling COBBETT, or his villanous impudence, in going to Windsor, under the expeclation of presenting a petition in propria persona to the KING. It would be difficult to say which smacks most of the highest order of insolence, such a fellow as COBBETT aspiring to address HIS MAJESTY personally, or three Brummagem tinkers presenting themselves at the house of the First Lord of the Treasury.

We are surprised at not having heard from J. D. in reference to our notice in last Sunday's paper.

PAUL PRY JUNIOR'S communication relative to Miss FORDE, and the REAL Mrs. Carleton, has come to hand—he is thanked for his politeness.

A PRISONER has been received, and in an article in this day's imprint, his wishes relating to Mr. BROWN, the respected Warden of the Fleet, and the vagabond who has been attempting to traduce the very excellent character he bears, are fully consulted.

In reply to the repeated enquiries respecting the "Obituary," we beg to apprize our numerous correspondents, urging a renewal of it, that we shall shortly have the pleasure of presenting it to them.

THE AGE.

LONDON, AUGUST 13.

The subjoined letter, at the present moment, appears to us of the utmost consequence, and we, therefore, most cheerfully concur in the promulgation of its contents. At a period when that particular branch of our manufactures is described as suffering so materially in itself, and, furthermore, by the recent importation of French goods, it is consolatory to turn to so important a document as this, which, to a very great extent, contradicts the various statements which have been made on this point. We do not, for an instant, wish to damp that charitable spirit which is now abroad, by virtue of which so many thousand pounds have been amassed together for the relief of the suffering artizans, but we strongly recommend to those indefatigable and praiseworthy Gentlemen, who have so deeply interested themselves in alleviating the prevailing distress in Spitalfields, to nominate some Committee of Enquiry, by which the actual state of every applicant's situation may be at once ascertained, and all possibility of deception anticipated and prevented.

The winter, it should be remembered, is in the prospective, when the pittance doled out to these suffering creatures will be in much more pressing requisition than even it is now, and when the necessity for its application will be much more apparent. Although we would not be thought for one moment to disparage the amiable exertions of the SPITALFIELDS' COMMITTEE, every member of which is entitled to universal admiration and gratitude, yet we may venture to impress this argument on their minds, in order that the exercise of that noble feeling, by which they are now enabled "to clothe the naked, and to feed the hungry," may not be denied them, by the diminution of funds, in an hour of more trying and extensive calamity.

The following is the letter referred to:—

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES.

"Sir,—Your paper, a few days since, contained an account of the proceedings of a large meeting of journeymen weavers, held for the purpose of 'resisting the attempts of such of the masters as were paying less than the book prices for their work, and of providing a fund to support those who might be thrown out of work for refusing to accept a reduced rate of wages.'

"Whether or not it is reasonable that the weavers should continue to have the 'book prices,' considering that the trade is in so depressed a state—that French and East India goods are brought into competition with those of English manufacture—and that, during the year and a half of brisk trade which followed the repeal of the Spitalfields' Act, they obliged the masters to pay them more than the 'book prices'—it is not our object particularly to inquire, but to correct an erroneous statement respecting ourselves in the account referred to.

"It appears to have been reported to the meeting, that we were 'decidedly opposed to any advance.' We beg to say, that we have never made any such declaration. To the deputation that waited upon us, we stated, that we were no advocates for very low prices; but that, however desirable it might be that all masters should pay alike, we thought they would find it difficult to accomplish it.'

"That the public may not be deceived upon this subject, allow us to add, that the lowest prices we are paying at this moment will enable one loom to earn 15s. or 17s. 6d. per week, without working extra hours. That in most cases a family has two or more of these looms, and that within the last six weeks we have had many refusals to take work at these prices.

"We are, Sir, your most obedient servants,
"WILSON, MOORE, AND ROBINSON.
"Milk-street, Cheapside, Aug. 4."

YANKEE CAUTION.

"We are inclined to believe that proprietors of newspapers would do service to the community by publishing the names of such mean-spirited men as subscribe for papers, and after receiving them one, two, or three years, as the case may be, change their residence, by running away, or otherwise leaving the printer unpaid, the paper still going on, and the post-master to inform that the subscriber had made off, bag and baggage. All flagrant cases ought at least to be published. ANSON GIBBS received the Statesman at Ovid, Seneca county, to the amount of eleven dollars, 94 cents. and went off without paying for it. This is the only recommendation we can give him to the confidence of others."

Mr. BALL HUGHES expressed his opinion, on perusing this article, that although 94 cents. may appear very high, as regards money, yet the said Yankee ANSON GIBBS, in his judgment, exhibited no such high SENSE, as regards respectability.

COBBETT.

"There is a bronze MEDAL OF ME, which has been made from a cast. It is, I believe, a very good likeness. I yielded with great reluctance to the taking of the cast. MY BEST PICTURE IS MY BOOKS!!! The price is ONE POUND."—Reg. May 27, 1826.

It is to be hoped that the reign of this wretched vagabond is fast drawing to a close, but as long as the exposure of a single act of his roguish life may facilitate his "descensus Averni," we feel bound to afford the means.

At this particular moment, when the situation of the country requires all the assistance of its people, either by pecuniary contribution, or the dissemination of wholesome argument, to enable the more oppressed part of the community to bear with the ills inflicted upon them, and to be comforted with the gradual, though perhaps tardy, degree of amelioration which daily manifests itself, it is melancholy to see the efforts which some malcontents are making to aggravate in men's minds the real state of their privations, and to incite them to an infringement of the laws established for general security, as well as for the protection of the individuals transgressing them. But it is a gratifying reflection to find that these efforts, strenuous as they have been, have, for the most part, fallen harmless, and we feel assured it wants but a proper view of their design to blunt the direction of them all.

The greatest impostor, we should imagine, whose name ever transpired beyond the greasy hovel wherein the vagrant was begot, is WILLIAM COBBETT—an apostate to every faith he has ever preached, and an open violator of every rule he has ever had the effrontery to compound. It is to be lamented that the tenor of men's opinions, which we really believe would otherwise have assumed a proper and mild tone, should have been at times intruded upon by the hypocritical arguments of this Machiavel of canters—this worn out spy — this broken-down deserter; who, seizing the opportunies only when the national prosperity is momentarily shaken by those commercial influences to which all empires are subject, rushes in with the fire-brand of discontent, to consume the very vitals of a contented, though oppressed, peasantry. That the aim of this arch-fiend—arch-fool, has been that of individual aggrandizement, no matter whether in the accession of rank, influence, or money, it is absurd to deny. He has affected to serve his country, and in his affectation of service has robbed her; and when opposed to his robberies, she has persecuted him, he has fled into a rival country, and inflamed the jealous feelings of an aspiring set of savages into an open competition with the finest attainments of his countrymen. He has stood sentry over the actions of Government, and, unable to extract from its officers any subsistence for himself from their knowledge of his renegade principles, he has dogged the heels of the starving paupers, and goaded their shivering hearts into rebellion. He has attempted to bear himself on to fortune on the subscribed pittance of the foodless operative; and, foiled in that attempt, he has blinded the poor wretch whom his ambition has thus robbed of perhaps his last meal, against a knowledge of his duplicity, and inflamed him against those who had sense enough to discern it. He stands A CONFIRMED LIAR ON THE LISTS OF ALL WORLDLY DEALINGS—A PITIFUL COWARD, painting in strong but delusive colours the miseries from which he himself runs—A HEARTLESS ASSASSIN, who for an object would either virtually stab the crowned head, or those in league against its SACRED MAJESTY—AN APPARENT FILICIDE, who, to elude the judgments of his country's jury on himself, shifted it to the shoulders of HIS OWN GUILTLESS SON—in fact a perfect monster.

In times like the present it is necessary to caution every one, but more particularly the uneducated artisan, whose wants may frequently induce him to imbibe the speciousness of any pretender, when he has not the ability to read through the villain's arts. This COBBETT is now publishing, with the view of a general distribution throughout the distressed districts, a pamphlet, entitled, The Poor Man's Friend, or Companion for the Working Classes, in which he inculcates this doctrine, that the starving manufacturers may ROB, provided it is to supply the exigencies of nature—and wherein, after exciting them to a general insurrection, he advocates the necessity of going ARMED to all meetings. With a view to counteract the mischievous tendency which a work of this kind might effect, a very clever compilation from COBBETT's writings and actions has been put together, and published under the same specious title. From a perusal of this, and COBBETT'S own remark, "My best picture is MY BOOKS," the reader will be enabled to form a very proper estimate of this ruffian's character. We cannot impress too strongly on our cotemporaries the advantage and propriety of disseminating, by the circulation which their Journals enjoy, this just portrait of a man, in the very places, and amongst those very men whom his writings would at this present moment presume to edify, though in reality to deceive. We now devote as much space as we can to the object, and very seriously direct the attention of our readers to an examination of the subjoined matter. The following is the precise title of the work, extracts from which we now submit:—

THE

POOR MAN'S FRIEND,

OR

Companion for the Working Classes;

GIVING THEM

USEFUL INFORMATION AND ADVICE:

BEING THE SYSTEM OF

MORAL AND POLITICAL PHILOSOPHY.

We shall confine ourselves, for the present, to an exposè of COBBETT's Code of "Moral Philosophy," which, as the writer justly says, is best taught by RULES.

"Rules are laid down, and to those Rules, by way of illustration, are subjoined Examples. I. Take the particular Rule, and study it until you have impressed it indelibly on your memory. 2. Take next the Example, and read it over at least three times. 3. Having done this, compare attentively the Rule with the Example: for, by so doing, you can alone come at a true estimate of the value of "The Cobbett System of Moral and Political Philosophy."—Exampli gratia:—

"OF MAN'S RELATIVE DUTIES, AND OF THE CRIMES OPPOSITE THERETO.

"I.—Of Man's Duties to Himself.

"There is one order or class of duties which a man owes to Himself; another to Society. The duties which he owes to himself are founded chiefly on the defensive and private passions, which prompt him to pursue whatever tends to private good or happiness, and to avoid whatever tends to private ill or misery. There are particularly two virtues which form this right temper towards ill, and which are of singular efficacy, if not totally to remove, yet wonderfully to alleviate, the calamities of life. These are, Fortitude and Humility.

2. Of Humility, and the Crimes opposite thereto.

RULE.—"Humility is a virtue of high rank and dignity. It denotes that modest and ingenuous temper of mind, which arises from a just and equal estimate of our own advantages, compared with those of others. Its ordinary attendants are mildness, a gentle forbearance, and an easy, unassuming humanity with regard to the imperfections and faults—of others." Encl.—"Seest thou a man wise in his own eyes, there is more hope of a fool than of him." Solomon.—"A boasting tongue is a manifest sign of a cowardly heart." Bias.—"Great bruit, little fruit." Prov.—"Those who boast most, fail most; for deeds are silent." Plato.—"A wise man knoweth his own ignorance; a fool thinketh he knows every thing." Aug.

EXAMPLES.—1. "I will allow of no living competitor: nor of any dead one, except Paine." v. 30, p. 90.—2. "I have been the Great Enlightener of the People." v. 35, p. 486.—3. "I made Wisdom to come forth out of the mouths of babes and sucklings." v. 32, p. 530.—4. "My stock of reputation and of popular confidence is exceeded by that of no man." v. 35, p. 501. 5. "There is in England no subject which excites so much public interest as the character and conduct of William Cobbett." v. 16, p. 117.—6. "Had I not written, it is hardly possible to conceive the base and dejected state in which the nation would have been." v. 35, p. 486.—7. "If there had been a man in parliament to speak my pamphlets, England would, at this day, have been free and happy." v. 33, p. 453.—8. "In what way can I be more famed than I am? How am I to add to my present stock?" v. 35, p. 220.—9. "What a figure shall I make in the history of these times!" v. 41, p. 198.—10. "In one month I should be able to suggest the means of effecting, in a comparatively short time, the complete restoration of the country. If I were in parliament, I would point out the means. Not being there, I will point out none. My beloved countrymen, think of these things!" v. 36, p. 21.

"II.—OF MAN'S DUTIES TO SOCIETY, AND THE CRIMES OPPOSITE THERETO.

"Having illustrated and exemplified the Cobbett System of Moral Philosophy, as far as it points out those Duties which man owes to himself, we next come to the Duties which he owes to Society. These divide themselves into 1. Domestic Duties, as the Parental Duty; 2. into the duties of the Social kind; as, 1. Charity, and its attendant virtues. 2. Justice, or Fair Dealing. 3. Sincerity or Veracity in our words and actions. 4. Fidelity to Promises, Contracts, and Engagements.

1. Of the Parental Duty.

RULE.—"A good parent's first care is to be virtuous himself; his second, to make his virtues as easy and engaging to his children as their nature will admit. The first point to be endeavoured after is, to impress upon them the idea of accountableness to God for their actions." Paley.—"Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it." Solomon.—"The wicked example of a father is a great provocation of the son to sin." Xenophon.

EXAMPLE.—In the year 1820, the founder of the present system of moral philosophy had an action brought against him, in the Court of King's Bench, for writing certain false, scandalous, and malicious libels. He, at first, entered a justification on the record, and engaged to prove the truth of the libels; but, just as the trial was coming on, he withdrew the said justification, and, at the trial, put two of his own sons into the witnesses' box, to swear that they, and not himself, were the authors of the libels; though one person, who actually saw him write them in America, and another, who received the manuscript from him in his own handwriting, were both in court! Horror pervaded the court while the old man was interrogating the poor boys. The result was, a verdict of a thousand pounds against the libeller. With this brief introduction, you will be able to feel the full force of the following extract from the speech of that eminent barrister, Mr. Scarlett, who was counsel upon the occasion:—

"If," said Mr. Scarlett, "any thing can paint a man in the light of an enemy, whose malice is carried to the last extremity, and who is incapable of any generous sentiment, as well as devoid of all the feeling of a gentleman and a man of honour, it is the conduct which Mr. Cobbett has in this cause pursued. I say, that the man who is capable of doing what Mr. Cobbett has done in these writings, is one of the most dangerous men in existence. When he is dared and challenged to support his slander by proof, the coward flinches. What has become of his great promises? How comes it, that he has begun by setting forth upon this record a justification of all the infamous charges which he has heaped upon the plaintiff, and, that, in the end of the cause, we have nothing on his part but a pitiful, dastardly attempt to prove that he is not himself, forsooth, the author of the libels? He, in fact, adds, by this conduct, to the baseness of all his calumnies; and thereby shows, in addition to his libellous disposition, a pitiful character, a cowardly weakness. So, then! it is reserved for this 'great enlightener of the people' to set the example of pulling his infant children forward, to stand between him and any danger likely to arise from his own imprudence, or his own crimes! It has been reserved for his humanity and his affection to hold out to the world his own children, not only as the objects of civil actions, that a plaintiff may get damages for injuries inflicted by his malice, not against him, but against them; but as the proprietors of a paper like this Register, that they may be the sole responsible persons, even in the case of an information to be filed against it—in order that they, and not he, may be sent to prison for his offences! Of the cruelty of such an idea entering into the human mind, not to say the mind of a father, have met with no similar instance. Does Mr. Cobbett think that you, the jury, cannot see through the paltry and flimsy veil which he thus attempts to spread around his case? This is a specimen of the bold, the courageous, the patriotic Mr. Cobbett! who not only libels all mankind when he can gain any thing by it, but, when he is likely to lose by it, puts forth his children between himself and the vengeance of the person libelled—his children, who have no property to answer in damages, and upon whom he perhaps thinks (it is charity to believe it of him), that the humanity of an offended prosecutor might prevent the infliction of imprisonment! Gentlemen, such a fraud deceives itself; such an iniquity works out its own undoing."—Trial, p. 69.

2. Of Charity and Mercy, and of the Crimes the opposite of these, as Cruelty, Revenge, Slander, &c.

RULE.—"Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal. And though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge, and have not charity, I am nothing. Charity suffereth long, and is kind; charity envieth not; charity vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up, doth not behave itself unseemly, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil, rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth; beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things." St. Paul.—"Like as God, and the children of God, are always known to be all one in charity and mercy, wishing health and life to every man; so the Devil and his children are known to be always one in their malignity, cruelty, and revenge; being hinderers of health, and very murderers." Plutarch.

"3. Of Cruelty and of Brutality.

"EXAMPLES.—1. The English newspapers tell me, that the Princess Charlotte of Wales is dead, and that she has left no child. It is impossible for us to feel joy or sorrow at any event which affects any person of the royal family, unless such event also affect ourselves or our country. We cannot have any personal feeling upon the occasion. It is a young wife dead in childbed; and this happens in many parts of the country every twenty-four hours. All ranks and degrees have set up a general howl for the loss of the Princess Charlotte. All the mummery in the newspapers, all the black borders, all the subscriptions for statues, is merely a tub to the whale."—v. 33, p. 298.

"2. What need we to care about the cause of the death of Romilly—a man whose life was of no consequence to the country; whose talents were of no use to us; and about whom such a loud howl has been set up by the prime hypocrites of the day. The death of this unfortunate lawyer, and happening in such a way, seems to have puzzled the swarm of canters, of whom he was the great leader."—v. 34, pp. 923, 948.

"3. Amongst the mass of the people, the Assassination of Perceval has been a subject of great joy. Alas, how fleeting are human triumphs! He was not able to protect himself against a little bit of lead scarcely surpassing in bulk a knot in a cat-o'-nine-tails."—v. 21, p. 626.

"4. The Bank Directors have violated their charter. They have, by acts of fraud wholly without parallel, ruined hundreds of thousands of families; and they merit, not only to be made to disgorge, but to undergo the most infamous of corporal punishment. I would take from them all that they have gained by their frauds. 'I would make each of them to ride on a horse with his face to the tail, to stand in the pillory, to have his ears cut off, and to be imprisoned for life. I would, in addition to the above, have their noses slit, and the letters B. S. (Bank Swindler) burnt in each cheek of every man of them."—v. 34, p. 1069.

4. Of Revenge.

"EXAMPLE.—I was sentenced to pay a fine of 1,000*l.* to the King! Aye, to the King! I have three sons, and, if any one of them ever forgets this, may he that instant be—not stricken dead; but worse than that; bereft of his senses. May he become both rotten and mad! May he, after having been a gabbling, slavering, half idiot, all the prime of his life, become, in his last days, loathsome to the sight, and STINKING IN THE NOSTRILS!"—v. 22, p. 90.

And "last," but very far from least,"

5. Of Praise and of Slander.

RULE.—"Nothing is more uncertain than the praise of hollow-hearted men; for what one day gives us, another day takes away from us." Lactantius.—"Slanderers in ancient time have been marked in the forehead with a hot iron."—"As rats and mice eat and gnaw upon other men's meat, so the slanderer eateth and gnaweth upon the life and flesh of other men." Seneca.—"The corrupt heart breaketh out by the lewd tongue; and such as speak evil of all men are monsters" Hermes.—"Indiscriminate praise is the opposite of slander, and commonly proceeds from a settled contempt of all moral distinctions." Paley.

EXAMPLES.—Praise.	Slander
1. No man doubts the integrity of Sir F. Burdett. v. 30, p. 733.	The word of Sir F. Burdett is not worth a straw. v. 34, p. 415.
2. Sir F. Burdett is the least conceited man I ever saw. v. 30, p. 783.	The conceit of Sir F. Burdett is intolerable. v. 34, p. 320.
3. Though Paine was no Christian, he was no blasphemer. v. 35, p. 725.	Paine was a cruel, treacherous, and blasphemous ruffian. v. 4, p. 150.
4. Mr. Burke was the most eloquent of orators, the profoundest of statesmen, the ornament of his country. v. 7, p. 103.	Burke was a reptile alarmist, an apostate, the worst of all mankind; the most base of men. v. 34, p. 1007.
5. The Americans are the least criminal people in the world. v. 34, p. 550.	The Americans are the most unprincipled people in the world. v. 13, p. 490.
6. Nothing short of Universal Suffrage would be just. v. 31, p. 546.	Universal Suffrage is an empty sound. v. 7, p. 389.

If opportunity should occur, in a future number, to return to this subject, or rather, if this old sinner should "go on in his sin, and proceed in his wickedness," we shall produce some similar instances of his "Political Philosophy," from a strict perusal and examination of which, we do not for a moment doubt that every reader will be convinced of the correct picture herein given of this most degenerate and degraded being.

To shew the pitch of refinement to which some persons in the world carry their notions of delicacy and proper feeling, we beg to state a remarkable coincidence. A man by the name of JAMES BENNETT, residing in Seymour-place, Bryanstone-square, some time since preferred a bill, before the Grand Jury at the Westminster Sessions, against the owners of two brothels in his neighbourhood, which identical fellow was bail the other day to SALISBURY the encule—upon which person the following smart epigram has been forwarded to us:—

For maids and men ne'er yet was shown
Such love, by CUPID'S self, or mother;
For he sets his face against the one,
And turns his BACK upon the other!

"Since the decease of the late Mr. IRONMONGER, M. P. two new candidates have circulated their advertisements in the borough of Stafford; one of them, FORTUNATUS DWARRIS, Esq. Barrister-at-law, who was, we believe, one of the Commissioners to inquire into the state of the West India Colonies; that gentleman has actually declared himself a candidate. The other, R. SPOONER, Esq. of Birmingham, has only desired the freemen not to promise their votes till he has waited on them to solicit their suffrages."—Morning Herald, Aug. 9.

There may be, perhaps, as much honour in representing the independent borough of Stafford, as there is in representing Coventry and Preston; and taking that for granted, we shall adopt the same feeling of precaution towards the one, as we thought proper, previous to, and during the last election, to exercise towards the others.

It cannot be denied, with whatever regret it may be admitted, that the New Parliament is very far from carrying with it, on a general view of the accession it has received, that weight of talent and respectability of character, which even its predecessor could boast of. To amend it just at present is out of our power—to avert, as much as possible, the probability of any increase to its unsoundness, shall be our aim.

Mr. RICHARD SPOONER, who has signified his intention to the worthy people of Stafford to offer himself a candidate for their favour at the ensuing election, to which the death of Mr. IRONMONGER has given rise, is about as fit to represent them in Parliament as he is to eat them out of it; and lest they should not exactly know the whole stock of capability contained in the person of this psalm-singing, cadaverous-looking individual, we will let them into the secret. To prove himself capable of fulfilling the duties of High Bailiff of the town of Birmingham, some years since, he attached himself to what is called, and very aptly, the low party, distinguishing himself at public meetings as a mob orator, and the enlightened supporter of radicalism; and before that fever had subsided, he was so flattered and cajoled by his party, that, his vanity being excited in the highest degree, and the purses of his friends open to him, he stood for Boroughbridge at the last election, and got into Parliament, where he only sat, till HE WAS KICKED OUT BY A COMMITTEE on petition. This, however, instead of curing his senatorial cacoethes, but the more inflamed it; and, accordingly on the demise of Sir CHARLES MORDAUNT, he had the unparalleled effrontery to offer himself for the County of Warwick; but the sense of the freeholders was so completely against him, that after his stultified partner, Mr. THOMAS ATTWOOD (our last Sunday's patron of the petitioning Squires!) and other friends had exerted themselves, to the utmost, to take their 40s. votes from the town of Birmingham, their money was soon expended, and he was beaten with disgrace. Mr. RICHARD SPOONER, like his friend TOM, is mixed up in all the wild-goose fancies and radicalism of the present day—is a great disciple of all its slang and jargon—alternately advocating the principles of the œconomists, the anti-slavery people, the Bible Societies, and not even surpassed by Lord JOHN RUSSELL in his sticklings for Parliamentary reform.

What adds, however, to DICK SPOONER'S (or as he is generally named, from his appearance, DIRTY DICK) respectability, and for which purpose he is probably so anxious to represent some place or another, is, that he has lately become a most zealous and active parliamentary canvasser in behalf of the schemes and shares promoted by his own bank, and seems to know no greater pleasure than parading the lobbies of the House of Commons, and living at the Bedford Coffee House, for the express purpose of bullying the Members of the one, and the waiters of the other, in which he succeeds with undiscriminating effrontery.

With this slight sketch, therefore, we consign DIRTY DICK to the good opinion and support of the people of Stafford, and leave it to their discernment, as to what account they will turn his wonderful attainments.

A paragraph appeared in several papers last week, announcing the fact of Sir JACOB ASTLEY'S solicitor having traced his LADY to the Black Bear Inn, Reading. There he certainly did find the fond couple; but the reader is not perhaps aware, that, as a proof to what a SHIFT love is sometimes driven, the copy of a writ was served on TOMMY GARTH by the chambermaid, who, on taking something into their bed-room, was followed by Sir JACOB'S footman to identify him, and found the lady and gentleman in a state very nearly allied to the "puris naturalibus."

THE MODERN DOGBERRY.

"Dost thou not suspect my place? Dost thou not suspect my years? Oh, that he were here to write me down AN ASS! but, Masters, remember that I AM AN ASS; though it be not written down, yet forget not that I AM AN ASS."—Much Ado, Act iv. Scene 2."

Mr. PEEL, we rest assured, will give us credit for entertaining every proper respect towards the constituted authorities of the land, and for such an implicit faith in his administration, that, wherever a grievance was detected, a remedy would be by him applied. We should neither impeach the former, or invoke the latter unnecessarily—nor, in submitting the following case, do we feel we are doing one or the other.

The present CHIEF OFFICER of Bow Street is, in our humble estimation, one of the veriest twaddles that ever sat in civil authority, and one to whose legal attainments we should in very few instances attach the weight of a straw. Most of our readers will remember the monstrous outrage on good manners and proper conduct committed by Sir RICHARD BIRNIE just a twelvemonth since, in his examination of a Mr. GAMBLE, in the course of which the very purposes which he is chosen to effect were completely defeated. The subjoined extract is from an examination at Bow Street, on Thursday last, of a Mr. BLACK, a partner in the respectable house of BLACK, YOUNG and BLACK, in Tavistock-street, Covent-garden, for an alleged assault on one of the lads in his employ, at the summons of the boy's mother. The woman having stated her charge, which she considered aggravated by the fact of Mr. YOUNG having horsewhipped her hopeful offspring on a former occasion, the following dialogue took place between Mr. BLACK and Dogberry on the subject:—

Sir Richard Birnie—What! horsewhip a poor weak child like this! Really, Mr. Black——

Mr. Black—If your worship will allow me to explain.

Sir Richard Birnie—Certainly, Sir, I wish you to do so.

Mr. Black—In the first place, I know nothing of the horsewhipping which the complainant mentioned. It might have happened, although I confess I doubt it very much.

Complainant—Oh, Mr. Young himself acknowledged having horsewhipped the child when I taxed him with it.

Mr. Black—With respect to the present charge, I certainly admit that I struck the boy on the cheek, in doing which, I believe, his head came in contact with the desk where I sat, but I had no intention of hurting him; the reason why I chastised him was, because he was REPEATING THE WORDS OF AN INDECENT SONG, which he was in the act OF WRITING OUT!!

Sir Richard Birnie—This is no justification of your conduct. You have no right to lay violent hands on boys in your employment. ENGLAND IS A LAND OF LIBERTY, Sir, where the meanest shall find protection, and where the infliction of the whip is not to be tolerated. You must either find bail for the present ASSAULT, or satisfy this poor woman for the blow you struck her son.

From this we are to infer, that whatever excess a servant commit, he is not to be amenable to wholesome chastisement, merely because he happens to be YOUR SERVANT. Will Dogberry, in the plenitude of his magisterial wisdom, inform us what redress we have against an urchin, guilty of the misdemeanour this little blackguard was engaged in; or if it had happened within ear-shot of my Lady Dogberry, how his wise Worship would have acted? But the best of the fun is, that Dogberry's idea of justice was, that Mr. BLACK should either find bail for THE ASSAULT, or SATISFY the WOMAN for the blow he gave HER SON! This is JUSTICE with a vengeance! Thus, any vagabond parents may instigate their children to acts deserving every castigation, as an obvious means of extracting money from their employers! And justice is equally distributed, whether the assault be held to bail, or paid for BEFORE THE CASE IS ESTABLISHED.—"Masters, remember that I am an ass," saith the original, and of a verity it is established by this modern, Dogberry.

MILITARY TACTICS.

We submit the following alarming announcement, and its attendant denouement, as a specimen of the last edition of JOHNSTON'S works!—

A serious disturbance, which threatened at one time to lead to bloodshed, took place at the carriage-entrance to the Pier last night. Lord BRUDENELL, an officer in the 8th Hussars, driving furiously up to the entrance in his cabriolet, so as to endanger the lives of two or three individuals, was called out to by a Mr. Lynne, a gentleman residing at the Pavilion Hotel, and desired to be more careful. Irritated at being thus spoken to, and, perhaps, incited by too much Champagne, the officer leaped out of the cabriolet, drew his sword, and threatened to strike the gentleman to the ground. Mr. Lynne, however, wrenched the sword out of his hand, and other persons coming up at the time, the officer was glad again to ascend his cabriolet. The sword was returned, after he had PROMISED that it should be immediately sheathed. The officer's conduct excited much indignation, and he was saluted with a hearty expression of disapprobation by the mob as he drove away.—Morn. Her. Aug. 3.

In consequence of a paragraph which appeared in the Morning Herald of the 3d instant, relating to Lord BRUDENELL and Mr. LYNNE, at Brighton, Lord BRUDENELL immediately desired one of his friends to wait on Mr LYNNE, at Southampton, to inquire whether he had authorised the insertion of the said paragraph; in reply to which inquiry, Mr. LYNNE made the following statement in writing:—

"SOUTHAMPTON, August 6, 1826.

"The facts shown me in the Morning Herald of the 3d of August, relating to Lord BRUDENELL and myself, are quite erroneous and untrue; nor did I authorise the insertion of it; nor do I know anything about it.

(Signed) "WM. LYNNE."

Morning Herald, Aug. 9.

An advertisement in some of yesterday's morning papers, apprised us of proceedings having been instituted by Mr. BROWN, Warden of the Fleet Prison, against a vagabond fellow confined within its walls, for a series of gross attacks on his character, in a very obscure Sunday print. This man, who may be known to some readers by name, from a chastisement we inflicted on him in one of our publications, a few months since, styles himself "Lieutenant-Colonel FAIRMAN, late A. D. C and M. S. in the West Indies, and Captain in the 4th Ceylon Regiment," the whole of which amounts to the plain fact of his being suspended from his half-pay for a deficiency in his accounts, for which he has continually libelled our distinguished Secretary at War, Lord PALMERSTON. For a continuation of such practices, and incurring debts, to pay which he had not an ostensible shilling on earth, this precious Colonel was lodged in the Fleet, from which we hear he obtained his liberty by taking advantage of an Act of Parliament for the relief of PAUPERS, called the Lord's Act, which entitles the pauper to his freedom, without the expensive accompaniments of fees, &c. His second and present confinement in this prison arises, we believe, from his having libelled Lord HERTFORD, after vainly attempting to extort money from His LORDSHIP, (in which he was backed by the STANHOPE family, as we shall take hereafter an opportunity of reminding that circle of) and having incurred additional debts. The miserable pauper, in consequence of this, directs all his spleen, Sunday after Sunday, against Mr. BROWN, than whom we do not think, either in his present station, or during the time he was Governor of Newgate, a more respectable man ever lived, to which opinion a very long letter from a Fleet Prisoner, received by us this week, fully confirms. With the view of exposing the discipline adopted by Mr. BROWN, the rogue cites some cases of prisoners now confined therein; and among the rest, the following, which is as outrageous a compilation of falsehood and knavery, as ever was put on paper:—

PRISON CASES.—No. 1.

The case referred to in your last publication, respecting the two young gentlemen, who have been confined in the Fleet Prison between nine and ten years, is as follows:—

The plaintiff is Ferdinando Smith, Esq. of the Grange, near Hales Owen, in the county of Salop, Deputy Lieutenant of the county of Worcester, Lieutenant-Colonel of the city of Worcester Local Militia, a Magistrate, and reputed to be a very wealthy man; he is related by marriage to both defendants, for his own sister was married to their father. The attornies for the plaintiff are Messrs. Hayes and Hinchliffe, of Hales Owen. The defendants are brothers, and at the time of their arrest, the elder was about 24, and the younger about 22 years of age; and at their outset in life, their kinsman consigned them to the miseries and degradation of a loathsome prison. The ground of action originated in a joint guarantee given by the said Ferdinando Smith and the two brothers, for a fourth party. Default ensued, and the three sureties were called upon to discharge their united obligation. The plaintiff, Ferdinando Smith, settled the whole, and immediately after arrested the two brothers for the full amount; although Ferdinando Smith, as one of the said sureties, was responsible for one-third part or share of the loss. The brothers were arrested in one action, as if it were a partnership debt, and the oath was for the whole sum. How Messrs Hayes and Hinchliffe could recommend this proceeding, and how Ferdinando Smith could reconcile it to his conscience to make such an affidavit, I must leave the parties to explain. I have only to remark that upon the trial, the court reduced the extent of the demand. This action was illegal, inasmuch as the brothers were not partners in trade. It was most clearly unjust to require from them the whole amount of the loss, instead of their fair and separate proportion. Young in years, and inexperienced in legal quibbles and intricacies, they were no match for the plaintiff and his legal advisers. The defect in the action was cured by their pleading to it; and from an investigation of the general merits, they were shut out by final judgment and execution: so far their doom was fixed; and upon such trivial verbiage and frivolous points of distinction, rest the properties and liberties of Englishmen. The freedom of the subject is wholly dependant now upon the administration of a cumbrous and unintelligible code, scarcely understood by the very judges who preside; ever varying, and replete with oppression, inconsistency, and injustice.

"Every effort has been made by the defendants to obtain their discharge, but without success. The junior branches of the family are entitled to very considerable property, held by Ferdinando Smith, and the defendants have proposed that, under legal and proper authority, he should pay himself out of that fund. This humane magistrate referred them and their proposition, to his equally humane attornies. Of this these good Samaritins did not approve, and the brothers were left to waste their dawn of life, unpitied and unthought of, to drink the cup of silent misery in their prison-house. Years have elapsed, but have not brought with them any mitigation of their cruel fate; yet, Messrs. Hayes and Hinchcliffe enjoy the health-inspiring breezes of their native plains, and their client continues to enjoy his good fortune, and still performs his magisterial functions. The younger branches of his family have been driven, however reluctantly, to the forlorn hope of a Chancery suit, and the brother in law of Ferdinando Smith, and his own sister, having filed a bill against him, he has been recently compelled to pay into Court, on account nearly 18,000*l.* 3 per cent. Bank Annuities. Again the luckless brothers, conceiving that eight or nine years close incarceration would abate and appease the feelings of so near a relative, offered to obtain him an authority to take the amount of his demand out of Court, and again the cup of hope has been dashed from their lips. Ferdinando Smith is a magistrate, and the administration of law forms a portion of his functions. Had these ill-fated brothers committed felony, a smaller term of years would have satisfied the utmost rigour of the law; but this is called a civil action. I cannot discover in the books of the prison to what sect of religion the plaintiff or his attornies belong. Of one point I am certain, they do not either of them appertain to the order of mercy.

"ALFRED."

The parties upon whom the above paragraph was intended to reflect, observing with indignation the falsehoods of which it was composed, have thought it necessary to publish the subjoined justificatory statement of their conduct, and they applied, in the first instance, to this military blackguard, to insert it in his paper, where he had inserted the previous libel; but the coward refused to do so. On their application to us, we could not object for a moment—we know Colonel SMITH to be a man of unimpeached reputation, and there is not a more respectable firm in England than that of Messrs. HAYES and HINCLIFFE of Hales Owen; and, in addition to our own assurance to the reader of the truth of their statement, we beg to state that they have written documents in their possession to verify the same:—

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PALLADIUM.

Sir,—Having been favored gratuitously with the perusal of your paper of the 23d ult. in which is contained a paragraph signed "ALFRED," purporting to be a statement of the case of "the two young gentlemen, who have been confined in the Fleet Prison between nine and ten years," reflecting grossly upon the characters of Colonel Smith and ourselves, we think it incumbent upon us, in order to prevent the public from being imposed upon by that statement, to send you for insertion the following answer to it, which is a plain narrative of matters of fact, which we have written documents in our possession to prove the truth of.

The names of the defendants alluded to are George Crane Carruthers, and John Crane Carruthers, who previous to their abode in London, resided at Hales Owen, where their father, who is an attorney, now lives. He married for his second wife a sister of Col. Smith, who died shortly afterwards, and there is no issue of that marriage, and, therefore, how your correspondent ALFRED makes out that Colonel Smith is the near relation and the kinsman of these persons, or why he lays such stress upon that circumstance, when, in fact, they are not in any degree related, we cannot conceive, unless it is to give a peculiar gloss to his statement, for the purpose of raising a stronger prejudice in the public mind against Colonel Smith.

In the year 1812, a Mr. Crane, who was the maternal uncle of the defendants, died, having by his will devised considerable real property to them and their sister as tenants in common, of which will their father was appointed an executor simply, and without any power over the estates.

In the year 1813, the father of the defendants, with the assistance of his eldest son, George Crane Carruthers, fraudulently contrived to raise considerable sums of money on mortgage of these estates, by imposing upon the Mortgagees a spurious copy of the will of Mr. Crane, purporting to be an attested copy, written by his said son, George Crane Carruthers, and attested by him as true, in which copy was inserted a power to his father to raise money by sale or mortgage, although in the original will no such power was contained; and in which fraud one of the sons was an active agent, and both must have participated in the proceeds arising therefrom, as they were then living with their father.

In the beginning of the year 1815, the money so raised having been so dissipated, and the defendants having become involved with their father in pecuniary difficulties, an application was made by them to the plaintiff to join them in various securities to enable them to gain time, as they stated, to raise money upon their property to extricate them from their embarrassments, and he was prevailed upon by them to join in a note with their father and themselves to Messrs. Rufford and Biggs, the bankers, on the 3rd of February, 1815, for 240*l.* On the 24th April following, at their earnest request, he gave a note to Mr. Robinson (one of the persons who had been induced to advance money to their father on mortgage) for 228*l.* to procure their liberation from an arrest at his suit, and on the 8th May following he joined them in another note for 421*l.* to Messrs. Rufford and Biggs, in order to prevent their goods and effects from being sold under an execution. At this time they made a solemn promise that they would immediately raise the money on their property, and pay off the whole of these securities, and they actually gave a written undertaking to give the plaintiff proper security for the sum of 889*l.* being the aggregate amount of the the three notes, to the two last of which the father was no party.

The father having become a bankrupt, the plaintiff was called upon and required to pay the whole of the money for which the securities had been given; and after having paid it, he caused a written application to be made to the defendants on the 1st June, 1816, either to repay him or give him security, which application they treated with contempt and insult, and absolutely refused to do either the one or the other, and then it was, and not before, that legal proceedings were instituted against them.

After the plaintiff had been put to the expense of a trial at law to recover his money, another offer was directed by him to be made to the defendant on the 11th November, 1816, and accordingly, on that day, a written communication was made to them, whereby they were again informed, that if they would give him the best security in their power, proceedings should be stayed; but this offer was treated in the same manner as the preceding one.

The defendants then surrendered themselves into the Fleet Prison, and gave notice that they should apply to be discharged under the Insolvent Debtors' Act, having previously, by a deed, dated the 2d June, 1816, conveyed and assigned all their property, consisting of various valuable freehold and leasehold estates, to a Mrs. Woodcock, their maternal aunt, in consideration of a pretended debt of 200*l.*; and then in their schedules, filed in the Insolvent Court, they stated that they had no property of any description.

Their discharge was opposed by several creditors, and on their cross-examination they exhibited such a specimen of prevarication and fraud, as called forth a severe animadversion from the Judge, who remanded them both, under the Act 56 Geo. III. c. 102, for gross injustice towards their creditors; and these are the persons described by your correspondent, "ALFRED," as "young in years, and inexperienced in legal quibbles and intricacies, and therefore no match for the plaintiff and his legal advisers;" and having come to this conclusion, from a fallacious statement, he takes the opportunity of vilifying that law which, whatever construction he may put upon it, is sufficiently intelligible to confound and punish the attempts of those persons who, having contracted debts, seek to evade payment by resorting to fraudulent practices.

Every effort, as your correspondent states, has been made by the defendants to obtain their discharge, with the exception of the one by which they might have obtained it at any moment: viz. that of giving up their property for the benefit of their creditors; and although their liberation has, upon every application, been offered to them upon these terms, they decline to comply with such offers, and therefore it is that all their attempts have failed; and because creditors will not consent to be defrauded of their property, it seems they are to be vilified, and the laws of the country are to be branded as "cumbrous and unintelligible, scarcely understood by the very Judges who preside, ever varying, and replete with oppression, inconsistency, and injustice."

As the defendants constitute no part of the younger branches of the family of Colonel Smith, are no relatives to him, and are no parties to the suit in which he and his family are unfortunately involved, the insinuations so artfully conveyed in the latter part of the statement of ALFRED, might have been spared, because as Colonel Smith has paid his purchase-money for certain estates devised by the will of his father to the younger children, into Court, if any thing should, upon the taking of the accounts, appear to be due to the estate of the defendant's father on account of the share of his late wife (which is extremely doubtful), the same would be payable to the assignees, and, therefore, the defendant would have no power over the fund in Court, and, consequently, could not have obtained the authority stated, to take the amount of the plaintiff's demand out of that fund; but as this part of the statement is evidently made for the purpose of increasing that prejudice, which the whole paragraph is well calculated to excite in the public mind, against the parties attacked we think it is right that the attempt should not be left unexplained.

Having now gone through the whole of your Correspondent's Statement, we shall take our leave of him by suggesting that he should make himself acquainted with the whole of a case, before he again submits it to the Public, and in justice to Colonel Smith and ourselves, we presume you will have no objection to insert this narrative in your Paper, as the best means of making reparation for the injury already done by your former publication.

We are, Sir,
Your obedient Servants,
HAYES and HINCHLIFFE.

Hales Owen, 3rd August, 1826.

With reference to the repeated attacks which we understand this rascallion FAIRMAN has aimed at us, but of which, from seldom being able to get a sight of his paper, we have not read one half, we can only say, we laugh. He has made a variety of assertions respecting the connection of sundry Gentlemen with the conduct of THE AGE, every word of which, like every word he utters, is A LIE; and although we know nothing of these persons, never saw or heard from them, and have no more connection with them than with FAIRMAN himself, we cannot but regret that none of the parties have thought it worth their while to prosecute him for his infamous libels. For our own parts, remembering the adage which says, "he that meddles with pitch must he defiled," we should never think of mixing ourselves with a fellow devoid of truth and common honesty—an established liar, and an equally established COWARD, with a low vagabond pauper who, palming himself on the community as a LIEUTENANT-COLONEL in the King's Service, is nothing but a disbanded defaulter, and devoid of any principle or feeling which marks the soldier and the gentleman.

Men of such high respectability as those, whom this three-feet-six of moustache and dirt has herein scandalised, do well perhaps to rebut his impudent allegations; but we can assure them that the impostor's paper is not read, out of the walls of the Fleet Prison, by fifty individuals on earth.

THE ARMY.

The Depot of the 9th (East Norfolk) Regiment of Foot, arrived on the 4th inst., at Devonport, from Winchester.

The Depot of the 64th (2d Stsffordshire) Regiment of Infantry embarked, on the 4th inst., at Devonport, for Jersey.

Detachments belonging to the 3d, 44th, and 54th Regiments of Foot, embarked on Thursday, at Billingsgate, for Gravesend, on route to Chatham.

Detachments belonging to the 4th and 13th Regiments of Light Dragoons, embarked on Thursday, at Billingsgate, for Gravesend, on route to Maidstone.

A Detachment belonging to the 38th Regiment of Infantry, embarked on Thursday, at Billingsgate, for Gravesend, on route to Canterbury.

A Detachment of the 36th Regiment of Foot, embarked, on Monday night, on board a canal boat, at Paddington, for Manchester.

The 69th (South Lincolnshire) Regiment of Foot, which, it may be remembered, returned from India in March last, after twenty-one years of active service in that country, being now recruited to its establishment, was reviewed on Monday, by Sir H. Torrens, Adjutant-General of the Forces, at Albany Barracks, who expressed himself highly pleased with the good order, steadiness, and general appearance, of both officers and men.

THEATRICAL FRACAS.—A very genteel-looking young man, named Francis Cooke, (brother to that interesting and accomplished actress, Mrs. W. West,) was brought before Sir Richard Birnie, by Goddard the officer, charged by Mr. West, with assaulting him under the portico of Drury Lane Theatre. Complainant was accompanied by his son Mr. W. West, who is a diminutive person of very insignificant appearance. From what we could learn of the quarrel, it arose out of the violence and ill treatment of Mr. W. West towards his wife, which obliged her to appeal to the defendant, her brother, for protection. A gentleman who witnessed the assault complained of stated, that the complainant and his son followed the defendant up Brydges-street, towards the portico of the theatre, using the most insulting language, the complainant at length gave defendant a push, when he turned round and struck defendant in the face. Defendant said the conduct of Mr. W. West towards his wife was frequently so brutal that she was obliged to apply to him for protection, which, as a brother and a man, he could not refuse. Some time ago he beat her severely, within a month after her confinement. Mr. West, jun. wished to explain the cause of his conduct.—Sir R. Birnie: This is a family dispute, it ought to be settled elsewhere; I fear that interesting lady is not very well used. I do not however wish to hear any thing on that subject, nor will I hold any of the parties to bail.

The successor to the Duke of Manchester, as captain-general and governor of Jamaica, it is understood, will not be appointed for some months.

We understand that no direct account has been received of Lord Cochrane by the gentlemen of the city who have relations with the Greek government.

PIRATES.—The Agent to Lloyd's at Corunna, states, two Colombian privateers, a brig, and a schooner, cruizing from Cape Finisterre to Cape Ortegal, make daily captures, and we have here the crews of several Spanish vessels, robbed by them. A small schooner, which came with the convoy from Havannah to Ferrol, was captured the 17th instant near the Island of Sisarga. These pirates do not respect any flag. A Swedish schooner, which sailed last week for Gibraltar, was boarded in the waters of Camarmas, by a Colombian schooner, and a Spanish passenger robbed of all his property, and the master of 3,000 dollars. An English schooner and a French brig were boarded on the 17th inst. Many vessels have been plundered near Vigo and Rivaldeo.

The Agent at Gijon also states, several Spanish coasting vessels were captured off this port on the 17th inst. by a schooner privateer. The Hurrell, of Salcombe, Yabsley, remains here refitting.

SHIPWRECK.—We are informed by a letter from Peterhead, that the Jean, whaler, of that port, Capt. Minto, was lost at Greenland about the middle of April last, in a dreadful gale, after having from 30 to 40 tons of seal oil on board. The crew remained upon the wreck for six days, in a most miserable state, during which time some of them died. All their boats, except two, were destroyed, and the survivors, 47 in number, seeing no prospect of relief, took to their boats, and made for Iceland, where they fortunately arrived, after a short passage. From thence they were carried to Shetland, and have arrived there August 5th. Six of the crew have died, and others have suffered from the severity of the frost.

John Fordham, who was ordered to be executed at Newgate, on Monday last, but who was reprieved for one week, has been subsequently respited during his Majesty's pleasure.

WAKEFIELD'S TRIAL.—The briefs for the prosecution are of an enormous size, occupying more than 200 sheets. Very high fees are given to the Counsel on both sides. The Attorney-General is to have 600 guineas, and Sergeant Cross, and his other legal coadjutors, about 100 guineas each; Mr. Scarlett 200 guineas; and Mr. Tindal and his subs, from 60 to 80 guineas each. There are at least seventy witnesses subpœnaed, pro and con.

The work of excavation for the new docks at St. Katharine's is now carrying on with much activity. A great number of men are employed on that spot where formerly stood the Collegiate Church of St. Katharine. The houses situated between Iron-gate and Little Thames-street having been sold in parcel lots, the work of demolition is now carrying on, to the great denger of passengers, bricks and timber being thrown about in all directions. On Tuesday, a man, with a basket on his head, was very near being killed by a piece of timber thrown out of a two pair of stairs window, which knocked him down: he was much stunned, and lay for some time in an insensible state. The basket, in all probability, saved his life, by checking the fall of the timber.

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

SLAVE DEALING.

BOW-STREET.—About five weeks ago, under the head of "Slave Dealing," a Captain Thomas Young, late of the merchant ship, Malta, of Liverpool, was stated to have undergone an examination at Deptford, before Sir Richard Birnie, on a charge of having sold four women for slaves, while in the river Danger, on the African coast. That examination of course was a private one. It was then said that the accused was committed for trial, but this, it appears, was not the fact. In consequence of some arrangement between Mr. Maule, of the Treasury, and the legal adviser of the accused, he was not brought up for a final hearing until Wednesday, when he was placed at the bar of this office, before Sir Richard Birnie, and the examination was gone through de novo.

Mr. Maule attended for the prosecution, on behalf of the crown, and Mr. Broderick and Mr. J. Isaacs appeared as the counsel and attorney for the prisoner. The prisoner is a small thin made man, and has none of the robust and hardy appearance which generally characterise seamen. He preserved a constant smile upon his countenance, and listened with perfect composure to the testimony of the different witnesses. He was charged under the 5th Geo. IV. cap. 113, which makes the trafficking in slaves a capital felony.

Joseph Jackson was first sworn. He stated himself to be a native of London, and a mariner. He sailed from Liverpool in the Malta, commanded by the prisoner, and bound to the coast of Africa. He recollected being in the river Danger, on that coast. On the 17th of November last a person came on board the Malta, in that river, from a Spanish slave schooner. That person was an Irishman, named Roach, and witness afterwards understood that he was mate of the Spaniard; he remained on board for some time, in conversation with the mate of the Malta, and then returned to the schooner, the captain of which, afterwards came on board the Malta, and the schooner stood over from where she had been previously lying, to within pistol shot of that ship, and there came to an anchor. The captain of the schooner was for some time in the steerage bartering with captain Young for goods, viz. knives, cutlasses, bread, bars of iron, &c. Those articles were put into a boat, and witness assisted in conveying them on board the slaver. The witness at the time thought it was very wrong in the captain to trade with the slaver. Witness saw the captain of the slaver pay for the goods in dollars, and he afterwards handed over some more of the same coin; and Walker, the mate, said to the prisoner, "These are for the women." The prisoner's reply was —"Very well, Tom." The witness afterwards saw Walker hand the four women into the slaver's boat. Witness was standing on the gangway at the time, and every person on deck could see them. The prisoner afterwards went on board the slaver, and when he returned, brought a parcel with him, and the Malta's boat was sent again to the schooner with a parcel.

Daniel Pepper was steward of the Malta, on her voyage to Africa, where she traded for wax, ivory, and gum. When at Gambroon they traded with the natives, and four women were sent, as is usual in the traffic, on board the Malta, as pawns, for the trusts which captain Young had placed in the hands of certain natives who were to supply him with goods. The natives, to whom these women belonged, did perform their contract; but captain Young would not deliver them up, because the King of the place had not supplied certain goods for which trusts had been given. Witness heard Captain Young say, unless they were redeemed, he would sell them. Witness then described the visits to and from the slave schooner, and deposed, that the mate of her examined the women, and said they were very fine; and the captain said he intended to make sale of them. The captain of the slaver came on board the Malta, and had a long conversation with Captain Young, a native, called Antonio Tom, acting as interpreter. Captain Young said he would sell the women for 60 dollars each, but the Spaniard said he would give but 28; finally, 30 dollars each was agreed upon, and the money was laid upon the table in lots. Witness saw the money exchanged, and Captain Young gave him the dollars to count, and he found 120. Captain Young then ordered the women into the schooner's boat; they cried very much as they descended the gangway. Witness afterwards went on board the schooner, and saw the poor women sitting on the after hatchway, crying; he also saw about 80 men and women ironed below. The space between decks was about three feet in height. The crew told him they intended to get two hundred slaves altogether. The schooner was about 80 tons burthen.

Cross-examined—Witness often quarrelled with Captain Young, who accused him of stealing cloth, but not till after they were on board the Brazen. Young accused him, on the voyage out, of giving away the rum, and struck him, but he did not strike him again, because he was afraid of losing his wages. Remembered Young being severely beaten, and he deserved it. Witness never had a black eye.

John Walker, the mate, was examined in corroboration, and said the women were put on board as hostages, and were detained after they had been, properly speaking, redeemed by their relatives, for a debt owing to Young by the King of the place, who had given no pledge. Witness did not observe the selling; but Young afterwards told him he had sold the women.

Cross-examined—The mate of the schooner told witness she was bound, first to Gambroon, where the women came from, and afterwards to the southward.

Two apprentices on board the ship, named Hood and Rawes, were also examined, but stated no new facts of importance.

The evidence for the prosecution being closed, Mr. Broderick submitted to the magistrate, that this was a case in which the discretion vested in him by a late statute, of taking bail, in cases of felony, might fairly be exercised. The learned gentleman then argued at considerable length, with a view to shew that the story of the crew was full of improbabilities, and might fairly be taken as the invention of a set of disaffected men; and even (continued the learned counsel) admitting that their statements were quite true, the transaction was perfectly consistent with the innocence of the prisoner; for there was nothing at all to shew that the bargain between him and the Spaniard was not merely for the latter to take the women back to Gambroon, whither it was acknowledged the schooner was bound; and that the money paid was the amount for which the prisoner had them, and which the Spaniard would receive back on landing them.

Mr. Maule said he should be sorry to press hard against the accused, but he must say that it was more than a case of mere suspicion. He was willing, however, to leave it entirely to the magistrate.

After some conversation, Sir R. Birnie said he was always sorry to abridge the liberty of the subject, but he could not view this as a case in which he ought to take bail. The prisoner must stand committed for the capital felony.

Mr. Broderick earnestly represented the length of time which the prisoner had been in confinement, and was likely to remain so; and requested Sir R. Birnie would take time to consider the topics which he had urged.

Sir R. Birnie said he would certainly do so, and would carefully read over the depositions before he finally decided.—In the mean time the prisoner stands committed for trial.

It was stated that the Malta and her cargo have been sold for 10,000l. under condemnation.

An investigation, of an extraordinary nature, occupied the attention of the magistrates at this office during the whole of Wednesday. Mr. Harvey Price, of Middle-row, Holborn, bookseller; Mr. Deer, of Clare-market, corn-dealer; and Mr. John Deer, his brother, were respectively charged, by a girl named Mary Rooker, with an assault. The two first-named individuals were brought by Duke, on a warrant, to answer the charge; but the third was absent, it was said, in the country.

The prosecutrix appeared to be about 16 or 17 years of age, of pale complexion, and not at all well-looking; indeed, she may be said to be what is called "very plain." She was attended by her mother, and, when examined, gave her evidence with great appearance of artlessness and modesty of demeanour.

In defence it was alleged, that the charge was made for the purpose of extorting money; and Mr. Price called witnesses to prove that, on the Friday upon which she charged the offence, he was at the house of his father-in-law, Mr. Duncombe, during the whole of the day.

The prosecutrix, on being minutely examined by Mr. Halls, varied occasionally in some parts of her statement, and so, it is proper to state, did the witnesses in support of the alibi. Mr. Duncombe's female servant admitted that the prosecutrix told her of something that Mr. Price had done to her on one Sunday, when she came to dinner.

Mrs. Deer, the mistress of the prosecutrix, a remarkably fine woman, far advanced in pregnancy, was examined, and denied that the girl had told her of the alleged conduct of Mr. Price, on the day after it was said to have taken place. Speaking in reference to the charge against her husband, the witness, turning towards the prosecutrix, and with a look of ineffable scorn and contempt, exclaimed, "a pretty object of attraction for my husband, truly!"

Mr. Halls, after a most patient investigation of the whole circumstances, which occupied him until five o'clock in the afternoon, said he felt himself authorised to exercise the discretion which a late act of parliament had vested in him, to take bail for the future appearance of the accused parties, and he should therefore order them to give sureties in the amount of 80l. each, to appear at the next sessions, leaving the accusers to adopt what course they should, in their own judgment, deem most proper.

Messrs. Deer and Price immediately found bail.

EXTENSIVE ROBBERY BY A SHOPMAN.

MARLBOROUGH-STREET.—A short time since we gave the first examination of Henry Dunn, a shopman, in the employ of Messrs. Sewell and Cross, linen-drapers and mercers, in Old Compton-street, Soho. The prisoner's department was that of the lace and shawls, the easiest of conveyance, and the most profitable to convert into cash. The firm do not know the extent of their loss; they suppose 200l. A coachful of silks, dresses, scarfs, &c. were produced in the office. The prisoner had a kept mistress at 107, Brook-street, West-square, named Martha Smith; they passed as husband and wife. On the first examination she gave evidence against him, and was remanded to the New Prison, Clerkenwell; yesterday they were both committed for trial; he for the felony, and she for receiving them with a guilty knowledge.

TAKING SATISFACTION.—The man who gives evidence to Johnson's informations against the publicans, was brought up from St. Giles's watch-house, and placed in the dock for the felons, on the following charge:—

It is little more than a week ago that Johnson informed against half the publicans in Drury-lane, and had them fined; therefore it was something to laugh at to see the informer's man taken to where he had brought so many. What the thoughts of the publicans were can only be guessed at; what were those of the informer the sequel will tell.

Mr. Elson, of the White Hart public-house, Drury-lane, stated, that about half-past nine, on Wednesday evening, the prisoner came into his house, and asked him if he meant to stand treat. Witness told him he meant to do nothing of the kind, for he could not afford it, on which the prisoner went into the tap-room, and quarrelled with some of his customers. Witness desired he would go out, for he was always annoying him. There were about a dozen people there, some belonging to Mark Currie, the distiller and others to Coombe, the brewer. Hearing a scuffle and noise in the passage, the people collected, the watchman came in, and witness sent him to the watch-house. Witness charged him with fighting in the passage.

The patrol saw the scuffle, and took the prisoner to the watch-house, at the desire of the landlord.

The prisoner denied having asked for a treat, he went into the room, had not sat there more than three minutes, and had had nothing to drink, when the landlord kicked him out. Prisoner then told him to remember he was suffering working men to play at dominoes, on which he was sent to the watch-house.

Elson—They were playing at dominoes, your worship, but they are not labouring men; they belong to the distillery and the brewery.

Mr. Roe—You don't mean to tell me they are master manufacturers or shopkeepers—distillers' men, and brewers' servants! I shall discharge him, and he will lay an information against you for suffering gambling.

When he left the bar, the prisoner turned round as though going to the clerk's office, where informations are laid.

THE NEW STREET ACT.—Mr. Harris, the silversmith, in Edward-street, Wardour-street, appeared to an information, at the instance of the commissioners of the New Street Act, for driving his gig on the foot pavement.

The fact was clearly proved, and Mr. Harris was asked what he had to say.

Mr. Harris—My house is a freehold, at the back of which I have a stable, the only entrance to which is down the gateway in which the nuisance is stated to have occurred. I by no means deny it, for I have done it a thousand times. The area at the back of my house is of great extent; it was formerly the George Inn. Some time ago the Commissioners of Wide Streets thought proper to pave this gateway, to which I made no objection, and now they wish to deprive me of my freehold. Hearing that an information was lodged against me, I waited on the Commissioners to explain the hardship of preventing me the use of my own ground: but they declined coming to a decision, as it was before a Magistrate.

Mr. Wingfield, the Solicitor to the Commissioners, said, he saw Mr. Harris at the Board; but they came to no decision.

Mr. Harris said, he was willing to subscribe 50l. to the parochial funds, if his privilege could be continued.

Mr. Roe said, he would dismiss the present information, for informality; the act was stated to be his (Mr. Harris's), whereas Webb, the witness for the information, said the servant drove the gig. If the information was laid again, in a corrected form, he had no discretion; the Act was imperative, and he must enforce it. In the mean time, Mr. Harris could wait on the Board again.

The information was dismissed; and Mr. Harris said he would make a fresh application.

THE KING OF NAPLES' WATCH.—The watch so mysteriously abstracted from the desk of Mrs. Defries, of Castle-street East, is a large one, very heavy, and strikes the hour without touching the spring; it was formerly the property of Murat, the King of Naples.

A partial hearing was heard in the Magistrate's private room on Thursday, in the absence of the prisoner. Mrs. Defries, and Mr. Lewis, her attorney, were the only parties admitted. Mrs. Defries will advertise the watch herself, with a reward.—She wanted the watch, when found, to be sent after her, as herself and husband had paid their passage in the steam-vessel for Dieppe for Saturday, and if she said longer, it would be a serious loss to her. Mrs. Defries stated that a short man and woman came to her on Wednesday afternoon, and told her, if she would abandon the prosecution, the property should be returned.

Mr. Dyer said he could not permit a pecuniary loss or an inconvenience to be any bar to the ends of justice. The case was ordered to stand over.

ACCIDENTS, &c.

The neighbourhood of Colchester-street, Whitechapel, was thrown into great consternation last Sunday morning, at half-past one, by the falling of part of a house with a tremendous crash. The watchman, in calling the hour, had a narrow escape. At ten, the remaining part of the house fell: at the time, a number of persons were passing, and a number of children were assembled. The screams of the parents of the children were dreadful, supposing they were under the ruins; fortunately no lives were lost. The above house adjoined two which fell down about five years since. In the same street is a number of houses in a ruinous state. There must have been some neglect on the part of the local authorities of the parish of Whitechapel, or an inspection would have taken place, and prevented the danger to which the inhabitants are exposed.

About ten days ago, it may be remembered, a young woman was seen by several people who were crossing Blackfriars-bridge, to jump from the balustrade into the Thames. On that occasion, several boats put off to render her assistance; but one man, who might have possibly preserved the life of a fellow creature, he being nearer her than any other boatman, declined attempting to rescue the poor creature from the water, saying, "that there were plenty of women in the world," and rowed away. The young woman disappeared, and was drowned. Her body has been since found near the wharf by the Archbishop's Palace, Lambeth, and in consequence of an erroneous impression of a witness named Kitchener, who believed it to be a woman named Mary Ann Topman, alias Darbon, a coroner's inquest was held upon the deceased in that name, at the Crown public-house, Lambeth, on Friday last, when a verdict was returned of "Found drowned." The name of the deceased is Maria Bishop, and her father is one of the turnkeys of Newgate. The deceased was rather a fine young woman, and it is said that some disappointment which she had recently experienced respecting a situation, preyed upon her spirits, and occasioned her to commit the rash act.

SUICIDE.—Mr. Stephens, a respectable master builder, on Friday last, terminated his existence by strangulation, at his house in Warwick-lane. For some time past, particularly since the weather has set in so intensely hot, the unfortunate gentleman, had been in a bad state of health, accompanied with great nervous irritation and lowness of spirits. At the early hour of six, his son, who slept in the same room, got up for the purpose of going to superintend some workmen, but previous to leaving the house gave his father some medicines, who then appeared in a composed state. His daughter in about an hour afterwards came down stairs, and as she was passing the bed-room door called in to inquire how he had passed the night, when the melancholy sight presented itself of her father hanging from the roof of the bed, cold and inanimate. Medical assistance was procured, but all to no purpose, as the vital spark had fled. Many reasons are assigned for the rash act.

DUEL.—Friday se'nnight, a meeting took place on the sea-shore, at a place called the North Crook, in the neighbourhood of Drogheda, between Lieutenant Chesshire, R.N. and W. Huey, jun. Esq. both of Drogheda; Lieutenant C. was accompanied by L—— F——, Esq. and Mr. H. by Lieutenant B——, R.N. The gentlemen were placed at ten paces distance, and on the first fire Lieutenant Chesshire was dangerously wounded—the ball entered his right breast, and having passed through his lungs came out on his left arm. Surgeon Pentland happening to be near the ground, paid every possible attention to the wounded gentleman. He had him immediately removed to a house in the neighbourhood, where he now lies in a precarious state. The quarrel arose from a pecuniary transaction, the particulars of which Mr. Huey published, and this occasioned the message. Both parties acquitted themselves with firmness. The greatest anxiety is evinced in Drogheda for Mr. Chesshire's recovery. He is an officer who distinguished himself in the late Peninsular war—in the engagement at Bayonne, he was the first who leaped on shore, and planted the British standard on the banks of the Adour.—Dublin Evening Mail.

Yesterday se'nnight, between eight and nine o'clock, as two children, belonging to Mr. Swift, of Furnival's Inn, were looking out of the two pair window, the iron bar that went across gave way, and the youngest, Diana, a fine child, about five years old, fell out, and was unfortunately killed on the spot.

On Tuesday morning last, a servant maid at a house near the New Pier, as the readiest way of re-kindling a fire, most unguardedly took a powder flask, from which she dropped a few grains of powder on the fire, which communicating instantly with the contents of the flask, occasioned an immediate explosion. The flask was torn to pieces, and blown to the ceiling of the room, or part of it, as is believed, up the chimney, wounding the poor girl severely in the breast, while her face was completely blackened by the explosion, and her visage so much disfigured, as to leave it doubtful if she can fully recover her eye-sight. Another of the servants, who had joined in this dangerous and rash expedient, was also much scorched about the face and neck, and had her clothes at the same time set on fire: so that had not a fisherman, who happened to witness the accident, with great presence of mind, enveloped her in his jacket, which he promptly threw off for that purpose, the loss of her life would have been the melancholy but probable consequence. Both the sufferers were carried soon after to the Infirmary, and the former especially in a pitiable state, where we learn they still remain very poorly.—Aberdeen Paper.

The Lord Chancellor has nearly recovered from the attack of the gout in his hand, with which his Lordship was afflicted in the beginning of the present week. The Countess of Eldon was much better yesterday. Sir Matthew Tierney attends her Ladyship daily.

HYDROPHOBIA.—Owing to a favourite terrier dog, which went mad a few days ago, and died the morning after, under all the terrific symptoms of hydrophobia, the family of Lord Brudenell, on the King's Road, Brighton, have been thrown into no trifling degree of confusion. Mrs. Delhay, on the establishment of his Lordship, was severely bitten in the arm by the rabid animal, and has submitted to having the torn part removed by the knife of the surgeon.

The harvest is now in full progress, and even at this early period of the season is hastening far more rapidly to a prosperous conclusion than in almost any former year within the remembrance of man. The crop, if not superabundant, is probably at least an average, and that average affords, it has been found by the experience of seven years of non-importation, a supply very nearly if not quite sufficient for the demand. The stagnation of trade most unfortunately has lessened the consumption very materially by abridging the means of the industrious classes. The foreign corn so long in warehouse has been released and thrown upon the market very lately. All these we should say afford natural grounds for the expectation that corn must immediately flow in abundance into the market, and that the price must consequently fall.—Norwich Mercury.

ROMFORD BANK.—Friday, Messrs. Joyner, Surridge, and Joyner, bankrupts, attended at the Court of Commissioners, in Guildhall, to undergo their final examination. There was a very full attendance of creditors, apparently from the neighbourhood of Romford, and of the lower orders, who seemed to give the bankrupts a friendly recognition, while they, on their part, seemed to take an interest in assisting these poor people to prove their respective debts. Certain claims, to a very large amount, were made by Messrs. Turner and Nokes, for the better understanding of which the Commissioners consented to an adjournment; at the same time observing, that the Solicitors on each side ought to meet previous to the next meeting, and see, if possible, to have them arranged.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The present hot weather is extremely favourable to the vintage. The vintners of Argenteuil alone expect to make 80,000 pipes of wine.

Prince Charles of Prussia having been appointed ambassador to represent the King of Prussia at the coronation of the Emperor Nicholas, a difficulty arose, because, being of Royal extraction, he would take the precedence of certain ambassadors to whom that privilege belonged in the order of legation. It has been decided, therefore, that he shall attend the ceremony not as an ambassador but as a Prince of the Royal House.

A meeting of the shareholders of the Portable Gas Company was held on Tuesday, for the purpose of considering the propriety of allowing those persons who had paid only the first instalment of 1*l.* to consolidate their shares, on condition of paying a further instalment of 1*l.* The proposal being submitted to the meeting, was carried by a majority of 22 to 4. The statement of the affairs of this Company was by no means flattering.

At a meeting the same day, of the shareholders in the Indemnity Mutual Marine Insurance Company, it was resolved, that a call should be made for 13s. 6d. per share, to make good a deficiency in the capital of the undertaking. There was much discussion on the merits of the Company and the prospects of success, some of the proprietors being very sanguine as to the result, and others considering their money as sacrificed.

The Duke of York, it is expected, will leave Mr. Greenwood's villa, Brompton Park, in a few days, for Brighton.

On the 24th ult. at midnight, the town of Maubeuge was visited by a tremendous storm. The electric fluid struck with such force the lightening conductor of the gunpowder magazine, that a sentinel, who was near it, was knocked down, and remained senseless for nearly two hours.

The Pope has recently exercised clemency towards nearly 300 persons implicated in the conspiracy of the Carbonari of Ravenna, &c. by reducing their imprisonment to one-fourth of the term to which they had been sentenced.

It has been stated, "That Sir Herbert Taylor would shortly retire from his official situation as military secretary to the Duke of York." There is not the least foundation for this report.

Daring Robbery.—Between the hours of one and two o'clock on Tuesday morning, Mr. Greenwood's villa, at Brompton, where the Duke of York is at present residing, was broken into, and a small quantity of plate was stolen. His Royal Highness was sleeping on the ground floor, within a few yards from where the chest, containing the plate, stood. It is supposed that the thieves heard some slight noise in the Royal Duke's Chamber, as they took the precaution to turn the key, which happened to be on the outside of the door, and made a prisoner of the Royal guest; and to render confinement the more secure, they placed a heavy chair against the door. Information of this robbery was sent off by express to Mr. Townshend, the chief officer of Bow-street, who, having communicated the same to Sir Richard Birnie, proceeded accompanied by that Magistrate and Mr. Stafford, to the scence of the robbery, where it was discovered, that one of the windows at the back of the premises, which opened level with the ground, had been burst open, and one of the hinges broken off. On the path leading to the window, the impressions of a person's toes are very distinct. It is conjectured, that the persons must have been disturbed in their operations, as a number of the implements used by burglars were found on the lawn, where, it is supposed, they broke open the plate chest, and make off with its contents.

Thomas Thurtell, a brother of John Thurtell, who murdered Mr. William Weare, at Elstree, in Hertfordshire, in the year 1824, was on Saturday discharged from Newgate. It will be recollected that he was apprehended with John Thurtell, William Probert, and Hunt, and was examined at Hertford and Elstree, but there appearing no evidence to implicate him in the horrid deed, he was discharged, and brought to London on a charge of having set his house on fire in Watling-street, and conspired with Snowden and others to defraud the County Fire Office of 1,600l. He was convicted in the Court of King's Bench of the conspiracy, and sentenced to two years' imprisonment in Newgate, which term expired on Saturday.

On Monday afternoon, at about a quarter before one, the bonded warehouse of Mr. Poole, Suffolk-street, Liverpool, fell with an awful crash, and buried in its ruins a small dwelling-house and several workmen, who were erecting a vault and shed adjoining. By the immediate assistance of a number of people, four or five persons were extricated alive, some of whom are so dreadfully bruised as to leave little hopes of their recovery; two have been found dead, and two children are missing. A number of workmen are now employed, under the direction of the Mayor and other gentlemen, who have exerted themselves on the occasion, in clearing away the rubbish. The warehouse was full of cotton, linseed, madders, &c., and the two vaults underneath contained a great deal of wine. Various reports are abroad as to the cause of the accident, but it is generally supposed, that the warehouse had not been erected so substantially as to bear the weight of the goods stored in it.

Dinner-time.—The proper hour for dinner is laid down by Thomas Cogan, a physician, in a book entitled the Haven of Health, printed in 1584. It is curious to observe how far we have since departed from the rule.—"When four hours be past after breakfast, a man may safely take his dinner, and the most convenient time for dinner is about eleven o'clock before noon. The usual time for dinner in the universities is about eleven, or elsewhere about noon."

A galley convict having been tried for murder at Brest, and found guilty, the execution took place on the following day, as such persons have no appeal. All the convicts were present, in chains. Whilst the executioner strapped the prisoner to the fatal board, they remained uncovered and on their knees. Cannon, with their mouths directed towards them, were loaded in their presence, and the troops charged the muskets so as to be ready to fire, if any disturbance had arisen. In the midst of these imposing preparations the criminal was put to death.

The young Iroquois Chief, who has been residing for some at Paris, has embarked at Havre on his return to America, accompanied by a missionary, and taking with him the body of St. Felix, three pieces of the real cross, some of the bones of St. Peter and St. Paul, and of several other saints, besides ten gold and silver medals, six large copper ones, and thirty small ones, with an agate crown, estimated at 6,000 francs, and a chaplet, said to be worth 2,000 francs.—French Paper.

On the 16th of July the commune of Prechacq was the theatre of a third scene of that brutal and barbarous superstition of which we related two instances a few days ago. Jane Farthonat was enticed into a house and threatened with death unless she cured a child that was sick, and which she was accused of keeping in that state. On her replying that God alone could make ill and cure, a rope was put round her neck, and it was resolved that the pretended witch ought to be burnt; a truss of straw and a faggot of brushwood were kindled, and the unfortunate Farthonat was placed over the fire; being severely burnt, and seeing that she would certainly be burnt to death, she promised to cure the child the same evening. After this promise they removed her from the fire, and she went home. There is reason to hope that an exemplary punishment will prevent the recurrence of similar atrocities.—Brussels Paper.

We have received from Maestricht a letter, giving an account of the ravages caused by a terrible storm of hail on the evening of the 3. Our correspondent says he picked up hail-stones as large as a common sized egg; they consisted of an opaque nucleus, with transparent envelope. Thousands of panes of glass are broken. The Town-hall alone has 1,500 destroyed. The whole country is laid waste. Crows, pigeons and hares are found dead in the fields. In some places the deluge of water obliged the inhabitants to take refuge in the upper stories of their houses. One farmer had 40 acres of oats and 10 of clover cut to pieces; he estimates his loss at 14,600 francs. In the commune of Heep the damage is estimated at 121,550 francs. Daron de S—— is said to have ordered 25,000 slates to repair the roofs of his chateau and the church. The details which we received of the ravages and fatal events caused by the late storms are most afflicting. A great part of the province of Lemburg, and several communes of Namur, Liege, and Hainault have had their crops cut to pieces, and their buildings damaged, by the hail-stones, which have been of extraordinary size, and it is even affirmed that in some instances pieces of ice a pound weight have fallen. Here follows the enumeration of numerous instances of fires caused by lightning. In general the unhappy sufferers were unable to save their furniture, their corn, cattle, or horses. Some persons have been killed by the lightning; the damage done by the fire at Almkerk, of which we have given an account before, is estimated at 100,000 florins.—Brussels paper.

A friend in Stonehaven writes to us that the farmers in the neighbourhood of that town are in a very unfortunate condition:—"The crop of oats and barley has failed; there is no grass for the cows; turnips are a dead loss; and every thing is at sixes and sevens. I have seen a field of turnips known as such only by one turnip in the middle of it; and I have lifted a stook that I could have carried home in my hat."—Edinburgh Observer.

Narrow Escape.—We have been favoured with the following extract from a private letter received by a gentleman in Glasgow, from his friend in Argyleshire:—"Argyleshire, July 25.—Archibald Sinclair, one of my herds in the island of Gigha, and who, having been born upon the banks of Loch Awe, is not much acquainted with seafaring; he, however, had procured a small boat for the purpose of fishing about the shore, and on Friday, the 7th of this month, he went to his boat for the purpose of mooring her in a safer creek, and having loosened the painter, he leaped on board. By the agitation produced, one of the oars went overboard; and, in an attempt to recover it, Sinclair tumbled into the sea, but contrived to lay hold of the gunwale, and by exerting himself, succeeded in getting into the boat; but, in the exertion, the second oar went overboard, and in this helpless state he was carried to sea by a strong current. It was late in the evening, and his cries for assistance were not heard, nor was the unfortunate navigator and his yawl discovered. When night closed upon him, he was considerably to the southward of Gigha, and his bark directing her course to the Irish coast. In the course of the night, by the turn of the tide, he was carried considerably to the north of the island, and on Saturday morning he was abreast of my estate of Keils upon the mainland, opposite to Jura, but which, in his alarm, he did not recognize, although he had been a herd there for three years. The boat was carried backwards and forwards in the sound of Jura all Saturday, without being discovered; Sinclair, supposing himself all day upon the Irish coast, as he had not been aware of his course being changed by the course of the tide on Friday night. On Sunday morning he was fortunately seen by the master of a Gigha vessel, returning from the Northern Isles, just as the current which sets into the very dangerous gulf of Corryvreckan, between the islands of Jura and Scarba, was carrying him and boat into that dreadful whirlpool, and where a fatal termination would, in all probability, have been put to the voyage of this fresh-water sailor, who will not, I suspect, make any further attempt at navigation. He was without food or drink from Friday afternoon when he embarked, till he was picked up on Sunday morning. Messengers had been despatched to search the coasts of Islay, Jura, and Knapdale, for Sinclair, and his wife and family had given him up for lost."—Glasgow Courier.

The Archbishop of Bordeaux had completed his 90th year on the evening preceding his death. He observed on the subject, "It is the last number of the lottery."

On Monday, John Purdon was executed at Cork for the robbery and murder of Thomas Stammers, at Killanane, on the 25th of September last. It appeared by the evidence on his trial that he had been assisted in the murder by his wife.

On Saturday se'nnight, Henry Moss, convicted at our Assizes of stealing two horses from Waters Upton, underwent the dreadful sentence of the law in front of the County Gaol in this town. After taking the Sacrament from the hands of the Chaplain, he ascended the platform with a firm step, and was immediately launched into eternity.

A young man, in the service of Mr. Cruikshank, in Dean-street, Soho-square, has been lately several times assailed by a wretch, having the appearance of a gentleman, as also by his man-servant, or rather (as circumstances have since proved) his companion, but happily without effect, as the young man made his master acquainted with the whole affair, from its commencement.—After many unsuccessful attemts to entrap them in their different appointments, one, at length, succeeded. The parties proposed to call on the young man on Sunday evening last, having been previously told that all the family would be out till a late hour, and no person at home but himself. Accordingly, at the time fixed, six o'clock, one of the wretches, dressed in the height of fashion, knocked at the door, which was immediately opened by Mr. Cruikshank's servant, who satisfied him that they were quite alone and all comfortable; upon which they went down into the kitchen, the visiter apparently overjoyed at such a favourable opportunity. The necessary preparations for tarring and feathering being arranged, and Mr. Cruikshank having fixed himself in a place of concealment, only awaited the appointed signal from his servant for the proper time to enter, which, after about twenty minutes had elapsed, was given, when in rushed Mr. Cruikshank, who seized the fellow by the collar with one hand, and well horsewhipped him with the other, after which he threw him on a chair, stripped off his coat, waistcoat, and shirt, and then tied his legs and pinioned his arms with cords, which he had previously provided himself with. Mr. Cruikshank then ordered his servant to bring in the pot of tar, a bag of feathers, and a large white-washing brush, when a scene ensued that neither pen nor pencil can do justice to. Mr. C. in a truly professional manner, began his work of tarring the miserable wretch all over, and suffice it to say, no artist ever touched off a subject in greater style, when by his able instructions, his servant showered on a profusion of feathers to such an extent, that the object of degradation soon lost claim or resemblance to any thing human. He had only the power of utterance left, which was employed in imploring for mercy, and begging to know what they were going to do with him; to which he was answered by the huge brush of tar being sent against his mouth, and by being told that he might be thankful the rope was round his legs instead of round his neck. The ceremony, which had lasted upwards of an hour, being completed, and his arms and legs unloosed, he was allowed to put on some of his clothes; but, as it was broad daylight, no threats could get him to go out of the house. At length, by very slow degrees, he advanced to the street-door, which was already open for him; but when he got to it, such was the sense he had of his most unaccountable and curiously unnatural appearance, that he was afraid to encounter the street till pushed by the shoulders out of doors. Mr. Cruikshank kept by him with the horse-whip in his hand, and was soon joined by a multitude of perified individuals, as also by an officer, when, just as they got into Lisle-street, the wretch suddenly disappeared. However, information has been given at Bow-street, and every effort will be made to bring the party to condign punishment. It may be necessary to state, that nothing could equal the terror of the fellow when seized upon, unless it was the abominably disgusting situation in which he was found. The guilty wretches had been living for some time past in apparent respectability in the neighbourhood of Leicester-square, but they have flown.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE AGE.

Sir—Several defamatory and libellous paragraphs having appeared in The Palladium Sunday Newspaper, reflecting on my conduct and character, as Warden of his Majesty's Prison of the Fleet, I have caused a notice to be served on the Proprietor, Editor, Printer, and Publisher of that Paper, a copy whereof is as follows, and which, with this, I request may be inserted in your Paper. I am, Sir, your obedient Servant,

Office, Fleet, Aug. 11. W. R. H. BROWN.

"Fore-street, Aug. 10, 1826.

"Sir—The series of paragraphs printed and published in The Palladium Sunday Newspaper (of which we have been informed you are the proprietor, editor, printer, and publisher), relating to Wm. Rt. Henry Brown, Esq. Warden of his Majesty's Prison of the Fleet, and calumniating him as well in such official situation as in private life, having been submitted to counsel, and deemed defamatory and libellous, we have been directed to apprize you, that an application will be made to the Court of King's Bench, on the first day of next Michaelmas Term, or so soon after as counsel can be heard, for a rule to shew cause why a criminal information should not be filed against you for such offences; therefore we have thought it right to give you notice thereof, that you may not aggravate the matter by a repetition of similar offences.

"We are, Sir, your obedient servants,

"JOHN PULLEN and SON.

"To Mr. Wm. Blennerassett Fairman, Fleet-prison."

TUESDAY'S GAZETTE.

DECLARATIONS OF INSOLVENCY.

S. L. Levin, Grace's-alley, Wellclose-square, bead-merchant—R. Thornley, Vale House, Mortram, Cheshire, cotton-spinner.

BANKRUPTCY ENLARGED.

J. Crossley, Duckenfield, Cheshire, provision dealer.

BANKRUPTS.

B. Wisedill, Prospect-place, St. George-the-Martyr, jeweller——G. Ellis, Rexbrough, Yorkshire, tobacconist——J. Offer, Cambridge, bookseller——D. Pinero, Charlotte-street, Fitzroy-square, coal merchant——J. F. Lavell, Portland-street, Walworth, cheesemonger——R. Trott, Stepney, scavenger.——P. Geronimo, Bristol, looking-glass-manufacturer——J. Harrison, Wigan, Lancashire, inn-keeper——C. and S. Harrop, Debcross, Saddleworth, Yorkshire, clothiers——B. Dryden, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, common-brewer——G. Oakley, Allsop's-buildings, New-road, merchant——C. Seore, Austin-friars, scrivener——T. Gibbons, jun. Wells, Norfolk, merchant——J. Spriggs, Drury-lane, leather-seller——W. Germain, Bath, jeweller——H. Emett, Manchester, victualler——J. Belshaw and T. Burrows, Manchester, machine-makers——G. Dixon, Runcorn, Cheshire, shopkeeper——S. Campbell, Bristol, wood-factor——J. Peeling, Liverpool, druggist.

REAL FRENCH VINEGAR.—Just Imported, a few Hogsheads of very Superior Bordeaux Double Vinegar. The peculiar fine character, pale colour, and great strength of this Vinegar, gives it a decided superiority over every other now in general use.—Price per the single Imperial Gallon 6s.—May be had, Wholesale and Retail, at the Importer's, J. BLOCKEY, Foreign Wine and Spirit Merchant, 21, Duke-street, St. James's.

SPILSBURY's Drops are remarkably efficacious in relieving disorders which arise from obstructed perspiration, indigestion, or impurities of the blood:—that a small bottle of the Medicine is sufficient for a trial of its virtues in cases of scurvy, leprosy, evil, abscess, ulcers, and rheumatic gout. Sold at 15, Soho-square, in bottles, at 6s.; 10s. 6d.; and £1 2s. Likewise by Messrs. Sutton, Bow Church-yard; Newbury and Edwards, St. Paul's; Butler's, Cheapside; Barclay and Co., Fleet Market; and all respectable Venders.

DISTRESS in SPITALFIELDS.—At a MEETING of the COMMITTEE, holden in the Vestry-room of Christ Church, Spitalfields, August 8, 1826,

The Rev. RICHARD HARVEY in the Chair:

The Committee have the pleasure of stating, that there has been a trifling decrease in the number of persons on their books in the course of the last week. They have been engaged in investigating every case with the utmost attention, and in consequence of the return of a few tickets, and the diminution of relief to winders, the money distributed during the last week amounted only to 430l. 14s. 6d.

The Committee have this week made a still further reduction in the allowance afforded to weavers; but they earnestly entreat the public to enable them to continue the relief for a short time, without any further reduction.

Amount before advertised - - £26,187 14 11

	£.	s.
C. H. Y. 2d don. - -	10	0
C. Sayer, esq. - - - -	2	2
Per the Rt. Hon. the Lord Mayor.
H. - - - - -	1	1
R. R. - - - -	3	0
Per Messrs. Jones, Loyd, and Co.
S. T. - - - -	50	0
Per Messrs. Hankey and Co.
Mrs. Hankey, Bedford-square	5	0
Miss Hankey, ditto - -	3	0
Lady Wigram - - -	5	0
Per Messrs. Ransom and Co.
A. N. - - - -	5	0
Per Messrs. Praed and Co.
John Turner, esq. - - -	5	0
Per Messrs. Hoare.
The Hon. Eliz. Curzon -	5	0
C. H. - - - -	3	0
Per Messrs. Herries and Co.
G. F. T. - - - -	1	0
Per Messrs. Drummond and Co.
Mrs. Maria Trevelyan - -	20	0
Per Messrs. Coutts and Co.
C. P. - - - -	2	0
J. F. T. - - - -	5	0

	£.	s.
Nicholas Brown, esq., 3d don.	5	0
By Messrs. Willis and Co.
The Lord Bishop of Lichfield and Coventry, by Child and Co. 3d don. - -	10	0
By Messrs. Currie and Co.
Mrs. Smith, Portland-place -	10	0
By Messrs. Barclay and Co.
A Lady - - - -	20	0
T. W. - - - -	5	0
Robt. Barclay, esq. Lombard-street - - - -	10	0
By Messrs. Remington and Co.
The Rev. Peter Debary, 2d don. - - - -	5	0
B. P. Tennant, esq. - -	3	3
By Messrs. Smith, Payne, and Co.
Messrs. H. and J. Johnston and Co. - - -	50	0
By Sir W. Curtis, bart. and Co.
J. A. Droop, esq. 2d don. -	21	0
Mr. and Mrs. Caldecourt -	2	0
R. W. Hall, esq. Ilford-lodge	2	0
By Sir J. Lubbock, bart. and Co.
R. W. Mayo, esq. 4th don. -	5	0

Subscriptions are received by the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor; Wm. Hale, Esq. Wood-street, Spitalfields, Treasurer; and by all the Bankers.

The Committee continue to sit daily in the Vestry-room, Spitalfields, at Two o'clock.

J. D. KINCAID, Sec.

NEW EDITION, THE TENTH, ENLARGED,

With Observations on the Danger of trusting to Nostrums, as an Internal Remedy for the Cure of Strictures. Illustrated by Cases. Price 3s.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS on STRICTURES of the URETHRA and RECTUM, recommending an improved system for their Treatment and Cure; illustrating its efficacy by numerous remarkable and highly important cases, in some of which, Strictures of from ten to twenty years duration have been totally removed in a few weeks, and its superiority thereby fully established over every other method hitherto practised. By C. B. COURTENAY, M.D. To which are added, Observations and Practical Comments on Gleet, Seminal Weakness, and the miseries occasioned by Self Abuse, for the cure of which a mode of treatment, the result of long and successful practice, and at once safe, speedy, and effectual, is adopted by the Author.

Printed for the Author, Robert-street, Adelphi; and published and sold by Jones and Sherwood, Paternoster-row; Onwhyn, 4, Catherine-street, Strand; Chapell, Royal Exchange; Marsh, 145, Oxford-street; Walker, 90, High Holborn; Chappell, 94, Pall Mall; Sutherland, 9, Carlton-street, Edinburgh; and may be had of all Booksellers.

"We earnestly recommend the cases related by Dr. Courtenay to the perusal of such of our readers as are afflicted with the complaints which the Author has made the subject of these Observations. Several instances are adduced of the recovery of perfect health from states which were considered hopeless by Practitioners of eminent talents, and very extensive experience. We entertain the highest opinion of Dr Courtenay's professional skill, and congratulate him on his successful and judicious application to these severe and often fatal diseases."—European Magazine.

BIRTHS.—At the Batalha, Oporto, on 5th July, the Lady of William Richard Harris, Esq. of a daughter.—On the 4th inst. in Seymour-place, la Duchesse de Coigny, of a daughter.—On the 4th inst. the Lady of Dr. Holland, of Lower Brook-street, of a daughter.—On the 7th inst. at Woodhal-park, Herts, the Hon. Mrs. A. L. Melville, of a daughter.—On the 6th inst. in Weymouth-street, Portland-place, Mrs. S. Page of a son.—On the 4th inst. at Glynde Place, Sussex, the seat of the Hon. General Trevor, the Lady of Sir T. H. Farquhar, Bart. of a son.—On the 4th inst. at Birtles, Chesbire, the Lady of T. Hibbert, Esq. of a daughter.

MARRIED.—Rev. E Coleridge, Rector of Monksilver, Somersetshire, to Mary, eldest daughter of the Rev. Dr. Keate, Head Master of Eton School.—On the 31st ult. G. H. Ames, Esq. of Clifton Wood, to Anna, second daughter of the late Gideon Acland, Esq of Camberwell, Surrey.

DIED.—On the 11th inst. aged 12, John, the eldest son of Mr. John Aldred Twining.—On the 8th inst. in Mortimer-street, Cavendish-square, John Pilans, Esq. solicitor, of Swaffham, in the county of Norfolk.—On the 23d ult. at near Plymouth, George Collins, Esq. aged 64.—George, son of the Rev. Dr. Adams, Rector of Hals'tead, Essex.—At Belvidere, Kent, the Countess Gersoff, daughter of Lord Saye and Sele.—W. B. Pheue, in his 19th year.—Miss Astle, daughter of the late T. Astle, Esq. Keeper of his Majesty's Records.—At the London Assurance House, Birchin-lane, J. Laurence, Esq.

London: Printed and Published by R. D. RICHARDS, at 343, Strand, corner of Catherine-street.

THE AGE.

" THE VERY AGE AND BODY OF THE TIME."

VOL. II. No. 68. SUNDAY, AUGUST 27, 1826. Price 7d.

THEATRE ROYAL, HAYMARKET.—To MORROW Evening, Paul Pry, with Poor Relations; or, Who's to Inherit, and Midas; Midas, Mr. W. Farren, Apollo Madame Vestris—Tuesday, Sweethearts and Wives; Laura, Madame Vestris, with Thirteen to the Dozen, and Midas.—Wednesday, Paul Pry, with Poor Relations, and The Epaulette; Victor, Mad Vestris.—Thursday, Sweethearts and Wives, with Thirteen to the Dozen, and Midas—Friday, Paul Pry, with Poor Relations, and Tom Thumb.—Saturday, Sweethearts and Wives with Thirteen to the Dozen, and Midas.

THEATRE ROYAL, ENGLISH OPERA HOUSE. —To-morrow, Monday, August 28th, The Death Fetch, with How to die for Love, and Two Words; or, Silent, not Dumb.—Tuesday, The Oracle, with The Blind Boy.—Wednesday, The Oracle, with a popular melo-drama.—Thursday will be performed, for the first time, an entirely New Musical Farce, called Before Breakfast, the characters by Mr. Mathews, Mr. Bartley, Mr. Keeley, Mr. Pearman, Mr. W. Bennett, and Miss Boden, after which The Promissory Note, and The Boarding House, Peter Fidget, Mr. Mathews.—Friday, The Oracle, with a popular melo-drama.—Mr. T. P. Cooke will very shortly return from his engagement in Paris, and perform in Presumption.

ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE, (ASTLEY'S,) Westminster-bridge. Monday, Aug. 28, and following evenings, for the first time will be produced, an entirely new seasonable sporting, equestrian, and pedestrian burletta, called Shooter's Hill, or the First of September! by the author of Paul Pry on Horseback, and Adelphi Tom and Jerry.—Herr Cline, the celebrated German artist, is re-engaged for the remainder of the season, and will repeat his paramount evolutions on the Tight Rope. Scenes in the Circle. Mr. Ducrow as the Page Troubadour upon his rapid Courser. The grand manœuvres of the Chinese Cavalry, &c. The entertainments to commence at a quarter past Six, with the grand historical military spectacle of Bonaparte's Invasion of Russia, or the Conflagration of Moscow.

The Box-office is open daily from 11 till 4.

Under the Especial Patronage of His Majesty.

ROYAL GARDENS, VAUXHALL.—Last Night but Two. The Proprietors respectfully acquaint the Public that the Royal Gardens will close next Friday, the 1st of September. To-morrow, Monday, 28th August, a constant succession of Amusements will be given during the whole of the Evening, commencing with

A SPLENDID CONCERT. Principal vocal Performers, Miss Travis, Miss Helme, and Miss Love; Mr. Braham, Mr. Sinclair, and Signor de Begnis, Mr. Taylor, Mr. Hornecastle, Mr. Robinson, Mr. Tinney, and Master Barker. Leader of the Band, Signor Spagnoletti. Conductor, Mr. Bishop.

The beautiful Moonlight Scene of

THE RUINS OF AN ITALIAN ABBEY,

Produced by the celebrated Mr. Stanfield, of the Theatre Royal Drury-lane, will be again exhibited.

The celebrated Mr. WILSON, will again exhibit his elegant performances on

THE TIGHT ROPE,

A New Ballet, Entitled,

IL CORONAMENTE DELLA ROZIERE,

Composed by Mons. B. Vestris. The Music by Mr. G. H. Rodwell. The Scenery by Mr. Thorne. The two Ridgways will dance an entirely new Grotesque Pas de Deux.

During the evening, Mr. Blackmore will exhibit his usual Evolutions on the Slack Rope. To conclude with a grand display of Fire Works. In the last grand piece, the Young American will make his Terrific Ascent to the Moorish Tower, and descend amidst Volumes of Fire.

Private Boxes may be had of Mr. Andrews, Bond-street.

Doors open at Seven.---Concert commences at Half-past Eight.---Admission 4s.

DIORAMA, REGENT'S PARK.—The two new Views now exhibiting, are The Interior of Rosslyn Chapel, painted by Mons Daguerre, and a View of the City of Rouen, taken from Mount St. Catherine's, painted by Mons. Bouton, with various effect of light and shade, producing the most extraordinary illusion to the spectators.—Open daily from 10 till 4 o'clock.

N. B. Fine weather is not essential for seeing the present Views, as the appearance of sunshine is produced with equal effect on the most cloudy day.—Dimensions of each picture, 70 feet by 50.

Under engagement to sail first week in September,

FOR CALCUTTA, the fine new ship CANDIAN, FRANCIS REED, Commander. A 1, coppered. Burthen 250 Tons. Lying in the City Canal. For Freight or Passage apply to Messrs. Hunter and Co. 59, Old Broad-street; or to Buckles, Bagster, and Buchanan, 33, Mark-lane.

To sail from Gravesend on the 9th of September, and has only four cabins disengaged (under engagement with the Hon. East India Company),

FOR CALCUTTA, with liberty to land Passengers at MADRAS, the fine ship CAMBRIAN, JOSEPH BLYTH, Commander. Burthen 700 Tons. Lying in the City Canal. Apply to Messrs. Bazett, Farquhar, Crawford & Co. 71, Old Broad-street; to Capt. Blyth, at the Jerusalem Coffee-House; or to Buckles, Bagster, and Buchanan, 33, Mark-lane.

APPEAL to the PUBLIC from the LETTER-PRESS PRINTERS of the METROPOLIS.

At a time when so many Appeals are made to the Benevolence of the Public by Bodies more numerous and perhaps more important, though certainly not, individually, more distressed, great reluctance is felt by the COMMITTEE acting for the JOURNEYMEN PRINTERS of the Metropolis, in soliciting for their Unemployed and Destitute Fellow-workmen any portion of the Public sympathy. It is not the wish, neither would it be the province, of this Committee, to advert to the Causes which have led to the present Embarrassments of Trade; they will, however, take leave to state, that on no branch of industry has the pressure of the times fallen with greater severity than on the Printing Business. Every effort has been made, and is now making, by the Journeymen in Employment, both in Town and Country, to lessen the Calamity which has befallen their Brethren, by a Weekly Subscription out of their scanty Earnings; but the amount thus collected proving so very inadequate to meet the pressing and increasing Demands, they are constrained, unwillingly, to adopt this their only resource, of laying their distresses before a humane Public, and of supplicating its generous Aid, without which numbers of their most deserving Brethren must endure, it is feared, for months, all the evil which poverty can possibly inflict.

Although this Appeal is addressed to the Public at large, in the hope that some individuals, from motives of humanity, will step forward to their assistance, the Journeymen Printers are conscious of no claim on general sympathy stronger than that of urgent distress. They venture, however, to appeal to the patriotic feelings of their Countrymen—to such as consider the Press a powerful engine, not merely in the diffusion of Knowledge and advancement of Science, but also in the preservation of Public Liberty, that they will allow these feelings to operate in favour of the men, who minister in its service, and who now unfortunately are compelled to implore their succour.

To the Literary Portion of the Public they wish particularly to address themselves, with becoming humility, in this their season of adversity; most of whom are doubtless aware that for some time after the introduction of the Art, the profession of a Printer was as illustrious as it was profitable: but worthily from the inroads made by Machinery—the general diffusion of Education, which renders learning no mark of distinction—or from whatever other cause—certain it is the operative Printer is not at all superior, in point of remuneration, to that of the commonest handicraft workman. They confident y cherish the hope, however, that their claims to protection will still be recognised by the lovers of Literature, and that the humble instrumens of ushering into the world the productions of Genius and Learning will not be suffered to perish for lack of bread.

The Committee cannot omit to notice, in terms of pride and thankfulness, the liberal donation which has been sent to a Subscription, now raising in Bristol and its Neighbourhood, for the ill-dressed Printers, by a celebrated Female, an ornament to her sex and to the Literature of her Country. Most serviceable will it prove to the objects of her bounty—more valuable as an example for imitation.

Subscriptions will be gratefully received by the Committee, who attend every Monday and Tuesday Evening for that special purpose, at the Three Herrings, Bell-yard, Temple Bar, where they will be happy to give every information, and where their Accounts and System of Management will be open to the inspection of those benevolent individuals who may feel disposed to aid their cause.

Subscriptions will also be received at the following places:—Messrs. Cowie and Strange, 6, Paternoster-row, and 24, Fetter-lane; Messrs. Shaw and Sons Printers, 17, Fetter-lane, Fleet-street; Mr. Hetherington, Popular Encyclopedia Office, 30, Kingsgate-street, Holborn; Mr. Wharton, Bookseller, Walworth-road, near the Montpelier Gardens; Mr Markhouse, Grove House Tavern, Camberwell; Mr. Thomson, 189, Fetter-lane; Mr. J. Briggs, Flageole Maker, 75, Parson-street, Ratcliffe-highway; Mr. J. Cabe, Iron Founder and Stove Grate Manufacturer, Ray-street, Clerkenwell; Mr. Hall, Iron Founder, Wych-street, Drury-lane; Horse Shoe and Star, St. Dunstan's, Fleet-street; and by the Proprietors of all Country Newspapers.

Committee Room, Aug. 24, 1826.

LA, W.—This popular Comic Song, as sung by Mr. CHARLES TAYLOR, is just published by CLEMENTI & CO. 26, Cheapside, price 1s. 6d. Where may be had, "Come to the Highlands with me," as sung by Mr. Braham, composed by Blewitt. Price 2s.

PIANOFORTE TUNER.—C. KIRKMAN respectfully solicits those Ladies having Instruments a few miles out of town, which may require tuning, to make application at No. 15, Mortimer-street, Cavendish-square.

"NOW ALL THE TOWN IS CHERRY RIPE," New Ballad with Characteristic Etchings, founded on Twelve Popular Songs, sung by Madame Vestris, Miss Stephens, &c. viz. "Cherry ripe," "I've been roaming," "Sweet Home," "Buy a broom," "Light guitar," "Knight was brave," "Lover's Mistake," "Plain Gold Ring," &c. &c. Composed by T. Williams, published at No. 2, Strand, and sold by all Music Sellers. Price 2s.

N.B.—New Edition, "First vide de grace extraordinaire," (mock bravura) sung by John Reeve 100 successive nights. (Herbert) 2s.; and No. 6, "Williams' Comic Songs," containing, "The King and the Countryman," "Authors turned shopkeepers," "All the Jack asses are over the water," &c. 1s. per Number.

NEW SONGS, &c.—"O'er the Valley, o'er the Mountain," sung by Madame Vestris, the words by G. Dailey, Esq. the music by C. E. Horn Price 2s.

"Lillies of the Valley," the words by T. H. Bayly, Esq. the music by Sir Jno. Stevenson Price 2s.

"Oh, still where'er my feet shall stray," sung by Mr. Braham, composed by C. M. Von Weber. Price 1s. 6d.

"How sunk is her Eye," composed by J. Willis. Price 2s.

"The Blue Bells," a trio for soprano, tenor and bass, sung with the highest marks of approbation at the Nobility's Concerts, composed by B. G. H. Gibsone. Price 3s.

"What makes this world so fair," a trio for two sopranos and bass. 2s. 6d.

Goss's Parochial Psalmody, containing Psalms, Hymns, Responses to the Commandments, single and double Chants, &c. 1 vol. boards. Price 6s.

Just Published, by J. WILLIS & CO. Royal Musical Repository, 55, St. James's-street, (opposite Jermyn-street,) London, and 7, Westmoreland-street, Dublin, where may be found, every variety of Grand, Cabinet, Cottage, Square, and Circular Pianofortes, Harps, &c. from the most eminent makers, at the lowest manufacturers' prices.

NEW MUSIC.—Published by GOULDING and D'ALMAINE, 20, Soho square.

VOCAL.

Buy a Broom, the admired air, sung by Miss Love, at Vauxhall, composed by H. R. Bishop, price 1s. 6d.

I am twining, I am twining, ballad, composed by T. Rawlings, price 2s.

Draw the Sword Scotland, sung by Mr Braham, at Vauxhall, adapted and composed by G. H. Rodwell, price 1s. 6d.

"Blame me not, my gentle Laddie," sung by Miss Travis, composed by John Parry. Price 1s. 6d.

A Series of popular Songs by Bishop, Braham, Stevenson, Horn, &c. with Guitar Accompaniment, by C. M. Sola.

The Opera of ALADDIN, composed by H. R. Bishop, price 1l. 11s. 6d. or the Songs, Duets, &c. may be had single.

☞ This Opera contains the celebrated air, "Are you angry, Mother?" the Ballads, "The Sun is o'er the Mountain," "My Araby, my noble Steed," &c.

PIANOFORTE.

Select Airs from Meyerbeer's Il Crociato in Egitto, in 4 Books.

——————— Rossini's Zelmira..... 3
——————— Semiramide..... 3
——————— Il Tancredi..... 4
——————— Othello..... 3
——————— Aureliano in Palmira 2
——————— Bishop's Aladdin 3

By I. F. BURROWES, for the Pianoforte, with Flute Accompaniments, and as Duets for the Pianoforte, the books price 4s. each.

☞ The celebrated Opera of "Medea in Corinto," is just published, a arranged for the Harp and Pianoforte, with Flute and Violoncello accompaniments, in 2 books, price 10s. 6d. each, and for the Harp, in 3 Books, price 3s. 6d. each, by N. C. Bochsa; and as arranged for the Pianoforte, in 2 Books price 4s. each, by C. Dumon.

HARPS and PIANOFORTES for Sale or Hire.

NEW MUSIC.—Just published at the ROYAL HARMONIC INSTITUTION, Argyll Rooms, 216, Regent-street.

The Songs, Duets, &c. in The Oracle, or the Interrupted Sacrifice, composed by Winter, newly arranged by Wm. Hawes.

Overture	2	6
The rosy dawn hath driven ..... Chorus
When battles conch is sounding ..... Sung by..... Mr. Atkins	2	0
The trumpet first is sounded..... Do ..... Mr. Thorn	2	0
We Maidens mark me..... Do..... Miss Gaward	1	6
All hail to the Gods of our Fathers..... Chorus
Now by love and peace invited..... Sestett and Chorus
O! when thine eye is throwing ..... Duet.... Miss Paton and Sapio	2	6
All powerful sun ..... Sung by Mr. Phillips	2	0
There was a time ere sorrow..... Do. Miss Paton	1	6
Be ween my hopes and fears suspended, Duet, by Miss Paton and Phillips	2	6
When will peace relieve my breast ..... Do. Miss Hamilton	1	6
Now the plaguing varlet teases ..... Do. Miss Goward and Thorn	2	6
We hail thee Lords of Light..... Finale, 1st Act	10	0
Tho' we all can feel thy sorrow..... Quartett and Chorus
In what sad hour..... Trio
Oh heavens the thought is frightful ..... Duet
Hast never mark'd the flower..... Song, Miss Boden	1	6
Ye Mail who'd wish to slumber..... Quartett	2	6
The Gloomy terrors of the grave..... Scena, Mr. Sapio	2	6
Farewell, yet not for ever ..... Quartett
The evening is descending..... Finale	10	0

Burrows's Selection of Airs from Weber's Opera of Oberon, arranged for the Piano Forte, with Flute ad lib. in four books, each 4s.

DEATH FETCH.—The music in the admired and popular Opera, composed by C. E. Horn.

I'VE BEEN ROAMING.—Cavatina, sung by Madame Vestris, by C. E. Horn, price 2s.

BOCHSA's Select Airs from Winter's Opera of the Oracle, arranged for the Harp, in 3 books, each 3s. Also the Overture and Select Airs from the above Opera, the Oracle, arranged for the Harp and Piano Forte, with Flute and Violoncello ad lib. The whole of the Music in the Opera of OBERON, composed by Carl Maria Von Weber, price 42s.

BURROWS'S Select Airs, from the Opera of Oberon, for the Piano Forte with Flute ad lib. in books each 4s.

IMPORTANT IMPROVEMENT in PENKNIVES.

The usual manner of manufacturing Pe knife Blades has long been a subject of complaint. A supposed improvement which consisted of making the marked side of the blade concave and the other convex, was some years ago introduced; but from a conviction of its inutility it is now discontinued. It removed one ground of complaint, but substituted another, and the Penknife now commonly in use has all its original defects about it. The edge is made too steep and the angle too obtuse; the consequence is, that the edge in cutting is sometimes unmanageable and driven into the quill nearly across. This inconvenience almost every person, in the habit of making Pens, has frequently experienced. To obviate this entirely, THOMAS CLARK, Exeter Change, London, has introduced a Penknife blade, manufactured entirely on a New Principle: the line of the edge being parallel with the side of the blade, forms a very acute angle: the instrument, therefore, even in inexperienced hands, may be easily governed; no cutting, but what is intended, can take place, and the Pen is formed with the greatest nicety and the utmost facility. The blade of this Penknife is beautiful in workmanship, and can be recommended with confidence, as superior to any article previously introduced into this branch of Cutlery. Also can be used with the right or left hand.

☞ The Blades are made from refined Silver Steel.

THE ANTISEPTIC BOTANICAL TOOTH-POWDER—Cleanses, Whitens, and Preserves the Teeth in a manner quite unrivalled and fastens them even if loosened by mercury. Sold in Boxes 2s 9d each, by I. V. SIMPSON (Proprietor) 28, Henrietta-street, Covent-Garden; by Messrs. Stradling, Royal Exchange; Johnson, 68 Cornhill; Anderson, 156, Bishopsgate Without; Pearson, 31, Fleet-street; Prout, 226, and Low, 340, Strand; Bayley and Blew, Cockspur-street; Hawkins, 11, Gattie and Pierce, 57, and Tunaer, 75, Bond-street; Simpson, 21, Piccadilly; Sanger, 150, Oxford-street; Colley, 5, Holles-street; Tosswill, Greenwich; Wright, Hammersmith; Bedell and Ryder, Islington, and by most respectable perfumers and Medicine Vendors throughout the kingdom.

This day is Published, neatly printed in one vol. royal 18mo. with a Portrait, Price 6s.

THE APHORISMS, OPINIONS, and REFLECTIONS of the late Dr. PARR, with a Sketch of his Life.

"The sentiments of great men, expressed with force and elegance, have ever been received with veneration by all readers of taste and lovers of literature. They form a kind of system of morality, and are easily retained in the memory, and will continue to be admired and applauded until the language in which they are written shall perish. The works of Dr. Parr, which are already before the public, contain admirable maxims, in nervous and elegant language; and the Editor presumes that he is offering no unacceptable present in the selection which he has here made.—Editor's Preface.

Printed for J. Andrews, 167 New Bond-street.

MRS. RADCLIFFE'S NEW ROMANCE, &c. &c.

Just published, by M. Colburn, in 4 vols. post 8vo. 38s.

GASTON DE BLONDEVILLE; or the Court of Henry III. keeping Festival in Ardenne, a Romance; and St. Alban's Abbey, a Metrical Tale; with some Poetical Pieces.

By the Late Mrs. ANN RADCLIFFE,

Author of "The Romance of the Forest;" Mysteries of Udolpho;" "Italian," &c. To which is prefixed, a Memoir of the Author, with Extracts from her Journals. Published from the Originals, in the possess on of William Radcliffe, Esq.

"Mrs. Radcliffe's new Romance is worthy to be her's—her image and superscription are on it. We tread again the enchanted ground over which we wandered in the days of yore. We take ourselves once more with Emily in the Castle of Udolpho, and La Motte in the gloomy recesses of the forest. The scene is laid in England in the days of chivalry; and, instead of explaining away her phantoms, as she does in the Mysteries of Udolpho, we have a real ghost, who excites more terror than any visitant from the other world, since the buried Majesty of Denmark revisited the glimpses of the moon."—News of Literature and Fashion.

"The name of Mrs. Radcliffe will, of course, secure to these volumes a large share of the public attention; and in that particular department of Romance-writing which is the Authoress's forte, they will sustain her reputation. She is here in her proper element. Supposing the reader comfortably seated in a large apartment, alone, with a single shaded candle, the door ajar about midnight—we think that the effect will not be inferior to that of any of the former scenes of supernatural terror which Mrs. Radcliffe's magical wand has raised."—Sun.

2. The GERMAN NOVELISTS. Tales selected from Ancient and Modern Authors in that language, from the earliest period to the close of the Eighteenth Century; with Critical and Biographical Notices. By Thomas Roscoe, Esq. In 4 vols. post 8vo. uniform with the Italian Novelists, price 38s.

"Mr. Roscoe has produced one of the most interesting Works to be found in the whole circle of fiction."—Morning Chronicle.

3. DE VAVASOUR, a Tale of the 18th century. 3 vols. post 8vo. 31s. 6d.

"We feel confident in stating that this tale is the product on of Lord Glenlyon; who will, no doubt, obtain much popularity among the fair, by the strenuous and gallant homage to the sovereignty of beauty which is to be found in nearly every page of the present work."—Literary Gazette.

4. VIVIAN GREY. Second Edition. 2 vols. post 8vo. 18s.

"The history of an ambitious young man of rank, who, by dint of talent, personal advantages, and audacity, becomes the dictator of certain circles in high life, some of the recent occurrences and actors in which he has taken the liberty to describe with great freedom."

"Decidedly the cleverest production of the class to which it belongs."—London Magazine.

DRAMATIC REPOSITORY, corner of Bow-street, Covent-Garden.

MR. RUSSELL IN JERRY SNEAK.

Mr. KENNETH has the honour to announce the publication of a whole length portrait of the above gentleman. Engraved by Mr. H. Meyer, from an original picture lately executed by Mr. Frederick Meyer. Proofs 10s. 6d. Prints 5s.

MISS LOVE—An original Picture of this Lady is just published by Mr. Frederick Meyer, to be engraved in Mezzotinto by Mr. H. Meyer, as a companion to Harlow's portrait of Miss Stephens. The Portrait is now exhibiting at the Repository, and will be published early in October.

Proofs on India Paper £1 1s. Prints 10s. 6d.

N.B. A variety of Portraits of the popular Actors and Actresses of present and past notoriety.

NEW MEDICAL THEATRE—At this Theatre, which is contiguous to St. Bartholomew's Hospital, the following COURSES of LECTURES will be delivered during the ensuing Winter, and will commence on the 2d of OCTOBER:—

THEORY and PRACTICE of MEDICINE.—Dr. Clutterbuck and Dr. Tweedie.

MATERIA MEDICA.—Dr. Tweedie.

CHEMISTRY.—Dr. Clutterbuck.

MIDWIFERY and DISEASES of WOMEN and CHILDREN.—Dr. David Davis.

ANATOMY and OPERATIONS of SURGERY.—Mr. Tyrrell.

PRINCIPLES and PRACTICE of SURGERY.—Mr. Lawrence and Mr. Wardrop.

PHYSIOLOGY—Dr. Roget.

DEMONSTRATIONS and DISSECTIONS.—Mr. Quain and Mr. Coulson.

It is intended that the above-mentioned branches of Medical Science shall be treated fully, so that the Student may have the present state of knowledge on each subject. The delivery of the Lectures will be so arranged that they shall not interfere with each other, nor with the Practice at the Hospital.

Further particulars are given in the Prospectus, which has just been printed; but persons desirous of information may apply to Mr. Tyrrell, 17, New Bridge-street, Blackfriars, or at St. Thomas's Hospital, or to Mr. Lawrence, 18, Whitehall-place, or at St. Bartholomew's Hospital.

JOHNSON REDIVIVUS.

"He who drinks ALE," so said the Sage,—
"He who drinks ALE thinks ALE." I'll wage
With any man my head,
I know, had but his eye just then
Glanc'd on the sparkle of CHAMPAGNE,
What else he would have said.
"Drink, drink CHAMPAGNE, Sir,"—(would he not?)
"And think CHAMPAGNE, Sir!"—Well I wot,
Could now our sight
Bright draughts like ours but chance to fall,
Wisely he'd add—and one for all,
"Sir, buy it of CHARLES WRIGHT!"

63s. 72s. 84s. per Dozen.—Orders to the trade.

DISTRESS in SPITALFIELDS.—At a MEETING of the COMMITTEE, holden in the Vestry-room of Christ Church, Spitalfields, August 21, 1826,

The Rev. RICHARD HARVEY in the Chair:

The Committee regret to state, that no improvement has taken place during the past week in the affairs of the Spitalfields Weavers. Although they are husbanding their resources as much as possible, and have made such material reductions in the allowance, yet the excess of their expenditure above the contributions received is such, that they have not more than sufficient for the distribution of another fortnight.

The Committee entreat the public to bear in mind that 7,000 persons are wholly dependent for support on the small pittance they receive at the church; and that, if their funds are not speedily replenished, they will be obliged in a very short time to discontinue the relief altogether.

Amount before advertised £26,925 10 5

John Scott, Esq. New Broad-st.			Hilton East, Esq. per Tapwell
by Rev. R. Harvey -	£20	0	and Co Bath - -	1	0
H. M. J. H. 2d don - -	10	0	By Messrs. Hankey and Co.
Charles Moore, Esq. -	1	0	Henry Skrine, Esq. -	5	0
By the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor			By Messrs. Gosling and Co.
The Rev. John Natt, St. John's			Henry Hussey, Esq. -	1	0
College, Oxford -	20	0	By Messrs. Hoare.
M. V. - - - -	50	0	Henry Hallam, Esq. - -	10	0
By Messrs. Martin, Stone, and Co.			Hugh Leycester, Esq. 3d don.	10	0
J. G. - - - -	10	0	By Messrs. Praeds and Co.
A. G. - - - -	5	5	The Rt. Hon. Lord Somerville	20	0
By Messrs. Whitmore and Co.			By Messrs. Ransom and Co.
The Countess of Bouverie,			G. M. - - -	5	0
by Messrs. Radnor and Co.			By Messrs. Willis and Co.
2d don. - - -	50	0	The Rev. Geo. Atwick, 3d don.	5	0

By Messrs. Jones, Loyd, and Co.

Subscriptions are received by the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor; Wm. Hale, Esq. Wood-street, Spitalfields, Treasurer; and by all the Bankers.

The Committee continue to sit in the Vestry-room, Spitalfields, on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, at Two o'clock.

J. D. KINCAID, Sec.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

CONSTANTINOPLE, JULY 11.

(From the Etoile, dated Wednesday, August 24.)

CONCLUSION OF THE FIRMAN DISSOLVING THE JANISSARIES.

"The name of Janissary shall no longer exist: in their stead a sufficient number of troops shall be re-organized, under the name of 'Assikiri, mansurri Muhamedie,' (victorious troops of Mahomet), who will serve the state and religion with honour, and in future will know how to meet the enemy. The actual possessor of the Landschak of Hudawendikiar (Brussa), is appointed their General-in-Chief, and shall have his residence in the Palace of the Aga of the Janissaries. This Palace shall, henceforth, be called only the Palace of the Seraskier Pacha; and the barracks and guard-houses shall be occupied only by his troops. The titles of Aga of the Janissaries, Aga of Catar, and Aga of Buloe, are entirely abolished. The latter Aga of the Janissaries is raised to the dignity of Capidgi Baschi (Chamberlain), with the rank of Emiri Abor Elvet (Chief Equerry), and the late Kul Kyavassi (Lieutenant of the Aga of the Janissaries) is adjoined to the Seraskier Pacha, with the title of Mira Miram (Pacha of Two Tails); the Zagardsche Baschi (Chief of the Keepers of the Hounds), and the Sampon Ischi Baschi (Chief of the keepers of the Bull-dogs), are appointed Capidgi Baschi. The other officers, known by the name of Bulak Agoleri (Generals of Cavalry), who have remained faithful to the Government, are raised to the dignity of Silahors (Equerries); in short, every one has received, according to his rank, marks of the Imperial munificence. Those who have hitherto occupied the place of yayabulak mutissarifii (possessors of military benefices or forms), shall be considered henceforth equal to the other Zains (holders of military fiefs), in the quality of Decolte Alle Yedeklussi (irremovable Dignitaries), and employed in other honourable offices under the Sublime Porte.

"As for the Janissaries, who have in their hands assignments for pay or daily allowances, they shall continue to enjoy them, without any diminution, for the remainder of their lives, under the shadow of the ever charitable protection of the Sublime Porte, by means of sealed bons, which they are to present and have registered. It may be relied upon that injustice shall be done to nobody. Thus the Musselman people, great and small, the Ulemas, and the members of the corporations—in a word, the whole Musselman nation will form, henceforward, only one body. All must consider each other as brethren in the faith; no disunion, no misunderstanding, must prevail among them. The great must look upon the little with commiseration, and the latter show respect to the great. In a word, all must be united, as long as it shall please the Almighty to accomplish the great work of the new system, which has been unanimously chosen and adopted, chiefly with a view to glorify according to the will of the Holy Law, and to diffuse the word of the protecting God, and to animate the religion and the law of the Prince of the Prophets. Beware of permitting any person whatever to dare to speak or act in a contrary manner, or to oppose the decrees of the Government. If this should happen, know that the resolution to employ, with the aid of God, the sword of the law, is already taken, and that every thing necessary will be done to carry it into execution.

"As all these measures will be announced in Rumelia and Anatolia, and in the whole empire, by particular firman, you will summon the Imans of the quarters which are under your direction; you will acquaint them with the state of things, and furnish them with authentic copies of the present firman, that each of them may read it in the mosques and places dedicated to prayer. You will signify, and will explain, to the people, that the sole cause of the dissolution of the Janissaries is the necessity and the wish to vivify religion, to fortify the Ottoman Powers, and to ameliorate Islamism: that for this reason the statutes of that corps have been changed, and put in their place exercised troops, under the denomination of "victorious troops of Mahomet;" that no reduction will be made in the pay of the late Janissaries; that their assignments will be punctually paid during the life of the possessors. You will invite all those who have the faith, and are submissive to God and to his holy book, to address thanksgivings to the Supreme Being for this happy event; to live tranquil under the protection of the most powerful Padischah, who is the shadow of God on earth, and not cease to implore, with him, the benediction of Heaven. Lastly, you will inform them that whoever shall maintain the contrary, will be punished in this world, and in the other. You will, therefore, watch with the greatest attention over this, and whatever concerns the commands of the law,

"The 11th Zekkadi, 1241."—(16th June, 1826.)

"PARIS, AUG. 28.—The Constitutionnel says, to-day, that the certificate of the oath taken to the Charter, by the Infant Don Miguel, has been received at Lisbon, and also a dispatch from Mr. Canning, announcing, that if the orders of the Emperor, Don Pedro, should not be executed, he would send an English army to cause them to be carried into effect. These are two new inventions of that Journal, and the note of Sir William A'Court, to threaten the Spanish Government with a declaration of war from Great Britain, if the Portuguese soldiers continue to be received in Spain, is probably as real, as the protest of the Austrian Ambassador at Lisbon, the authenticity of which the Constitutionnel so long maintained, and which it has at lenghth given up. The news given by the Drapeau Blanc, of two armies of 15,000 men formed in Spain, one by the name of Army of Observation, and the other of Army of Reserve, has no more foundation.

(From the Journal des Debats.)

GERMANY.

"BERLIN, August 10.—A very frequent passing of couriers between St. Petersburg and London has been noticed here for some weeks. If we can believe a rumour, which has been spread here pretty generally, their dispatches concern principally the affairs of Turkey, on which those two Courts must have perfectly agreed; and that immediately after the coronation at Moscow, a Manifesto will appear, declaratory of their resolutions on the subject. It is strongly doubted, however, whether this rumour is not founded on some misapprehension, and whether, if such a declaration is really intended to be made, it will not be made in the name of all the great powers of Europe. It is commonly reported, that after the fetes of the coronation at Warsaw, there will be an interview between our Monarch and their Imperial Majesties; they go so far as to point out Possen as the place of meeting.

(From the Quotidienne.)

SPAIN.

"VITTORIA, AUGUST 13.—We received this day, by express, a letter from Valladolid, of the 10th instant, from which we learn the existence, in Portugal, of a very active opposition to the establishment of the charter of Don Pedro, or rather of the English. A Junta of Royalists has assembled at Braganza—it has proclaimed the infant Don Miguel absolute King; and, until his return to the kingdom, his mother, Charlotte, Queen. All the inhabitants, and almost all the troops, are opposed to the new order of things, and demand that the Catholic religion should be the only one in honour, to the exclusion of all others. They announce, from another part, that the troops of the province of Tras-os-Montes have declared against the Constitutional Government. Matters have proceeded to a like extremity in the province between the Douro and Minho, where the infant Don Miguel has been proclaimed King. The commander of the Royal army is Viscount De Monte Legre, cousin of the General Marquis D. Chaves. All these troops have been obliged to enter Spain by the route of Zamora, stating the fact, that Portuguese forces, whose designs were unknown, have been directed on that side.

(From the Constitutionnel.)

PORTUGAL.

"LISBON, AUG. 5.—A packet from England entered the Tagus the day before yesterday. She brings no private letters but merely Government despatches. We are informed that these despatches contain the oath of the Constitutional Charter made by the Infant Miguel, and a despatch from the English Minister, announcing that, in the event of any refusal to execute the orders of the Emperor, he will send an English army to hasten the accomplishment of the Royal will.

"We are assured that Sir W. A'Court, the English Ambassador, has just addressed a most energetic note to the Spanish Government, informing them that if they continue to give shelter to the armed bands of the rebels, that serious act will be looked on as a declaration of war made by Spain against England, our Ally.

"Agreeably to the orders of the Princess Regent, martial law will be proclaimed immediately, and most rigidly enforced in every part of the kingdom where malevolence and perfidy shall stir up tumults. The Princess Regent shows herself a rival of the celebrated Louisa De Gusman, Duchess of Braganza, Regent in the minority of Alphonso VI. in 1656, under circumstances extremely critical, and which bear a strong analogy to those of the present day.

PARIS CORRECTIONAL POLICE, AUG. 16.

The Tribunal of Correctional Police presented to-day the melancholy spectacle of a mother of a family, surrounded by five children, and accused of being an accomplice with two of them in a robbery. A most painful sensation naturally arose in the mind of every one at seeing the two youngest of these unfortunates carried in the arms of their mother, whose eyes were bathed in tears, they gazing and smiling with all the unconsciousness of infancy at the novel spectacle of an assembled court of justice. The charge accused the young Rose Lachaux, scarcely ten years old, as being the perpetrator of numerous robberies, to a serious amount, committed by her with the help of false keys.

The woman Lachaux, her mother, was accused as having incited her to the commission of the crime, and as having been the receiver of the stolen property. The eldest of these children, Stephen Lachaux, aged 17, was accused of having stolen six francs in the shop of a fruiterer. These three are the only individuals of the number detained in consequence of any accusation, and if the three youngest share the imprisonment of their mother, it is only because their tender age renders them as yet entirely dependent on her care. The young Lachaux and her brother have confessed the facts alleged against them, but with a positive declaration that their mother was an entire stranger to their proceedings.

The President having caused the brother to be removed for the purpose of interrogating Rose Lachaux separately, a judgment may be formed of the unfortunate precocious understanding of this infant. She was observed, in her confessions of the circumstances, to avoid with astonishing sagacity every thing that could in any way compromise her mother, to answer questions, to examine the depositions of witnesses with the most inconceivable readiness and address, and lastly, to persist in affirming that she alone had conceived and executed the robberies which were laid to her charge, without the participation or connivance of any one. When the accused heard the requisition of M. the King's Advocate, who concluded by demanding that sentence of imprisonment should be pronounced upon the woman Lachaux, the heart-rending scene excited considerable sensation among the spectators, from which even the magistrates themselves were by no means free. The three culprits, throwing themselves upon their knees, were clamorous in their despair. "Pardon, pardon, for my mother," exclaimed the young girl; "I alone am guilty, my poor mother is innocent! Pardon, Messieurs the judges, pardon for my poor mother!" Stephen Lachaux joined his entreaties to those of his sister. "I am guilty," cried he, with sobs; "condemn me to ten years' imprisonment, but let my mother be acquitted—do not condemn my mother!" The three youngest children stretched their little hands towards the tribunal, and added their cries to those of their relatives.

M. Theodore Perrin offered some observations in favour of the woman Lachaux. He quoted the case of the child surnamed Le Petit Poucet (a case which we reported some months since), who alone, at the age of nine years, had conceived and executed a great number of robberies. He drew the conclusion, that the young Rose might, as well as that young thief, have acted without the instigation and co-operation of her mother.

The Court, after a long deliberation, acquitted the woman Lachaux, condemned her son to six months' imprisonment, and deciding that the young Rose had acted from ignorance (sans discernement), ordered that he should be commited to the Penitentiary for two years.

BUSH RANGERS.

The following is an extract of a letter, dated Hobart-town, April 8:—

"On the 21st of January last I was made free of this colony, or, in other words, was robbed by that desperate and lawless banditti called Bush Rangers, of whom, probably, you may have read some accounts at home. They consist of prisoners who have effected their escape from the public works here, or the penal settlement of Macquarie Harbour, whither they are sent on being convicted of crimes after their arrival, and proceed into the bush, or woods, of this country, where they subsist by sheep-stealing, and robberies on the settlers. For some time past, this system has been carried to a very alarming extent, both as regards robbery and murder, and has frightened many from the colony entirely. They have, in fact, had their own way, and no exertions of the military or police could put a stop to it, from the circumstance of their being harboured and assisted by many from fear, and by others from the gain of the plundered property. Though some have been taken and executed, one party has continued to elude pursuit for a length of time, headed by one Brady, who is captain or chief over them.

"I cannot give you a better account of their proceedings, as regards myself, than by copying a statement of the robbery from the Hobart-town Gazette of the 28th of January:—

"We have again the melancholy task to add one more to the painful recitals of enormities committed by the Bush Rangers. About half-past eight o'clock on Saturday evening last, six men, armed with muskets and bayonets, appeared at Mr. Hance's, River Plenty. Mr. Hance was from home, but Mr. J. W. Sampson (his partner), a master salter, and a servant named Samuel Young, were in the house. When the robbers had collected their booty, they proceeded to force Mr. Sampson and Young to drink two tumblers of raw spirits each, to enforce which they presented a cocked pistol. Mr. Sampson swallowed one tumbler of rum, but soon after vomited it up, and they did not persist in his drinking the second; but poor Young was not so fortunate,—he succeeded in drinking off both the tumblers full, and his stomach unhappily retained the liquor. They then compelled him to assist in carrying off the plunder. He was not heard of until Monday morning, when Mr. Jamieson's shepherd, while tending his flock, observed his dogs go into an uninhabited hut, and not returning to his call, he entered, and found them licking the unfortunate man's face, as he lay on his back on the floor. On his having his head raised, he complained of thirst, and water being supplied him, he was carried under a cherry-tree by the door, where he revived a little, and was put into a cart, and conveyed to his master's house. He was perfectly sensible, and every thing possible was done to save his life, but the spirits had inflamed his stomach and intestines to such a degree that mortification took place; and he lived but one hour. An inquisition was held on the body next day, and a verdict returned of wilful murder by some persons unknown. The robbers completely stripped the habitation of every valuable worth carrying off—80lb. of tea, 2 cwt. of sugar, a quantity of rum and flour, two fowling pieces, and a pistol, a large quantity of wearing apparel, plate, trinkets, and cash.

"We were taken completely by surprise; I had no idea of their approach till three men suddenly entered my room, and demanded my keys, &c. I had sent my watch to town by Mr. Hance to be repaired, and had only about 25s. each about me. I was not alarmed at the time, but continued to smoke my pipe during the time they remained. One man stood over me with a horse pistol, and held a light, which he very civilly offered to me when my pipe required it.

"They have since been taken, with the exception of two; I was the principal evidence against them, two days since, when they were found guilty, and will be executed in a few days. Eight other Bush Rangers have since been taken, and will certainly share the same fate."

AMERICAN MURDERER.

(From the Kentucky Commentator, of July 8.)

HORRIBLE TRAGEDY.—Beauchamp, the assassin of Colonel Sharp, has expiated his crimes.

The sentence of the law was executed upon him at the fork of the Lexington and Woodford roads, on the edge of Frankfort, at half-past one o'clock yesterday.

An idea had gone abroad that he would address the people at the gallows, but he made no attempt of the kind; he was evidently too feeble, probably rendered so by his attempts to commit suicide, by taking laudanum and by stabbing himself.

Soon after arriving at the place of execution, he observed that he wished to die, and requested the music which belonged to two independent companies, which had been called out to preserve order, should play "Buonaparte's Retreat from Moscow," which having heard, he desired the officers to perform the execution, and took his death.

DEATH OF MRS. BEAUCHAMP.—During the trial of Beauchamp, his wife was brought to this town, charged with being accessary to his crime, and committed to prison with him. She was examined and acquitted; but, at her own solicitation, and his, was permitted to return to his cell, where she remained until the day of his execution. They both constantly held out the idea that they would die together; and, on Wednesday last, apprehensions that they would make attempts upon their own lives began to be seriously entertained, and a guard was placed in the room with them, to prevent any improper conduct. They were, however, in possession of a bottle of laudanum, and, on Thursday night, took such a large dose—so large, that it operated as an emetic, and failed to produce the effect which they expected.

In the course of the forenoon yesterday, they told the guards that, as his last hour was approaching, they wished for a few moments' private conversation, and begged the guard to retire. The request seemed reasonable, and the guards retired. They presently heard some noise, and returning, found that Mrs. Beauchamp had been stabbed in the left breast, with a butcher's knife; and that Beauchamp had inflicted some wounds upon himself, not, however, either mortal or dangerous. Mrs. Beauchamp's wound was mortal—she lived but an hour or two. So perished Ann Beauchamp, one of the most unfortunate of women.

Whether she died by her own hand, or by that of her husband, we have not been able to ascertain with certainty. It is said his account was, that she herself inflicted the wound, and that when he attempted to stab himself, she caught his arm, and prevented him from doing it effectually.

Mrs. Beauchamp was removed to a room of the gaoler's house. A reverend gentleman who was present speaks of the dying scene as one of the most touching he had ever witnessed. She was anxious to see her husband. He was brought in. She had become speechless, perhaps insensible. He was placed at her side upon the bed. He placed one hand upon her forehead—with the other he held her pulse until she expired. Then "Farewell," said he, "farewell, child of sorrow! Farewell, child of persecution and misfortune! For thee I have lived, for thee I die!" Twice he embraced her, and was then removed.

DISCOVERIES IN AFRICA.

Despatches have been received at the Colonial Office, dated June 18, from Mr. Warrington, British Consul at Tripoli. These despatches, we are delighted to state, announce the arrival of our intrepid countryman, Major Laing, at the great centre of African internal commerce, the long-sought city of Timbuctoo. The date of his arrival is not stated, but from the time he left Twat, it was probable it took place about the beginning of February. The next caravan which arrives at Tripoli from Timbuctoo will bring us further accounts from our enterprising traveller regarding his future movements. If he proceeded down the river Niger as expeditiously as he could, we may soon expect to hear of his arrival in England. The reports of the dispersion of the caravan with which he was travelling, after it had left Twat, and which had reached this country through a respectable channel, are thus, we rejoice to say, falsified. Inured to the African climate, and arriving at Timbuctoo early in the dry season, we consider every danger to Major Laing as over. The navigable current of the Niger will rapidly bear him, we think, to the Atlantic, through countries and powers deeply impressed with the majesty and fame of Great Britain. Two British travellers are at present in the heart of Northern Africa, to which they have advanced from opposite points. Thus, desirable and important objects are accomplished, when these are left to men of judgment and knowledge; and much as we differ from Mr. Barrow about the course and termination of the Niger, still it is but justice to state, that it is to him, and the alacrity with which his views are seconded by the Colonial Office, that the country is indebted for these expeditions, and whatever important geographical discoveries may be made in them. Had these matters continued to be left in the hands of the African Institution, they would have dribelled for a century about Sierra Leone, and never have ascertained even the course of the Niger, though that settlement, now settled nearly 40 years, is as near the source of that river as York is to London! No later advices have been received from Clapperton than those which announced his arrival at Sackatoo; but by the arrival of the Despatch man-of-war from the coast of Africa (the Bight of Benin) some previous despatches from that traveller have been received, which are of considerable importance, as disclosing his route and progress to Sackatoo. On the 7th of March he was at Katangah, the capital of Yarba or Yarriba, a country bordering Nyffe; from whence he was preparing to set out for Kiama, and from thence to Wauwa and Youri, (distant four days' journey from Wauwa); thus passing the places where our unfortunate countryman Park was lost. Katangah is stated to be thirty miles east of the Niger. Important information he must, of course, have obtained there; but still more important information he of course obtained, and has, no doubt, generally transmitted to this country, in his advance to Katangha, and in his further advance northwards—because in that route, and in the latter space, he must have crossed the Niger, and passed Nyffe at that point where some will have it that the Niger turns east to the Nile of Egypt, and others that it empties itself into an inland lake. There he must have received positive information whether the mighty Niger runs eastward, or continues its course, as we believe it does, southward, through that line of country, yet unexplored, through which twenty mighty rivers, which enter the sea in the Delta of Benin, descend to the Ocean. These points, we have no doubt, are in a great measure determined by the advices received from Clapperton; and probably the next Quarterly Review may favour us with a peep behind the curtain, which we wait with undiminished confidence to perceive drawn up.—Glasgow Courier.

PROVINCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

FATAL EFFECTS OF LIGHTNING AT SCARBOROUGH.

Sunday night, York was visited by a long-continued succession of flashes of lightning, but we are glad to remark, that no serious accident occurred here. Scarborough, however, was visited the same night by one of the most tremendous storms of thunder and lightning ever remembered there. The rapid succession of the vivid flame, immediately after the loud and tremendous peals of thunder, struck every heart with awe, and made pale the most firm and lively countenance. At length the Heavens seemed to open, and in the immensity of flame which enveloped every individual and every object in the place, the commission of death assumed its terrors, and the day of general dissolution seemed at hand. It, however, passed over; but, amongst many less important effects, it was soon learnt that the lightning had struck five individuals to the ground, who were sitting together in a private room; they were all dreadfully affected with the stroke. Medical assistance was instantly sent for; one of them, a respectable female, aged 25, the daughter of Mr. Barker, of York, clerk at the church of St. Maurice, and one of the choristers at the Minster, was so seriously affected that she died soon after, and her disconsolate relatives and friends were yesterday sent for. She had been advised to go to Scarborough for the benefit of her health, having had a rheumatic fever. The others were in a dreadful state, but we have not yet heard the final result. Scarborough being crowded with company at present, this melancholy occurrence has struck a damp over every countenance, and is the subject of general conversation. Whether the lightning has been felt in any other part of the east coast we have not yet heard; we sincerely hope not, for, had any similar occurrence taken place, we doubt not but some of our correspondents would have given us the requisite information.—York Courant, Tuesday, Aug. 22.

Sunday night last, this neighbourhood was visited by a thunder storm, accompanied by copious showers of rain. The lightning was very vivid, and the weather, which for some days previous had been very sultry, has become much more cool and agreeable.—Tyne Mercury, Aug. 22.

There is at this moment a person of the name of Thomas Drummond, working as a common pitman in New Painsher colliery, near Houghton-le-Spring, in the county of Durham, whom we firmly believe to be the heir at law and lineal descendant of James Drummond, who was the grandson of the fourth Earl of Perth, and who joined the Pretender at Culloden, and, after that unfortunate affair, was obliged to secrete himself to preserve his life. This poor man, now living in the humblest situation of life, is perfectly aware of his rights as the descendant of the chief of one of the most respectable clans of Scotland, and is anxious to assert them, but is without the means. His case has already engaged the attention of a professional genealogist, Mr. Fitz-Strother, of Barnard's Inn, London, who entertains no doubt of the justice of his claims. We have little hesitation in saying, that if from 100l. to 200l. were advanced to enable him to go through the preliminary formalities required, we think the proceedings would be so far forwarded, that in the very next session an act of Parliament might be passed to restore him to his rank, honours, and dignities as Earl of Perth, if not to the hereditary estates also.—Tyne Mercury.

State of Trade.—There is very little new to remark on this subject, as matters still remain nearly in the same state as they were a fortnight ago; if any alteration can be noted, we are happy to say it is for the better. These observations apply not only to this town (Blackburn) and its immediate vicinity, but also to the manufacturing districts generally, and it is certainly consolatory to find that the favourable symptoms we have of late had the pleasure to notice, do not disappear like the "baseless fabric of a vision." We trust that the distress of the country has at length passed its acme, and that we may now reasonably indulge a hope that better times are approaching; yet we fear the continued exercise of charity will be absolutely necessary during the dreary winter months, as the poor disposed of all that clothing which is indispensable to defend them against the inclemency of that season, to procure for themselves and their wretched families the sustenance requisite for their bodies, before they resorted to that relief which is provided by the law, but which, we rejoice to observe, we find a disposition yet exists amongst our population to avoid. —Blackburn Mail.

Humbug and the Rev. Alexander Fletcher.—This worthy itinerant St. Preux, who, we thought, had drowned himself in the Serpentine, or some other ditch near London, his name having apparently passed from the minds of men like vapour from a mirror, has again, it seems, honoured this city with a visitation. On Sunday evening last, he got on the top of a table on the Calton-hill, not, we believe, from the effects of inebriety (though people are seldom sober when they stand on tables), and harangued an immense mob of the idle and the curious. He was to have preached and prayed in the morning on Leith Links, but we suppose the wetness of the day cooled his piety. The evening, however, was fine, and Alexander Fletcher, on a hill that commands one of the finest prospects in the world, under the immediate eye of Heaven, in the visible presence of many of the sublimest works of the mighty Architect, lifted up his voice, and turned up his eyes, and opened the Holy Scriptures, just as if he had never been in Glasgow in the whole course of his life, and as if such a being as Miss Dick had never existed. Next Sunday we are again to have him on the Calton-hill, and the collection is "to be given for the relief of the distressed operatives."—"Fudge!" said my uncle Toby. We make it a rule, upon these occasions, always to empty our pockets before going out, lest they should be picked in the crowd; and we advise our readers to follow our example.—Edinburgh Observer.

The Moors.—There are rare doings on the moors. There never was a finer season. The black cocks fly about in families of 15 and 20, just asking you to shoot at them; the hares, owing to the early harvest, are so plump and fat that they can hardly run away from you; and, on the 1st of September, the partridges will drop at your feet by the dozen, if you will only take the trouble to fire your gun in the air.—Edinburgh Observer.

On Monday last, Alexander Maxton, from Monzie, was incarcerated in Perth gaol, under a charge of having murdered his mother, a woman above 80 years of age. It being supposed the prisoner was insane, medical gentlemen were appointed to examine him; and symptoms of insanity appearing in his manner, no judicial proceedings have been instituted. The man remains in gaol. —Perth Courier.

The mills in the power-loom trade in this neighbourhood have, with an exception or two, resumed longer time, not so much from any improvement which has taken place in the demand for goods, as from the impression that the prices of yarn cannot possibly be lower. The yarn for a piece of 11-4 4-4 calico, weighing 4lb. 4oz., can be purchased at about 5s. 3d. The goods are selling at 7s. and 7s. 6d. according to quality. The remuneration for weaving is too low; but if the works are managed economically, the manufacture may be accounted safe, at a time when a revival of trade is confidently looked forward to.—Glasgow Chronicle.

Riot in Kilmarnock.—The fear of the scarcity of meal has produced some mobbing and rioting at Kilmarnock; and five men, James Begbie, James Dun, George M'Connel, James Maitland, and James Humpry, have been, in consequence, committed to prison. On Wednesday night, the 9th current, between 200 and 300 persons collected in the street near the Relief Church—a notice having been circulated throughout the day to that effect—and there were harangued by one or two of their number in relation to the scarcity of meal, and the course to be taken to procure it. The harangues being closed, the mob proceeded to the Cross, and from thence to the shop of John Templeton, a meal dealer, in the Strand-street. Observing the crowd coming, and anticipating their intentions, Mr. Templeton shut up his shop, and appeared amongst the crowd, assuring them he had no meal, and that he would open the door and satisfy them on the point; but they instantly caught him by the collar and broke his window to pieces. They committed a similar outrage at the shop of George Templeton, another meal dealer in Fore-street, and from thence they proceeded to the farm-houses of Fardlehill and Greenhill, about a mile to the northward of Kilmarnock. A number of them carried in their hands staves or stobs. It was now past ten o'clock, and the servants, by whom the houses are inhabited, had retired to rest. At Fardlehill, after breaking the glass above the door, the rioters gained admittance, and searched for meal, but found none. They then proceeded to Greenhill, where they, in like manner, procured admittance. The manager of the farm shewed them his chest, which contained some pecks of meal, but with this they were not content. They proceeded to the barn, and out of the garner they took about six or seven bolls, which, after being put up into sacks, the men of the house were compelled to carry on a cart and horse towards the town. Whilst these things were going on, the magistrates of Kilmarnock collected a number of assistants, chiefly gentlemen belonging to the place, and proceeded on the road towards Greenhill, with the view of opposing their lawless conduct. The two parties met between Greenhill and Kilmarnock, and some conflict ensued. The rioters threw several stones, some of which hit two or three of the gentlemen; but the magistrates and their assistants ultimately succeeded in taking possession of the meal and cart, and in capturing four or five of the rioters. The whole were brought to Kilmarnock, and, after a precognition by the magistrates, (afterwards continued by the Sheriff of the county,) the men above-mentioned were committed for trial. Whilst the precognition was in progress at Kilmarnock on Monday, another placard or notice was put up or circulated throughout the town, calling a second meeting. This meeting was to be held in the evening; and, as the placard indicated, the proceedings were to be directed chiefly against Mr. Fulton, the proprietor of Greenhill. This induced the Sheriff-depute and Procurator-fiscal to remain in town all night; but, we are happy to add, no meeting was held, nor was the tranquillity of the place in the least disturbed. It is probable the case will come before the ensuing Circuit Court of Justiciary.—Edinburgh Paper.

Increase of Fever in Dublin.—We regret to state that fever still continues alarmingly on the increase, and it is apprehended that the present damp weather, anxiously as it has been desired, will give to disease a more aggravated form and fatal termination. A most deplorable scene was exhibited yesterday evening outside the Meath hospital, where several unfortunate beings of both sexes were lying imploring to be admitted, but which was quite impossible, from the crowded state of the hospital, and even the temporary sheds that have been erected in the grounds. At a late hour in the evening two marquees were pitched within the gates, as we suppose, to accommodate a few more of those poor victims to poverty and its concomitant, disease. We think, if a proper situation could be chosen, much good might be effected by pitching a sufficient number of tents to receive such fever patients as the hospitals cannot accommodate.—Dublin Freeman's Journal.

Manchester, Aug. 24.—There is no alteration in this Market within the last two days, and the want of variety or change gives it an appearance of dulness. In fact, the improvement is not as progressive as was expected. There does not appear to be any tendency to a decline of prices, but circumstances which, in other times, would be considered very unimportant, have now sufficient influence to retard, in some degree, the improvement which was so perceptible within the last few weeks. The failure of two houses (in a very limited trade) here has caused as much conversation and apprehension, as the stoppage of as many banks would at another time. However, the market does not retrograde, and all dispassionate persons feel confident that prices cannot be lower. Relief is no longer given out to the poor; and, consequently, the distress appears to increase; but it is to be hoped that some relief will be shortly rendered to the poor, either through the means of money, food, or employment. It is in agitation to create employment for the adult poor upon the public roads, but there is great difficulty in getting at the means which are suggested for that purpose. It is known that meetings of the Committee of Correspondence here have been held, at which Mr. Hyett and Mr. M'Adam have attended, but the result of their deliberations has not transpired, and in the mean time the poor are destitute of occupation or food. I hope their state of destitution will not drive the sufferers to any outrages; and I know of nothing more likely to encourage such consequences, as an opinion which is circulated here, that the Committee in London have offered to contribute to relieve the poor of Manchester by advancing money in proportion to the subscription raised in the town, and to this there is an utter aversion among the wealthy inhabitants, who say that there is a sufficient force here to preserve tranquillity in any event, and who, I must add, appear little disposed to aid Government in their anxious endeavours to ameliorate the condition of the unemployed poor, whose sufferings were the result of that excessive speculation and of manufacture, which brought wealth to a few, but poverty to the multitude.

Curious Detection of a Thief.—At the Somerset Assizes, James Giborn a young man in the dress of a labouring farmer, was indicted for stealing an iron chest, two canisters, and other articles. The offence itself had nothing extraordinary in its circumstances but the after consequences were of a very serious nature to the prisoner, and probably to his companions, if he had any. The prosecutor, who was a merchant, was awoke on the night of the robbery by an explosion which shook his house. It turned out on examination, that some thieves had broken open his counting-house, and taken away his iron chest, with two canisters, which, in fact, contained several pounds of gunpowder, the thieves, no doubt, supposed they contained something more valuable; for having gotten just out of the house, they, no doubt, proceeded to examine the contents of the canisters, and being off their guard, they must have incautiously applied a light. Whatever the cause might be, the effects were obvious; the gun-powder exploded, and the chest was blown to pieces, so as to have lost all form. Its contents, chiefly deeds and papers, were scattered about, partially burnt; spots of blood were perceivable on some portions of the chest; and a button, apparently from a man's jacket, was found on one of the pieces. Suspicion fell upon the prisoner; and a constable went to his lodgings. He was found in bed, his face dreadfully scorched, his eyelids destroyed, and a shocking lacerated wound on one of his legs. For the scorching on his face he did not profess to account; but the wound on his leg he ascribed to his having fallen from a wall which he had attempted to climb, and in the fall he said a stone had come upon his leg. A surgeon examined the leg, and said that no stone, under such circumstances, could produce a wound of such severity. The prisoner having thus mentioned so inadequate a cause, increased the suspicion against him. His clothes were therefore examined. His trowsers and stockings bore marks of blood; his jacket and buttons similar to that which was found upon a particle of the iron chest; and one button was wanting in the jacket. The prisoner did not now offer to account for any of these appearances; but rested his defence on the admitted facts, that no part of the property was found upon him, and that he had not recently been seen near the premises in question. The learned Judge left the circumstances to the Jury, observing on their strength, that they all contributed to fix the guilt upon the prisoner, but giving him all the benefit of the observation, that they did not amount to positive proof.—The Jury found him Guilty, and he was sentenced to fourteen years transportation.—Exeter Gazette.

AN IRISH POLICE CASE.

(From the Cork Constitution.)

Daniel Falvey, the chimney sweep, well known by the name of "Buck the Sweep," was given in charge for breaking a pane of glass in the window of the Dublin Mail Coach Office. The fact was fully established by a witness, who deposed that he was walking down Pembroke-street, at twelve o'clock at night, when he caught the prisoner in the act of throwing a stone at the window.

On the Jury returning a verdict of Guilty,

His Worship asked the prisoner what punishment he thought he deserved.

Buck—No punishment, please your Worship's Honour, I never threw no stone at the windy. G—d knows I didn't.

The Recorder—Who did it, then?

Buck—I'll tell your Honour all the truth. That blackguard there (pointing to the witness that swore against him,) with another fellow who was sky-larking, and following a pack of bad girls, when I was returning from the play-house about twelve o'clock, I see the other fellow take up a stone and fling it at the office windy; they come up to me, and says—"Buck," says they, "Give us some money to buy whiskey." Then "I won't," says I. "If you don't," says they, "we'll take you to the Bridewell for breaking the glass." So then, your Honour, that's all I've to say about it; 'twas he that broke the glass—your Honour knows it was.

The Recorder—What trade do you follow, Mr. Falvey?

Buck—A sweep, your Honour.

The Recorder—Are you in business for yourself?

Here Mr. Falvey, in order to prove his importance, entered into a long detail of his adventures. He said that he had been born and bred in this city, and had served his lawful seven years to his father, who was a chimney-sweep by trade; that he never did no harm to nobody, only to earn his honest bread; and that his profession had procured him a genteel livelihood; thinking it to be his duty as a loyal subject, he had travelled all the way to Dublin to see his Majesty the King, that he took lodgings in Dame-street, and there became acquainted with several gentlemen; he had not the pleasure of seeing his Worship there, but met Sheriff Spearing and many other gentlemen from Cork, whom he recognised; with regard to breaking the windy, he never broke a windy, and after all his loyalty to be served this way, 'twas a dirty thing, and they were all blackguards to say so.

The Recorder—Well, Mr. Falvey, you see the Jury have, notwithstanding, thought proper to find you Guilty; how would you like to go to sea? I think you would make a famous cook on board a man of war.

Buck—Oh, please your Honour, your reverence, wouldn't that be a hard thing, after me sarving me honest seven years to say I'd come to that at last, besides your Honour doesn't know may be that I am a freeman, your Honour, and one that never did no harm to nobody, your Honour; I'll pay 'm for the pane of glass next Saturday week, and if I don't I'm satisfied to go to Bridewell again.

The Recorder—Well, you say you will pay for the broken pane?

Buck—If I have the money, your Honour; but I'm afraid I won't have it, and your Honour knows.

The Recorder—Then if you won't, I must send you on board ship.

Buck—Oh! your Honour's Reverence, I'd like to go there very well, only I supports my poor father out of my earnings; may be they'd take my honour, for the price of it, or if they don't I'm sure here's a gentleman that 'll go security for me, and I'll never break windys again: your Honour knows I won't.

The Recorder—"Well, then, on condition that you pay for the glass, for this time, I'll let you off, but remember, that if another complaint be made against you, you shall be made an example of, and depend upon it, that instead of the Bridewell, you shall be sent to the Gaol, and if that won't do, we'll see what effects the tread-mill may have."

Mr. Falvey was then dismissed.

Bank of England.—It appears that the arrangements for the establishment of a branch of the Bank of England at Manchester are so far matured, that a building is taken in King-street, in that town, for the purpose.

Rosthorice More, in Cheshire, the prettiest and most secluded sheet of water, save Grassmere, that we know of, is exquisitely described in the new Romance of Sir John Chiverton. We are surprised, from its adjoining to the populous town of Manchester, that it preserves its beautiful seclusion.

In consequence of information received that a private distillary was carrying on in Crown-street, Hoxton, Thomas Gater, accompanied by John Ellern and Francis Gibbs, Excise-officers—the same who made the seizure a few days back in the private distillery, Primrose-street, Bishopsgate—repaired to the premises, and found in an under-ground kitchen, a still charged with 150 gallons of molasses wash, and the several utensils made use of in the process of distilling—the whole of which they seized and conveyed to the Excise-office; and on the same day, and through the same medium, they discovered in a private house, in Three-colt-lane, Bethnal-green-road, occupied by a Mr. Buckard Holland, 300 gallons of the same material, with which a still was charged and in full work in the back parlour; Holland himself and his wife and children being present: their admission here was resisted; Mrs. Holland, on the officer knocking at the door, calling out upon perceiving them to her husband, "Fly, John, fly! the scorpions are upon you." Thus situated, the officers got through an adjoining wood-yard, and scaled the garden-wall of Holland's house, and before the party could separate, secured the still, a number of spirit-casks and wash-bags, which have been since lodged at the head office of Excise.

The Army.—The Battalions of the Guards that are in London changed, in pursuance of previous orders, their quarters yesterday morning. Detachments belonging to the 1st, 8th, and 40th Regiments of Infantry, have received orders to embark, on Sunday morning, on board a vessel in the River, for Scotland.

The meeting of the Cortes is announced for the 19th of September, but it was thought it would be postponed till the 12th of October, Don Pedro's birth-day.

A circumstance of a novel description occurred on Thursday, at the house of Mr. Hill, 17, West Smithfield. About three o'clock in the morning, Mrs. Hill was disturbed by a noise proceeding from the chimney of her bed-room, but imagining that some of her neighbours had employed the chimney-sweepers, no further notice was taken of it at the time. But about twelve o'clock in the day, however, the servant, while making the bed, perceived soot falling from the chimney of the same room; and communicating the fact to her master and mistress, search was immediately made, when the legs of a man were discovered a few yards up the chimney. On calling, "Holloa, who are you?" they received for answer, "Pray take me out, I am fast." Some of the bricks were accordingly removed, and he was taken out, and found to be a chimney sweeper of no ordinary size. The prisoner said, that on the preceding night, he had lost some pigeons, and thought that they had descended the chimney, and that, in searching for them, he had been set fast in that predicament till the present moment. When he was taken out, he appeared quite exhausted, and gasped for breath. He had been jammed fast in the chimney with one arm upwards, and the other downwards, which deprived him of all power of liberating himself. What were the prisoner's intentions may easily be imagined. It may be necessary to state, that he had reached Mr. Hill's house by means of a house nearly adjoining which was under repair. The prisoner was safely lodged in the Compter.

PRICE OF STOCKS UP TO FOUR O'CLOCK YESTERDAY.

BRITISH.

Red. 3 per Cent. 79¼⅜	Bank Stock, 203½
3 per Cent. Cons. 78¾⅞	India Bonds, 25 25 pm
3½ per Cent. Red. 86½⅜	Exch. Bills, 1000 18 19 pm
New 4 per Cent. 91½⅜	Do. 500 do.
4 per Cent. 1826, 95¼⅜	Do. Small, 18 20 pm
Long Ann. 19 5-16	Cons. for Acc. 78⅜ ⅞ 79

NOTICES TO CORRESPONDENTS.

The "Obituary" will be found in to-day's impress. We have had many epitaphs sent us, from which we can only extract the following:—

ON THE NOTORIOUS PUNSTER, LORD NORBURY.

Here lies (and none his soul will grudge
To Nick) the remnant of a JUDGE,
Who, had he filled his proper rank
In life—had been a MOUNTEBANK!

and, we flatter ourselves, a better than that, on the same Nobleman, will be found in another column.

ANTI-HUMBUG is thanked for his favour, but we have before so completely exposed the cad, calling himself WESTMACOTT, that it is almost superflous to do so again. After being kicked out of all association with the London press, he has now gone and palmed himself on an inexperienced young man, owner of the Southampton Herald, whom he will soon bring to ruin. The youth may think both the cad, and the trull who travels with him, respectable, but every tinker in London could tell him how the case really stands. For his own sake, and for his own safety, he should at once get rid of the most shameless humbug in existence—the tirade, in his late paper, on us, is a lie from beginning to end.

Amongst other contributions, we have received the following Impromptu, after a perusal of DE VAVASOUR:—

"Hath BLESSINGTON written a book?" ask'd a wight:
Said a wag, "I've been told that he never did write;
"Or, to keep up the paradox still with the song,
"That if he does WRITE, he is sure to do wrong."

THE AGE.

LONDON, AUGUST 27.

We have listened, for some time past, with extreme indignation to the outcry which has been raised in behalf of the SPANISH REFUGEES now in this country, and read, with equal disgust, the daily attempts which have been made by the discontented part of the Press, to excite a general and unusual feeling of sympathy in their behalf.

The continual practices which are exercised upon the credulity and benevolence of this nation, are really almost enough in themselves to admit of a question, as to the actual soundness of mind of many persons who become the victims of such applications. The constitutional qualities of the inhabitants of most other empires produce, nearly without cessation, such scenes of tumult and discontent, as to shake the very basis of their establishment—political faction becomes blended with domestic distress, and the hypocritical practices of a false religion become mixed up with worldly avocations. It is, therefore, not to be wondered at, in this jarring of the elements of national existence, that the impulse of dissatisfaction becomes general, and the revolt the natural consequence. In many of the European countries this disastrous state of things has periodically made its appearance, and no sooner has a declaration of its existence been made manifest, than every ruffian takes advantage of the crisis, and exiling himself from his natives, lands as naturally a dependent on the inhabitants of these.

With reference to the Refugees, who are in our estimation for the most part thus situated, we candidly confess we do not feel the commiseration demanded of us, and even if the feeling did exist, it would be blunted by a knowledge that not one in one hundred, of their own countrymen, who have been denizened in England, and who, by an intercourse with her people, have been enabled to establish themselves as wealthy merchants, is to be found in the list of subscribers towards the relief of the paupers of their own nation. It is perfectly useless to go on reproaching our own people with their imprudences, or with their own stock of belief—for the broad facts, speaking for themselves, will do more towards convincing them, than all the arguments we could bring into the field. We regret to find, that since the last remarks were made by us relative to the distress in Spital-fields, that the distress has much increased; and, as one great proof of it, that Messrs. WILSON, MOORE, and ROBINSON, whose letter we then published, announcing the fact of their having offered work to the weavers, by which they might gain 15s. and 17s. 6d. a-week (but which they refused), have since been compelled to discharge many of their workmen, and recommend them as applicants to a participation in the public fund. Let these persons, then, who are now directing the attention of others, and devoting their own time, to a consideration of the distress of these foreign vagrants, turn an eye of real observation for a few minutes on the misery at home, and then decide for what purpose the charity of the country should be summoned.

From all the observations that we have been enabled to make on the late and present state of the SILK TRADE, we are more than ever convinced of the unsoundness of the policy which dictated, and eventually authorised, the importation of the foreign manufactures into this country; and we have no doubt that Mr. HUSKISSON will be compelled to rescind the steps taken by him in the procuration of such authority, and acknowledge, in his disgraced and defeated theory, to what a futile and almost ruinous proceeding, his foreign principles directed him. The situation of the weavers at this present moment is alarming, and such as calls most imperatively on the support of Government, as well as of public benefaction. The starvation there, which the late stretch of ministerial power has so materially increased, is to be regarded with a deep commiseration, while the claims, as they are ridiculously miscalled, of every foroigner at present in England, are, comparatively speaking, to be sneered at.

From a consideration of the distresses of the manufacturer, let us divert the reader's attention, a moment, to the recently-disclosed wants of the Printers, one of the most valuable and important classes of all workmen, and which, as far as the uses of life go, of more real service to the community than almost all the manufacturers we have. The misfortunes which the general pressure of the times has inflicted upon them, are to be examined with a much more thoughtful eye than the common privations of an obscure labourer. In their wants are to be traced a certain decay in all that constitutes the vast distinction between the civilization and barbarism of society—in their loss of employment, is to be acknowledged the declining patronage of that great bulwark of national consequence—OUR LITERATURE—and with its decay must follow the decay of mind, and all those intellectual attributes, which have elevated us to such an enviable pitch in the eye of nations. From a reference, then, in the first place, to the calamities with which the manufacturers, and in the next place, the mechanical workmen of GREAT BRITAIN, are at this present writing visited, let us implore that part of society which has the power, as well as the heart, to give, the rather to direct the application of what bounty it may be willing and able to bestow, towards the amelioration of these internal distresses, of which we are every day the witnesses, than by a submission to the dictates of any hollow advocate for foreign pauperism or vagabondry, submit the best impulses of the mind to be preyed upon by every needy criminal, and the national pride, which, if left to itself, would glory in relieving a fellow-creature, be galled into the fantastical notions of advancing continental renegades over British freemen, the first of which is labouring under a suppositions, or self-created want, and the other, under an actual deprivation of the means of honest employment.

YANKEE PRESS.

"In 1750 there were but seven papers in the United States; in 1810 there were 359, including 25 published daily, which circulated 22,200,000 copies annually. In 1823 they had increased in number to 538, and are now about 640, and the extent of copies circulated in the year exceeds 30 millions!"—American Paper.

This is evidently an attempt to convince us poor devils in England of the superiority of the American press to our own, and we dare say there are thousands who are blest with credulity enough to believe it. However, it is only necessary to observe, that to the whole of this fine array of Yankee literature, there is no such appendage as a stamp—that no duty is charged on their advertisements—that the imprint is on paper only just fit to weigh out butter with—and that the price of most Journals in the United States is TWO-PENCE!

WAKEFIELD'S FLIGHT!

At this present moment, when every mouth you meet is wide open to swallow all possible information respecting the WAKEFIELDS, we really congratulate ourselves on being enabled to give some exclusive particulars relative to the flight of WILLIAM WAKEFIELD from Lancaster, and the general movements of the family.

The accounts from Lancashire have been looked forward to, day by day, with an anxiety not felt by Britons since the great events which established the tranquillity of the continent; and more so than would otherwise have been the case, from the circumstance of that judicial wit, Judge PARK, presiding in the Court where the delinquents were to be tried. PARK is always capital fun, and his inveterate humour stuck fast to him on the present occasion. As usual, wherever there is any trial for seduction or crim con., every woman in the county flocks into the Assize town, in the hopes of hearing all particulars respecting so delicate an affair; and on this occasion, not only did crowds of ladies succeed in obtaining admission, but a party of fair Quakeresses, having been moved over night by the spirit, took possession of the prisoners' dock, which induced PARK, on witnessing their demure appearance, to call the place, pro futuro, the "dry dock." At the moment, however, when every eye was gazing round, in hopes of obtaining a sight even of the brother of the vile seducer—the modern PARIS, when every ear was stretched to catch any sound that might betray one syllable of the particulars, the doleful intelligence was brought into Court, that the said WILLIAM WAKEFIELD had absconded, and his recognizances were ordered to be estreated. It is almost impossible to give any description of the appearance of the Court, particularly of the women in it, who had, most of them, come many miles to glean every item of the present mode of *ab*duction in the first place, and *se*duction in the next. No one was evidently more disappointed, or more bothered, than PARK himself, for he had reckoned much on being initiated in the principles of modern intrigue—and on this sudden disappointment of his hopes, he was compelled to consult BROUGHAM on the best and most advisable mode of apprehending the flown bird. There was no end to the consternation among the fair sex, one half of whom had, beyond a doubt, already fancied themselves a second Miss TURNER, and planned a similar excursion; and, therefore, on PARK turning round to BROUGHAM, and saying, "I wish to consult you, Mr. BROUGHAM, as I have some doubt how to proceed in this business," there was an universal murmur among them, of "Who made you a JUDGE?"

To satisfy, however, as much as possible, the great curiosity which is now abroad in the world, we lose not a moment in furnishing all the particulars we have been enabled to collect, respecting the departure of WILLIAM WAKEFIELD from Lancaster; and from the respectability of our informant, who was on the spot, we have no doubt they are verbatim correct:—

On Sunday last, having previously made the necessary arrangements with his family, and purchased, through his servant, some female apparel, at a slopseller's in the High-street, late on Saturday night, WILLIAM WAKEFIELD habited himself in the said disguise about half-past eight, and walked leisurely, and free from all suspicion, on the Liverpool road, two miles out on which a post-chaise was quietly proceeding, occasionally stopping to look out for a passenger. The lady at length came up, when the person inside (who turned out to be a friend from London, a Mr. R—D—N, of the Stock Exchange, come down for the express purpose) jumped out, handed the supposed female in, and promising to pay the postboy handsomely, to drive two stages, instead of one, as he was running off with a pretty girl, the vehicle proceeded rapidly. This device was an excellent one, because, at this busy time the boy could easily tell his master there were no horses to be had, and by their persuading him to take them the two stages, it would be next morning ere he could return to Lancaster, to report any thing, if he had entertained any suspicions: but he had none. In this mode the party proceeded on to Liverpool, and when within a mile of that town, the lady quitted the post-chaise and journeyed on foot, having settled to meet her companion at the York Hotel, in Williamson-square, in that town, and there await his arrival. Mr. R. drove to the KING'S ARMS, in Castle-street, and there dismissed the post-chaise, and proceeding to the Quay, found a brig was to start that evening for London, in which he immediately secured a birth for himself, and another for a female servant. He then returned to join his companion at the York Hotel, where they remained till dusk, and then hastened on board the vessel, which, sailing about half an hour afterwards, enabled them to reach London on the following Thursday, three days afterwards. By this time, intelligence of WILLIAM WAKEFIELD'S flight had spread far and wide, and by his arrival in London, an officer from Lancaster, with the warrant, had also made his appearance. Having gained some information on Thursday night last, that induced him to believe W. WAKEFIELD was in London, and about to proceed to France, from the Tower stairs, he stationed himself there before the time of starting, on Friday morning, and seeing Mr. R—D—N (whom he thought he recollected meeting in Lancaster, and taking for W. WAKEFIELD), he served the warrant on him, while the real gentleman, still in female attire, rowed quietly off in the boat to the steam-packet, leaving his friend to fight his own battle; which was easily done, by a reference to several gentlemen on the Stock Exchange, at the house of one of whom they called, in the way to the Mansion-house; which prevented the necessity of proceeding there at all. W. WAKEFIELD must be ere this on the confines of Germany, having arranged to settle there during the present crisis.

We know nothing more of his movements beyond this, except having been favoured with the perusal of a few hasty lines written by him to the companion of his flight, which reached town by one of yesterday's afternoon coaches, from Dover; it runs thus:—

MY DEAR R——, Off Dover, Friday Afternoon.

So far, so good—I am all anxiety to know how you managed with the officer—Never saw such presence of mind, by G—. I never can repay your kindness. As soon as I reach Calais, and doff these d—d woman's rags, you shall hear fully from me, telling you where to address me. Write all particulars to NED,* and tell him if I should not return by HELEN'S confinement, to consult DAVIS—he's the best hand at that, I know. I long to know how the Lancaster lubbers looked in Court last Monday. Give my love to NED and his wife, and hey, my boy, for Helen and another Troy!

Your's, dear R——,
Ever,
W. WAKEFIELD.

* We presume this refers to his brother, EDWARD GIBBON WAKEFIELD, the hero of the whole affair.

"You're quite out of spirits," the DUKE said, by side
Of poor Mrs. COUTTS, who was sighing and yawning:
"That she certainly is," Lady DASHWOOD replied.
"For she finished THE VERY LAST BOTTLE this morning!"

OBITUARY

FOR ONE THOUSAND EIGHT HUNDRED AND forty-SIX!

(Continued.)

It is so long since we "furnished," as the undertakers have it, an article under this head, that our new readers may probably not be exactly aware of its pretensions, or aim, and therefore it is merely necessary briefly to say to them, that, on the principle of Mrs. SHELLEY'S Novel of the Last Man, we have presumed to record, in epitaph, the virtues and qualifications of many of the present members of society, who, we imagine, in twenty years hence, will be no more. We have been solicited from time to time, to continue a plan, which, we are told, has afforded our numerous subscribers some amusement, both in the wild dissipation of metropolitan, and the dreary monotony of country, life; and we have therefore considerable pleasure in so doing, more particularly as, at this dull period of the season, "the smallest contribution" to the entertainment of readers is sure to be "most thankfully received." The following gleanings have come to hand, and are submitted with much pleasure to public perusal:—

"That eccentric peer, JOHN TOLER, Lord NORBURY, Lord-Chief-Justice of the Common Pleas in Ireland, has just departed this life. He had attained the very advanced age of 101 years, and although punned upon, when a much younger Judge, as TOLER-able, yet he had latterly been quite incapable of doing justice to the high station he held. In the commonest, or most intricate case of legal question, Lord NORBURY would continually introduce a quibble of words upon every argument that came before him, and to such extent did he carry this propensity, that he was universally understood to be the author of the following epitaph upon himself, a copy of which was found amongst his Lordship's papers:—

At length, with those he tried, though loth to budge,
Is gone for trial, a too long tried Judge:
From the high court of Heaven a tip-staff went
To call the culprit to his punishment!
Stand to your ropes, ye pious sextons, ring,
And toll out mournfully, your ding, dong, ding;
Nor bury such a man without his due,
For he a toller was, as well as you!

That very fat old woman, Lady DASHWOOD KING, is defunct. At the time she was united to her worthy and honest husband, Sir JOHN, she was justly considered very handsome, but she latterly fell off woefully. She was for a length of time a companion to old Mrs. COUTTS, whom, for the sake of that lady's purse, she took every possible opportunity of toading. She adopted this course with more than usual industry in the year 1826, in the hopes of persuading the widow to purchase or her son EDWIN a troop in the Blues; and to obtain this object more effectually, she brow-beat her husband, Sir JOHN, into visiting Mrs. C——, and also endeavoured, but in vain, to induce her eldest son, GEORGE DASHWOOD, and his wife, to do the same. Her general qualifications and propensities are pretty faithfully summed up, we have understood, in these lines, engraven on her tomb-stone, in the mausoleum at Wycombe:—

Here lies one who dash'd wou'd,
And mak'd a great splash wou'd,
Much more than her cash wou'd
Permit her to do:
And as she so rash wou'd
Be, and Sir JOHN smash wou'd,
Why old Lady DASHWOOD
A smash made in lieu!

The late Earl of MILTOWN was in his 54th year, and died universally regretted. The Noble Lord was afflicted, from his earliest childhood, with the loss of all use in both his legs, and was always wheeled about in a chair, which induced that renowned French scholar, Mr. BALL HUGHES, to nickname him, when in Paris many years since, PERE-LA-chaise. He was well known in all the fashionable clubs, and equally respected in all—at one of which, CROCKFORD'S, he won at various periods, considerable sums of money. It is odd enough, that at one time, he had it in contemplation to propose marriage to that beautiful singer of the day, Miss STEPHENS, but, for many obvious reasons, the idea was eventually abandoned. On the monument lately erected to his memory, these lines are written:—

He's free at last from worldly strife,
And none knew worse than his,
For both his legs were, all his life,
Where now his body is.

About twenty years ago, we think in August, 1826, those two Noble Lords, GLENGALL and WILLIAM LENNOX (whose respective deaths we some time since recorded), fought a duel, owing to the former having charged the latter with libelling him in that popular paper called THE AGE. We very well remember reading a humourous account of the whole affair at the time, but we really thought that all recollection of the thing had long since died away. In this we find ourselves to be mistaken, for a correspondent has informed us, that he happened very lately to pass through the respective places where these Lords lie buried, and after the name of each was added that of the other, and underneath written these lines—

SHAKSPEARE, in Julius Cæsar, wisely saith
"Cowards die many times before their death;"
Then it like bird be right, we all well know
These Noble Lords died twenty years ago.

A very talkative old woman in fashionable life, whose name will be readily recognised in the lines below, has just gone "to that bourne from which no traveller returns." The event has created no particular sensation in the higher circles, beyond the CHESTERFIELD and FORRESTER families, some members of which were particularly attached to her. She has been deposited, amongst her ancestors, in an unostentatious manner, and the following tribute has been paid to her memory by the parties alluded to:—

From all pursuit, from every pain,
Old Reynard's now a-ground,
And never yet, in field or lane,
A slier fox was found!
But she was chaste—and though hard run,
Yet calumny must hush,
For being caught, why any one
Was free to use the brush.

That redoubtable old blockhead, PETER MOORE, died last week, really, we believe, without the least regret from any soul he left behind him. He was a singular instance of what a man, with no ability, can effect by impudence; for he began life in the menial capacity of a footman. He then got out to India in an official situation, wherein he amassed a good bit of money, but an estimate may be formed both of his abilities, and the value there set upon them, by an anecdote told by Mr. ARNOLD, who, many years since, so ably managed our English Opera House, in a pamphlet he wrote concerning PETER'S management of Drury Lane Theatre. MOORE offered his services, if we remember rightly, to one of our Indian Governors, in an expedition then carrying on upon the country, which the said Governor thus laconically declined—"I want elephants, and not asses about me." On PETER'S return from India, he had the impudence to start as a candidate for the city of Coventry, and had the singular fortune to represent it for nearly twenty years, until the year 1826, when he was kicked out by a tremendous majority, from the notorious adherence he had manifested to the late prostituted Queen of ENGLAND, as also to the Catholic cause. About a year before this time, he tendered his services as Chairman and Director to several of the bubbles which the mania of 1825 gave rise to, by virtue of which offices, he made, we have heard, a great deal of money. He endeavoured to establish a momentary popularity, or to redeem what he had lost, by placing a flag-stone, at his own expence, over SHERIDAN'S grave in Westminster Abbey, of which the only thing that can be said, is, he did for another what he could find no other to do for him. In the mean time, however, a friend, who knew him well, has enclosed us this epitaph, cut and dried, whenever any opportunity shall present itself for its more public and appropriate display:—

Here's one whose loss none other will deplore,
Thought little of in life, and now, no MORE:
One PETER keeps the keys above, we know,
So this one PETER, more, keeps those below!

A little blackguard was detected the other morning defacing the monument erected to the memory of the late Mr. HORACE TWISS, who had actually the impudence to scrawl these lines thereon:—

If you would know what blockhead's tombstone this is,
Think on the greatest hoard of—HORACE TWISS'S!

Really the clerk of the parish ought to set about indicting such disgraceful nuisances, and prevent any such future insult to the memory of the dead, or the feelings of the living.

Mr. WAITHMAN, facetiously styled, since his mayoralty in the year 1823, the Right Honourable Lord WAITHMAN, died yesterday. He kept for many years the large linen draper's shop at the corner of Bridge-street, Blackfriars, and rendered himself principally notorious by his radicalism, his general ignorance, and universal impudence. He was returned to Parliament by public subscription in the year 1826, from which he was ousted at the following election. In that memorable year of his return, Sir WILLIAM CURTIS, at a select City dinner, wrote these lines in pencil, to be engraved on his tombstone whenever he might die, and the City, out of respect to both, has caused the same to be immediately done:—

At last is gone Bob Waithman, our M.P.
Who was an A.S.S. and L.L.D.;*
Though all his life he measures took enough,
He ne'er yet measured so much worthless stuff;
And our old proverb is complete full well,
For he who had an inch, now takes an ell!

Yesterday afternoon, at the age of eighty-two, died the most extraordinary man of his day, ROBERT WILLIAM ELLISTON, formerly Manager of the Wells, Croydon, Northampton, Leicester, Leamington, Birmingham, Coventry, Manchester, Olympic, Surrey, and Drury Lane Theatres, bookseller, tea-dealer, actor, librarian, author, boxer, and universal factotum, in half the towns of Great Britain. To enumerate the various adventures, public and private, of this notorious personage, would occupy volumes instead of lines. He was a first-rate performer, and a worst-rate manager, a perfect gentleman, and a perfect blackguard, a great wit, and a great blockhead, as the different transactions of his career demonstrate. One of the most agreeable men living, he could render himself the most disagreeable—required to be the most temperate, he was the most intemperate; and in transactions of every nature, "extreme in all things." But he was the life of the stage while he was on it, and the death of it when he left it. After his possession of Drury Lane Theatre, he was always distinguished by the title of the great LESSEE, and after he left it, by that of the Ex-LESSEE, to which no doubt the epitaph on him has reference:—

Here lies, from duns, distress, and trouble free,
All that now left is of the EX-LESSEE:
Though many exits, in his life now past,
His HIGHNESS made, he now has made his last;
And of his mode of death, as many doubt,
'Tis proper here to say, HIS LEASE WAS OUT.

One of the best actors left us, of the old school, is no more. Mr. CHARLES YOUNG departed this life yesterday morning, at a quarter to nine A. M., to the great regret of all the profession. He was countenanced through life by all the first nobility in the land, a peculiarity which Mr. POOLE, the popular author of Paul Pry, humourously hit off, by telling a friend, on his meeting Mr. YOUNG arm-in-arm with his great patron Lord ESSEX, in Paris, that he had just met Lord YOUNG and Mr. ESSEX. The principal performers of each theatre attended his funeral, and on the monument ordered to be erected to his memory will be inscribed these lines:—

That FATE'S a riddle, in this page
Read, other proofs among,
That he who lived a good old age,
Died, notwithstanding, young!

To every smiling LORD to bow
Through life, was all his care;
And that he may not leave them now,
He's gone—the LORD knows where!

* Alluding, we suppose, to the old joke of a LARGE LINEN DRAPER.—Ed.

THE TIMES versus THE AGE.

We really do not mean a play upon words, in the heading affixed to this article, but a mere statement of the position lately maintained by the Journal, under the one denomination, towards that under the other. In explanation of the late duel at Cowes, we mentioned, last Sunday, that an ex-parte account had appeared in the Times, which is thus rebutted by that Paper on Thursday last:—

"Understanding that a clumsy attempt has been made in a Sunday Paper (no doubt much interested in diverting the public attention from the real facts connected with a late rencontre), to distort the circumstances that occurred at Cowes, we think it right to assert, in the most positive terms, the correctness of our former statement. Had it been (as absurdly alleged) an ex-parte or erroneous account, no doubt Captain Gordon would have felt it his duty to his principal to set the public right, and would have called upon Colonel Anson to join him in rectifying any false or malicious statement."

The cockney is in the utmost alarm at giving us even the slightest publicity, and therefore omits the name of our Paper, and omits also any contradiction of the said statement being furnished by TOM RAIKES, for the sum of 25*l*. We can assure the City scribe, that we have neither interest nor desire "to distort the circumstances that occurred at Cowes," for the combatants are both as indifferent to us, as they were to each other. We pronounce it to be both an ex-parte and an erroneous statement; but if the Times can make any one believe to the contrary, we quite agree with its Editor, that Lieutenant (not CAPTAIN) GORDON, for Lord WILLIAM LENNOX, is bound to set the public right, and no doubt will.

As the Times is very fond of quoting our jokes and information, without acknowledgment, we subjoin them an account, about which they must feel very much interested. In consequence of every one bullying RAIKES in the manner they do—first CROCKFORD, then BERKELEY, then others, the Merchant has very wisely had a quantity of the following circular apologies printed, to save both time and trouble:—

MY DEAR* London Wall, day of 18 .

I have no hesitation in denying altogether the charge you have made against me, and at the same time of retracting any thing I have said, or whatever I may say for the future.

I am,
My dear*,
To Your's very truly,
&c. &c. &c. T. RAIKES.

Whenever, therefore, any one calls upon RAIKES for an apology, he has nothing to do, but fill up one of the above circulars, and things go on smoothly again in a minute. For this very clever contrivance, he is indebted to the ingenuity of his personal friend and crony, PUNCH GREVILLE.

* Here "Lord," or "Sir," is to be written in, according to the rank of the person whom Mr. RAIKES addresses.

MORALITY OF THE PRESS.

It will hardly be believed, that while so many of our cotemporaries have been upbraiding us with the charge of immoral writing, and other impudent groundless accusations, for no other reason than because we have ventured to call persons and things by their proper names, that the wanderings of others are passed over with impunity. In the Morning Herald of yesterday appeared a correspondence from Greece, addressed to the Editor of that paper, from which the following is an actual and bona fide copy; and after reading it through, one would hardly imagine it possible that so sanctified and staid a looking personage, as the said Editor is, could allow his epistolary friend to give such an exposition, and so openly convict him of what is commonly called, "going it:"—

In your last, you requested to know what kind of creatures the Grecian girls were. They are cursed scarce in this part of the world; however, I can give you an account of one of my scrapes in the island of Melo. While there, a short time since, I fell in with a little devil, who is kept by Lord * * *, who commands the English frigate * * *. She was left by him in that island until his return from Corfu, where he is now. SHE IS A NICE LITTLE PIECE—but quite dark. She is, in his opinion, quite virtuous and constant to him—but he is not aware what might be going on in his absence. Virtue, you know, * * *, of this kind, is easily bribed at times—there are such things as crawling in at windows at mid night—and of taking creeping walks on the sea shore—and of exploring grottos, in the island of Melo, my boy, which are pleasures not to be revealed, either by you or me. So, you see, amidst all our troubles in Greece, we can have a little sport now and then. This little devil is living with the * * , and keeps the best company in the island, and is the companion of the * * * daughters. O, glorious!—but enough on that subject—at any other time than this I could glory in such amusement; but now, when I look round me, and see the situation of Greece—let me be in the best spirits, I cannot help shedding tears. Yes, my dear friend, I weep like a child. Would to GOD it was in my power to render some more essential service to Greece. If my fortune was sufficient to purchase and keep a frigate, I would give every cent of it instantly; but, at present, I can do no more than give them my best services, which is but of little use to them, until I have some knowledge of the language. O, * * * * ! the bravery of the sailors, the brulotors particularly, have caused me to love them more than ever. I would give my heart and soul for the liberty of Greece.

THEATRICALS.

The cockney, who "does" this department of the Morning Chronicle, is either out of his senses, or never yet had any to be out of. He has for some time exhibited the most violent symptoms of affection for Mrs. HUMBY, of the Haymarket Theatre, which have at last assumed that degree of stupidity which all such excitements do; and for the purpose of proving this, we cannot do better than cite some parts of the man's labours during the last week, compared to which, the late hoax on him, respecting CHARLES TAYLOR, is a mere trifle.

It is presumed that he must have received some afternoon, at the "Boarding Table," especial hints to endeavour to retain the said Mrs. HUMBY in Madame VESTRIS's original part of Phœbe, in Paul Pry, and accordingly, on Monday, last he popped in the following paragraph:—

"We are glad to see that Madame VESTRIS, on her return to this Theatre, is not to take the character of Phœbe, in Paul Pry, out of the hands of Mrs. HUMBY. The Manager would neglect his own interest, and, we believe, the wishes of the Public, if he did."

After reading which, the reader will scarcely expect to be told that, in another page of the same Paper, the said MADAME was advertized to perform the said part THAT VERY EVENING; but such was the case. Three days after this, by which time VESTRIS had of course played the part three times, we are favoured with this sublime touch of criticism:—

"It seems that the Manager thinks, 'variety very good, and, above all, profitable,' and for this reason Madame VESTRIS last night RE-TOOK the part of Phœbe in Paul Pry!! We have already said, that though her singing is better, her acting is decidedly worse than that of Mrs. HUMBY; and her notion of the character is defective, inasmuch as she throws too strong an air of vulgarity even over the waiting maid, who ought, on the contrary, to be tolerably well bred, in order to account for the footing of familiarity on which she is with her young mistress.

"However, (like, we believe, the majority of the male part of the audience,) we did not go so much to see her Phœbe as her Apollo, in Midas, which she performed, we apprehend, for the first time at this house!!! This is a character which, of all others, ought to be sustained by a MAN!!

Madame VESTRIS went through the part of Apollo with great success; but she is now approaching that age when, according to some, "the second crop of beauty becomes ripe for the reaper;" when a certain degree of plumpness makes up for the absence of the earlier graces. She never struck us as being so buxom and en bon point as last night, when her dress being necessarily tight, shewed the exact proportions of her figure. She was encored in "Pray, Goody," but SINCLAIR used invariably to be called upon to sing it three times. Madame VESTRIS sings, to be sure, sufficiently well for the part, but her claim to it depends much more upon her legs than upon her voice. Altogether, the piece was ill got up, as the Manager was aware, most likely, that a pair of very nice silk stockings for Madame VESTRIS was the most important part of the property to be employed. HUCKEL was advertised for Damœtas, but by some 'virtuous accident,' PYNE took his place!!! WE WISH HE MAY KEEP IT!!!"

We have always maintained, that, in the soubrette, Madame VESTRIS is the best actress on the stage, and if even a fault could be found in her portraiture of such characters, it would lie in an occasional absence of that coarseness of manner they now and then deal in. Yet, here's a fellow would really make poor VESTRIS out the vulgarest lady in christendom. But that's not half the fun. Not satisfied with announcing that she "re-took" Phœbe on Wednesday, (vice Monday), he proceeds to state that she performed Apollo FOR THE FIRST TIME AT THE HAYMARKET, the same evening—a character she must have played, we imagine, at least thirty times last year. He then proceeds to assert, that "this character, of all others, ought to be played by a man," and further on, says that Madame VESTRIS, though a singer, has more claim to it "on account of her legs than her voice:" and, to wind up this interesting article, we are told that "HUCKEL was advertized for Damœtas," but by some "virtuous accident" PYNE took "his place." Now, as HUCKEL did play the character of Damœtas, and PYNE his own character of Sileno, this "virtuous accident" must be the very fellow that popped VESTRIS into Phœbe and Apollo, for the first time on Wednesday.—Oh, old CRONNY, you certainly are the greatest blockhead that ever took up the trade of critic. The flourish about Madame VESTRIS's age, when Mrs. HUMBY is about two years older, comes in very funnily, but it is nevertheless of a piece with the whole affair. We are always well pleased with Mrs. HUMBY—she is a clever and very agreeable woman, though, if you analyze her pretensions, they are separately very weak—but they will will cease to receive even the approbation they do, if any dinner-table scribe, or uxorious dentist, is to be the means of throwing such a false colour over them—as far as the Chronicle goes, its critic appears to be absolutely guilty, like many other lunatics, of felo de se.

The Oracle, at the Lyceum, maintains its ground, and, as in the instance of Der Freischutz, has given a zest to the winter theatres, at both of which its production is in agitation. It might do some little good at Covent Garden, where they possess Miss PATON, "a pearl worth all their tribe," to fill her original character of Myra, but at Drury Lane it is impossible it could be half as effective, as if they were to set Pizarro to music, and act that. There cannot be too great praise bestowed upon the exertions of Mr. ARNOLD, for the important addition his representation of these two operas has given to the stock of our musical entertainments; for, exclusive of the general character of their performance, they have established quite a novel turn, and certainly a most fortunate one, in the musical taste of this country. We have received several communications this week, respecting our animadversions last Sunday, on the acting of Mr. PERKIN, to whom we by accident gave the un-histrionic name of GERKIN, which, we are sorry to hear, has as completely fastened on him, as if we had PICKLED HIM. Our objection was more against the introduction of tragic bombast into an opera, than against this gentleman's delivery of it—for if we had been criticizing him in a regular five-act bowl-and-dagger piece of business, we have seen enough of Mr. PERKIN to say, that we should have spoken differently of him, and we hope he will feel assured that we never contemplated the least idea of wounding his professional, or personal, feelings.

They are preparing, in a splendid manner, a compilation from the novel of Peverel of the Peak, at Covent Garden, which, with a Farce of KENNY's, constitutes their first novelty; and at the Haymarket a new farce called Pong Wong, in which Madame VESTRIS plays a part called Ching Tou! A Miss BROTHERS, a tragedy heroine, apprentice to Mr. WELSH, and pupil to Mr. PERKIN aforesaid, is engaged at Drury Lane, but they are still without a hero. Mr. SALTER, from Manchester, is talked of, but WINSTON, who never saw him in his life, DOES NOT THINK HIM a good performer. WINNY should stick to timber and old iron, canvass, packthread, and nails, and not trouble his head about any thing in a theatre, of which, except its scandal, he is as ignorant a man, as ever the late King pronounced to be "very bad actor, very bad actor!"

SPORTING INTELLIGENCE.

TATTERSALL'S, AUG. 24.—The near approach of Doncaster Races has given a slight fillip to the bettings. We recently stated that the great sporting men were at a loss to compose their books, but now symptoms of a reaction begin to show themselves.

ST. LEGER.

9 to 4 agst Belzoni	13 to 1 agst Crusader
15 to 2 agst Bedlamite	30 to 1 agst Tarrare
17 to 2 agst Mulatto	35 to 1 agst The General
15 to 1 agst Paul Pry (taken)	40 to 1 agst Shortwaist
14 to 1 agst The Dragon	100 to 1 agst Fanny Dacres.

Even between the Dragon and Paul Pry (taken).
1,000 to 700—Mulatto agst The Dragon.

DISTRESSED PRINTERS.

Another excursion to the Nore will take place on Wednesday next, for the Benefit of the unemployed Printers. The sum which the last trip produced, when scattered over so great a number of individuals in want of the ordinary necessaries of life, could not alleviate much of the distress which is so deeply felt by these valuable operatives. We hope this second excursion may yield triple the amount; and that the generous zeal of those who have undertaken this work of philanthropy may prove highly successful.

The printing business at Paris is nearly as bad as in London. M. Didot, the greatest printer there, suspended payment last week.

LORD COCHRANE'S STEAM VESSELS.

The two steam vessels, the Enterprise and the Irresistible, in which officers of the customs have been placed, are now lying within the tiers above Deptford Creek; a situation which has evidently been selected for the purpose of avoiding observation. On approaching them they gave the spectator an impression that they are of foreign build, being totally unlike any of the steam vessels hitherto constructed. Their sharp angular appearance is one of their greatest peculiarities, especially as the stern nearly resembles the bow; the former differ only in its more shark-like appearance, and it is said that the sharp point of the bow is intended for forcing its way, if necessary, into the sides of an enemy's ship on an occasion of close quarter. They lie low in the water, and are thus calculated to come suddenly and almost unobserved on the enemy. The burthen being only 120 tons, they of course appear much smaller than could be expected from the nature of the service for which they are destined; but their smallness renders them fit for running in and out of creeks, and getting into shallow water, where they can throw with impunity shells into the sea-coast towns of the enemy. The draught of water is only nine feet, and when the guns are in it will be only ten feet.

Both vessels are calculated to carry from 14 to 16 68-pounders, and probably two or three mortars; for in each vessel there is a shell-room, and the extraordinary strength and size of the timbers seem to justify the belief that they will be much employed in bombardment. The vessels are about 150 feet in length, and twenty-five in width in the beam. Each vessel has two fifty-horse power steam-engines, and it is supposed that the rate at which they will travel will equal that of the largest steam-vessels. There are three small-sized masts for sailing, but the reliance seems to be placed almost exclusively upon their steam power.

Each vessel will carry from 50 to 60 hands, the accommodation for whom appears to be of a very limited description. The officers have very small cabins, and that intended for the Admiral on board the Enterprise is much smaller than the Captain's cabin in many merchant vessels. Every thing seems to have been sacrificed to the warlike and important object for which these vessels were built, but as in warm climates it is usual for the crew to sleep on deck under an awning, the want of accommodation below will be less sensibly felt.

The paddle-boxes are of a very peculiar construction. The starboard paddle-box contains a dressing-room and bath for the captain, and the larboard paddle-box is conveniently fitted up as a cook's galley, or kitchen. Taken altogether, the appearance of these vessels gives us the idea that they are likely to prove the most formidable engines of warfare which even the ingenuity of modern times has constructed.

FIRE.—Saturday night, a fire broke out on the premises of Mr. Simpson, a tea-dealer, Rawsthorn-street, near Sadler's Wells. At the time the accident was discovered, Mr. S. was in conversation with Mr. Jones, the landlord of the Red-lion public-house, nearly adjoining. They proceeded instantly to the scene of devastation, and with great promptness, the latter gentleman rescued the cash-box, desk, and books of account, and lodged them in his own premises. He then, at great risk, proceeded to the upper apartments, in order to ascertain whether the children were safe, as the phrenzied father was almost incapable of exertion: finding the rooms all vacated, Jones descended, and being in danger of speedy suffocation, he dragged the father from the house, which, in the course of half an hour, was reduced to a skeleton. About an hour before it happened, a Mrs. Tilkenor, who occupied part of the premises, died suddenly during her husband's absence of twenty minutes.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The amount of the recognizances forfeited by the non-appearance of William Wakefield is four thousand pounds; it was thus apportioned:—Wakefield's own recognizance was two thousand pounds; Mr. Cuthbert was bail for 1,500l., and Dr. Davies for 500l.

The Wakefields' grandfather, Mr. Edward Wakefield, senior, of Ipswich, has just died at a very advanced age. He was the husband of the authoress, Mrs. Priscilla Wakefield, who survives him.

FRENCH INSTITUTE.—The Royal Institute of France has offered prizes for the following inquiries:—

"For 1827.—To investigate the political state of the Greek cities of Europe, of the islands, and of Asia Minor, from the commencement of the second century before our era, down to the establishment of the empire of Constantinople.

"For 1828.—To trace the commercial relations of France and of the other states of Southern Europe with Syria and Egypt, from the empire of the Franks in Palestine to the middle of the 16th century; to ascertain the nature and extent of those relations; to fix the date of the establishment of consulships in Egypt and Syria; and to point out the effects which the discovery of the passage by the Cape of Good Hope, and the establishment of the Portuguese in India, produced in the commerce of France and Southern Europe with the Levant.

Extract of a letter, dated Madrid, Aug. 8:—"About two years ago, a schoolmaster, of Rusafa, a suburb of Valencia, named Ripole, was taken up as a Liberal, and a man that never heard mass. After suffering in the prison of San Narciso the greatest hardships, he was ultimately sentenced to be hung for heresy. At 11 o'clock on Monday, the 31st ult., he was taken from prison, and made to march quick time behind a cart to the gallows; on the cart was placed an empty cask, painted with flames, devils, &c., which cask served him afterwards for a coffin, in which he was buried outside the church-yard. The churches by which he passed on his way to the gallows were all closed, and the saints stuck up in the streets, covered with black; the crosses were taken down from the gallows; in short, every thing belonging to religion was put aside. The unfortunate man behaved with the greatest composure, and on the scaffold said, that he had always lived a good Christian, and that he died the same. By all accounts he was a most charitable character, giving every thing to the poor that he did not absolutely stand in need of himself. He used to go to the poor people's houses and instruct their children gratis, and by many other acts of this kind showed that he well understood the true meaning of religion, and practised it. A Junta has been appointed in Madrid, to report upon the effects the change in Portugal may produce upon the minds of the Spaniards, at the head of which is Father Cirilo."

ANTIQUITIES.—ROME, AUG. 14.—The 21st of July was a day of rejoicing for all the antiquaries and literati at Brescia, and highly interesting to the inhabitants of that city. On a neighbouring hill there has stood for time immemorial, a large marble column; and there was a tradition, that it belonged to a great temple of Hercules, which had stood there in remote antiquity. For these two years past the magistrates have caused excavations to a great extent to be made on the spot, the result of which confirmed the truth of the tradition. From time to time important monuments of ancient architecture and Roman inscriptions were brought to light, and every thing indicated a great edifice had stood there. At length the foundations of an immense temple were uncovered, with entrances to several covered passages. These were examined, and on the day above-mentioned the workmen found in one of them several niches, walled up. They were opened, and in one of them was found a colossal-winged Victoria of bronze, and of admirable workmanship. In another, six large busts, one of them representing Faustina, the consort of Marcus Aurelius, and a highly ornamented breast-plate of a horse. In a third and fourth, a richly-gilt statue, 4½ feet high, of a captive king, and a colossal arm; all these are likewise of bronze, and of fine workmanship. There are also several inscriptions in the building, one of which mentions the Brixia Romana. The eyes of the King and of the Victoria are of onyx. They are all in perfect preservation, and from the situation in which they were found, it is evident that they were concealed and walled up for security, for both the wings and arms of the Victoria were taken off and laid at her feet.—German Paper.

The new building now erecting for the residence of his Royal Highness the Duke of Clarence, in the King's Palace, St. James's, is in a forward state. The front is to be covered with cement: it has already been commenced. There are three tiers of nine windows each extending along the front side. A balcony will be erected along the windows of the first floor. The entrance will be exactly in the centre of the building under a portico, sustained by six columns of the Doric order, to the height of the first floor, and six Ionic columns above. It will be surmounted by a balustrade, and that part of the attic story which will be above the portico will be ornamented by pilasters. The portico will extend over the pavement, but will leave a free passage to the public under it. The lower part of the building will be rusticated in the French style.

DONNYBROOK FAIR.—But what shall we say of it? Lachrymæ Hibernicæ! This far famed spot, which was wont to be the scene of fun and frolic, of feasting and of fighting, presents this year so sad a picture of these mournful times, that our heart was grieved as we paced through its deserted avenues of canvass. Brown and his equestrians, the dwarfs and the giants, the majestic lions and the mimic apes, are all displaying their gaudy signs in vain, and in vain are lads and lasses invited to see such sights as were never seen before, and will never be exhibited again. Even an ourang-outang, the only animal of the kind that was ever seen alive, as we were informed by the lord-in-waiting on his ourang-outangship; even he, though he may be seen for the small charge of threepence, remains unnoticed. Not a broken head, nor a black eye, has yet graced the festivities of Donnybrook. Need we say more? Surely the times must be bad indeed—and sad indeed—when Donnybrook cannot afford a broken head. We will pursue this mournful subject no further, particularly as hopes are entertained that matters will mend when Palmerstown fair is over.—Dublin Freeman's Journal.

AN AMERICAN TOAST.—(From a Philadelphia Paper.)—We are no friends to long toasts. We have noticed an unusual number this Jubilee. According to our ideas, the shortness and pith of a sentiment constitute its greatest beauty. As a sample of one of the longest, we select the following, given by Mr. John Widgery, at the celebration in Portland (Me), in which birth, beauty, bliss, brows, banquets, cradles, chaplets, fairness, flowers, fruits, freedom, graces, gardens, gratitude, happiness, hearts, humanity, honesty, joy, luxury, mirth, majesty, palladiums, smiles, sentiments, virture, verdure, wine, wit, and woman, dance through his toast, in all the mazes of metaphorical confusion.—By Mr. John Widgery—"The virtuous, fair, and accomplished daughters of Colombia—Born in the land of happy destiny, rocked in the cradle of liberty, educated in the unbounded freedom of intellectual inquiry; roaming in the garden of genius and the graces; she gathers from its imperishable verdure the fruits of refinement, on which she banquets in literary luxury. Culling the flowers of wit, of mirth, and of sentiment, she encircles her brow with the chaplet, and stands arrayed in all the majesty of moral beauty—that brow, arched by her smile, becomes to us the bow of heavenly promise; that smile, the palladium of present bliss; the harbinger of future joy. Preserved us by Heaven's highest behest, as the redeeming spirit of humanity, she must cause the heart, and can, of every honest man among us, to overflow with gratitude and wine."

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

COURT OF CHANCERY, Wednesday.

CONST V. HARRIS.

Mr. Russell observed that his Lordship had in this case ordered the receiver to pay into Court a sum of 10,000l., within a certain time, and that Messrs. Kemble, Willett, and Forbes had agreed to consent to have their names introduced into the order. Those gentlemen were now desirous that the words "without prejudice to any rights or interests of the parties consenting thereto," might be inserted in the order, as they were fearful, without such an insertion in the order, they might hereafter be prejudiced.

The Lord Chancellor thought such an application must be made the subject of a special motion, because it would so directly alter the terms of the order, that if he granted it, there would be an application to discharge the order to-morrow, on the ground of its being irregular.

His Lordship observed he should not sit again till Thursday.

ASSIZE INTELLIGENCE.

LANCASTER—August 21.

MR. WAKEFIELD AND MISS TURNER.

The trial of Mr. Wm. Wakefield having been appointed for this day, the avenues to the Court House began to fill as early as half-past six o'clock, notwithstanding it having been very generally reported during the morning that Mr. Wakefield had absconded, and that no trial would take place. The doors were opened at a few minutes after nine o'clock, and the body of the Court was immediately filled. A desk sufficient for the accommodation of the Press was erected between the dock and the seats appropriated to Counsel. The Jury-box was occupied exclusively by those who had been summoned to serve as Jurors during the Assizes, and the gallery and Grand Jury-box on the opposite side was crowded with ladies, who were admitted by tickets from the High Sheriff.

At half-past nine o'clock, Mr. Justice Park entered the Court, and the Jurors having answered to their names, were put into the Jury-box.

A message having been sent by his Lordship to inform the Counsel engaged in this case that he was in Court.

Mr. Brougham came into Court, and moved that W. Wakefield be called upon his by recognizances.

The crier called the defendant three times upon his recognizances (2,000l.) but he did not appear.

Mr. Brougham then moved that the sureties of W. Wakefield be called upon their recognizances.

David Davies, of Macclesfield, in the county of Chester, Doctor of Divinity; and John Cuthbert, of Stonehouse, near Broad-stairs, in the parish of St. Peter's, in the Isle of Thanet, in the county of Kent, Esq., were then called upon their respective recognizances (Mr. Cuthbert in the sum of 1,500l. and Dr. Davies 500l.) to bring forth the body of W. Wakefield.

Mr. Justice Park—Is there any reason to suppose that the defendant is not here? Probably he is prevented by the crowd from getting into Court.

Mr. Brougham—My Lord, Mr. Denison, the Attorney for the defendant, says that he will not be forthcoming.

Mr. Denison—He will not be forthcoming at this Assizes, my Lord.

Mr. Justice Park—Let all the recognizances be estreated.

Mr. Brougham—The defendant W. Wakefield having absconded, I have humbly to move your Lordship for a Bench warrant to apprehend him.

Mr. Justice Park—Let a Bench Warrant be prepared. You are, I suppose, aware, Mr. Brougham, that my warrant does not extend beyond this county, and therefore, if the defendant he not in this county, you must apply to a Judge of the Court of King's Bench for a warrant that will extend all over the kingdom. I have some doubt respecting the form in which the warrant ought to be drawn. The usual form is, that the defendant should be brought before me if he should be apprehended whilst I am in the county, and if not, before a Justice of the Peace for the county of Lancaster; and the doubt which exists in my mind is, whether or not there ought to be inserted in the warrant a power to the Magistrate to require twenty-four hours' notice of bail. Although the recognizances already entered into are forfeited by the non-appearance of the defendant, yet the offence, if he should be apprehended, is bailable; and the Magistrate is bound by law to take bail. One of my clerks, who was once clerk to one of the Judges of the Court of King's Bench, has told me, that in a warrant issued by him, there was inserted a power to require notice of bail, but then the defendant in that case was to be brought before one of the Judges of that Court, and my difficulty in this case is, whether or not I ought to give that power to a private Magistrate. (Mr. Hopkins here communicated something in private to his Lordship.) I am told by Mr. Hopkins, that he remembers a case at Liverpool in which notice of bail was inserted in the warrant.

Mr. Brougham—If your Lordship has any doubt about it, we will take a warrant in the usual form, and, as the offence is bailable, probably the Magistrate, in the exercise of his discretion, will require notice of bail.

Mr. Justice Park—That will be the safer course. I shall leave it to the discretion of the Magistrate to require notice of bail or not; but, if the defendant should be apprehended whilst I remain in the county, I shall certainly require notice of bail. Let the warrant be made out in the common form, "By the Court." It is not necessary that it should have my signature.

The warrant was then made out, and Mr. Justice Park said the dock (in which some Quakeresses had been accommodated with seats) must be cleared. "You, Ladies," said his Lordship, "must retire, and persons more guilty than any of you are, I am sure, must take your places."

Every entrance leading to the Castle was thronged with persons of the highest respectability, so anxious were they to be present at the trial. However, Mr. Justice Park had, on Friday, given strict and imperative orders that no person, however high in rank they might be in the County, should be admitted into the Court before he took his seat, and threatened the Keeper of the Castle with a heavy fine if he should disobey his orders. In addition to this mandate, his Lordship directed that no persons should be allowed to sit in the Court unless they were provided with a ticket, signed by the High Sheriff; and also, that the Magistrates of the County should only have the privilege of introducing one friend each.

The passage between Leith and London is now made by the steam-boats, in calm-weather, in forty-seven hours. This scarcely exceeds the time occupied in the land journey of the mail, though the distance by sea is about 100 miles greater than by land. The distance by sea is 495 miles, and of course the rate of sailing is about ten miles and a half per hour, and amidst variable tides and winds. This is two miles an hour more than the mail's rate of travelling. When the first steam-boats were creeping along at two miles an hour, fifteen years ago, who would have dreamed of such velocity being attained?—Scotsman.

A letter from Rio de Janeira has been received, dated the 14th of June, the postscript of which says—"I just learn that Lord Ponsonby has prevailed with the Council to acknowledge the independence of the Banda Oriental." We stated some time ago, on very good information, that one of the objects of Lord Ponsonby's mission was to detach the disputed territory of Monte-Video and the surrounding country, both from Buenos-Ayres and from Brazil, and to establish it into an independent state. This point, as regards the latter Power, would now appear to have been gained, though the more difficult part—that of prevailing on the republic of Buenos-Ayres to agree to the measure—remains still to be accomplished.

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

MANSION HOUSE.—A man with a sallow complexion, an invalid countenance, and a sorrowful aspect, came before the Lord Mayor, to beg his Lordship's aid in procuring redress from the Directors of the Real del Monte Mining Company. He said his name was Henry Dobell, and that at the outset of the Company he had been engaged to go out to the mines, and give light to the concern by making candles for them. He was a chandler. It was agreed in his articles, that if he should find it necessary to leave the work, he should have 40l. for his passage home, and three months' wages. He engaged to go out for 600 dollars per annum. Neither the people nor the place agreed with him. He became ill, and returned to this country, when, on applying to Mr. Taylor, the official person at the Company's Office, for his wages, he was told they knew nothing of him, nor could he make them know, though he produced his agreement. He could do nothing with them, and he was obliged to apply to his Lordship.

The Lord Mayor asked him, whether he had really been at Real del Monte?

The workman shook his head mournfully, as much as to say, that he had indeed, to his cost.

The Lord Mayor asked him how it was getting on, and whether there was a great deal of work yet to do before they got gold?

The workman said, there was plenty of work to do; the mountain was 12,000 feet above the level of the sea. He expresssed his doubts, however, whether gold would ever be seen from it.

The Lord Mayor.—Why we were told not long since, as a commencement, that a column of gold had been found there.

The workman could not refrain from laughing outright.

The Lord Mayor—What, then, there was no column of gold found!

The workman—Not a bit of it, that I ever saw, or heard of.

The Lord Mayor asked what was the fuel they made use of at the mines?—The workmen said they were at much labour in procuring fuel. They made charcoal, and got a sort of stuff which was not exactly stone, but which looked like stone, and burned exceedingly well, like turf.

The Lord Mayor asked what progress had been made in clearing the mine?—The workman said, that all the water had not yet been got out. They did get it out once, but, just before he came, it broke in upon them again, and drowned 50 men.

The Lord Mayor.—We never heard of this before? Were they Englishmen?—No, my Lord; nine of 'em only—they were only natives.—(The word only excited much laughter.)

The Lord Mayor asked whether the natives worked well?—The workman said, they did not "buckle too" well, and that it required much trouble to keep them at it.

Mr. Hobler observed, the natives would have belied their character, if they had worked well; for it was considered that a more indolent, worthless, set was scarcely to be found.

The Lord Mayor asked what was the depth they had yet to go?—The workman said, they had got down 800 fathoms, and had to clear 30 fathoms more, before they cleared the place it was supposed the ore was in.

The Lord Mayor.—And what reason is there for believing that they will find it when they get there?—The workman said, that the mine had once before been worked. The bottom was now filled up with beams, rubbish, and water.

The Lord Mayor.—You tell me you have found no gold yet?—Not a bit; and I don't believe they will ever find any.

The Lord Mayor—This is very strange. We were told not long ago, that a column of gold had been found, and a respectable friend of mine had given as much as 1,300l. or 1,500l. for two or three of the shares.

Mr. Hobler—Which are now, I believe, considered worth as much as 80l. The concern seems to have been as bad to some as the Poyais affair.

The Lord Mayor asked the workman whether he had, whilst he was there, made any candles?—The workman replied in the negative.

The Lord Mayor—Why so?—Because, when we arrived there, we found we could get no tallow.

The Lord Mayor—No tallow! Why there is plenty of wild cattle there.—Aye, but they are so thin and lean, that there's no tallow to be got from them.

The Lord Mayor—We certainly import a considerable quantity of tallow from South America?—Yes, but not from Mexico.

The Lord Mayor—Well, I don't see how they could find gold without candles. His Lordship proceeded to ask what he had got there?—The workman said, he got a cut in the head, and he got a sickness, and at last he got away.

The Lord Mayor asked him how he got the wounds—I got it from the natives; it was one of their saints' days, and it was because I did not bow to an image that was carried along, crowned with thorns.

The Lord Mayor observed, that it was just like our workmen. The complainant should have learned to respect the belief of the people, and to behave decorously at their ceremonies.

The Workman—But they were carrying along a terrible ugly-looking image, what they called Judas, and were going to hang it; and I could not help laughing at it when they pitched in upon us.

The Lord Mayor—It was what might have been expected. I presume that the quarrels were frequent between you and the natives.

The Workman—Yes; they are a devilish set, that fight with knives. They killed as many as twenty of our people. They came behind me, in their way, with a knife, and cut me on the head. If Capt. Lyon, who was standing near me, had not stopped them, I should have had the knife through my back.

The Lord Mayor asked the workman whether the country was populous.

The workman replied, that it was at Ampico, on the river Panapa, where they landed. There were about 20,000 people. But in general there were very few inhabitants. There were none at Real Del Monte. It was quite a barren place.

The Lord Mayor asked him, how it was that he did not get his money before he left.

The workman said, that Captain Lyon told him he would be sure to get his money on his return home.

The Lord Mayor—The Captain probably was not aware how scarce a thing money had become, and what a change had taken place since you left. You have not heard, I suppose, of the breaking up of so many great concerns.

The Workman—We heard of one of 'em: Goldsmith, I think his name is, having gone.

The Lord Mayor then looked over the complainant's agreement, which, certainly, he said, appeared to be a regular and proper instrument. But there was one exception in it to the allowance which the complainant claimed. It was stipulated, that he should have the allowance in question, on being compelled to leave work, provided his doing so did not arise from any misconduct or impropriety on his part. Now the Company might plead that he received the wound on his head in consequence of his own misconduct, and that he had thereby forfeited his claim. On the whole, his Lordship said, he did not see that he could render him any assistance. He might seek a remedy by a civil action, but his Lordship recommended him to apply again to the Company, and to state that he had been desired to do so by the Lord Mayor.

House of Lords.—Thursday being the day to which Parliament had been adjourned, the Lord Chancellor, accompanied by Lord St. Helens, appeared in the House of Lords. The officers and clerks of the House of Commons attended at the bar, and the Parliament, in pursuance of the late proclamation, was prorogued to the 2d of November next, in the usual form.

HORRIBLE MURDER.

Brighton, August 22.—A dreadful event occurred between two and three o'clock this afternoon. A fellow, a shoemaker, named Burt, who lived separate from his wife, owing to his brutal treatment of her, followed the poor woman, with his own infant in her arms, about four months old, into the house of an acquaintance in William-street, and where, without further provocation, he drew forth a knife, and stabbed both her and the child in divers parts of the body. The woman, grasping the child to her breast, at length escaped into the street, covered with gore; but the scene was too distressing and bloody for description. The child did not survive an hour: his bowels protruded through a wound in the abdomen. The wretched mother lies without hope of recovery.

A Coroner's Inquest has been held upon the body of the infant, and a verdict of "wilful murder" was recorded. The miscreant is secured in the Town Prison, doubly ironed.

He has been married upwards of twelve months to his present wife. About six months back he attempted to murder her with a poker, at which time he inflicted several severe wounds on her skull, for which he was committed; but the wife not being able to appear against him from ill health, he was liberated, on his brother's recognizance that he should keep the peace towards his wife. Ever since, the wife has refused to live with the prisoner, from an apprehension that he would murder her, as he had repeatedly threatened to do so. The unfortunate woman has been for some months (since the birth of her infant) in the workhouse at Dichling, to which parish she belongs. On Sunday evening last she came over to Brighton, to spend a week with her mother, an industrious widow, residing in Woburn-place. On Monday the prisoner was seen lurking about the neighbourhood by the old woman, who inquired of him if he had any thing to say to her, or her daughter, to which he made no reply, but walked away. About two o'clock yesterday the wife went out to call on a woman in the neighbourhood, and immediately after she entered her friend's room, the husband rushed in after her, and commenced putting his diabolical purpose into execution, with a shoemaker's knife, which he had concealed in the sleeve of his jacket. He stabbed his wife in both temples, in the breast, and side; he then stabbed the child in various parts of the body, inflicting seven distinct wounds, two of which were in the abdomen, through which the little innocent's bowels protruded. The last wound was in the child's thigh; the knife passing through the bone, it stuck so fast into it, that, in attempting to pull it out, the handle came off, by which means he was prevented from instantly despatching the wife, who by this time had fallen from loss of blood: there being no weapon in the room, he attempted to complete his horrid design by kicking his victim in the throat and head. At this moment the woman of the house (who was absent at the time the parties entered the room) made her appearance, and on seeing what was going on, cried out "Murder." Mrs. Butt, on hearing the voice, made a supernatural effort, got on her feet, and darted out of the room, with the child in her arms, and ran into a house nearly opposite, the door of which was open, where the poor creature fell almost lifeless; the infant was taken up by a woman who was present, in whose arms it expired in twenty minutes after. Mrs. Burt was conveyed to her mother's, when surgical aid was instantly procured, and the wounds dressed. At present she is despaired of: indeed, it is the opinion of the surgeons that she cannot recover. In the meantime several neighbours, on hearing the cry of murder, rushed into the house, and secured the murderer, who made no resistance. The poor woman, in endeavouring to ward off the blows of the knife from herself and her infant, received innumerable wounds in her hands and arms. Burt is a journeyman shoemaker, and a native of Dichling, about eight miles from this.

MURDER AT WINTON.

EXECUTION OF THE M'KEANDS.

Lancaster, August 21.—At the earliest moment of the dawn of this morning, the great roads leading to this town presented groupes of people hurrying to the place of execution at the Castle, to witness the last moments of these two wretched murderers, and it would appear as if the neighbouring townships had sent forth their entire population, from the dense mass that thronged the leading thoroughfares. By six o'clock, the hills contiguous, and the immense area behind the Castle, St. Mary's Church-yard, and every elevation that commanded a view of the gallows, were thickly occupied, and in many places by clusters of horsemen, who evidently had travelled a considerable distance to be present at the awful example. The fatal engine was erected under the ramparts of the Castle, opposite St. Mary's Church-yard, and was surrounded by the Sheriffs' javelin men bearing halberds.

At six o'clock this morning the two criminals were led to the chapel, and received the sacrament, and remained in prayer for above an hour. Alexander exclaimed, "Oh, God have mercy on me!" almost incessantly. Michael was quite sullen, and seemed scarcely able to stand or walk. A few minutes after seven o'clock they were pinioned, and the Under Sheriff and his officers entered the chapel and demanded the culprits. Mr. Thomas Higgins, the governor, caused the M'Keands to advance to the chapel door, and withdrew a few paces. The procession then proceeded from the chapel to the place of execution, at the exterior of the north-western part of the Castle. Michael walked with a hesitating step, and appeared dreadfully dismayed; Alexander was more collected, and his lips appeared as if moving in silent prayer.

At half-past seven o'clock precisely, a window, which opens on hinges like a door, and which led immediately to the scaffold, opened, and the moment of expiation arrived. No bell tolled, nor was there any other funeral rite to mark the approach of these murderers' death. All was conducted with imposing silence, and not a murmur of pity appeared to escape from the crowd. Every thing being arranged, the caps were drawn over their eyes. The chaplain read a part of the burial service, the drop fell, and the wretched men were launched into eternity. After their bodies had hung the usual time, they were cut down and delivered over to the surgeons for dissection.

A Chancery suit ended with the consent of both parties in the Vice-Chancellor's Court on Tuesday, which had lasted 50

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.
THE CASE OF THE WAKEFIELDS.

The condition of the recognizance entered into by Mr. William Wakefield, was, himself in 2 000l., Mr. Cuthbert in 1,500l., and a subsequent recognizance of Dr. Davis in 500l. All recognizances forfeited at the Summer Assizes are usually returned by the Clerk of the Assize into the Court of Exchequer, in the Michaelmas Term following; and on the Second day after the next Hilary Term, a process will issue to the Sheriff to levy the amount of the recognizance on the principal and bail. If the levy is not made, and it appears so by the return of the Sheriff in the following Term, a writ, called the "strong writ," will then issue, to seize the goods and take the defendant and bail to gaol: nor can they be discharged out of custody, but on production of the writ of habeas corpus, issued from the Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer's Office, by order of the Court of Exchequer.

In the meantime, the defendant may be retaken upon a Judge's warrant, which is bailable before a Judge or Magistrate, and it is the invariable practice (although not expressed in the Judge's warrant) to require the defendant to give the prosecutor reasonable notice of bail; and the condition of the recognizance must be, to appear and plead and try his traverse at the next Assizes, in such sum as any Judge or Magistrate may think fit, under the circumstances, to direct. In the event of the defendant not being taken, the prosecutor may proceed to ordinary against the defendant at the Assizes, or in the Court of King's Bench, if the prosecutor chooses to remove the indictment into that Court by writ of certiorari, which is frequently done to expedite its completion; but even in the Court of King's Bench the outlawry cannot be completed for a considerable time, as the following writs from the Crown-office must be issued—viz. a venire to answer, tested in Michaelmas next, and returnable in Hilary, 1827; the first capias tested in Hilary Term, returnable in Easter, 1827; second capias tested in Easter, returnable in Trinity, 1827; and third capias tested in Trinity, returnable in Michaelmas, 1827; and then writs of capias cum proclamatione et exigent; between the test and return of which two last writs, there must be five County Courts.

The Paris Papers, which have arrived in due course, contain some further intelligence, and of rather an important character, from Portugal. It will be seen, by our extracts from them, that there have been commotions of so serious a character, that three regiments, two of foot and one of horse, have been abolished by a decree of the Portuguese Cortes.

It appears by arrivals in town yesterday, that the effects of the lightning, so visible last night in town, took place within ninety miles of the metropolis nearly about the same time, accompanied with loud thunder, without rain, except in the county miles of London, Dorchester, Worcester, in ge trees were entirely stripped of their leaves, and large branches and arms of many of them were scattered on the road.

EXTRAORDINARY CASE.

An Inquest was taken on Friday last before Thomas Shelton, Esq., Coroner, at St. Thomas's Hospital, Southwark, on the body of Mr. George Black, the Chorus-master of Drury lane.

John P. Imer, constable of the night, going his rounds about two o'clock in the morning of the 27th of June, found the deceased standing at Mr. Kinnatt's door in the Vauxhall-road, in altercation with that gentleman's footman. Witness learnt he had been ringing the bells, and disturbing the family. He refused giving any reasons for so doing, but was conveyed to the watch-house, where a charge was entered against him by the footman. Being gentlemanly in his appearance, he was suffered to sit in the night constable's room. For some minutes he was very quiet; he then got up, seized the fender, and struck the constable a blow on a patrole, who was sitting by the door, exclaimed, "By God, I'll murder you." He was with difficulty secured, and placed in the lock-up cell, where, shortly after, he was discovered with his throat cut. There was no one confined with him, and no doubt, therefore remained that the deceased committed the act himself. The man that he attacked was much injured by the blows. The deceased was conveyed to this hospital. By direction of the Magistrate of Union Hall, the circumstances were advertised in the daily papers, and a verbal notice was also personally left at the watch-house, and wished to obtain possession of his keys; but as they would not give their names or residences, witness refused giving them up. All they could learn of the deceased was, that he lodged at 38, Southampton-street, Strand. The persons who called were very gentlemanly in appearance: they said they wanted the keys to get at some manuscript music.

A Surgeon of the hospital said, that for several days after he was admitted there, such was the reserve of the persons who called upon him that they could not learn his name, neither would he tell it himself. It was at last only by accident that they discovered his name to be Black, and that he was Chorus-master at Drury-lane. His language and manners showed him to be a man of considerable attainments. He had been found, while in the hospital, to sue that Mr. Thomas Cooke, the Musical Professor, as his particular friend, and to regret his absence from the country. However, no one called upon him. He was understood to have no relations in London.

This being the whole of the evidence, the Jury unanimously returned a verdict of Insanity.

FRIDAY'S GAZETTE.

C. C. WRIGHT, Heder-row, Islington, oilman.—J. MOSELEY, Rainbow Coffee-house, King-street, Covent-garden, victualler.

BANKRUPTCY ENLARGED.

W. COLLINGS, and T. MAINGY, Bishopsgate-street Within, merchants.

BANKRUPTCY SUPERSEDED.

W. CRUMB, jun., Shoreham, Sussex, ironmonger.—J. HUNT & WINCH and W. HUNT, jun. Stewart's-buildings, Batter-as-rails, cu lers.—And MORGANS, late Bristol, jewellers.—Wm. Bristol, jewellers.—d. HINDS, Soodate, Lancashire, damel-manufacturer.

BANKRUPTS.

T. NAYLOR and G. ELLIS, Kesborough, Yorkshire, fancy-silk-manufacturers.—T. ANDREWS and T. R. ANDREWS, Tavistock-place, St. Pancras, oil-merchants.—J. LEVY and M. JOSEPHS, Aldgate, dealers.—Goodma's nells, merchants.—J. HOLMES and F. E. EDWARDS, Derby, bookse lers.—J. MARTIN, Runcorn, Cheshire, ship-car enter.—T. SPENCER, Burnley, Lancashire, cotton-spinner.—J. BIRK, Bread-street, mere a t.—W. DENNY, La ender, haberdasher.—I. WILLIAMS, Sidmouth, Devonshire, wine-merchant.—Thomas

COMPLETE SET of the AGE NEWSPAPER,—To be SOLD, up to last Sunday for EIGHT GUINEAS.—Apply to CLERK SMITH, Public Circulating Library, 36, St. James's-street, corner of Jermyn-street.

BOWAY WALL-FLOWER SNUFF, to be had only of GEORGE EDLIN, Snuff-manufacturer, No. 6, Aldgate, corner of the Saracen's Head Inn.

TO SPORTSMEN.—A handsome high-bed staunch POINTER for SALE. This valuable Dog is four years old, one of the breed of the noted Colonel Thornville Pointers, was shot over about two last seasons by an old sportsman, a crack shot, warranted steady to dog and bird.—Enquire at 39, Stamford-street, Blackfriars, where the Dog may be seen.

TURKEY COFFEE of the FINEST QUALITY, at the following reduced prices:—Raw, 2s. 6d. per lb.—Roasted, 3s. per lb. The Public are respectfully informed, that Government having reduced the duty on Turkey Coffee, the Proprietor has the satisfaction of offering the above-mentioned reduced prices, warranted of the finest quality, at John Marshall and Company's Tea and Coffee-Warehouse, No. 12, South-molton-street, Strand.

S. SPILSBURY'S Drops are remarkably efficacious in relieving disorders which arise from obstructed perspiration, indigestion, or impurities of the blood:—In a small bottle of the Medicine is sufficient for a trial of its virtues in cases of scurvy, leprosy, evil, abscesses, ulcers, and rheumatic gout. Sold at 15, Soho-square; in bottles, at 6s.; 11s. 6d.; and 22s. Sold likewise by Messrs. Sutton, Bow Church-yard; Newbury and Edwards, St. Paul's; Butler's, Cheapside; Barclay and Co., Fleet Market; and all respectable Druggists.

AMIO CARO AMICO.

Quell, my friend, those pinings vain;
Try the wisdom of CHAMPAGNE—
Sunny draught!—a cordial clear,
Radiant as ITHURIEL'S spear,
And, like that potential lance,
Gifted, at a touch, to chase—
From the heart's o'ercloyed ray,
To scare the DEMI-MONDE away!

BENEDETTO

CHARLES WRIGHT'S Champagne—Opera Colonnade—63s. 72s. and 84s. per dozen.

SYSTEMS, STATES, and MEN, have their RISE, their ZENITH, and DECLINE. The only System ever known to reach the Zenith of Greatness in the last hour of its existence, is the State Lottery of England; which is doomed by Parliament to expire for ever on the 5th day of January next. The only Lottery that ever attained a greater display of Sterling Capital than was ever known before, having no less than SIX magnificent Prizes of 20,000*l.* each, and the Drawing of the Lottery in the Hall of the Bank. The whole to be decided in One Day, Wednesday, 18th October, when all Lotteries end for ever.

Tickets and Shares are selling by CARROLL, Contractor, 19, Cornhill; 7, Charing-Cross; and 26, Oxford Street; who sold within a short period, Four Prizes of 20,000*l.* and upwards—and other Capitals in former Lotteries, preceding a MILLION STERLING!

WINES, RETAIL and WHOLESALE.—Cate de L'Europe, No. 9, Hay Market, two doors above the Theatre Royal. This splendid Room, which has been fitted up in the most elegant and costly manner, is opened for the reception of the Public, for the consumption and sale of every description of European wines, both bottled and from the wood; the entire stock of which, selected with the greatest judgment and liberality, and no expense has been spared to render the whole worthy of patronage. The Morning, Evening, and Foreign Journals, with the popular Periodicals and Pamphlets, are provided.

☞ To LET, a capital House and Shop, enquire as above.

THE LONDON and WESTMINSTER WINE and SPIRIT COMPANY, No. 16, STRAND, opposite St. Martin's Church, have constantly on Sale,

	Per Dozen.		Per Dozen.
Port, Vintage 1820	27s to 30s	Bucellas	42s to 48
Ditto, Crusted	24s to 28s	Ditto, Old	42s to 48
Ditto, 5 to 8 years in bottle	48s to 56s	Ditto, Lachrima Margaux	72s to 96s
Sherry, Pale and Brown	27s to 36s	Sparkling Champagne	72s to 84
Ditto, Amontillado	42s to 48s	Ditto, Sparkling and Creaming, of the
Cape, from	16s to 24s	first quality	90s to 96s
Ditto, Old Ditto	30s to 36s	Hock, of the finest quality	72s to 84
Ditto, East India	48s to 60s	Chablis	50s to 63
Penerille, Lisbon, Vidonia,		Hermitage, Red and White	72s to 84
and Mountain	20s to 36s	Moselle Sauterne, &c.	30s to 42

Old Tom, Jamaica Rum, Cognac Brandy, Fern-tosh, &c. per imperial measure at reduced prices. Country Orders, Cash, or Bankers' Checks.

☞ All Goods must be paid for on or before delivery.

Letters post paid, to be addressed William Godfree and Co. No. 16, Strand.

THE BRITISH SPECIFIC, for re-producing and promoting the GROWTH of HAIR.—The principle of its operation is to cool and cleanse the scalp, to remove all scurf, and to give the follow ng examination:—one in appearance at first sight "Burgess's Essence of Anchovies;" others, "Burgis's," and many others, "JOHN BURGESS." Now BURGESS and SON having for many years honoured with such distinguished approbation, feel every sentiment of respect towards the public, and earnestly solicit them to examine carefully what they require before they receive any article in their make, which they hope will prevent many disappointments.

Burgess-New Sauce for general purposes having given such great satisfaction, continues to be prepared by BURGESS and SON, and received as a most useful and convenient sauce will keep good in all climates.

Warehouse, 107, Strand, corner of the Savoy Steps.—The Orig nal Fish-Sauce Warehouse.

TO FAMILIES TRAVELLING, PROMENADING, and ENJOYING AQUATIC EXCURSIONS, &c. &c. are respectfully recommended the following Delicate Articles, which at this season of the Year are indispensable for the preservation of the Complexion:

LOWLAND'S KALYDOR FOR THE COMPLEXION.

An inestimable preparation, possessing the most delightful odour, and in its thoroughly exterminating Brandons, Tan, Pimp es, Fre kles, Redness, and all Cutaneous Imperfections; producing a delicate White Skin, and a Juvenile and Blooming appearance, which is so prepared by long experience as a most useful and convenient sauce will keep good in all climates.

Warehouse, 107, Strand, corner of the Savoy Steps.—The Orig nal Fish-Sauce Warehouse.

TO FAMILIES TRAVELLING, PROMENADING, and ENJOYING AQUATIC EXCURSIONS, &c. &c. are respectfully recommended the following Delicate Articles, which at this season of the Year are indispensable for the preservation of the Complexion:

ROWLAND'S KALYDOR FOR THE COMPLEXION.

An inestimable preparation, possessing the most delightful odour, and in its thoroughly exterminating Brandons, Tan, Pimp es, Fre kles, Redness, and all Cutaneous Imperfections; producing a delicate White Skin, and a Juvenile and Blooming appearance, which is so prepared by long experience as a most useful and convenient sauce will keep good in all climates.

Promenading, or enjoying Aquatic ex-ursions, is immediately allays the smarting or painful sy mptoms, producing a delightful coolness, and a soothing sensation, leaves the Skin smooth and pleasant. Price 4 . 6d. and 8s. 6d. per ty included.

Observe the Hiroglyphic and Signature of Rowland and Son, 20, Hatton-garden, on the Genuine Kalydor, without which none is genuine.

ROWLAND'S ODONTO, or Pearl Dentifrice, is the first production of the age, and is Original and Genuine. It possesses the most wonderful and astonishing effects in rendering the teeth beautifully pearl white, preserves the gums from scurvy, rendering them firm and healthy, and gives a delightful fragrance to the breath. Price 2s. 9d. per box.

A. ROWLAND and SON, 20, HATTON GARDEN, Have also for sale, Rowland's Macassar Oil, (neither scented; Mr. Rowland, to the end of the year, 57, Mr. Delerv x, 158, D. II gre, 35, Newstree; Bayley and Sons, 24, Cornhill; Lloyd Square; Mr. Jones, 59, Oxford-street; Mr. Low, 33d, Prust, 238, Strand; Chemist, 4, Cheapside; Barclay and Son s, 95, Fleet Market; Mr. 6, Charing-cross; Mr. Sanger, Bond-street; Mr. 46, 6, and Co. Newberry, St. Paul's Church-yard; Mr. Burgess, in the double St. Mr. Bartholomew-close; Messrs. Evans, Long-lane; Mr. Dunn, 4 atton-Garden; and all respectable Medicine Vendors, &c.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH.—MR. WM. BEACALL and Mr. ROSE, Surgeon Dentists, 13, Newman-street, Oxford-street, having with unremitting diligence long made the Science of ART-FICIAL TEETH, where mechanical contrivance is requisite, their peculiar study, continues to supply the loss of Teeth, with a Set of Natural Artificial, in a superior manner, without the least pain, from a single Tooth to a complete Set, at little more than one-half the usual charges. Teeth cleaned if required disengaged, and rendered white and beautiful, without pain or injury to the enamel. Extracting, Stopping, and every operation on the Teeth and Gums.—Attendance at home from Ten till Four.

J. PERRING, of No. 413, Strand, two doors from the Adelphi Theatre, offers to the public the Choicest Teas at less than with the trade, and undersells for Sale alone, but warranted of the best materials, such as will do the same credit and give more general satisfaction than any other recommended. The Black and Scented Congous, at 3s. 4d. per lb. are of a small rough leaf Ready Money, but suits the economy of both parties. The Proprietor of this establishment has studied for many years to unite both principles, with safe fortune to him self, and a blessing to the public.

Among the many sources of trade, perhaps this is not the worst at present to the purchaser of Our Hat will not be worn, and the Hatter will not be able to do, as are respectfully solicited to favour the Proprietor with a call. The following priced Hats are confidently recommended to the notice of the Economical:

Good Fine Rich Silk Hats in a variety of shapes, at ..... 16s.

Perring's Patent Double-edged Hats, having an extra quantity of Nap on the part of the brim most exposed to wear, ... 17s.

Good Light Water Proof Beaver Hats, Drab and Black ..... 20s. 25s. 30s.

An extensive assortment of Youths' and Boys' Hats, Seal, Fur, and Cloth Caps, Velvet Riding Caps, Hats and Bonnets, Gentlemen's Dress and Travelling Caps in great variety. Hats covered with Silk and made double-edged for 12s.

NEW EDITION, THE TENTH, ENLARGED,

With Observations on the Danger of trusting to Nostrums, as an Internal Remedy for the Cure of Stricture, illustrated by Cases. Price 2s.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS on STRICTURES of the URETHRA and RECTUM, recommending an improved system for their Treatment and Radical Cure, founded on the experience of numerous remarkable and highly important cases, in some of which, Strictures of from three to twenty years standing have been completely cured in a few weeks, and its superiority therefore fully established over every other method hitherto practised. By C. B. COURTENAY, M.D. To which are added Observations and Practical Comments on the Nature, Seat, and Symptoms of Nervous Affections, as connected by Self Abuse, or the exercise of which a cause of, or to assist, the result of Stricture, unsuccessful practice, and at once speedy, and effectual, is adopted by the Author.

Printed for the Author, Robert-street, Adelphi; and published and sold by Sherwood, Gilbert, and Piper, Paternoster-row; Longman, Rees, Orme, Brown, and Chapell, B. yal Exchange; March 11th, Oxford-street; Walker, 29 Hirh Holborn; Chapell, 91, Pall Mall; Sutherland, 9, Carlton-street, Edinburgh; and may be had of all Bookse lers.

☞ We earnestly recommend the cases related by Dr. Courtenay to the perusal of such of our readers as are afflicted with the complaints which the Author has treated of, subject of these cases having been restored to health by means of the recovery of perfect health from states which were considered hopeless by Practitioners of eminent talent and long standing.—Age. We cheerfully give the highest opinion of Dr. Courtenay's professional skill, and congratulate him on his successful and judicious application to these severe and often fatal diseases.—Independent Whig.

SWAN WITH TWO NECKS, LAD-LANE, GENERAL COACH OFFICE,

Dover, Deal, Ramsgate, Margate, and Canterbury Patent Coaches Daily Dispatch.

THE following ROYAL MAILS depart from the above Inn every evening at half-past Seven Sundays excepted: Every Sunday evening at Seven.—BATH and EXETER, through Devizes. Taunt n, and Collumpton.—BIRMINGHAM, through Uxbridge, Stony Stratford, and Coventry.—BRISTOL, through Reading, Marlborough, and Chippenham.—CARLISLE and EDINBURGH through Chorley, and Garstang.—CHESTER, through Dudley, Kidderminster, Worcester, Tewkesbury, Gloucester, Ross, Blandford, and Dorchester.—FALMOUTH ROYAL MAIL.—HOLYHEAD, through Oxford, Shrewsbury, Wrexham, and Conway.—LIVERPOOL, through Birmingham, Dudley, and Stourbridge.—LIVERPOOL, through Dunchurch, Newcastle, and Congleton.—MANCHESTER, through Northampton, Coventry, and Macclesfield.—NORWICH, through Chelmsford, Colchester, and Ipswich.—PORTSMOUTH ROYAL MAIL.

The following Post Coaches start regularly at the time spe ified.

MORNING COACHES.—BIRMINGHAM and HOLYHEAD, the Eclipse, through Coventry, at a quarter before 8. Passengers by this Conveyance have the privilege of resting one night on the road, and proceeding by any Coach the next day, in addition al expense.—BRIGHTON Light Safety Coach, through Reigate, at 9.—Post 4s. Light Coach through Kingston, Guildford, and Godalming, at 8.—HOLYHEAD Light Coach through Shrewsbury, quarter before 8.—LEICESTER Light Post Coach, through Northampton, at half-past 6.—NORWICH New Safety Coach (in 11 hours) through Newmarket, at half-past 8.—OXFORD Times, every Morning at half-past 6.—SOUTHAMPTON Light Coach every Morning at half-past 8 o'clock.—Tuesday and Friday at half-past 6.—SOUTH WALES and Bristol Jersey Steam Packets.—WEYMOUTH and DORCHESTER (in 15 hours), at 5.—WINDSOR and ETON, at 7.

AFTERNOON COACHES.—BIRMINGHAM, the Balloon, through Stony Stratford, at half-past five.—BRISTOL, the Regent, through Reading, a quarter before four.—CARLISLE, GLASGOW, and EDINBURGH, through Manchester, at half-past four.—CHELTENHAM, the New Regent, at one.—This is an easy conveyance have the opportunity of resting one night on the road, without additional expense.—EXETER and PLYMOUTH, the Quick Two (in 24 hours), through Basingstoke Tally-ho! (in 5 hours,) quarter past two.—COVENTRY, Gamble Coach, a quarter before six.—DERBY the Regulator, (in 18 hours) through Loughborough, at half-past two.—HEREFORD, the Royal Mail, at one.—EXETER, 4-in-side Coach, through Basingstoke and Honiton, at two.—BIRMINGHAM and GLASGOW through Newcastle, at half-past four.—HOLYHEAD, the Mail, through Oxford, Shrewsbury, and Chester, at half-past four.—LIVERPOOL, the Royal Alfred, (in 26 hours) at half-past four.—MANCHESTER, Royal Defiance (in 27 hours) through Northampton, at half-past four.—MANCHESTER, Telegraph, through Cross and Bridgewater, at four at reduced fares.—TENBY, MILFORD, and PEMBROKE, through Gloucester, Monmouth, Abergavenny, Merthyr, and Llanelly.—WINDSOR and ETON, at 4.

CHESTER and PARKGATE, every Morning at a quarter before eight, and every Afternoon at a quarter before four, from the Golden Cross, by way of Dover, every Morning, at seven, and at half-past six in the Evening.

N. B.—Parcels and Luggage conveyed daily to all parts of the North and to every City and manufacturing Town in England.

W. WATERHOUSE & Co. Proprietors.

NOTICE.—No Parcel, or Passenger's Luggage, will be accounted for above the value of FIVE POUNDS, unless entered as such and paid for accordingly.

BIRTHS.—On the 14th inst. at Ladbroke, Lady Charlotte Palmer, of a son.—On the 28th inst. at Brighton, the Lady of Wm. Thomas Brande, Esq. of a daughter.—On Tuesday, at her house in South Audley-street, the Excellency Archbishopess Capella, of a daughter.—On the 24th inst. at her father's house, King's-row, Pimlico, Mrs. Chas. es Meredyth, of a daughter.—On Thursday, the 24th inst. at Rodney-house, Clifton, the Lady of John Morrill, Esq. of a da ughter.—On the 22d instant, at Hampstead, Mrs. J. C. Cameron, of a son.—On the 18th instant, in Norfolk-street, the Baroness Rolpack, of a daughter.

MARRIED.—On the 24th inst. Mr. William Mellor, of Beaufort-terrace, King's-road, to Miss Hollins, of Great Pulteney-street, St. James's.—On the same day, Mr. J. Kellner, of Bedford-street, Bedford-square, to Miss Charlotte Meier, of Paulton-street, Havanket.—At Yeovil, on the 21st inst., Major Hall, of the 3d Dragoon Guards, to Elizabeth Augusta, only child of Sir Thomas Ha-hin, Esq. of Newton-house.—On the 12th inst. at St. Nicholas, Glamorganshire, John Augustus, only son of the Right Hon. John Sullivan, of Richings-lodge, Bucks, to Jane, youngest daughter of Admiral Sir Charles Tyler, K.C.B., of Corfield, in that county.—On the 8th inst., Mr. W. B. Boddy, surgeon, of Bedford-row, to Miss Worth, youngest son of George Boddy, Esq. of his Majesty's Dock Yard, Woolwich, to Sarah Hart Hill, only daughter of the late George Downe, Esq. of the former place.—On Tuesday, at Ashdown, Henry Capt. Macdonald (Royal Navy), of Macdonald, to Elizabeth Anne Rebecca, relict of Charles Sheldon Timins, Esq. of Oriel Lodge, Cheltenham.—On the 13th inst. Capt. Henry H. Mitchell, R.N. to Harriet Louisa, youngest daughter of the late Ralph Key, Esq.—On the 19th inst., at St. Peter's, Thanet, Edward Amory, Esq. of Thorngrton-street, to Anne, second daughter of Joseph Ashton, Esq. of Tiverton.

DIED.—August 29th, at her house in Montague-street, Portman-square, Mr. Chamber, in the 81st year of her age, only sister of the late Sir Thomas Chambers.—August 28th, at 42, Upper Gower-street, Bedford-square, after a long and painful illness, Mrs. Elizabeth Hall, relict of the late Hon. Colonel George Napier, and daughter of Captain Hall, and sister of Richmond and Basil Hall, aged 53 years.—On the 22d inst. at the house of Robert Lemon, Esq. Deputy Keeper of his Majesty's State Papers.—On the 19th instant, in Hamilto -place, Kennington, David Nesbett, late of the Grove, Surrey, aged 81.—On the 18th inst. at Clapham-rise, Mr. Robert Hurfield, of Duke-street, Portland place, aged 63.—On the 21st inst. at Shooter's-hill, Kent, Elizabeth, relict of the late General Sir Thomas Bloomfield, bart., in the 1st year of her age.—On the 21st inst. at No. 14, Cannon-street, Mr. Pe er Morrison, of the firm of Messrs. Morrison and Co., Painters.—On the 21st inst., Mr. Joseph Hart, of Chatham-place, Blackfriars, aged 48.—On the 18th inst. John Lister, Esq. of Heme-hill.—At Paddington-green, on the 13th inst. aged 64, Sarah, relict of Wm. Hart, late Vicar of Hambledon, Bucks, and of Haswell, Harts.—In the 18th inst. at Clapham-rise, T. Payne, Esq. aged 87.

London: Printed & Published by H. D. RICHARDS, at 24, Strand, corner of Catherine-street.

THE AGE.

"THE VERY AGE AND BODY OF THE TIME."

VOL. II. No. 69. SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 3, 1826. Price 7d.

THEATRE ROYAL, HAYMARKET.—To MORROW Evening, Paul Pry, with Thirteen in the Dozen, and the Epaulette; Victor, Mad. Vestris.—Tuesday, Sweethearts and Wives; Laura, Madamo Vestris; with Twixt the Cup and the Lip; and Midas; Midas, Mr. W. Farren, Apollo Madame Vestris.—Wednesday, Paul Pry, with Poor Relations, and a Roland for an Oliver.—Thursday, The Lord of the Manor, Annette, Mad. Vestris; Moll Flagon, Mr. Liston.—Friday, Paul Pry, with other entertainments.

THEATRE ROYAL, ENGLISH OPERA HOUSE.—To-morrow, Monday, Mr. Mathews will perform in the new farce, Before Breakfast, and in Jonathan in England, with How to Die for Love.—Tuesday, Mr. Mathews will perform in the New Farce, and in Hit or Miss, with Is he Jealous.—Wednesday, The Oracle; after which Mr. T. P. Cooke will make his first appearance this Season, and perform in the Brewsupstairs.—Thursday, Mr. Mathews will perform in the new farce, and in the Bashful Man, with Two Words.—Friday, The Oracle, with other entertainments.

LAST WEEK BUT TWO.

ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE, (ASTLEY'S,) Westminster-bridge. Monday, Sept. 4, and five following evenings, at a quarter past six precisely, the Siege of Missolonghi, or the Massacre of the Greeks. Equestrianism and Feats in the Circle. The Grand Manœuvres of the Chinese Cavalry. Madam Ducrow will go through several Equestrian Exercises on a Single Horse; and Mr. Woolford will execute a remarkable act of horsemanship without saddle or bridle. HerrCline, the celebrated German Artist, on the Elastic Cord. The Entertainments to conclude with the last new Burletta of Shooter's Hill, on the 1st of September.

The Box-office is open daily from 11 till 4.

BATTLE OF POICTIERS.—Mr. BULLOCK, respectfully announces that his PANSTEREOMACHIA ; or, Model of the celebrated Battle of Poictiers, is NOW OPEN at No. 22, Regent-street. This unique and curious Exhibition, representing the contending armies of France and England, in the year 1356, consisting of upwards of 1,500 figures, beautifully modelled, with the strictest regard to historical truth, and the most accurate attention to the chivalry, heraldry, and costume, of the period to which it relates, which, during the last fifteen years, towards the completion and improvements, present a grand and interesting display of British Military Achievement.—Admittance 1s.

DIORAMA, REGENT'S PARK.—The two new Pictures, exhibiting, are The Interior of Rosslyn Chapel, painted by Mons. Daguerre, and a View of the City of Rouen, taken from Mount St. Catherine, painted by Mons. Bouton, with various effect of light and shade, producing the most striking and sublime scenes. Open daily from 11 till 4 o'clock.

N. B. Fine weather is not essential for seeing the present Views, as the appearance of sunshine is produced with equal effect on the most cloudy day.—Dimension of each picture, 70 feet by 50.

For Measurement Goods only.

FOR the ISLE of FRANCE direct, the fine, new, first class Ship, ISABELLA, John Davison, Commander. Burthen 225 Tons. Lying at Deptford. For Freight or Passage apply to Messrs. Clarke and Co., 72, Gracechurch-street; or to Buckles, Bagster, and Buchanan, 33, Mark-lane.

To follow the Tiger,

FOR VAN DIEMEN'S LAND and NEW SOUTH WALES, the beautiful, new first class Brig, LION, Alexander Kerr, (late of the William Shand,) Commander. Burthen 300 Tons. Lying in the London Dock. Has excellent accommodations for Passengers. For Freight or Passage apply to Buckles, Bagster, and Buchanan, 33, Mark-lane.

To sail from Gravesend on the 10th of September, has room for three Passengers only (under engagement with the Hon. East India Company),

FOR CALCUTTA, with liberty to land Passengers at MADRAS, the fine, new, first class Ship, Thetis, Thomas Lyster, Commander. Burthen 700 Tons. Lying in the City Canal. Apply to Messrs. Gazett, Farquhar, Crawford & Co., 71, Old Broad-street; to Capt. Blyth, at the Jerusalem Coffee-House; or to Buckles, Bagster, and Buchanan, 33, Mark-lane.

TO FAMILIES FURNISHING, TAVERN-KEEPERS, SCHOOL-MASTERS, and the Public in general.—The cheapest feather, feather-bed, and mattress warehouse in the kingdom, is TIBBATTS'S, No. 46, High Holborn, three doors Chancery-lane, for ready cash.

Good poultry feathers only	0s. 10d.	per lb.
Best dito, not to be surpassed	1	do.
Excellent grey goose feathers, well dressed	1	do.
Very best dito, fit for any purpose	2	do.
Good white goose feathers	2	do.
Capital ditto, second quality	2	do.
Very best ditto, nearly half down	3	do.

A single bed, 40s.

Ticks sold at prime cost to purchasers of feathers.

Persons having their feather beds cleaned or filled at the above prices; mattresses remade, altered, or taken in exchange; feather beds cleaned and dressed.

W. T. pledges himself to effectually destroy moth or other vermin in beds and mattresses, by a method peculiar to himself.

Horse-hair, wool, and feathers, seasoned so as to remain sweet in any climate.

THE East India Company's Sale of TEAS, having just closed, WHITRIDGE & Co.'91, Cheapside, have again made extensive Purchases of the choicest that could be procured, which they are now Selling to the Public at the following Prices:

A LIST OF PRICES AS UNDER.

	s.	d.		s.	d.
Bohea	3	2	Green, from	5	6
Congou	4	8	Ditto	6	6
Good ditto	5	0	Fine ditto	7	0
Strong ditto	5	6	Finest ditto	8	0
Black leaf ditto	5	8	Good ditto	9	0
Fine ditto	6	0	Superior ditto	10	0
Superior ditto	6	4	Finest ditto	12	0
Pekoe flavour	6	8	Gunpowder	11	0
Fine Souchong	7	0	Finest ditto	14	0

PRIME MIXED TEA, 6s.

Jamaica Coffee	1	6	Fine Berbice, 2s. 4d. to 2 8
Dutch ditto	1	0	Turkey	1	4

Fine Trinidad Cocoa, 2s.

DISTRESS in SPITALFIELDS.—At a MEETING of the COMMITTEE, holden in the Vestry-room of Christ Church, Spitalfields, August 28, 1826,

The Rev. RICHARD HARVEY in the Chair;

The Committee who have been entrusted with the distribution of the money subscribed for the relief of the distressed weavers in Spitalfields, have now the painful task of announcing to the Public, that the funds placed at their disposal are almost exhausted, and the distress, which they were intended to relieve, is now fast increasing.

In the course of the last week many persons have lost their employ, and have applied at the Office for assistance; and not a few cases have been sent by those very gentlemen, who originally promised to relieve that part of the distress in Spitalfields is imaginary.

The Committee are not able to inquire for themselves, and they will find that there are nearly 8,000 weavers out of employment, and unable, on any terms, to obtain it. They will find that in consequence of the distressed state of the trade, many more have received notice, that when the work they now have is concluded, they can receive no more at present.

Under these circumstances the Committee are aware that their funds will be speedily replenished, as, if they are not, the relief must be discontinued early in the ensuing week, and nearly 8,000 fellow-creatures lose all possible means of subsistence.

Amount distributed last week	£346 5 6
Amount received as above	270 10 0
Amount before advertised	27,168 10 5
John Scott, Esq. New Broad-street, by the Rev. R. Harvey	£20 0
By Messrs. Lees and Co.
John Henderson, Esq. Montague-street	£10 0
By Messrs. Hoare
M. A. C	10 0
By Messrs. Drummond & Co.
A. B.	10 0

C. W. T. G. 10 10

Subscriptions are received by the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor; Wm. Heale Esq. Woodstreet, Spitalfields; and by all the Bankers.

The Committee continue to sit in the Vestry-room, Spitalfields, on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, at Two o'clock.

J. D. KINCAID, Sec.

Just published by CLEMENTI & Co. 25, Cheapside.

HOLT'S EASY RONDOS and AIRS, with Variations for the Piano-forte—second Series, Nos. 13 to 24 ; each 2s.

13. La Garde Imperiale.	19. La Masquerade.
14. Le Belvidere.	20. La Guirlande.
15. L'Amour filial.	21. Le depart pour la guerre.
16. La Reconnoissance.	22. La Societe agreeable.
17. La Dance.	23. La Fulre.
18. Les Montagnes Russes.	24. Isabel, with variations.

Where may be had, First Series, Nos. 1 to 12, each 2s.

The above Rondos and Airs, with Vars. from their easy and pleasing nature, are particularly adapted for the use of young beginners.

INTERRUPTED SACRIFICE.—NEW MUSIC.—Just published, the Overture, as Performed at the Theatre Royal Drury Lane, in Winter's Bas Unterbrochene Opferfest, arranged in 4 books, Flute ad. lib., by J. F. Burrowes, each 4s.

Ditto, in 4 books, by ditto, as Duets, each 4s.

FAUST.—The Airs, in 3 books, from Spohr's celebrated Opera, by J. F. Burrowes, each 4s.

LA DAME BLANCHE.—The Airs, in 2 books, Flute ad. lib., by A.C. Wintcombe, each 4s.

The Overture to ditto, Flute ad. lib., each 3s.

The Airs, in 2 books, as Duets, each 4s.

LARGO AL FACTOTUM, as a Duet, each 3s.

Published by PAINE and HOPKINS, 69, Cornhill.

NEW FLUTE MUSIC. — WINTER'S INTERRUPTED SACRIFICE, as Solos, in Three Books, by Raphael Dreapler, each 3s.

Boieldieu's La Dame Blanche, in two books, by ditto, each 3s.

Mozart's Overture Der Freischutz, with variations, by P. Crust, 5s.

11 Crociato in Egitto (one or two flutes), in two books, by C. N. Weiss, each 3s.

Duets for Two Flutes.

Three grand Concertantes, dedicated to E. Rudall, Esq. (10th set), Op. 67, Three ditto, dedicated to J. Crape, Esq. Chas. Nicholson, 7s. 6d.

Flute and Piano Forte.

Va gia varisanti, from 11 Crociato in Egitto, L'alma delusa, from Ricelardo, by C. N. Weiss, 3s.

Enterpe's Gifts.

No. 1. Grand Fantasia on two themes, from Der Freischutz, Op. 77, T. Berbriguier, 4s.

2. Original Theme, with variations, Op. 65, R. Dressler, 3s. 6d.

3. Grand Fantasia on Themes, from Il Barbiere di Seviglia, Op. 17, by Eugene Walckiers, 4s.

4. Fantasia, dedicated to Sir George Smart, Op. 46, by A. B. Farstenan, 3s.

Two Flutes and Piano-forte.

Four favourite Airs from the Interrupted Sacrifice, &c. by W. Bark, 5s.

Theme from Op. 50, by T. Berbriguier, 3s. 6d.

Three Flutes.

Grand Trio for Three Flutes, concertante, dedicated to the Amateurs of the Flute, Op. 96, by C. N. Weiss, 5s.

Ditto, dedicated to his Brother, Op. 102, by ditto, 5s.

Ditto, dedicated to J. Winn, Esq. Op. 61, by R. Dressler, 6s.

Published by PAINE and HOPKINS, 69, Cornhill.

NEW ITALIAN SONGS, &c.

La Speranza	Rovedino	1 6
Langrid'amore	Millornedi	1 6
Grazie agl'Inganni	Ditto	1 6
Bel pianer (Duet)	Ditto	1 6
La Partenza (Canzonetta)	Ciarchellini	2 6
Se tu M'ami (ditto)	Segnolotti	1 6
Varj effetti d'amor (Cherry Trio)	Horn	1 6
Ah quando torni al core (Air, "Bonnie wee wife")	Mrs. Miles	1 6

Three familiar Duets, viz. "Dolce del anima," "Deh Pieta," and "Amor mio bene," arranged with an accompaniment for the Pianoforte and Guitar. Sola | 3 6

Mlle Sessarini's Recitative, the celebrated Duet, with Italian and English words Rossini | 2 0

The Beauties of Il Crociato in Egitto, with Italian and English words Mayerbeer | 15 0

Published by J. WILLIS & CO. Royal Musical Repository, 55, St. James's-street, opposite Jermyn-street; London, and 7, Westmoreland-street, Dublin, where may be found every variety of Grand, Cabinet, Cottage, Square, and Circular Pianofortes, Harps, &c. by the most eminent makers, at the lowest manufacturers prices.

NEW MUSIC.—Published by GOULDING and D'ALMAINE, 20, Soho-square.

PIANOFORTE.

Bishop's Air "Are you angry, Mother?" varied by G. Rialfmark, price	3 0
"Welcome, my Native Mountain," ditto	2 6
"My Arahy, my noble Steed," T. A. Rawlings	2 6
"Are you angry, Mother?" ditto	2 6

Flowers of Savoy (Les Fleurs de Savoy), No. 1, by T. Valentine 2 0

Wluter's, "Opfe(test" (The Oracle) Book I. as duets, by I. F. Burrowes. 4 0

Bishop's, "Aladdin," for Pianoforte and Flute, as duets by ditto, each 4 0

Meyer's "Medea in Corinto," for Pianoforte, by C. Dumon, in books 4 0

VOCAL

"Buy a Broom!" sung by Miss Love, at Vauxhall, composed by H. R. Bishop 2 0

"A. B. C." comic duet, sung by Miss Love and Signor de Begnis, at Vauxhall, composed by I. Parry 2 0

"The Youth of the Valley," sung by Mr. Sinclair, at Vauxhall, by ditto 2 0

"Blame me not my gentle Laddie, sung by Miss Travis, ditto ditto 2 0

"Fair one! with love o'erflowing," ditto ditto 2 0

"The Bonny Lassie," ditto ditto 2 0

A Selection of Scotch Airs, by Bishop, Horn, Stevenson, &c. &c. arranged with an Accompaniment for the Spanish Guitar, by C. M. Sola.

☞ The admired Opera of "Medea in Corinto" is arranged for the Harp and Pianoforte, and for the Harp by C. C. Nichols.

THE PROPRIETORS of the ROYAL HARMONIC INSTITUTION, beg most respectfully to acquaint the Public, that the only correct copies of the Opera now performing at the English Opera House, called "THE ORACLE," are published by them, and that all other copies are spurious and an innovation of their rights.

Argyll Rooms, 246, Regent-street.

NEW MUSIC.—Just published at the ROYAL HARMONIC INSTITUTION, Argyll Rooms, 246, Regent-street.

T e Songs, Duets, &c. in the Oracle, or the Interrupted Sacrifice, composed by Winter, newly arranged by Wm. Hawes.

Overture	2 6
The rose drawn bath driven	Chorus
When battles conch is sounding	Sung by Mr. Atkins 2 0
The triumph is resounded	Do Mr. Thorn 2 0
We Maidens mark me	Do Miss Goward 1 6
All hail to the God of our Fathers	Chorus
Now by love and peace invited	Seifert and Chorus
Oh when thine eye is throwing	Duet Miss Paton and Saplo 2 6
Thy mandate I obey	Sung by Mr. Phillips 2 0
There was a time ere sorrow	Do. Miss Paton 2 6
Between my hopes and fears suspended, Duet, by Miss Paton and Phillips 2 6
When my pulses throb and beat	Sung by Mr. Phillips 2 0
How the plaguing varlet teases	Do. Miss Goward and Thorn 2 6
We hail the Lords of Light	Finale, 1st Act 10 0

Tho' we all can feel thy sorrow Quartett and Chorus

In what sad hour Trio

Oh! what the thought is frightful Duet

Hast never mark'd the flower Song, Miss Boden 1 6

The Maid who's wish is slumber Quartett 2 6

The Gloomy terrors of the grave Scena, Mr. Sauzo 2 6

Farewell, yet not for ever Quartett

The evening shades descending Finale 10 0

Burrowe's Selection of Airs from Weber's Opera of Oberon, arranged for the Piano Forte with flute ad lib. in four books, each 4s.

DEATH FETCH.—The favourite Air in the admired and popular Opera, composed by C. E. Horn.

I'VE BEEN ROAMING.—Cavatina, sung by Madame Vestris, by C. E. Horn, price 2s.

ROCHE'S Select Airs from Winter's Opera of the Oracle, arranged for the Harp, in 3 books, each 3s. Also the Overture and Select Airs from the above Opera, the Oracle, arranged for the Harp and Piano Forte, with Flute and Violoncello ad lib. The whole of the Music in the Opera of OBERON, composed by Carl Maria Von Weber, price 42s.

BURROW'S Select Airs, from the Opera of Oberon, for the Piano Forte with Flute ad lib. in 4 books, each 4s.

PIANOFORTES.—W. WALTER, (from Mr. Tomkison's,) begs to recommend to those in want of a very superior instrument, to inspect his stock of Grand, Cabinet, Cottage, and Square Pianos, which are warranted to be of the best description, at unusually low prices, and where the most decided satisfaction is given, will be exchanged at the Manufactory, 118, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury.

TURKEY COFFEE of the FINEST QUALITY, at the following reduced prices.—Raw, 2s. 6d. per lb.—Roasted, 3s. per lb. The Public are respectfully informed, that Government having reduced the Duty on Turkey Coffee, they may now purchase that article at the above-mentioned reduced prices, warranted of the finest quality, at John Marshall and Company's Tea and Coffee Warehouse, No. 12, Southampton-street, Strand.

WANTED to Purchase an extensive variety of HOUSEHOLD FURNITURE, Lumber, &c. for which a liberal price, and immediate Cash will be given, without charge for removal or estimate. Apply, post paid, to Robert Godfrey, 20, Chiswell-street.

N.B. It is immaterial as to quantity, quality, or situation.

BRADBERRY'S PATENT SPECTACLES, upon unerring principles, to preserve the sight to extreme old age. It is necessary to caution the public against the use of improper Spectacles, as their effects prove injurious, instead of beneficial to the eye. The unremitted and anxious study Mr. Bradberry has paid to his glasses for upwards of 30 years, has called forth the most distinguished approbation of their merit from the medical profession, and from many thousands of persons of the highest rank and respectability.—To be had only at 39, Holles-street, the first door out of Oxford-street, next to the large Fruiterer's at the corner, facing Hanover-square, and at no other place in the United Kingdom.—Orders from the country immediately attended to. Oxford-street, 39, Holles-street.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH.—Mr. WM. BEACALL, and Mr. ROSE, Surgeon Dentists, 13, Newman-street, Oxford-street, having with unremitting diligence long made the Science of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, and its mechanical adjustments, a matter of study, have at length continues to supply the loss of Teeth, with Natural or Artificial, in a superior manner, more than ever, from a single Tooth to a complete Set, at little more than one-half the usual charge. Ladies Attended if ever so affectionately rendered white and beautiful, without pain or injury to the enamel. Extracting, Stopping, and every operation on the Teeth and Gums.—Attends at home from Ten till Four.

WINES, RETAIL and WHOLESALE.—Cate de L'Europe, No. 9, Hay Market, two doors above the Theatre Royal. This splendid Coffee-House has been imported and will be conducted in the most genteel manner, is opened for the reception of the Public, for the consumption and sale of every description of European wines, both bottled and from the wood; the entire stock has been imported and warranted pure and literally so, and no expense has been spared to render the whole worthy of patronage. The Morning, Evening, and Foreign Journals, with the popular Periodicals and Pamphlets will be provided.

☞ To LET, a capital House and Shop, enquire as above.

THE LONDON and WESTMINSTER WINE and SPIRIT COMPANY, No. 16, STRAND, opposite St. Martin's Church, have constantly on Sale—

	Per Dozen.
Port, Vintage 1820	42s. to 48s
Ditto, Crusted	36s to 42s
Ditto, Sound	30s to 36s
Sherry, Pale and Brown	42s to 48s
Ditto, Amontillado	42s to 48s
Cape, from	18s to 24s
Madeira, West India	36s to 42s
Ditto, East India	48s to 60s
Tenerife, Lisbon, Vidonia,	24s to 30s
and Mountain	30s to 36s
Old Tom, Jamaica Rum,	36s per gallon

Claret, St. Julien 42s to 48s
Ditto, Lafitte and Margaux 72s to 96s
Sparkling Champagne 72s to 84s
Ditto and Creaming, of Foe
Ditto, Imperial 90s to 96s
St. Peray, dry and sparkling 60s to 72s
Chablis 50s to 60s
Hermitage, Red and White, 72s to 84s
Moselle, Sauterne, &c. 50s to 60s
Old Tom, Jamaica Rum, &c. per imperial gallon 36s

Delivered in any part of London and Co. No. 16, Strand.

at reduced prices.—Bottled Stout, Cider, Perry, Burton and Edinburgh Ales.

☞ All Goods must be paid for on or before delivery.

"TO ANACREON, IN HEAVEN."

Minstrel! from thy festive throne,
Ivy-crown'd Anacreon!
Drink of Love's delicious wine,
And from Jove a furlough gain,
Earthward turn, and here awhile
On a true disciple smile;
And, as Sages old, we know,
Were naught without a Genius,
For thy School, my jolly blade,
Take, oh! take The Colonnade,
And there young men, in love with vice,
All the wisdom of Champagne;
Poets, for such gifts, will even,
Gather from their Hippocrene,
As I, Old Telan, promise thee,
Would to Jove, I were with me;
Then, at parting—for a sign
There men may find celestial Wine.
Oh! I leave, ere yet thou bidd'st good night
Thy Sceptre-Thyrsus with CHARLES WRIGHT.

IMPORTANT DISCOVERY for PRESERVING the TEETH, and CURING TOOTHACH.—Mr. CLARK, Inventor of the Cuppatal, operated for the Toothach, as practised by the Society of Arts, respectfully acquaints the Nobility and Gentry, that he has discovered, and for some time successfully practised, a method of the Extraction of Carious Teeth, and restoring decayed teeth to their former usefulness, without extraction, or even the slightest pain. Mr. C. having long made the cure and preservation of the teeth, the subject of unremitting study, and unwearied research, solicits inquiry into the principles on which he acts; the leading features of which are an imperceptible process of destroying the sensation of pain in a nerve, and a cement for filling decayed teeth, which hardens as soon as applied.

Reference can be given to eminent Medical Gentlemen, and others, who have experienced, or witnessed, the benefit of his new system.

Natural and Artificial Teeth from one to a set supplied, and all necessary operations connected with the teeth performed, in the most approved manner, 5, King-street, Holborn

BURGESS' ESSENCE of ANCHOVIES, Warehouse, 107, STRAND, corner of Savoy Steps, London.—JOHN BURGESS and SON, being apprised of the numerous endeavours made by many persons to impose a spurious article on the public, feel it incumbent upon them to request the attention of the public, in purchasing what they conceive to be the Genuine, to observe the Name and Address correspond with the above. The general appearance of the spurious descriptions will deceive the unguarded, and for their detection J. B. and Son submit the following cautions:—Some are in appearance of a very thick, strong Essence of Anchovies;" others, "Burgis's," and many more without address.—JOHN BURGESS and SON having been established and conversant with each distinguished approbation, feel every sentiment of respect towards the public, and earnestly solicit them to inspect the labels previous to purchasing what they conceive to be of their make, which may be easily discovered with such distinguished approbation.

Burgess' New Sauce for general purposes having given such great satisfaction, continues to be prepared in the same manner as it has for upwards of a most convenient sauce, will keep good in all climates.

Warehouse, 107, Strand, corner of the Savoy Steps.—The Original Fish-Sauce Warehouse

MOGUL, OR REAL CHETNA SAUCE.

C. HODGSON, ORIGINAL INVENTOR AND SOLE PROPRIETOR, is induced to caution his Friends and the Public against several spurious Sauces offered for sale, under the title of "MOGUL," "REAL," "CHETNA," &c. &c. &c.

C. H. will feel obliged if each purchaser of the above delicious Sauce, will please to observe the Label; which is signed by himself, "C. Hodgson," and the Cork, sealed and branded, "HODGSON'S MOGUL SAUCE," without which none can be genuine.

C. H. also begs to acquaint those who have not yet made a trial of this much approved Sauce, that the flavour will be found quite different, and far superior to any yet offered, for all kinds of Curries, Steaks, Stews, Chops, Hashes, Game, Grills, Broiled and Wild Fowl, Cold Meat, and for enriching Gravies, &c., and feels assured, that when tasted, it will fully justify what he has advanced in favour of the Mogul Sauce, which he now offers to the notice of strongly recommended, being warranted to retain its full flavour in any climate.

To be had at the manufactory, No. 63, Long Lane, Borough, London, at the Piazza Coffee-house, Covent-garden, the Queen's Head Tavern, Holborn, and at any of the principal Oilmen and Grocers in Town and Country.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

FRENCH PAPERS.

The Paris Papers contain a report of speeches, said, by the Drapeau Blanc, to have been delivered hy the Spanish Ministers, when they were assembled to deliberate upon the "policy of declaring war against Portugal!" We can hardly believe that such a preposterous thought ever seriously occupied the minds either of Ferdinand or his Ministers, even at the wild suggestions of that sinister influence which is, doubtless, at work to embroil the internal affairs of Portugal. It is amusing, however, to observe, in what a fit condition Spain is to undertake a war of aggression.

The Minister of Finance opened the debate, and after pourtraying, in the most deplorable colours, the impoverished state of the country, and his utter inability to recruit its finances, concluded by saying, "he could not think of sending into Portugal, or to its frontiers, either an active army, or one of observation, because Government could not spare a maravedi, and he saw already that the deficit of this year would be double that of the year past."

Next came the Minister at War, and he, we are told, "drew the most melancholy picture of the state of the army." He proved that the greater part of the regiments of the line "were nothing more than shadows," which the penury of the Treasury prevented being filled up; in addition to which, no confidence, he said, could be placed even in these skeletons of regiments, because "to demand fidelity from soldiers who, without pay and covering, and almost without rations for two years, were reduced gradually to the highest degree of discontent, would be to demand miracles."

The Minister of Marine lent a few touches to heighten the general effect of this belligerent discussion. He observed, "that the ships building at Ferrol and Carthagena were lost, because those who contracted to build them despaired of being paid," and that the vessels must rot, "unless it pleased God to save them by some extraordinary means."

It being thus clearly demonstrated by the respective heads of the Treasury, the army, and navy, that Spain possessed neither money, men, nor ships, it might be supposed the question of declaring war was satisfactorily decided in the negative; but M. Colmarde endeavoured to derive some comfort from the measures which Government "would adopt to remedy all the evils alluded to."

A proclamation from the Madrid Gazette, signed by the King, seems to have some connexion with this subject. It commences with an allusion to the establishment of a representative system of Government in Portugal, which might, it is said, "have affected public tranquillity in another country, its neighbour, which, scarcely free from revolution, might not have been generally animated by the purest loyalty." With a view to reward, however, the loyalty of his "vassals," his Majesty condescendingly promises them that he will never make any alteration in the "legal form of his Government." This, we suppose, is meant to extinguish any hopes that might have been founded upon the promulgation of the Portuguese Charter.

The Etoile of Thursday, contains intelligence from Greece of a late date, which we subjoin. The affairs of that unhappy country appear so deplorably desperate, that nothing but the exertions of Lord Cochrane, and the liberal succours of western Europe, can be expected to retrieve them. The whole military resources of the Independent cause are limited to the islands, and a few unprovided fortresses. Athens is again in the power of the Turks, who may soon be expected to invade the Morea from the north, while the Egyptians attack it from the south. Meantime the movements of Lord Cochrane seem to be a secret, while his power of performing immediate and effective service is known to be alarmingly reduced by treachery or mismanagement. We extract from the Constitutionel an article on this subject, which, whatever may be thought of its facts, concludes with a useful suggestion.

The horrible execution for heresy at Valencia is now placed beyond doubt or cavil by the admissions of a French Government journal, which, had it been possible, would have denied a fact that it cannot palliate. In giving an account of this religious assassination, the Etoile endeavours to relieve the clergy from its odium, by laying it on the heads of the lay fanatics, who presided at the trial which the priests had provoked, and pronounced the sentence which the priests demanded. This is in fact no palliation. It is no departure even from the ancient system of the Inquisition. The tender-hearted inquisitor who handed the heretic over to the civil power, for the due execution of the laws of St. Dominic, never demanded the life of his victim. In this case it would appear that the formalities of an auto da fe were revived along with the judicial forms of the holy office. We believe such a spectacle has not been exhibited in Europe for the last 45 years.

PEACE WITH THE BURMESE.

The renewed war with the Burmese has been terminated by the prompt and decisive measures adopted subsequently to the treachery which rendered the former pacification nugatory. An overland despatch, dated Calcutta, April 7, via Bombay and Constantinople, was received yesterday by his Majesty's Government, announcing that a Treaty of Peace, nearly similar to the former one, was ratified, on the 24th of February, at Yandaboo, within four days' march of Ummerapoora, after some severe fighting. The first instalment had been paid, Sir Archibald Campbell had left the head-quarters of his army, and had arrived at Calcutta. He was to return hy the Enterprise, steam-vessel, to Rangoon, to superintend the re-embarkation of the troops, about the 4th of June, at which period the second instalment would become due.

The following are all the particulars that have transpired, with respect to this gratifying, though not unexpected, event. The barbarians, who fancied that their characteristic perfidy would avail them in their negotiations with Sir Archibald Campbell, as successfully as in their transactions with the Native Powers, have been taught a salutary but severe lesson. It will be long ere they again commit themselves to a struggle with the British power.

CALCUTTA, APRIL 7.—"Sir Archibald and Mr. Robertson, the Civil Commissioner, arrived in the Enterprise steam-vessel, with the gratifying intelligence of peace having been concluded with the Burmese. The Treaty was ratified on the 24th of February, at Yandaboo, within four days' march of the capital. The first instalment of 25 lacs of rupees had been despatched from Rangoon by his Majesty's ship Alligator, ten days before the Enterprise sailed. The main body of the force in Ava had returned to Rangoon, and several regiments had embarked for Bengal and Madras. All the troops would be ready to leave the Burmese territory by the time the second instalment of twenty-five lacs of rupees would become due, namely, the 4th of June.

"The Burmese, by virtue of the Treaty, give up all claim to Assam, Cachar, and Jyntea, and acknowledge Guuibeer Singh Rajah of Munnipore.

"The British are to retain Arracan, Ramree, Cheduba, and Sandowey. The total amount of the indemnity to be paid by the Burmese is one crore of rupees.

"A Commercial Treaty is to be entered into between both powers, stipulating for freedom of navigation, including the commerce in grain."

EAST INDIES.

(From the Bombay Courier Extraordinary.)

APRIL 24, 1826.—We publish, from the Calcutta Government Gazette Extraordinary, the following intelligence relative to the peace with the Government of Ava, and the latest proceedings in the Burmese territories:—

PEACE WITH AVA.

At a late hour last night, the Enterprise reached Calcutta, having on board his Excellency Sir Archibald Campbell, Mr. Robertson, and Mr. Mangles, the return of whom to Calcutta is the consequence of a conclusion of peace with the Burmese. The public dispatches announcing the ratification of the treaty were forwarded hy Colonel Tidy and Captain Snodgrass, on board the Alligator, which left Rangoon a week before the Enterprise arrived, and may be therefore hourly expected. The Araclne sailed at the same time for Madras. We have been favoured with the following particulars of this important and satisfactory event:—After leaving Pagahmchew, Sir Archibald Campbell was met by repeated messengers of the King, offering terms short of those demanded, which offers were of course rejected. At last, however, when the army was within four days' march of the capital, Mr. Price again made his appearance, bringing with him the treaty ratified by the King, and paid down the stipulated sum of twenty-five lacs, the remainder to be paid in the manner previously determined on. The prisoners were then given up, and amongst them was Mr. Gouger. In addition to the Southern Provinces of Tavai and Mergui, we are to retain Martaban, to the east of the Saaloon, or Martaban river. The ratification of the treaty took place in the end of February.

The troops commenced their return on the 5th of March, hy water, and had all arrived at Rangoon. Six European regiments had been embarked, besides the Bengal Artillery, when the Enterprise left. Some of the transports, with his Majesty's 13th, 38th, and 41st, had sailed, and it was expected that they would be withdrawn by the middle of May.

Since writing the above, we have been favoured with the following additional details:—

The treaty was confirmed on the 24th of February. The treasure, consisting of rupees, and gold and silver bars, is on board the Alligator.

A party from the camp paid a visit to the capital, and were received by the King with every honour. Mr. Crawford had gone to Martaban in the Diana steam vessel.

A battalion, with all the elephants, and attended by two Burmese Chiefs, have proceeded from Jembewghewn to Arracan, via Aen: the road is now acknowledged to be a very good one. Another detachment had proceeded from Prome to Sandowey.

(India Gazette Extraordinary, April 5.)

An express which left Calcutta, on the 9th inst. reached Bombay early yesterday morning. The following General Order was consequently published, announcing the conclusion of Peace with Ava:

GENERAL ORDER BY GOVERNMENT, NO. 129, OF 1826.

Bombay Castle, 23d April, 1826.

This order announced the conclusion of the peace, and ordered a royal salute and three vollies to be fired at all the military stations.

DEATH OF THE BISHOP OF CALCUTTA.

(Extract from the Bombay Courier, of 22d of April, 1826.)

Our readers throughout India will receive, with a universal sentiment of grief, the intelligence that the earthly career of our beloved and revered bishop terminated at Trichinopoly, on the morning of Monday, the 3d instant (April). His Lordship had reached that place on Saturday morning, and on the following day had preached, and held a confirmation in the evening; after which he delivered another discourse, concluding with a solemn and affecting farewell to the congregation.

On Monday, at an early hour, his Lordship visited a congregation of native Christians, and, on his return, went into a bath, as he had done on the two preceding days. He was there seized with an apoplectic fit, and when his servant, alarmed at the length of his stay, entered the bathing-room, he found that life was extinct. Medical aid was immediately procured, but wholly unavailing.

THE CONQUERED PROVINCES OF AVA.

(From the Asiatic Journal for September.)

The provinces of Ye, Tavai, and Mergui, which have been lately subjected to British authority, occupy a narrow strip of land about 300 miles long by 50 broad, and containing 15,000 square miles; it is confined between the sea on the west, and a range of mountains on the east, by which it is divided from Siam.

The most northerly province is Ye, which borders on the district of Martaban. Tavai, in which, indeed, Ye has been usually included, succeeds; and the most southerly is Mergui, which is bounded by the peninsula of Malacca. Along the whole line of coast lie a number of small islands; but they are most numerous opposite Mergui, constituting the Mergui Archipelago.

The province of Ye is of small extent; it is bounded on the north by Kyaup Kyagee; on the south by the Kaleeng Aung district of Tavai; the mountains and the sea are its eastern and western boundaries. Its inhabitants were computed at abou 5,000; but in the disorganization consequent upon the war, and the dread of the depredations of marauding parties of Siamese, who took advantage of the distracted state of affairs to carry off the natives, the latter sought refuge in Tavai, and other places, under British protection: the province is, consequently, a close jungle, broken at remote intervals by rice-fields of limited extent, and those but scantily cultivated.

The town is situated on a long hill, about a hundred feet high in some parts, above the level of the river, which washes its southern base. The soil and climate of the district are evidently favourable for cultivation. Boat timber is abundant, and of good quality, but no teak grows in the forest: the other products of Ye are much the same as those of Tavai.

The province of Tavai, Dawai, or Dawe, is bounded by Ye on the north, and Tenasserim on the south; the mountains and the sea on the east and west; the boundary line on the north is Hengha river; that on the south is a low range of hills, about four miles S. from the Pillow river. The province is divided into seventy-eight districts, of which sixteen are within the fort. The population amounts to about 20,000 souls. The cleared and cultivated part does not exceed fifty square miles; the rest is jungle and forest.

The town stands upon the east bank of the Tavai river, at about twenty-eight miles from its mouth; owing to the numerous shoals no vessels of any burthen can approach nearer than within sixteen miles of the town, but prows, junks, and small craft lie abreast of it, and the Chinese have sunk mud-docks, where vessels of this class are repaired or built. Opposite to Crab-Island, where ships anchor, at about twelve miles from the mouth of the river, docks might be constructed for vessels of any size, which could be launched at once into five fathoms water.

The province is more hilly than the other parts of the coast. It is abundantly supplied with water, being intersected by a number of streams running usually S. and W. at short intervals of two and three miles.

Although, perhaps, inferior to that of Martaban, the soil of Tavai is superior to that of Mergui, and only requires cultivation to be rendered eminently productive. The lands skirting the rivers consist of a strong clay, without much vegetable superstratum; those along the hills are loamy in some districts, and light in others. The islands are alluvial.

Tobacco, of a tolerably good quality, is grown in Tavai, but scarcely in sufficient quantities for the consumption of the province, although it might, no doubt, soon exceed that amount. The Tavayers are inveterate smokers, and their children may be seen whiffing at their segars at two or three years of age, with as much gravity as their seniors. Indigo is cultivated, but not to any extent, although the soil and climate are considered as particularly well adapted to it.

Sugar-cane grows, but not of the best sort. The pepper plant thrives, particularly in the western districts, and nutmeg trees are to be met with. The betel-vine grows wild, but is also cultivated in gardens. The areca-tree also grows here, but to a limited extent. Other vegetable products are cardemoms, myrobalans, turmeric, besides various medicinal barks and roots. Of timber-trees there is an endless variety, and many of them are employed in the construction of vessels.

The mines lie in the midst of a dense forest of bamboos and trees. The elephants frequently attack the miner's hut, and eat up all his rice, compelling him to a speedy return to Tavai. He seldom begins labour until the sun is high, about nine o'clock, for until then the air is damp and chilly: Fahrenheit's thermometer exposed to it averaging 65 deg., while the temperature of the water is from 68 deg. to 70 deg. To counteract the bad effects of damp and cold, the miners use both arrack and opium, but the latter in small quantities.

The province is well stocked with cattle, both domestic and wild; but the favourite breed of the former is the buffalo, which is here a powerful yet docile animal: horned cattle are few. The elephants completely overrun the forests, and rhinoceroses, wolves, monkies, bears, deer, and wild hogs are numerous: the flesh of the two latter is eaten by the Tavayers.

Most of the finest fruits of India and the Eastern Islands grow in Tavai. The pine apple, mango, orange, mangosteen, dorian, melon, and plantains, are found in private gardens. Neither the mangosteen nor dorian is procured north of this province; the former is rather scarce, the latter more abundant: it formed an article of export to Rangoon and Martaban, the high prices obtained at which places tempted the Tavayers to brave, in open boats, the violence of the monsoon. The dorian was highly esteemed at the court of Ava. The climate and soil of Tavai are favourable to the production of European vegetables.

The Burmans do not eat such quantities of rice at their meals as the natives of Hindoostan. They eat twice a day, early in the forenoon and in the evening, and their meals are served up in trays, in the Siamese fashion. Their meats are chopped up, and put into small cups or saucers, as are different sorts of stewed vegetables. The rice is distributed on red lacquered plates to all the members of a family, who help themselves with spoons to all the other dishes, although they generally eat with their fingers. The Tavayers have no objection to eat at the same table with an European. They will not always drink spirituous liquors. There are a few amongst them who have made a sort of vow to abstain from certain luxuries and indulgencies. They allow ther beards to grow, and are generally more sedate in their deportment than the rest of the people. They do not, however, shun society, or debar themselves from its innocent pleasures.

ASSAULTS AND ROBBERIES AT PRIDDY FAIR.

[From the Bath Journal.]

CHEDDAR, AUG. 23.—This fair, which is held annually in a vale surrounded hy the Mendip Hills, took place on Monday last, conformably to immemorial custom, and charter granted to the Ecclesiastical Authorities of Wells. The fair has always been held in the highest estimation—is of most extensive magnitude, and has been invariably looked up to as a criterion for the regulation of of the prices of stock of all denominations. Business has been conducted in the most regular and scientific manner for many years, and, until last year, the greatest harmony prevailed amongst all classes who were brought together for a mutual exchange of interest, and for the transaction of agricultural concerns, which could not be settled without the assemblage of large bodies of farmers, graziers, dealers, &c. Last year, however, the spot which used to be appropriated to the arena for the performance of commercial and agricultural contracts, was broken in upon hy a lawless set of organized robbers, from the neighbourhood of Bristol, who, in the most daring manner, assembled in gangs, assaulted, beat, and robbed numbers of the visiters to the fair with an impunity truly astonishing to the inhabitants of a civilized country.

With the fearful example of last year before the eyes of the civil authorities, it is a little extraordinary that no means were this year resorted to to avert or prevent the repetition of such disgraceful atrocities; particularly as it must be a notorious fact, within the compass of every one's knowledge, that it was not a fair for the encouragement of idle "pastime" or "pleasure," but literally and bona fide for the interchange of business upon a broad and liberal scale; and, consequently, those who visit it with that view, are ever obliged to furnish themselves with abundant supplies of ready cash to effect purchases. It is, however, a paintul task to communicate to you an account of the outrages so daringly committed, which have already come to my knowledge, observing at the same time, that it is my firm belief, that they form but a slender proportion in the scale of offences perpetrated there on Monday last, and which, if not provided against at the next anniversary, must inevitably lead to a total annihilation of every species of business on that favoured and excellently calculated spot.

The gangs consist of as many as from 20 to 30, and are what are commonly called Gipsies—importations from Kingswood, Bristol, &c. &c.; they are accompanied, in some instances, by their wives, or abandoned women, who are employed in the conduct of E. O. tables, or other low species of gambling. These women attract the attention of the credulous or unwary to their unlawful games, while the men crowd around the table, and, appearing to take a lively interest in the progress of the game, by betting small sums, empty the pockets of the by-standers of every thing valuable. When the afternoon arrived, the stratagems resorted to for the purposes of plunder, were by making sham fights, and thereby collecting vast crowds of persons; and, while two or more of the principals were engaged in pugilistic combat, the auxiliary forces were busily employed in what is technically called conveyancing; i. e. conveying property from the rightful owners into their own possession. As night approached, respectable persons, who had been dining in the booths, were called from them by some of the gang, upon pretence of being wanted by a friend, and immediately they got outside, were knocked down and robbed of every thing they possessed. This was repeatedly done in the presence of others, but so formidable were the gangs, (often 30 in number), that they held the honest part of the populace in terrorem.

About five o'clock in the evening, Mr. George Hares, the landlord of the Miners' Arms Inn, at Shipham, was knocked off his horse, and robbed of six sovereigns and some silver. Complaint was vain, as there were no legal authorities to redress the grievance. At eight o'clock, Mr. Tozer, a highly respectable currier, residing at Axbridge, was taking his gloves from his pocket, preparatory to mounting his horse and riding home; in the act, however, of mounting, a fellow struck him a violent blow on the forehead, which had the effect of stunning him, and he was immediately surrounded by at least a dozen pickpockets, who beat, pinioned, and robbed him of a pocket-book, 22l. in notes, two sovereigns, about a pound's worth of silver, a snuff-box, two silk handkerchiefs, and other articles of less value. Not contented with this, they cut the girths of his saddle, which, together with a new pair of plated stirrups, they conveyed away in triumph!! Mr. Tozer was, besides, much beaten and kicked about the body, and was afterwards removed to a farm house, two miles from the spot, and brought home to Axbridge on the following day (Tuesday). Will the reader believe, (but such was the fact) that a vast number of persons witnessed this barbarous scene, but were literally afraid to render assistance, fearful they should have been subject to the same fate! I am happy, however, to say, that one of the ruffians is known to Mr. Tozer, and in all human probability will be overtaken by the strong arm of the law. At a later period of the evening, the booths were besieged by the assailants; several respectable people prefered sitting up the whole of the night in the booths, rather than run the risk o going out and being robbed; and many of those who encountered the risk came off without money, and, in several instances, had their clothes torn from their backs!

I have given you but a hasty and imperfect sketch of what happened: every hour, however, brings forth fresh accounts of the barbarous cruelties inflicted on n innocent and unoffending people; in vain could the sufferers call for the protection of the magistracy, or the posse comitatis, the former not residing within several miles of the spot, and he latter receiving no orders upon the subject. This notice will, however, I hope, bring forth the exertions of the worthy magstrates upon future occasions, and prevent, as far as possible, a useful depot of business from being turned into a "den of thieves"

MIDDLESEX COURT OF REQUESTS.—August 28.

A CIVIL DOCTOR!

Mrs. Sarah Booth, the mother of the actress, appeared to a summons issued on the complaint of a Mr. Bleek, surgeon, cupper, and accoucheur, residing somewhere in or about Hart-street, Bloomsbury, who demanded for advice and medicine the sum of 4l. 17s. 6d.

Mrs. Booth denied all knowledge of the debt, and at the same time produced a receipt of the plaintiff's, for 3l. 14s. which was the last charge he could have made for his professional services so far as she was concerned.

Mr. Bleck said, he had not summoned the lady who thought proper to appear, but one much younger, and much prettier; he meant Miss Sarah Booth (familiarly called "Sally,") the celebrated actress of all work; however, if Mrs. Booth thought proper to take her daughter's character, the business might proceed.

Mrs. Booth said, that she came there, presuming that the summons was intended for herself, her name being Sarah as well as that of her daughter. Miss Booth was at present in the country, and would not return to London for a good while, but assuredly she would not have permitted a debt of this description to remain unpaid, if it was fairly due: the fact was, that the Gentleman, though very intimate in the family, had never attended Miss Booth professionally.

Mr. Bleek—Good God! you won't say so?

Mrs. Booth—Yes, Sir, but I do say so, and will maintain what I say.

Mr. Bleek—Here's a return for all my friendship and civility.

The Commissioner—Allow me to ask you, Mrs. Booth, did this gentleman ever attend Miss Booth during any illness?

Mrs. Booth—Never professionally; nor indeed has she required his services; but, Sir, if you give me leave, I shall explain the civility to which this gentleman alludes. He has been a constant visitor at our house, always finding himself a seat at the breakfast, dinner, and supper table; in short, he made himself quite "at home," and, in return, he was always endeavouring to dose the whole family. One day, in particular, I remember, when we were at dinner, my daughter laid her hand on her bosom, so; and Mr. B., with his usual vigilance to get hold of a patient, jumped up from the table, and with the most eager solicitude entreated her to tell him what was the matter? Miss Booth replied, "Oh, nothing, only a slight pain the effect of cold, I fancy." The Doctor looked grave, felt her pulse, and dropped some serious hints, such as, "Not so slight—neglected cold; pain in the breast—may turn to cancer; poor thing—something must be done in time:" and away he went to his laboratory, where he ordered a lotion to be made up for his patient, and returned to discuss another bottle of wine with her father. In the same way, he had called in at different times subsequently, and sent some bottles, none of which Miss Booth ever had occasion to use, but for which it now seemed that he was disposed to charge her. This was the whole truth of the matter.

Mr. Bleek would admit that he was on terms of intimacy with Miss Booth's family, but declared that he considered himself as attending professionally, and of course expected to be paid for his services. But there was something more which Mrs. Booth had not thought proper to explain, but which might account for the non-payment of his bill. The fact was that a brother of Miss Booth's had taken the liberty to fall deeply in love with his (Mr. Bleek's) sister, and made a formal offer for her hand; however, as he knew that the young man had no means to support a wife, except what he derived from a rather subordinate situation in Somerset House, he (Mr. B.) had refused to give his consent to the match.

The Commissioner—Was it then that you sent in your bill to Miss Booth?

Mr. Bleek—Soon afterwards.

The Commissioner—And but for that misunderstanding, that charge never would have been made. The summons is dismissed.

Mr. Bleek—The decision is a most shameful one; but I will take it to a higher Court.

That amusing Morceau, "Buy a Broom," was sung by the pretty Love, with her usual naivete, the other night at Vauxhall, and followed by a very spirited and tasty duet, between her and De Begnis, called, "A, B, C,"—its comic effect is admirable.

Fire in an Ice-House!—A few days ago, about ten o'clock in the morning, a little alarm, not unaccompanied with some mirth, produced by occasional efforts at humble wit, prevailed in the neighbourhood of Grove-street, Bath, underneath part of which is the ice-house of Mr. J. Talley, of Milsom-street. An old woman, who had observed some smoke issue from the ice-house door, gravely reported that "the people had a been there wi' a lighted candle a'ter ice, and they dropped a spark and set fire to't." The former part of the report appears to have been correct; and it would seem that "the people" had dropped the candle on the straw by which the ice is surrounded for the purpose of preserving it; but there having been in the house only two cwt. of straw, and about ten tons of ice, which on every approach of its rival element assumed its original state, the odds of water against fire were too considerable to allow of the latter's making much progress. Two or three hundred weight of ice was lost; when, with the assistance of some engines, the fire was extinguished.

Execution of W. Mills and T. Gardiner.—These two victims to the offended laws of their country, terminated their mortal career upon the scaffold on Saturday, as we intimated in our last. Their behaviour, up to the fatal moment, was strictly in unison with that contrition and repentance which they had manifested from the time of condemnation, an interval which they devoted almost exclusively to the duties of religion. They made a full confession of their crimes, acknowledged the justice of the fate they were about to undergo, and, as the best proof of the proper state to which they had subdued their minds, repeatedly expressed their entire forgiveness of the accomplice whose testimony had led to their conviction. With Mills particularly, the latter feeling was predominant, and he frequently intimated a wish to have a friendly interview with his brother before he suffered. This, however, did not take place, as Thomas Mills could not be induced again to face his miserable brother and associate. On the day previous to his execution, Mills took a final leave of his wretched parents. The old man was dreadfully affected, but the mother did not manifest a similar degree of feeling. On Saturday morning both culprits attended in the chapel, where, after the usual service, the sacrament was administered to them. They afterwards again made confession of their offences, and about half-past twelve o'clock were ushered to the fatal beam, where their earthly sufferings were terminated in the presence of an immense concourse of spectators. After hanging the usual time, the bodies were taken down, and delivered to their friends for interment.—Gloucester Journal.

PROCEEDINGS AGAINST THE COUNTY OF LANCASTER.

[From the Manchester Mercury.]

The actions brought against the different Hundreds of this County, to recover compensation for the damages sustained by breaking power-looms, during the disturbances in the month of April last, were twenty-three in number; two of which, viz. one by Messrs. Walmsleys, of Oswaldtwistle, and one by Mr. David Ashworth, of Newchurch, were not commenced in time for these Assizes, and consequently stand over to the next. Of the remaining twenty-four actions, the great majority were undefended, and verdicts were taken by consent in the Sheriff's Court, for sums fixed on by a comparison of the valuations made for the claimants, with those made under the directions of the Magistrates. Three or four actions were, however, defended: but, in each, a verdict was obtained for the plaintiffs. The following is a summary of the different amounts recovered:—

AGAINST THE HUNDRED OF BLACKBURN.

	No. of Looms.	£.	s.	d.
Messrs. Sykes, Accrington	60	1039	17	6
Mr. Marquis, do	4	44	13	9
Mr. James Bury, do	94	1889	0	0
Messrs Eccles, Blackburn	212	3178	15	10
Mr. John Haughton, do.	25	284	11	9
Mr. James Garsden, Darwen	36	413	8	2
Messrs. Carrs.....do	16	196	13	0
Messrs. Turners, Musbury	106	1651	3	8
Messrs. Whiteheads, Lower Booths	96	1049	6	1
Mr. Kay, Coup Lench	20	273	16	6
Messrs. Ormrods, Newchurch	20	363	1	11
Messrs. Hargreaves and Co. do	28	348	9	2
Messrs. Munn .....do	51	860	19	7
Total		£11,593	16	11

AGAINST THE HUNDRED OF SALFORD.

	No. of Looms.	£.	s.	d.
Messrs. Rostron, Tottington Higher End	58	1500	0	0
Messrs. Aitkin and Lord do	46	568	0	0
Messrs. Hamer and Sons, Elton	38	253	7	0
Mr. Hutchinson, Bury	49	243	12	0
Mr. John Clegg, Crompton	28	418	1	0
Mr. Hugh Beaver, Manchester (no looms)		1474	0	0
Total		£4457	0	0

AGAINST THE HUNDRED OF LEYLAND.

	No. of Looms.	£.	s.	d.
Mr. Sudell, Chorley	100	483	0	0

The total sum recovered, as above, is £16,533 17s. 5d., and the costs of the several actions will amount to about £3000l. in addition. In the two actions yet to be tried, the damages are estimated at £253 9s. 6d.

THE WORKS AT THE NEW LONDON BRIDGE.

The erection of this public fabric proceeds with great rapidity. The centres for the second arch are nearly finished, and are visible over the parapets of the old bridge. The mode by which these centres are constructed is very ingenious. The wood and iron work is formed and put together at Messrs. Jolliffe and Banks' Establishment, at the Isle of Dogs, where the sections of the centre are finished ready for placing in position at the new bridge. These gigantic pieces of wood-work, forming a semi-circle, are then floated to about fifty yards above the site of the new bridge on the Surrey side, where two barges are moored to each other. The barges are so constructed as to admit, as the tide falls, a body of water, by which they are nearly filled, and thus brought almost to a level with the surface of the river; the centres are then, by the operation of powerful machinery, first brought horizontally on to the barges, and then, by the same agency, raised perpendicularly across the middle of them, and secured in that position. As the tide rises, the water is let out of the barges, and at high water they are floated down to the works where the arch is to be turned. The state of the tide at this juncture is such, as to bring the centres, thus temporarily fixed on the barges, almost even with the piers on which they are to be based; and, by the operation of powerful mechanism, these ponderous centres (each weighing nearly forty tons), are placed in their position at the new bridge.

The celerity with which the works proceed, must be no less satisfactory to the public, than creditable to the contractors; and although the period at which the New London Bridge is stipulated to be finished embraces (we believe) four or five years from this time, there is, from appearances, every probability that it will be erected before that period, as the first arch will, we learn, be turned by the close of the present year.

Destructive Fire, and Loss of Life.—On Thursday morning, a fire broke out between twelve and one o'clock, in the house No. 4, Plummer's-row, Commercial-road, which, we regret to say, has been attended, not alone with the destruction of property, but also the loss of life. On its being perceived, the watchman on the beat sprung his rattle, which attracted the attention of Mr. Miller, the chief officer of Lambeth-street, a resident in the neighbourhood, who hastened at once to the scene of devastation. On his arrival, the miserable inmates were screaming in the most heart-rending manner for assistance, and he was induced, in consequence, to procure a ladder, and place it against the front of the house, with the intention of rescuing them from their perilous situation. In this he was unsuccessful, and, in endeavouring to aid his fellow-creatures, very nearly sacrificed his own life. Scarcely, had he however, mounted the ladder, and broken one of the windows, when the flames and smoke burst out with the greatest violence, and precipitated him from a height of 20 feet on the pavement. The injuries he received were rather severe. One of his hands is much cut, and his feet much bruised A young man of the name of Solomons, at the same moment, threw himself from the two pair window, by which his body was fractured in several places. He now lies in the London Hospital, in a very dangerous state. The landlady of the house, a rather elderly woman, was not so fortunate; she fell a victim to the devouring element, and was reduced nearly to a cinder. An inquest on Friday evening was held on her remains. The fire was got under a little after two o'clock, but not before the entire of the premises, and every vestige of property, was reduced to an indiscriminate heap of ruins. It is said to have originated from a candle, which had been left a-light, waiting the arrival of a lodger.

Destructive Fire.—About eleven o'clock Thursday night, a fire was discovered in the printing-office of Mr. Taylor, of No. 5, Lamb's Conduit Passage, Red Lion-square, which, from the nature of the property on the premises, and the closeness of the buildings adjoining the office, threatened the most serious consequences to the whole neighbourhood. Neither Mr. Taylor nor any of his family were at home at the time, and the house was left in charge of a female servant. The moment the fire was discovered, Mr. Jackson, Florist, of Lamb's Conduit Passage, and a number of other neighbours, exerted themselves, at the risk of their lives, to extinguish the flames, which burst out all at once with great fury, and in which they succeeded before the arrival of the fire engines;—but not before the whole of the printing-office (which was on the ground floor) and all the valuable materials therein, were destroyed. The dwelling-house was preserved from entire destruction by the activity of the neighbours. We regret to state that Mr. Jackson, whose conduct throughout was beyond all praise, received some serious hurts, particularly in his left side, from his great exertions on this occasion, in trying to save Mr. Taylor's house and property.

E. G. WAKEFIELD.

If Edward Gibbon Wakefield be determined to meet his prosecutor face to face, it is supposed that he will endeavour, before the Spring Assizes, to move the indictment, by certiorari, into the Court of King's Bench. In that case he will be tried, not in the criminal, but in the Civil Court at Lancaster; and, if he should be thus convicted, he will be brought up in the Court of King's Bench to receive sentence. Had he been tried and convicted before one of the Learned Judges who sat at Lancaster during the recent Assizes, we imagine that his offence would have been visited by an imprisonment of no short duration, and by a fine of no small amount.

It is not improbable, however, that we shall hear of the affair of Mr. Wakefield and Miss Turner before the next assizes. If Miss Turner be his lawful wife, is it not likely that her reputed husband will institute a suit in the Ecclesiastical Court for the restoration of conjugal rights? And if such a suit should be instigated, will it not bring the question of the legality or illegality of the marriage to an issue?

The gentlemen of the long robe are, we guess, far from being sorry at the singular turn which the case took on Monday week. A Counsel never disgorges the fees which he receives; and several very heavy ones are known to have been paid to the host of Barristers engaged on both sides. There is a chance of the case being agitated again, and then what fine pickings there will be for the lawyers.

To the Gentlemen of the Press the affair has been very expensive, without correspondent profit. We have heard of some round sums having been expended by the leading London Journals, in the hope of obtaining intelligence from Lancaster exclusively. The proprietors of one Evening Paper, we have heard, authorized their reporters to draw upon them to the extent of 200l., if by expending that sum they could convey the proceedings respecting Mr. Wakefield to town before the agents of any other Journal. The Courier received the account of William Wakefield's flight by express, and had the pleasure of receiving it exclusively.—Liverpool Paper.

CORNWALL AND DEVON MINING COMPANY.

Notice having been given, by public advertisement, that a meeting, under the sanction of the Directors of the Cornwall and Devon Mining Company, would take place at their rooms in Lombard-street, some of the shareholders and scripholders assembled at the place appointed, in the expectation of hearing some proposition of importance. In the notice which had been circulated, there was no mention of the nature of the business on which the Meeting was called; but one of the reports which gained belief among the speculators in Companies was, that the "thing" was to be given up, if the Shareholders and Scripholders would only consent to pay the debts contracted by the Management, which debts were said to amount to almost 25.000l. Although the Directors were all expected to attend, there appeared no more than two, Lord Palmerston and Mr. Teague, at two o'clock. The Shareholders moved that Lord Palmerston should take the Chair, in order to proceed to business; some of the gentlemen having been in the rooms since twelve o'clock, the hour appointed for taking the Chair. His Lordship begged to be excused. He declared that he never would, under any circumstances, take the Chair at a meeting of this Company. The Shareholders begged to be informed of the grounds of his Lordship's objection, and were told by him that he was prevented from ever again taking the Chair, by what took place at the last meeting of the Company.

The Shareholders doubted whether this determination of Lord Palmerston arose from his disapproval of the language occasionally used by Mr. Wilks, who, it will be recollected, gave the lie upon four or five occasions, during the meeting, or from his disgust at the system of fraud which had been laid open. His Lordship did not specify his reason; but suggested that Mr. Woolley, one of the Shareholders, should take the Chair.

Mr. Woolley was as firmly resolved as Lord Palmerston not to take the Chair. He considered that his agreeing to preside on an occasion of the kind would be nothing less than acknowledging that, what was called the Cornwall and Devon Mining Company, was a Company—a thing he by no means would admit, as it was founded on fraud and delusion, and of course had no existence in law or in fact.

Lord Palmerston said he had taken Counsel's opinion upon the deed which had been signed by the shareholders, and been assured that it was a valid instrument, and that of course all who had signed it were responsible for the debts of the Company.

Mr. Woolley declared, that he was firmly convinced, that instead of the shareholders being responsible for the debts of the Company, the Directors were responsible to the shareholders for the amount of their deposits.

A Shareholder observed, that he had consulted an eminent lawyer, who informed him that a court of law would compel the Directors to refund every sixpence of the deposits, and he rejoiced that there were so many men of substance in the concern, as he should not be content to lose a single shilling in such a humbug concern.

The Scripholders were shut out during this discussion.

Questions were put to Lord Palmerston as to his opinion of the Directors, and as to the view the House of Commons would be likely to take of the case, in the event of its being brought before them. He replied, that they possessed the same means that he had for judging of the Directors, and he thought the House of Commons had too much to do in the way of legislation to entertain the case at all. His Lordship then said, I should wish to know whether those questions are asked me merely for yourself, or to satisfy other parties?

Shareholder—For the satisfaction of other parties as well as myself. Your Lordship has, unfortunately, by becoming a Director, identified yourself, although wholly innocent, with men who have hatched this vile scheme of deception, and you are, in point of law, liable to be sued as well as any other of the Directors.

Lord Palmerston—I have consulted my lawyer, and he says he shall resist any demands made upon me by the Shareholders and Scripholders of the Company. We consider them bound, by the deed of settlement, to discharge the debts of the Company.

The conversation ended here. The debts are said to amount to 25,000l.

Branch Bank.—We are glad to announce, that measures have already been taken by the Bank of England for the formation of a Branch Bank in this town. The premises in Union-street, lately occupied by the banking firm of Messrs. Gibbins, Smith, and Goode, have been purchased by the Directors of the Bank of England, and are well calculated for the purpose intended.—Birmingham Chronicle.

Dreadful Storm.—Vienna, August 17.—On the 6th August (says a letter from Admont, in Upper Styria), between three and four in the afternoon, dark thunder storms rose on three different sides, and at length joined the centre of the valley. It became as dark as night, and a torrent of rain gave reason to imagine that the tempest would soon pass over, when all at once the lightning struck the steeple, passed through the clock into the chancel, and struck two priests who were doing duty there: they were killed on the spot. Every means to restore animation were employed for hours, but without effect. The electric fluid discharged itself in the form of a ball of fire, and an explosion like that of a large cannon. Large pieces of the cornice and ceiling fell. Those persons who were able fled; some, struck by the lightning, lay insensible on the pavement, and others, severely wounded by the falling pieces of the wall, were carried, covered with blood, out of the chancel.

FRIDAY'S GAZETTE.

INSOLVENTS.

J. LASHBROOK, Cardiff, Glamorganshire, shopkeeper.—J. LANCASHIRE, Southampton-street, Camberwell, livery-stable keeper.

BANKRUPTCY SUPERSEDED.

J. DIXON, Walsall, Staffordshire, file-cutter.

BANKRUPTS.

J. HIRST, Manchester, spindle-maker—T. H. SKELTON, Southampton, stationer—W. SMITH, Leicester, wheelwright—M. G. NEEDLE, Wood-street, Cheapside, tea dealer—G. SCORE, Tokenhouse-yard, money-scrivener—J. YOUNG, Coleford, Gloucestershire, butcher—O. BRIDGE, Marple, Cheshire, cotton-manufacturer—T. GILL, Stourport, Worcester, corn-dealer—G. BROWN, Kidderminster, Worcester, stone-mason—J. C. NICHOLSON, Liverpool, merchant—J. FOWLER and G. M. LINTHORNE, Little Tower-street, tea-dealers—C. BISHOP, Frome Selwood, Somersetshire, victualler—J. GARNETT, Liverpool, merchant—A. and J. WATSON, Blackburn, Lancashire, haberdashers—A. WATSON, Blackburn, Lancashire, draper—M. FIDLER, Norbury, Cheshire, innkeeper—J. STEPHENS, Coombe, Carmarthen, clay merchant—J. WILLEY, Manchester, innkeepers.

TUESDAY'S GAZETTE.

DECLARATION OF INSOLVENCY.

H. Llewellyn, Rochester-terrace, Stoke Newington, stationer.

BANKRUPTCIES SUPERSEDED.

W. Sims, Portsea, grocer—J. Gething, Worcester, coal-merchant.—S. Jackson, Congleton, Cheshire, silkman.

BANKRUPTS.

W. Watson, One Swan, Bishopsgate-street, innkeeper.—J. Shakesbaft, jun. Widegate-street, St. Botolph, Bishopsgate, dealer in earthenware.—G. E. Blansdale, Middleham, Yorkshire, scrivener.—G. Keating, Waterloo-road, Lambeth, linen-draper.—R. Thornley, Vale House, Mottram in Longdendale, Cheshire, cotton-spinner.—P. Buck, Knaresborough, Yorkshire, cabinet-maker.—T. Roser, Brighthelmstone, builder.—J. Palmer, Shrewsbury, mercer.—F. and T. Sleddon, Preston, Lancashire, cotton-spinners.—T. Barlow, jun., and H. T. Barlow, Liverpool, drapers.—C. Marriott, Manchester, cotton-spinners.—F. Sleddon, Preston, Lancashire, machine maker.—A. Clarkson, Thatcham, Berkshire, innkeeper.—J. Lee, Wood-street, Cheapside, warehouseman.—J. Salket and T. Hughes, Liverpool, timber-merchants.—I. Gleed, Hawkesbury Upton, Gloucestershire, draper.—A. Phelps, Bath, milliner.—W. Monk, Bispham, Lancashire, maltster.—M. Blood, Bath, surgeon.

PRICE OF STOCKS UP TO FOUR O'CLOCK YESTERDAY.

BRITISH.

Bank Stock, 204	India Bonds, 29 27 pm.
Red. 3 per Cent. 79½⅜	Exch. Bills, 1000, 19 18 17 pm.
3 per Cent. Cons. 78⅞ 9 8	Do. 500, 19 18 17 pm.
3½ per Cent. Red. 86¾¼	Do. Small, 18 20 pm.
New 4 per Cent. 94⅝¾	Do. Advertised, 17 19 pm.
4 per Cent. 1826,	Cons. for Acc. 79 8⅞ 9⅛ 8⅞ 9
Long Anns. 19⅝

Consols. opened at 79; went down to 78¾; up to 79⅛; buyers left off at 78⅞. The prevailing opinion is, that the opening of the ports to foreign corn will cause much money stock to come to market: and if so, a great fall is expected.

NOTICES TO CORRESPONDENTS.

A CONSTANT READER is thanked for his comment, which he will find noticed.

We should be very happy to comply with the wish of Mr. BAGSHAW, of the Fleet Prison, but have not room so to do in this week's impress.

We have to acknowledge the receipt of two letters from Mr. BROOKS, auctioneer, of Southampton. We did not answer the first, because the papers he wrote for were out of print, and we could not, therefore, comply with his request. We now publish the second, as the best mode of answering the purpose he is desirous of effecting:—

Southampton, Sept. 1st, 1826.

SIR,—I wrote to you on Monday last for two of your papers, THE AGE, of last week, and paid the postage of the letter, and gave a friend of mine, who went to town on Tuesday, 1s.2d. for to pay you, and am surprised at not receiving them. I read, from a copy what was inserted in your paper upon the character of C. M. WESTMACOTT, now of this place, and I much wish to have them, to expose him, having received from him as infamous and as dishonorable treatment, and more so than ever I experienced in my life before, in his having taken of me a furnished house for one year, now about five weeks since, this time, and to give him possession of it according to his time, in the understanding before two very respectable witnesses,—I did, for that purpose, remove a very good tenant, then in possession, at £2 per week. And now, Mr. W. will neither take possession, nor make me a reasonable remuneration, as he promised in his note to do, and in many notes since. I consider him a shifting dishonourable fellow, and one who have contradicted himself in his own notes, after having repeatedly promised what he would do; and then, in another note, positively asserts that he never said any such thing. Your sending the papers by return of post will oblige,

Sir, your most obedient Servant,

C. BROOKS, Auctioneer.

P. S. It is said here, that he horsewhipped some one in THE AGE concern. I suppose that's a swell for him, as an excuse. I also hear he intends to give you a rap in the next Southampton Herald. He begins to be better known every day here. C. B.

—it is only necessary to mention, upon this, that the fellow he has written about has not the common courage of a tom-tit, and who at the bare sight of a horse-whip, would run for his life. We are really sorry for Mr. BROOKS, but we think his letter, from the circulation of THE AGE in Southampton, will stop the blackguard's future proceedings in the same line.

AN ORIGINAL SUBSCRIBER has much obliged us by his favor. The Duke of BEDFORD is bound in honor to pay the expences incurred, beyond the amount of subscriptions, both by the Marquis of TAVISTOCK and Lord JOHN RUSSELL, in the respective counties of Bedford and Huntingdon. Our correspondent, however, should not be surprised at his GRACE's backwardness, or anything else a Whig does in these days.

AN INHABITANT from Sloane-square is doing a public good [in] the complaint he makes against the Commissioners of Sewers, respecting the state of the openings made by their workmen—if a public notice of this kind has no effect, let him cite any of them before a magistrate, and send us the names and particulars—we will publish them.

A MAN IN THE FOREIGN OFFICE has sent us some lines on a boating excursion of my Lords CLANWILLIAM, LOTHIAN, and CASTLEREAGH, and after a perusal of them, we think the "Man in the Foreign Office" had much better attend to the Government business, than abuse any of its officers.

The paragraph about the Gwent Eistedfod Festival is an advertisement.

THE AGE.

LONDON, SEPTEMBER 3.

It will be seen, by the subjoined Proclamation, from [Fri]day's Gazette, that a very important revision has [tak]en place in the hitherto existing law, respecting the [imp]ortation of corn—a law, which, till the appearance [of t]he present Order in Council, prohibited the admis[sion] of foreign oats into the home market, until the [aver]age price of the quarter should amount to 27s., [and] the admission of foreign peas, till their average [pric]e should be 53s. per quarter. From the informa[tion] obtained by HIS MAJESTY'S MINISTERS, it seems, [that] the price of both articles exceeds the maximum hi[ther]to imposed on them, and in consequence thereof, and [in an]ticipation of probable distress, from the failure of the crops of the present year, this Order has been so wisely and promptly issued.

The effect of this Order is immediate, and having for object the grant of an immediate permission to import oats, oatmeal, rye, peas, and beans, whether warehoused or otherwise, on the parties so importing giving bond, with sufficient securities, to the satisfaction of the COMMISSIONERS of CUSTOMS, for a duty of 2s. per quarter on oats, 2s. 2d. per boll on oatmeal, and 3s. 6d. per quarter on the other articles herein enumerated, in the event of Parliament authorizing the levy and receipt of the same—which permission extends to the 24th of December next ensuing. It is impossible to contemplate a measure of more momentary utility in the first place, or one leading, we feel assured, to more stable ends in the next—a step commanding the concurrence of the whole nation, and upholding the established wisdom and zeal of His MAJESTY's advisers. The wholesome influence which will circulate very speedily throughout the empire, from the adoption of this proclaimed indulgence, will tend more materially than any means thus far resorted to, to tranquillize the sufferer and to remedy the suffering; for all the resources which public bounty, or private contribution might place at their command, could only produce a momentary relief—it is from the price of the purchase, and not so much from the means of making such purchase, that any permanent advantage is to be anticipated.

The following is a copy of the Order in Council, herein referred to, and proclaimed, as we have stated, in Friday's Gazette:—

At the Court at Windsor, the 1st of September, 1826, Present, the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

Whereas by the laws now in force for regulating the importation of corn—oats and oatmeal may be imported into the United Kingdom, and into the Isle of Man, for home consumption, under and subject to the regulations of the several statutes in that case made and provided, whenever the average price of oats (to be ascertained in the manner therein prescribed) shall be at or above the price of twenty-seven shillings per quarter, and pease may, in like manner, be imported, whenever the price shall be at or above fifty-three shillings per quarter. And whereas by a certain Act of Parliament made and passed in the third year of his present Majesty's reign, intituled, "An Act to amend the Laws relating to the Importation of Corn," it is enacted, that whenever foreign corn, meal, meal, or flour, shall be admissible under the provisions of an Act passed in the fifty-fifth year of the reign of his late Majesty King George the Third, intituled, "An Act to amend the Law now in force for regulating the Importation of Corn," or under the provisions of the said Act, passed in the third year of the reign of his present Majesty, there shall be levied and paid certain duties therein specified upon all such foreign corn, meal, or flour, when admitted for home consumption; and whereas by the weekly returns of purchases and sales of corn, made by the several Inspectors of Corn Returns in the cities and towns of England and Wales, to the Receiver of Corn Returns, it appears that the average price of oats, and also the average price of pease at the present time exceed the before mentioned prices of 27s. and 53s. per quarter: and whereas, from information which hath this day been laid before his Majesty, it appears that the price of oats, as well as that of pease, is still rising, and that the crop of oats, and also the crops of pease and beans, of the present year have failed to a considerable extent, and that a deficiency in the crop of potatoes is also apprehended in some parts of the United Kingdom, and whereas, if the importation, for home consumption, of oats and oatmeal, and of rye, pease, and beans, be not immediately permitted, there is great cause to fear that much distress may ensue to all classes of his Majesty's subjects:

And whereas, under the Acts aforesaid, no foreign grain of the above description, whatever may be the respective average prices of the same, can be admitted to entry, for home consumption, till after the 15th day of November, in the present year, when the next quarterly average, by which the admission of such grain is regulated, will be made up, according to the provisions of the said Acts. His Majesty, with the advice of his Privy Counsel, doth order, and it it is hereby accordingly ordered, that foreign oats and oatmeal, rye, pease, and beans, whether warehoused or otherwise, shall, and may, from the date hereof, be permitted to be entered in the Ports of the United Kingdom, and of the Isle of Man, for home consumption, provided the parties making entry of any such foreign oats, oatmeal, rye, pease, or beans, do give bond, with sufficient sureties, to the satisfaction of the Commissioners of his Majesty's Customs, for the payment of any duties, not exceeding in amount the duties hereinafter mentioned, in case Parliament shall authorise the levy and receipt thereof; that is to say:—

Oats, per quarter, 2s.

Oatmeal, per boll, 2s. 2d.

Rye, pease, and beans, per quarter, 3s. 6d.

And his Majesty, by and with the advice aforesaid, doth hereby further order, and it is accordingly ordered, that such permission to enter oats and oatmeal, rye, pease, and beans, for home consumption, on the conditions aforesaid, shall continue in force from the date hereof, until the expiration of forty days, to be reckoned from the day of the next meeting of Parliament, unless the Parliament shall previously to the expiration of the said forty days make provision to the contrary;

And the Right Honourable the Lords Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury are to give the necessary directions herein accordingly.

THE NEW PARLIAMENT will assemble on the 14th of November.

It has been announced, in the course of the week, that hostilities between the British and the Burmese Governments have terminated, and that a treaty of peace, nearly similar to the former, though attended with much greater probability of its not being rescinded, was ratified on the 24th of February, at Yandaboo, a place situated within four days march of Ummerapoora, the capital. The following particulars relative thereto were received on Tuesday last, by an overland despatch from India, under date Calcutta, April the 7th:—

"Sir Archibald Campbell, and Mr. Robertson, the Civil Commissioner, arrived in the Enterprize steam-vessel, with the gratifying intelligence of peace having been concluded with the Burmese. The Treaty was ratified on the 24th of February, at Yandaboo, within four days march of the capital. The first instalment of 25 lacs of rupees had been despatched from Rangoon by his Majesty's ship Alligator, ten days before the Enterprise sailed. The main body of the force in Ava had returned to Rangoon, and several regiments had embarked for Bengal and Madras. All the troops would be ready to leave the Burmese territory by the time the second instalment of twenty-five lacs of rupees would become due, namely, the 4th of June.

"The Burmese, by virtue of the Treaty, give up all claim to Assam, Cachar, and Jyntea, and acknowledge Gumbeer Singh, Rajah of Munnipore.

"The British are to retain Arracan, Ramree, Cheduba, and Sandowey. The total amount of the indemnity to be paid by the Burmese is one crore of rupees.

"A Commercial Treaty is to be entered into between both powers, stipulating for freedom of navigation, including the commerce in grain."

In addition to these important positions, the following items, as forming part of the treaty, may be relied upon:—

The Burmese cede to the British the provinces of Yeh, Tavoy, Mergui, and Tenasserim.

The King of Siam and his subjects are included in the stipulations of the treaty.

An accredited British Minister, with an escort of fifty men, is to reside at the Court of Ava, and an accredited Burmese Minister, attended by a similar escort, is to reside at Calcutta.

It would be absurd to expect the consolidation of either more or less important advantages to be effected, without exciting the malice or discontent of that portion of the public press, the very existence of which depends on its distortion of every circumstance touching the public weal, and the usual quantity of nonsense has consequently appeared in some of the opposition prints—it would be equally absurd to believe a word contained in them.

We regret to find, by an advertisement in our Paper of this day, that the funds collected for the distressed weavers of Spitalfields are nearly exhausted. We trust the work of charity will not be left incomplete, but that yet, a little longer, the stream of public benevolence will continue to flow for these suffering artizans.

THE PAST WEEK.

So little has occurred, within the last seven days, to interest, or really to attract the reader's attention, that it is almost a puzzler what to enumerate, under the important heading given to this article. It is no discredit to say, of many of our contemporaries, that, within this given period, they have not written an amusing article, because they are seldom guilty to that effect: and if we are merely to depend upon them, we should have a very sorry tale to tell, for the most part. The Times, to be sure, has published a very cleverly composed, though villainous, tirade against the Court of Chancery, which, as usual, the Morning Herald copies, without acknowledgment—the Times is justly angry at this, but forgets that it is in the habit of doing the same by others, for there is barely a Journal in the Metropolis, save the Courier, which has not, in the most unblushing manner, inserted the jokes of THE AGE, in its columns, to pass for its own. Let that pass. The Times states it to be "written by the author of Christobel," being an inimitably close imitation of COLERIDGE's style—however, some fool in the Herald of yesterday, assures the public that it is not written by that sanctified rhymester; and there let the matter rest.

A few of the members of CROCKFORD's Club, then remaining in town, had a turtle dinner there a few days since, by way of winding up the season; the last display, previous to the despoliation of a part of the premises, for the purpose of adding thereto an adjoining house, which this vagabond has lately purchased, with the view of enlarging his establishment, and where, after taking in an additional room, he proposes taking in an additional number of subscribers. However, if men will be such simpletons as to suffer themselves to be ruined, it seems foolish for any other person to attempt to prevent it—and, indeed, our object is, chiefly to prevent the ruin of their families, with themselves, and to expose the miserable wretch who lures them on to their destruction.

A person, by the name of BUTLER, has been endeadeavouring to "raise the wind," by delivering two or three parcels at the house of Lady GLENGALL, in Lower Grosvenor-street, purporting to be for the Noble DICK, and charging sundry small sums for the delivery thereof. The chief part of the fun, which was deduced from the person's examination at Marlborough-street, consisted of a glowing description, given by one of the servants, of the Noble EARL's estates in Ireland, from one of which the parcels were supposed to come. There's no doubt the worthy Magistrate imagined the Peer to possess a stupendous property, and the thing to be a dreadful piece of business altogether; but as GLENGALL has not six-pennyworth of land on earth, we imagine his servant has taken a lesson from his Noble Master, and has been playing the part of Caleb Balderstone, with as much effect as his Lord does that of Young Wilding. The prosecution appears to us altogether a hard case upon Mr. BUTLER; for, judging from the gentleman's name, to say nothing of his conduct, we should pronounce him to be some poor relation of the family.

It really is high time for that impudent blockhead, Mr. GEORGE ROBINS, to abandon that system of humbug he is almost daily practising, by praising himself and his exertions to such an unlimited extent in the papers. In the Morning Post, of yesterday week, there were no less than FIVE PARAGRAPHS, descriptive of this auctioneer's sales, and if we had entertained a doubt before of his writing them all, it vanished on perusing his "special original" in last Sunday's Bull, wherein he quotes "French" as fluently as he did the day before in the Post. In one of these it is said, "of this estate Mr. ROBINS has the disposal, comme l'ordinaire ;" and certainly, as BALL HUGHES said, a man, much more "ordinaire" is hardly to be found in England, but that does not entitle him to thrust either himself or his concerns so continually upon public attention. Mr. ROBINS, as an auctioneer, is a highly respectable, though unboundedly impudent, tradesman ; but, as a letter writer, or literary scribe, he is a mere log ; and it is positively sickening to read, three or four times a week, a flaming account of his being "specially retained" to sell a house, or of one of his specially-retaining "clients," as if the booby were one of the first lawyers in the kingdom. In his own way, as we have said before, this man is all well enough, but he is "neither useful nor ornamental" in any of those repeated public situations, in the conduct of which he so repeatedly exhibits his excessively plain visage.

The attractions, which the country every where now holds out, have completely depopulated London—some have run off to the St. Leger, others shot off to the partridges—one party of the fashionables are yachting, another racing, a third touring, and even the citizens are gone, in part, to Margate, per steam, and the rest retired to their suburban villas, pickling for the winter. The unfortunate individuals who are left behind can derive very little consolation, except from a participation in all these pursuits by a perusal ; and as one branch of them is, at this particular moment, of the utmost interest, we have thought it advisable to pay the subject a more especial attention than the rest. On Friday last began, legally, that annual feature, in English pastime, partridge-shooting, which will be speedily followed by the set-in of all its concomitants—the Cockney, whose sporting existence has till this day been confined to the sacrifice of some devoted cock-sparrow on a cherry-tree, or some tom-tit in a gooseberry-bush, has now the extended privilege of beating up Brixton Hill, across to Camberwell, through Greenwich, ferry over, touch in the Commercial Road, vere round the compass, and bolt off at once to Wormwood Scrubs, for the chance of a bit of game ; and as there are a great many of our readers who will naturally be anxious to know the issue, in some quarters, of that celebrated and sanguinary day, we cannot possibly do better than record it. We have made every inquiry in our power, and have been enabled, at considerable expense, to glean the following particulars of

THE FIRST OF SEPTEMBER.

AIR—Bow, wow, wow.

That ev'ry sporting character may fail not to remember
The glories, and the dangers, of the FIRST DAY of September ;
We publish this precise account, where he may learn to boot, Sirs,
The shortest way "to teach the young idea how to shoot," Sirs.
BOW, WOW, WOW.

The Duke of GLOUCESTER, Bag-shot armed, set out last Friday morning,
A motion of which, entre nous, some gave his cousin warning ;
Because a man, if once a fool, perhaps may be a dunce again,
And therefore he might hit the eye of Captain WALDEGRAVE once agaiu.
BOW, WOW, WOW.

It is not known what birds he winged, or what were sent for use home,
But one thing's pretty certain, that at least he brought A GOOSE home ;
And some whose voices in his fame are always raised much louder,
Declare, at least, HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS shot—AWAY HIS POWDER.
BOW, WOW, WOW.

Then BALL HUGHES, who is noted for committing yearly slaughter,
Preferring, as some sportsmen do, the game upon the water ;
Reached Dowgate-wharf by half-past five, and perching on a ridge, Sirs,
He had the pleasure, very soon, of shooting—LONDON-BRIDGE, Sirs.
BOW, WOW, WOW.

In consequence of orders left by LAMBTON, 'ere he started
For Italy, his keepers had by day-break all departed ;
But long before 'twas twelve o'clock, we understand the whole, Sirs,
Contrived, among themselves, to shoot—A COLLIER FULL OF COAL, Sirs.
BOW, WOW, WOW.

Then CORNWALL, scenting White's betimes, with cane and pipe-clay balls, Sirs,
Winged half-a-dozen Jarvies, and brought down some womens' stalls, Sirs ;
And, having, with such sport as this, got half-way through the day, Sirs,
As soon as it was afternoon, he wisely shot—AWAY, Sirs.
BOW, WOW, WOW.

Lord BILLY LENNOX, who has been, we know, in practice lately,
At starting off on Friday, said to GORDON, quite sedately :
"I'll shoot some birds, or shoot myself—'twill answer just the same, Sir ;"
But GORDON said, "I'll have the first, for t'other isn't game, Sir."
BOW, WOW, WOW.

And DICKY GLENGALL, as he got the blind side of my Lord, Sirs,
Who had to take his shot, because he would n't take his word, Sirs,
Thought he could do the same with birds, wherever he might go, Sirs,
And, therefore managed all the day to shoot—WITH THE LONG BOW, SIRS.
BOW, WOW, WOW.

Sir WILLIAM CURTIS, like the rest, unable to refrain, Sirs,
Because all night within his head he felt a shooting pain, Sirs,
Rose early, and soon reached an oyster stall upon the road, Sirs,
Where he contrived himself to shuit—WITH NEARLY HALF A LOAD, SIRS.
BOW, WOW, WOW.

And then, besides, the autumn plants, Sir WILLIAM says, with reason,
From shooting very finely, keep the sport up of the season :
So what with flowers, men, and birds, you must be hard to suit, Sirs,
If you from, this, can't "teach the young idea how to shoot, Sirs."
BOW, WOW, WOW.

DIMENSIONS OF LADY WELLESLEY.

We copy the following odd account from the Dublin Mail, which must be, no doubt, very consolatory to the numerous enquirers who have made their appearance at Dublin Castle, since HIS EXCELLENCY'S late marriage :—

"The Messrs. Rogers have furnished us with the following dimensions of the "LADY WELLESLEY." It will be seen by these statements, that the "LADY WELLESLEY" has some inches to spare, and we give insertion to the fact with great pleasure, as it disabuses the public mind of an opinion very generally circulated :"

Breadth of passage—37 ft.
Narrowest part—35.
Extreme breadth of "Lady Wellesley" outside, at the broadest part—33 : 4——

Another of those scenes of infamy, which, we regret to say, are but too common in the country, was yesterday exposed at Marlborough Street Police Office. RICHARD ARCHDALL, a Colonel in the East India Service, has been committed, in default of bail, for practices of a most revolting nature, in which a boy named FREDERICK WITHERS (who went from the protection of the GUARDIAN SOCIETY as servant to this vagabond) has been involved. The case has been very clearly proved, and the prosecution is carrying on, we understand, by the Society in question—and the bail demanded by the Bench, is, the wretch himself in 1000*l.*, and two sureties in 500*l.* each—it should have been at least vice versa.

ANOTHER DOGBERRY.

Some of the administrators of justice in this metropolis appear to have as little knowledge of their worthy calling, as any set of disciplined blockheads well can. We were compelled, from a sheer sense of duty, to comment, some week or two since, on the flippant conduct of the Chief Magistrate of Bow-street Police-office, exemplified in some striking instances of his judicial overbearing — a step we considered ourselves called upon to take, not from the slightest notion of disrespect to the importance and responsibility of the station, but with all becoming contempt for the arrogant mode of exercising its functions.

We consider ourselves again called upon to advocate the same principles, by the singular deportment of Mr. ROE, one of the Marlborough-street magistracy. My Lord MARYBOROUGH, with a zeal, feeling, and good sense, which would be a credit and ornament to the mind of any man, has been espousing the case of an aged woman, named ELLEN GOODALL, who has been committed to prison for fifteen days, on the sole report of two vagabond thieftakers, who appeared against her, on a charge of beggary, at the instigation of the Mendicity Society. A greater scene of humbug than this society is altogether, cannot well be practised on the understanding of man, and Mr. ROE seems to glory in exercising its prerogatives. This wretched female, at 80 years of age, is immured for a fortnight, by the officer's own showing, for the mere crime of holding out her hand, to receive what bounty a passenger might bestow, and for refusing to surcharge, with herself, the parish workhouse, as by her own industry, she could provide for herself, and at the same time a decayed old partner of her miserable life. DOGBERRY ROE should blush at this recital ; and if my Lord MARYBOROUGH does but fulfil the threat held out by him, we well know HIS LORDSHIP HAS THE POWER of humbling the superlative arrogance and gross ignorance of this pert Judge.

Not satisfied with displaying this gross excess of stupidity, DOGBERRY ROE has enlarged upon it, by excluding from his office, one of the Reporters for the Morning Herald, (who had given an account of this affair,) a valuable servant, and a faithful and most amusing scribe ; by means of which the public are partly deprived of any knowledge of the proceedings over which the said ROE presides. The Editor of the Herald, who does not want for spirit, ought immediately to submit the whole business to Mr. PEEL, a statesman, from whose judgment, zeal, and politeness, he would receive immediate remedy ; and this inflated lawgiver would be taught to know that he is but a mere tool in the hands of a higher and proper power, and that by any infringement of duty, he would instantly become amenable to the very laws, over which he has been appointed to preside. We recommend to the especial perusal, and deepest consideration of Mr. DOGBERRY ROE, the character of Angelo, so beautifully drawn by SHAKSPEARE, in his fine play of Measure for Measure —in the traits of that Judge's deportment, he will be enabled very soon to find out a capital likeness of an intimate friend of his own—he will discover the vast difference ever to be acknowledged between the possession of power, and the dispensation of it—and above all, that although

"'Tis excellent
To have a giant's strength, that it is tyrannous
To use it like a giant."

We do not mean to call DOGBERRY ROE a giant, but he will easily be able to draw the conclusion.

THEATRICALS.

The following may be considered the Drury Lane "Diary of Puff" for the past week, which has appeared in the daily papers :—

Monday—Drury-Lane Theatre will open on the 23d, and Covent-Garden on the 25th September. They will be open alternate nights during the usual period.

Tuesday—One of the objects connected with Mr. Price's (the new lessee of Drury-lane Theatre) journey to America, was, for the purpose of renewing the engagements of Garcia, and the whole corps of Italian singers and dancers, for his American Theatre, where, during the last season, they were eminently successful.

Wednesday—Mr. PRICE will return from America by the beginning of October, in company with Mr. KEAN.

Thursday—Drury-lane Theatre re-opens on Saturday, the 23d of September, and the most active exertions are already making preparatory to that event. During the recess the interior of the house, and the avenues leading to it, have been thoroughly cleaned and repaired. An entirely new stage has been erected, and Stanfield is now occupied on a new drop-scene, a landscape with an architectural screen, in lieu of the former bordered one. Beyond these, but few alterations have been made in the house ; but to the company, which comprises nearly the whole of its former favourites, great additions have been made. In tragedy, Mr. Salter, from the Liverpool Theatre, will ascend the throne vacated by Macready ; who, as our readers know, is gone (or is going) to America, to take the place of Kean, who will commence his re-engagement at this theatre in January next. To this department Mrs. M'Gibbon, who appeared a few years ago at Covent-garden theatre, has been added ; also Miss Tree (a sister of Miss M. Tree, now Mrs. Bradshaw), who will shortly appear as Juliet, and Miss Brothers. In comedy, Mr. Hooper, from Liverpool, will undertake the line which Elliston's secession has left vacant. Mr. Southwell, from Dublin, in the same walk, will take to the more subordinate business. Mr. Thompson (not the one already known under that cognomen (will sustain the heavy countrymen, the Tykes, Giles, and that class, whilst the lighter parts of the same order are to be supported by Mr. Edwin, of the Nottingham Theatre, a descendant of the celebrated performer of that name ; he will make his first appearance in Ezekiel Homespun, in the Heir at Law. In the operatical department, besides Mr. Braham and Miss Stephens, a pupil of that gentleman will shortly appear as Polly, in the Beggar's Opera ; and Miss Tree, another sister of the lady above named, will make her debut as Susanna, in Figaro. Mrs. Austin, belonging to this company some two or three seasons ago, is engaged ; and also a pupil of Crevelli, a bass singer. Liston is engaged, and it is not improbable that Mathews will be. Noble and the corps de ballet are retained. Winter's Oracle is one of the forthcoming novelties which will be produced.

Friday.—JOHN CALCRAFT, Esq., the Chairman of the Select Committee of Drury-lane Theatre, attended by Mr. DUNN, the Treasurer, and in the absence of Mr. PRICE, the confidential manager, have recently paid a visit to the Birmingham Theatre, to witness the performances of two Miss TREES, sisters to the amiable and accomplished lady who is now in Italy. These young ladies, it appears, give promise of considerable theatrical talents.

Saturday—It would seem that, notwithstanding Mr. PRICE having become the lessee of Drury-lane Theatre, the management is left to the Committee ; if so, so much the worse for all parties.

—all of which only prove that Mr. PRICE has suffered himself to be surrounded by a very injudicious set of officers. It has been before proved to demonstration, that the interference of a set of silly committee men has involved this theatre in one fatal ruin ; and now, at a time when its fortunes might be restored, by the accession to its administration of a wealthy and intelligent man, we find the principal to be, like his great predecessor, half seas over, and the engagements concluded under the surveillance of a Mr. CALCRAFT, who knows as much about the drama as he does about politics, notwithstanding his theatrical genealogy. We are really quite sorry to think of Mr. PRICE'S situation —nearly the whole of these engagements combined, are worth nothing, and all the stuff about what he is to do in America, downright rhodomontade. He should not have gone, but being gone, his interests should be better protected, than by the insertion of such inflated nonsense in the daily journals. We will pin our faith on Mr. PRICE doing more, in five moments of personal interference, than all which these accounts hold out, put together. We wish he was as near England as he is America.

We are unable to give our readers an account of Mr. MATHEWS'S re-appearance, or of the new piece in which he re-appeared—our scribe, who does these things, has obtained a few days furlough, on a shooting excursion, occupied with a very different kind of piece altogether, and one calculated to make quite as good A REPORT. If Mr. MATHEWS will pardon such a want of respect, we may hope for the reader's indulgence, till another week.

As the movements of all Thespians are always extremely interesting and diverting to mankind in general, it may be as well to apprize them that, in consequence of the Birmingham Treasury being robbed of 200l., half of which was the due of Mr. MACREADY, that gentleman, in pity for the manager's loss, and regardless of his own, played another night gratis, by which the sum of 179l. was realized. Mr. MACREADY then started for Liverpool, from which port he embarked on Friday, in the Canada, for America. Miss STEPHENS had a bumper for her benefit at the theatre in this town, on Friday se'nnight, and Miss LOVE has started to succeed her there. Mr. C. KEMBLE is playing at Scarborough, and Mr. SOMERTON at Bartholomew Fair ; and that comprises all the information we have at present been enabled to collect. We have received a tremendous puff about Miss BROTHERS, which it would be superfluous to insert—if she is a lady of half the talent the writer gives her credit for, she will not require such aid—if she is not, such aid will not be the means of inspiring her. The winter season, at least with this part of mankind, is just about to set in, and we shall then take an opportunity of enlarging upon the merits of many of these worthy people, whose pretensions have been so loudly trumpeted in the text herein referred to—it will afford us real gratification to find them entitled to all the encomiums so lavishly bestowed upon them—that we have ventured to doubt the truth of them, will be evident from a perusal of these remarks, and that we shall not fail to repeat the same, if found necessary so to do, we beg, with all due respect, very distinctly to apprize them.

DUKE OF YORK'S MANSION.

The exterior of the mansion erecting for the future residence of his Royal Highness the Duke of York, is almost finished, and presents a very magnificent aspect, when seen from the Parks. The form of the building is nearly a square. The front side, which faces the canal in St. James's Park, projects slightly at each end; there is also a projection in the middle, having six Corinthian columns a little in advance, supporting a pediment; the windows on the ground floor between the piers which support the columns have circular heads. At each end are Venetian windows, one on the ground floor, and one on the first floor; that on the first floor has two pilasters on each side of it, of the Corinthian Order, of the same height as the columns which support the pediment in the middle. There are eleven windows along this side of the building, both in the ground and first floors: those of the first floor are of large dimensions, and fully proportionate to the magnitude of the building. The west side, fronting the Green Park, resembles exactly the side we have first described: with these exceptions, there are no pilasters on the projections at the two ends, neither has it the Venetian windows, as they are all made of the same dimensions. The east side, which is directly opposite the Duke of Clarence's new mansion, differs from the other sides in its not having any columns in the centre projections, which contains only three windows; between each of these windows are placed two Corinthian pilasters; there are also two pilasters at each of the angles of the centre projection. There are nine windows on each tier on this side. The remaining side of the north has been chosen for the entrance, owing to the open space in the stable-yard, immediately in front of it, affording ample room for the purpose of a court-yard. In the middle of this side of the building a portico is erecting, which will very shortly be completed. It projects sufficiently far to leave a commodious carriage drive under it; it is sustained by eight Corinthian columns (six in front, and two placed behind the end ones near the building), which stand on piers, extending as high as the first floor; the height of the portico will correspond with the height of the pediments on the south and west sides. Above the columns, pilasters, &c. an entablature of the Corinthian Order runs uninterruptedly round the building; above this entablature a very elegant balustrade has been put up, to serve as a screen to the attic windows. Within the outer wall, although at a great distance from it, is an attic wall, rising several feet above the roof, which goes completely round the building; into this wall all the flues have been conducted. Nearly in the centre of the edifice, and still loftier than the attic wall, a lanthorn of considerable dimensions has been erected. It is to light the grand staircase leading from the ground floor to the state apartments on the first floor. The whole of the exterior walls have been cased with stone, which, together with the piers, &c., have been rusticated in the French style, as high as the first floor.

Oliver Cromwell being afraid of cabals from the expelled family, thought it dangerous to permit persons, particularly noblemen, to quit the kingdom without leave. A young nobleman in the interest of Charles II. came to pay his respects to the Protector, and solicit leave of absence from the country. Cromwell immediately granted the request, but said, "Well, let me see you soon again, but don't see Charles Stuart." "I will not, upon my honour," replied the peer. The nobleman soon returned, and coming to pay his duty to the Protector. Cromwell snatched his hat out of his hands, and with a penknife quickly cut open the lining, and from the inside took out several letters and papers directed to the friends of Charles. "O shame," cried Oliver, "is this the way the English nobles keep their honour? Did you not promise not to see Charles Stuart?" "I did not see him," answered the nobleman. "Then," said Cromwell, "who put out the candle, you or Charles?" Oliver had cunningly contrived to put a spy of his own into the peer's service, who discovered that at the interview the King first put out the lights.

LAUGHTER.—A witty writer says, in praise of laughter—"Laughter has even dissipated disease and preserved life, by a sudden effort of nature. We are told that the great Erasmus laughed so heartily at the satire by Reuchlier and Von Hutten, that he broke an imposthume, and recovered his health." In a singular treatise 'on laughter,' Joubert gives two similar instances. A patient being very low, the physician, who had ordered a dose of rhubarb, countermanded the medicine, which was left on the table. A monkey in the room, jumping up, discovered the goblet, and having tasted, made a terrible grimace. Again putting his tongue to it, he perceived some sweetness of the dissolved manna, while the rhubarb had sunk to the bottom. Thus emboldened, he swallowed the whole, but found it such a nauseous potion, that after many strange and fantastic grimaces, he grinded his teeth in agony, and in a violent fury threw the goblet on the floor. The whole affair was so ludicrous, that the sick man burst into repeated peals of laughter, and the recovery of cheerfulness led to health.

HYDROPHOBIA.—A most distressing case of hydrophobia occurred last week, in Salford. A Mr. Vaughan, who resided, we believe, in Back Coburg-street, was bitten, about two months ago, by a strange cat, which exhibited no symptoms of disease, but was, at the time, playing with a cat belonging to Mr. Vaughan. The wound, which was slight, was inflicted on the soft part, between the thumb and fore finger of the right hand. The day after receiving the bite, Mr. Vaughan went to Mr. Spencer, a surgeon, residing in the neighbourhood, who applied a common dressing to the wound: it healed in a very few days, and nothing more was thought of it until Monday week, when Mr. Spencer was once more called in to visit his patient, whom he found exhibiting symptoms of fever, as well as some other symptoms of a peculiar nature, which, after a little investigation, Mr. Spencer discovered to be those usually ascribed to hydrophobia. He immediately requested the assistance of several other medical gentlemen, who tried to administer some of the medicines usually prescribed in such cases: but the indisposition of the patient to receive any thing at their hands, in a great degree frustrated their endeavours: and such medicines as he was prevailed on to take did not appear to have the slightest effect on the disorder. He manifested the usual symptoms at the sight of a looking-glass, or of fluids: he was, however, several times prevailed on to take a little water, but swallowed it with great difficulty, and complained that it hurt him. We do not know whether he was aware of the nature of his disorder; but, from his frequently expressing a wish to get rid of the medical men who attended him, it is probable that he had, at least, a suspicion of the subject, and was infected with the vulgar and absurd notion, that the surgeons would put an end to his existence. He remained in a state of great suffering from Monday noon to midnight on Wednesday, when he expired; having been in possession of his faculties until within half an hour of his death; though, when suffering under the paroxysms of the disorder, he was occasionally so violent, as to require considerable restraint. Nothing is known of the fate of the animal which inflicted the wound, as nobody could tell to whom it belonged; but, as it exhibited no symptom of disease, it is not improbable that this is another of those cases, of which there have been several in the annals of surgery, wherein the bite of an enraged animal, not labouring under hydrophobia, has produced that disease in human beings.

A scarcity nearly approaching to famine prevailed in France in 1741, the effect of the terrible frost of 1740. The Duchess of Ventadour, who had, from her exemplary character, been appointed governess of the infant King, Louis XV., not only gave all her revenue, but borrowed besides 80,000 francs, to relieve the poor. Her steward, remonstrating that she passed all the bounds of prudence, she mildly answered, "Let us give always, and even borrow, while it is necessary, to save the poor from death; we shall never want, neither I nor my family: in my station there is no great merit in trusting to Providence."

SPORTING INTELLIGENCE.

The following matches are to take place at the ensuing Newmarket meeting, which commences on the 2d of October:—

FIRST DAY (MONDAY).—The Duke of Grafton's Paul Jones, 8st. 7lb. agst Lord Anson's Heroine, 8st. for 200, h. ft.

Mr. Molony's bl. f. by Smolensko, agst Mr. R. Wilson's Maldonia, 8st. 7lb. each, for 100 sovs h. ft.

SECOND DAY.—The Duke of Rutland's Adeliza, 8st. 9lb. agst Lord Anson's Nourredin, 7st. 11lb. for 200 sovs h. ft.

Mr. Wyndham's f. by Whalebone, agst Col. Synge's Number Nip, 8st. 4lb. each, for 100 sovs 75 ft.

The Duke of Grafton's Parapluie agst Lord Jersey's Henrica, 8st. 7lb. each, for 200 sovs.

THIRD DAY.—Lord Exeter's Tirailleur, 8st. 9lb. agst the Duke of Grafton's Saracen, 8st. 4lb. for 150, h. ft.

Mr. Greville's Elizabeth, agst Lord Jersey's Henrica, 8st. 7lb. each, for 100, h. ft.

At the Newmarket Craven Meeting, 1829, the following matches will be run:—

FIRST DAY.—Gen. Grosvenor's c. by Gustavus, 8st. 7lb. agst Mr. Poyntz's c. by Sultan, 8st. 4lb. for 200, h. ft.

FOURTH DAY.—POST MATCH.—Mr. Poyntz's c. by Sultan, agst the Duke of Grafton's c. by Tiresias; colts, 8st. 7lb.; fillies 8st. 4lb. to bring one to the post, R. M. 200, h. ft.

On the First Day of the First Spring Meeting, 1829.—Gen. Grosvenor's c. by Phantom (8st. 7lb.) agst Mr. Poyntz's c. by Sultan (8st. 4lb.) for 100, h. ft.

EGHAM.

We have been favoured with the following statement of the present subscriptions for the next year's races:—

The Gold Cup, value 100 sovs in specie; 3 yrs, 6st. 7lb.; 4 yrs, 8st.; 5 yrs, 8st. 10lb.; 6 yrs, and aged, 9st. 4lb.; mares and geldings allowed 3lb.

Subscribers—Duke of Richmond; Lord Mountcharles; Sir John Gibbons; Colonel Wood; Captain Locke; J. Ramsbottom, Esq.; W. H. Sumner, Esq. jun.; Mr. Theobald.

Sweepstakes of 25 sovs each, for 3 and 4 year olds.

Subscribers—Duke of Richmond; Captain Locke.

The Surrey and Middlesex Stakes of 25 sovs each, 15l. ft. and only 5l. if declared, &c.

Subscribers—Duke of Richmond; Lord Mountcharles; Lord Dunwich; Sir John Gibbons; Colonel Wood; J. Ramsbottom, Esq.; Captain Locke; Mr. Theobald; Captain Leeson; W. H. Sumner, jun. Esq.; Mr. Smith; Mr. Greville; Mr. Tattersall; Mr. Gibbons; Mr. E. Gibbons.

The Magna Charta Stakes of 50 sovs each.—Lord Mountcharles.

Sweepstakes of 15 sovs each, for horses regularly hunted with any established pack of fox-hounds, or the King's, or Berkeley stag-hounds.

Subscribers—Lord W. Lennox, Capt. Berkeley, Messrs. Brown, T. Jones, and Dr. Burgh.

EGHAM, 1830.

A Produce Stakes of 50 sovs each, for mares covered in 1826, produce to be declared by Aug. 1, 1827.

Subscribers—Duke of Richmond, Lord Mountcharles, Lord Dunwich, Capt. Berkeley, Mr. Tattersall, Mr. Apperley, Mr. Smith, and Capt. Westenra.

THE ARMY.

Detachments belonging to the 1st and 8th Regiments of Infantry embarked yesterday, on board a vessel in the River, for Scotland, on route to join their Depots, at Perth, and Glasgow.

The 56th (West Essex) Regiment of Foot, which has recently arrived from the Mauritius, has received orders to proceed from Portsmouth to Hull, where the Depot of the Corps is at present stationed.

Detachments belonging to the Royal Artillery, and the 33d, 50th, 77th,, 91st, and 92d Regiments of Infantry, arrived on the 30th ult. on board the Princess Royal transport, at Portsmouth, from Jamaica.

The Detachments belonging to the 33d and 77th Regiments of Infantry, have received orders to proceed from Portsmouth, to Bristol, on route to join their respective Depots stationed in Ireland.

MONTHLY MILITARY OBITUARY.

Colonel M. of Waterford, Waterford Militia.

Lieut.-Colonels—Bayer, h. p. 37th Foot; Ogilvy, late of 11th Foot.

Captains—Methuen, 1st Dragoons; M'Kenzie, 5th Foot; Wiltshire, 11th Foot; Barnett 54th Foot, on passage from Chittagong to Calcutta; Beurne, late Invalids, Guernsey; Keith, late 9th Veteran Battalion, Chelsea; Roland, h. p. Roll's Regiment, Ramainmotir; Tyler, Sligo Militia; Smith, 39th Foot, London.

Lieutenants—M'Carthy, (Adj.) 47th Foot, drowned on board the ship Lady Campbell, on passage to Europe; Bell, 58th Foot-Wyse, 84th Foot, Ennis; J. C. Nicholls, 2d West India Regiment, Bathurst, St. Mary, Africa; Harrison, Cape Corps; Anstice, h. p. 22d Dragoons; Creighton, h. p. Indep. Nova Scotia; Desire Dufief, h. p. Chass. Britt. Paris; Bramer, h. p. 46th Foot, Hesse Cassel; Worlledge, late 1st Veteran Battalion, Lambeth, Edwards, h. p. 96th Foot, Windsor; W. H. Harvey, Invalid Art. Eltham.

Cornet Fraser, 6th Dragoons, Dorchester.

Ensign Dodgson, h. p. Elford's Corps, Blackburne.

Adjutant Brown, Bedford Militia, Bedford.

Quarter Masters—Simson, h. p. 3d Dragoons, Litchfield; Page, h. p. 7th Dragoons; Burt, h. p. Romney Fen Cavalry, Leominster.

Surgeon Cogan, h. p. 81st Foot, Halifax, Nova Scotia.

BRAZILIAN LOAN OF £2,000,000 STERLING, NEGOTIATED BY MR. N. M. ROTHSCHILD IN LONDON, in 1825.—The half-yearly Dividend on the above Loan, which becomes due on the 1st of October next, will be paid by Mr. N. M. Rothschild on Monday, the 2d of October, and every succeeding day, between the hours of ten and two, at his Counting-house, No. 2, New-court, St. Swithin's-lane. The Dividend Warrants, with a list thereof, in numerical order, must be left one day previous for examination.

PRUSSIAN LOAN NEGOTIATED BY MR. N. M. ROTHSCHILD IN LONDON, IN 1818.—The half-yearly Dividend on the above Loan, which becomes due on the 1st of October next, will be paid by Mr. N. M. Rothschild, on Monday, the 2d of October, and every succeeding day, between the hours of ten and two, at his Counting-house, No. 2, New Court-street, St. Swithin's-lane. The Dividend Warrants, with a list thereof, in numerical order, must be left one day previous for examination.

LAMENTABLE OCCURRENCE.—A LADY SHOT.—On Monday afternoon a most distressing accident occurred at the country seat of Mr. John Lang, writer, which is situated at Kirkintulloch. Mr. Lang's grandson, a little boy, had unfortunately laid his hands on a loaded pistol, which Mr. Lang thought he had deposited in a place of safety, and, with it in his possession, he came to the lobby, where his cousin was standing (the lady of Mr. Wright, an Advocate, on a visit to her grandfather, from Edinburgh), who desired him to lay it down; on which he said, "Oh! there is no danger, there is nothing in it;" and, holding it in the direction of Mrs. Wright, pulled the trigger, when, most melancholy to relate, the ball which the pistol contained went through her head, and she almost instantly expired. Mr. Wright, it is said, is still in ignorance of his calamity, he being gone with a shooting party to the moors. Some accounts say that she had her infant child in her arms at the time. She had been married only two years.—Glasgow Free Press.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

COURT OF CHANCERY, MONDAY.
MECHANICS' MAGAZINE.

M'KOY V. ROBERTSON.

Mr. Bickersteth stated to his Lordship, that Mr. Heald had applied for an injunction in this case, which his Lordship refused, and the only question remaining was as to the costs. He apprehended his client, the defendant, was entitled to his costs.

The Lord Chancellor told Mr. Bickersteth he might take the order refusing the injunction, but he could not give costs. It would have been a desirable thing if the parties had considered the situations in which they stood before they applied to this Court.

Mr. Bickersteth said, his client, the defendant, was anxious to know his Lordship's reasons for refusing the injunction, as there were some very nice points relating to the law of partnerships and copyrights, arising out of this case.

His Lordship observed, he should be very unwilling to frighten the parties with detailing those reasons.

LONDON ENCYCLOPÆDIA.

MAWMAN V. TEGG.

Mr. Ching, on the part of the defendant, submitted to his Lordship, whether it would not be better to introduce into the order made in this matter, a direction, that on the trial, the Jury should assess the damage done to the plaintiff, as such a direction would put an end to the defendant's keeping an account of the profits of the work.

The Lord Chancellor considered it impossible that a Jury could assess the damages in such a case as this. He knew of no case in which the Court had ever thought of giving the plaintiff any other satisfaction than the profits of the counter-work. If there was an action brought for damages, the probable result of it would be, to refer it to an arbitrator, to assess the amount of the damage. His Lordship thought no such direction ought to be introduced into the order, and considered he had penned the minutes as reasonable as possible.

STEAD V. KAYE AND FRESHFIELD.

This was a case in which the plaintiff applied to have a bill of costs of the defendant's taxed, on the ground that the charges were exorbitant. On the hearing of the motion, his Lordship said, that as neither himself or Counsel were judges of what were fair and reasonable charges, it would be better that the plaintiff should, if he could, obtain some affidavits from gentlemen in the profession, as to the nature of the charge complained of.

Mr. Ching this morning handed in to his Lordship, several affidavits made by very respectable solicitors, who, as Mr. Ching observed, all concurred in pronouncing the charges complained of to be extravagant and exorbitant.

The Court rose at an early hour.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 1.

GRANT V GRANT,

This was a report from the Master, upon which the confirmation of his Lordship was prayed. It appeared that considerable property had been left by will to a grandson, who was at the time of his grandfather's decease an inmate in the workhouse. The boy was removed from the workhouse, and sent to school to be educated, for the purpose of eradicating those low habits which in his former unfortunate situation he had inevitably acquired. This object had not, however, been answered; and it was now desired to place him under private tuition until he should attain the age of 21, (being now 14 or 15), with a salary to the tutor of 300l. per annum. To this proposition his father had, fortunately for the young man, acceded, and all that was now waited for was his Lordship's decision.

The Lord Chancellor confirmed the Master's report.

EFFECTS OF THE DROUGHT.

Mr. Spence wished to call his Lordship's attention to a case of great importance. In consequence of the late great drought, water had become very scarce in the country, and in Lancashire every drop of water that could be obtained had been drained off the lands by different parties. The result had been great injury to a number of works situated in that part of the country, and unless an injunction to stay waste should be issued, those works would be completely ruined. He wished to know, therefore, from his Lordship, whether it would be convenient for him to hear the cause any time next week.

The Lord Chancellor said, there was no necessity for asking leave to make such a motion. The Court of Chancery was open at all times. While travelling, he had often heard, at inns on the road, and also at his own country house, causes, from delaying which, danger might have ensued; and it was his opinion that the Chancellor or any other Judge, if come-at-able, was bound to hear such causes. This principle had always governed the Judges of that Court in hearing motions to stay waste. He had intended to sit from Tuesday to Thursday during next week, but if the business could not be got over by Thursday, something must be done with the water on Friday.

IN THE MATTER OF LADY GRESLEY.

Mr. Spence stated, that Sir Roger Gresley was extremely anxious that no vindictive motive should be thought to influence him in urging any thing against his mother. As the gentlemen who appeared for her Ladyship stated their conviction of the competency of her Ladyship to manage her concerns, Sir Roger was now willing to postpone all proceeding under the commission for three months, for the purpose of satisfying himself. No danger could result to her Ladyship or her property by the delay. If, however, in the interval Sir Roger should not feel himself satisfied, he trusted it would be open to him to take advantage of the commission.

Mr. Parker appeared on the other side. He stated, that the lady was as competent to manage herself and her affairs as any body in existence. He hoped Mr. Spence would allow him to inspect that correspondence which had been used before his Lordship.

Mr. Spence said, that Sir Roger Gresley was not in a condition to give those letters up. At all events, no proceedings would be taken immediately.

The Lord Chancellor said, that he had seen a letter written by Sir Roger to Mr. Ponsonby, and the answer to that letter, which were as proper for a son or gentleman to write, as, in his opinion, could be written. He thought it best to let the matter rest upon the proposed regulation.

Mr. Parker assented.

Dr. Soams, Master of Peterhouse, Cambridge, towards the close of the 16th century, deprived the college over which he presided of a handsome estate, by his whimsical perverseness:—Mary, the widow of Thomas Ramsay, Lord Mayor of London in 1577, after conferring several favours on that foundation, offered to settle 500l. per annum on the house, provided that it might be called "The College of Peter and Mary."—"No," said the capricious Master, "Peter, who has lived too long single, is too old now for a female partner." The lady, disgusted at the Doctor's scruple, turned the stream of her benevolence to other foundations.

A public vestry was held on Thusday at Frome, chiefly for the purpose of taking into consideration a prohibition of the Lord Bishop of the diocese, as to the practice of paying the poor in the vestry. The subject having excited some attention, there was a numerous and respectable attendance; and it was the opinion of the majority, that his Lordship had, in this instance, exceeded his authority. It was, therefore, after much discussion, determined, that agreeably to immemorial custom, payment of the poor should be continued in the vestry-room, until the opinions of Doctor Lushington and Mr. Nolan could be obtained.—Bath Journal.

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

ALLEGED ATTEMPT TO POISON TWO PERSONS.

On Wednesday night, Mr. Henry Cox, of No. 6, Homer-street, was brought before Mr. Rawlinson and Mr. Broughton, at Mary-le-bonne-street Office, by Buckride, the officer, charged with having attempted to poison Sarah Cox, his wife, and Mary Anne Croker, a young lady visiting at their house.

Before any evidence was taken, Mr. Rawlinson said to Mr. Cox, have you any friend to assist or advise you?—He replied, he had no friend in London.

Mr. Rawlinson—The charge against you is of a very serious nature; it places your life in jeopardy, and I should wish you to have every opportunity to answer or repel it.

The defendant again said he had no friend who could assist him: he was innocent, and therefore ready to meet the charge.

Mr. Rawlinson assured him, he would let nothing escape his observation which might appear in his favour, and he sincerely hoped he might be found innocent of the charge.

Mrs. Cox deposed, that she was married to the defendant last January; she had known him 25 years; his brother married her sister 30 years ago; she could not exactly say she was a widow before Mr. Cox married her, for she had been married to a man who had another wife; she has a life interest in one house, until the expiration of the lease, and she has three other houses, which, at her decease, will become the property of her husband; she also possesses money and furniture; her husband, before he married her, was a plumber and glazier at Kidderminster (they now are out of business); he represented himself to be worth 1000l., but in that he deceived her; his property only amounted to 260l.; the first week after they were married, he proposed to have the leases transferred into his own name, and has owned since, that he married her for her property; he has behaved so ill to her that her health is impaired, and, under the advice of Doctor Russell, of Golden-square, she began, about a week ago, to take bark in port wine; her husband knew she took it, once a day, generally about eleven o'clock; it stood on a shelf in the kitchen. On Monday night her husband asked her to taste it, and she took it on Tuesday as usual. Yesterday morning, when at breakfast, she told him she really could not live with him, as her health was so injured by fretting, in consequence of his threats and bad language. She told him he had deceived her in the first instance, by not bringing the money he promised, but if he would leave her he should have as much as he brought. He said, if he left her, he would have more than that. He said, afterwards, he would not leave at all as long as there was a penny in the house.

Mr. Rawlinson asked her what she meant by throats and bad language.

Mrs. Cox—He said, if he had a wife like one of my lodgers, he would kill her. I said, do you know what you are speaking of; you speak as cool and deliberate as if it was nothing to take a person's life away? He replied, what he said he meant. I said, you had better leave me. He said, no, he would poison me. If I did not live with him, I should not live with any one else. Last Saturday he said he would part, but he would take pretty good care, before he did part, that he would do something first. On Thursday last I had a woman to wash; I looked in a cupboard for an empty bottle, to send for some gin; in a corner of the cupboard, where I seldom look, I found a paper parcel. I said to Mary Anne (the young lady before mentioned), here is a paper, do you know any thing of it? She said, no. We tasted its contents; she said, it was oxalic acid; her father had once desired her to taste it, that she might know it from salts, and this was the same. We took a piece, before we returned it to the cupboard, and sent it to a chemist in Crawford-street, for we suspected something wrong. After breakfast, this morning, I went up stairs into the parlour, and remained three quarters of an hour; my husband came up afterwards, and I went down; we did not speak to each other. Mary Anne asked me if I had looked into the cupboard? I said, no; I am such a bad climber I am afraid to get upon a chair. Mary Anne then examined the cupboard, and the paper parcel was gone. Mary Anne lighted a candle, but we could not find it any where. I then said, we must be careful what we take. I examined the port wine and bark: it was different. I took a little, and it made my throat smart.

Mr. Rawlinson—" is it not odd you should swallow some when you suspected poison to be in it?"

Mrs. Cox—"I took but little in my mouth." She further stated, that Mary Anne lived bar-maid with her when formerly she kept a public-house, and her husband did not like her living with her now.

Mr. Rawlinson asked if her husband would not have administered the poison in another way, and she replied, that her medicine was the only thing of which he did not himself partake. Mary Anne drank nothing but water. A jug, containing less than a quart, was always kept in the front area upon the stones to be cool; we examined the water, and that also had some of the acid in it; we took some of the wine and some of the water, in separate bottles, to a chemist in Crawford-street, to be analyzed, and he sent us to Mr. Garden, in Oxford-street; I have seen him this evening; he says he has no doubt each contained oxalic acid, and he will attend here if sent for.

Mr. Rawlinson to Mr. Cox—Have you any questions to put to your wife?"

Mr. Cox—"I do not know what to say; I am as innocent as a child in the womb."

Mr. Rawlinson—" It is easy to say you are innocent, but why not ask some questions, to throw light upon the subject; if you can only answer the charge by a mere denial, I cannot part with you; I must retain you, and have the evidence of the chemist."

Mr. Cox said, the difference between him and his wife were in consequence of her keeping the girl (Mary Anne), and when he remonstrated, his wife told him she was eating and drinking nothing of his.

Mrs. Cox—It is my property which supports her, and I keep her because I have occasion for her services.

Mr. Rawlinson to Mr. Cox—Are you prepared with any bail?

Mr. Cox—I have no friend or acquaintance in London; I do not go out to associate with any body.

Mr. Rawlinson—This is a very serious charge; if you cannot find bail, I must commit you; you shall go to the watchhouse instead of going to prison, if you prefer it.

Mr. Cox—I am obliged to you, Sir; I am innocent.

Mr. Rawlinson—It is for you to show how the parcel containing the oxalic acid came into the cupboard.

Mr. Cox—I never brought a parcel into the house in my life, nor did I say I would kill her, if I had a wife like the lodger; I only said I would give her a d—d good hiding.

Mrs. Cox again declared, that the former expression was used. The oxalic acid was screwed up in coarse sugar paper, without any mark of poison, &c.; there must have been more than an ounce.

On Friday, Mr. Henry Cox was placed at the bar for re-examination; he was assisted in his defence by Mr. Harmer.

Mrs. Cox being placed before the Magistrates,

Mr. Broughton addressed her.—I think you stated, that, when Mr. Cox married you, you were a widow?

She said, she did not state exactly so, because she was formerly married to a man who had another wife.

Mr. Harmer—Upon your oath, were you ever married to that man?

Mrs. Cox, hesitating—I will admit I was not.

Mr. Broughton—How came you on Wednesday, upon your oath, to declare you had been married to him?

Mrs. Cox—The question was put, before I was sworn. I do not recollect that it was repeated afterwards.

Mr. Broughton—Then you think it no crime to say one thing, and swear another?

Mrs. Cox—I was ashamed to acknowledge it then.

In answer to many questions from the Magistrates, and Mr. Harmer, she stated, that the house, in which she has only a life interest, produces 7 guineas a month, the other three, are not worth 200l. each. When she married Mr. Cox, he was not in debt; his money has since been parted with, to pay house expenses, and other charges: there is none of the 260l. left. After she discovered the oxalic acid, she generally, not always, took particular pains to eat and drink nothing but what her husband partook of; she had no particular fall out with him, but she wished to leave him, and offered to go into a gentleman's family as a nurse.

Mr. Harmer—Did you not tell an individual in this room, that, after Tuesday, you should have something to communicate to him?

Mrs. Cox—No, Sir, I did not.

Mr. Harmer—Do you know a person named Rutherford, and did you not tell him that you were determined to part, and if your husband did not accede to your terms by Tuesday, you would swear your life against him?

Mrs. Cox—I told Mr. Rutherford that my husband treated me so cruelly, that if he did not consent to leave me, I must swear my life against him.

Miss Croker was called for.

Mr. Griffith—Why should he wish to poison you?

Mary-Anne—To prevent, if any thing happened, my being a witness against him.

Mr. Griffith—Did you never tell any body besides Mrs. Cox that you expected to be poisoned?

Mary-Anne—I told Mrs. Child so the day before we found the oxalic acid.

Mr. Griffith—Where is Mrs. Child?

Mary-Anne—She is gone into the country.

Mr. Squire, from Mr. Garden's, in Oxford-street, had analyzed the wine and the water. The wine contained in the ratio of 56 grains to each wine-glass. The half-pint of wine contained altogether about half an ounce, and that quantity has been known to produce death in 40 minutes. The water contained the much smaller proportion of three grains to each wine-glass. He was not prepared to say what might be the result of drinking one wine-glass each day of the poisoned wine; but the whole of the water, if drank at once, would not occasion death. Mrs. Cox and Miss Croker brought the articles to be analyzed. Mrs. Cox appeared in distress, but Miss Croker did not appear at all agitated.

John Rutherford, foreman to Messrs. Williams and M'Ghie, of Conduit-street, married the sister of Mr. Humphreys, (the man called by Mrs. Cox her first husband.) Mr. Humphreys died 12 months ago, and left considerable property to different relations, but none to him, because Mrs. Rutherford died before her brother. The property now belonging to Mrs. Cox was left to her by him. He has always been on friendly terms with Mr. and Mrs. Cox; they appeared to live happily together until lately. He visited them on Wednesday week in the evening; she then complained of Mr. Cox's behaviour, and said she had no doubt there was something in the house for her destruction. On Sunday he visited them again; they mutually gave him the invitation; he went at five o'clock, Mr. and Mrs. Cox were out for a walk; they returned arm in arm. Mr. Cox went out again to get some porter, and she took him into the kitchen, and shewed him the oxalic acid. She returned it again to the cupboard, and said, as soon as Mr. Cox had mixed it, she would have it analyzed, and swear her life against him, and hang the villain, for he had deceived her, and treated her very ill, and she hated him. When he left, she followed him into the garden, and said, she should make a proposition to her husband, and if he did not accede to it by Tuesday, she would swear her life against him, for then, Mr. Humphreys would have been dead a twelvemonth, and she would have the legacies to settle. He was astonished when he heard of the charge against Mr. Cox; he did not think he was the man to do so.

Several respectable persons gave him the character of a meek and well disposed man.

Mary Ann Croker was again called forward—She went, on Monday week, to Mr. Webb's, No. 14, Upper York-street, and purchased the ounce of bark for Mrs. Cox's wine.

Mr. Harmer—Did you purchase nothing but the bark?

Mary Anne—I bought an ounce of salts for Mr. Cox. I am sure they were salts; they were sealed in a paper, marked "Epsom Salts."

Mr. Harmer—Did Mr. Cox take them?

Mary Anne—They were mixed for him, but he did not like their taste, and he threw them away, excepting a little piece, which he put in paper. I told him I was sorry he had thrown them away, for I would have gone with him to the shop where I bought them.

Mr. Harmer desired Mr. Cox to tell his story respecting the salts.

Mr. Cox said, his wife mixed them while he was up stairs; they did not look like salts, they were much darker, and they tasted acid, so he threw them down the sink, excepting a little sediment, which he put in a paper; he then asked his wife for three halfpence; he fetched another ounce from a different chemist, and showed him the sediment. He said it was not salts, but an acid, which, if he had swallowed, would have done him injury. I have a piece (said Mr. Cox) now in my waistcoat pocket at home in paper.

The Magistrates immediately sent him, accompanied by Buchanan, the officer, to Homer-street, and they brought back the paper alluded to; it contained a very small piece; Mr. Squire examined it, and tasted the paper; he said decidedly, it was not salts, but acid, and it had the appearance of oxalic acid; he afterwards tasted the article itself, and was of the same opinion.

Mr. Griffith cautioned him not to taste too freely, or he would "swallow the evidence."

James Butler, assistant to Mr. Webb, remembered Miss Croker's coming for the bark, but he did not believe she purchased any salts; it was impossible there could be a mistake, as the salts are kept in a drawer, sealed up in paper, marked "Epsom Salts," and the oxalic acid is kept in a bottle, and when sold, is invariably marked "Oxalic Acid—poison."

Mr. Harmer alluded to the very extraordinary elucidation, produced by his question to Miss Croker, "Did you purchase nothing but the bark?" and Mr. Griffith told Mr. Cox, that after this most singular and perplexing inquiry, the minds of the Magistrates were materially altered; and concluded by saying:—We do not think there is sufficient evidence to commit you, nor should we feel justified in liberating you, we therefore require you to find bail for your appearance, when necessary; in the mean time, Mr. Harmer will make such further inquiry for your benefit, as may be needful.

THAMES POLICE.—A Spanish General, an expatriated patriot, accompanied by a friend, who acted as an interpreter, applied to Captain Richbell for assistance, under the following circumstances:—His friend, being sworn, stated, that the General was the occupant of a room in a house in Rosemary-lane, Wapping, where he was in the habit every evening of holding a conversatione for the unfortunate Patriots; and among his guests were many distinguished characters. The only consolation left them was to talk over the misfortunes of their unhappy country. The landlord of the house, not having the same respect for their misfortunes as they thought they were entitled to, became latterly very troublesome; in consequence of which the General had determined on removing, and was making arrangements for so doing, when he was prevented by the landlord, alleging that he owed him rent; added to that, he loaded him with the greatest abuse. The General was willing to pay him all the rent he owed him, but he did not wish to submit to imposition. The fact was, he had agreed to pay 4s. a week for the room, but when the landlord perceived he was determined on leaving the house, he insisted on 4s. 6d. a week, and the arrear of 6d. a week was no trifling consideration.

Captain Richbell asked him what the man was in whose house he lived.—His friend replied, that he was a baker.

Captain Richbell inquired, would he swear that he was in bodiy fear of him? which, on being explained to him, he said, that he was afraid of no man, but that he hoped the baker would be punished for using language offensive to his dignity and condition.

Captain Richbell ordered an officer to accompany the general to the manufacturer of flour, and get his things restored to him on his paying any rent that might be due.

The General then made a solemn obeisance, and left the Office, accompanied by his friend.

CORONERS' INQUESTS.

STAGE-COACH DRIVING.

Thursday an inquest was holden at the Red Lion, in St. John's-street Road, on the body of Joseph Bennett, who came by his death under the following circumstances. The deceased, who was a porter at the New York Booking Office, Piccadilly, was employed in loading the Bath Regulator coach, when the Southampton night-coach was driving up St. James's-street, and the near hind-wheel of the Southampton coming in contact with the off-wheel of the Regulator, the latter was pulled round with such force as to throw the deceased off the roof, and his head coming against the pavement, caused a rupture of the blood-vessels at the bone of the skull, and he was taken up to all appearance dead. Being removed to a surgeon's in the neighbourhood, he was blooded, and, animation returning, he was taken home to his lodgings in St. John's-street, where he expired on Wednesday evening. It appeared from the evidence of the coachman and guard of the Regulator, that no blame could be attached to the driver of the Southampton coach, though such was the impression of the Coroner and jury, the occurrence having taken place so early as five o'clock in the evening, and the street, at this place, being sufficiently wide to allow three or four vehicles to pass abreast, if proper caution was observed; but, it seems, that when the Southampton coach got into Piccadilly, a post-chaise was furiously driven down Albemarle-street, and running against the leaders, the coachman of the Southampton was obliged to pull round on the Regulator, to save the coach from being upset. The Jury returned a verdict of "Accidental Death."

LAMENTABLE CALAMITY.

Thursday evening another inquiry took place at the London-hospital, before J. W. Unwin, Esq. Coroner, touching the death of William Tucker, a lamp-lighter in the Poplar district, who expired at that institution on last Wednesday morning.—The evidence was to the following effect:—

Mr. John Gundry examined—I live in Poplar, and reside next door but one to the house of the deceased; about half-past seven o'clock on Tuesday night, he crossed the street with a can of tar oil in one hand, and a lighted torch in the other. As he was stepping on the opposite pavement his foot slipped, and the torch communicating with the oil, it ignited, and he was in a moment enveloped in flames. The oil was for the purpose of supplying the lamps in the absence of gas. The occurrence was certainly accidental.

Thomas Drake examined—I am a pupil of the institution; on Tuesday last the deceased was brought in desperately burned; assistance was rendered to him, but without any beneficial effect. He died after the lapse of a few hours.—Verdict, "Accidental death."

After it was returned, Mr. Speatley, the contractor for the lighting of the district, in explanation of the melancholy event, said, that his orders to the deceased were to trim and supply the lamps with oil in the morning, and light them in the evening; had this been complied with, the deceased's life would not have been lost, as it was owing to his endeavouring to perform both offices at the same time, that the ignition took place. Even on that morning, when he was informed of another of his workmen having disobeyed his orders, so sensible did the deceased feel of its dangerous consequences, that he exclaimed, "The man must have been mad."

Mr. Gundry complained of the great want of caution evinced both as to the use and storage of such an inflammable liquid; he had himself tried an experiment on it, and found that the vapour it emitted ignited at the distance of four inches, with a terrific explosion.

Mr. S. replied, that the danger, if any, was owing to his workmen when they disobeyed his orders.

An inquest was held on Thursday night at the Spread Eagle, Limehouse, before J. W. Unwin, Esq. on the body of a seaman of the name of Crook, when the following evidence was adduced:—

John Dyer sworn.—I live at Limehouse, and let lodgings: deceased has lodged with me during the interval of his three last voyages. Last night, at a little before twelve, he called me up, and requested I would get a light, as he was very unwell: he coughed very loud; I went to the next room to get a light, and on my return (about two minutes), found deceased quite dead. I sent for a surgeon immediately, but he refused to attend. I think deceased came by his death in a natural way.

Thomas Barnet, surgeon, deposed, that he was ordered to examine the body by the parish officers. He opened the chest, which he found full of blood, occasioned by the rupture of one of the principal arteries, about three inches below the heart. This was brought on by an aneurism of the artery, which corrodes or weakens the coats of the artery, and on any violent excitation, such as coughing, or passion, or any other excitement, gives way, and the flow of blood causes immediate death. Verdict—"Natural Death."

Bartholomew Fair was proclaimed yesterday, and the Lord Mayor, in state, took his sherbet at Newgate, according to annual custom. The fair legally commences on the 3d of September, but that happening this year on a Sunday, it is nececessary to open it on Saturday for the fulfilment of the charter, the terms being "on or before the 3d of September."

AGES OF THE JUDGES.—The following is a correct statement of the ages of the present Judges:—The Lord Chancellor, 75; the Master of the Rolls, 50; the Vice Chancellor, 63; Lord Chief Justice of the Court of King's Bench, 63; Mr. Justice Bayley, 66; Mr. Justice Holroyd, 69; Mr. Justice Littledale, 68; Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, 57; Mr. Justice Park, 66; Mr. Justice Burrough, 76; Mr. Justice Gazelee, 62; Lord Chief Baron Alexander, 72; Baron Graham, 86; Baron Garrow, 71; Baron Hullock, 58.—Evening Paper.

Mr. Green made a very fine ascent in his balloon from Boston on Wednesday afternoon, and effected a safe descent at the village of Manby, six miles from Louth, at a quarter-past five o'clock. The lady who was to have ascended with Mr. Green having declined the trip, he was accompanied by Mr. Henry Brooke, jun. the editor of the Boston Gazette. The time of their aerial voyage was about an hour and ten minutes, and the descent was not at all dangerous or difficult. The balloon was conveyed, in its inflated state, to Louth, for the purpose of gratifying Mr. Green's friends in that neighbourhood; it was then taken through the town to Burwell, where, in consequence of the wind being excessively boisterous, it was found necessary to discharge the gas which remained, otherwise it was Mr. Green's intention to have conveyed it in a state of inflation to Boston, where Mr. Green and his companion arrived at half-past six o'clock yesterday morning. Mr. Green will make an ascent at Stamford on Thursday next.—Lincoln Mercury.

STATE OF TRADE.

MANCHESTER, August 31.—The quantity of goods daily sold is, we apprehend, increasing, yet without any advance on the ruinous low prices at which they have been sold for so many months. —Manchester Herald.

Things remain here pretty much the same as we reported them last week. If any change has taken place, we are glad to say it is for the better. In Bradford, trade is obviously brightening, and the brisk demand lately experienced is now followed by its natural result---an advance in price by purchasers. There is every confidence in the progressive improvement of business generally, and no apprehension of a re-action.----Leeds Intelligencer.

There are at this time upwards of 5,000 persons out of regular employ in the town of Frome; and the poor-rates exceed 1,000l. a month. More than 300 persons (the greater part of whom are cloth-workers) are employed in breaking stones and widening the streets. Those are paid as follows:—single man, 5s. per week; a married man, 6s.; ditto, with one child, 6s. 6d.; ditto, with two, 7s.; with three, 8s.; with four, 9s. 6d.; such children being under nine years of age. Boys above 10 years of age are employed with their parents, and receive from 18d. to 2s. 6d. per week. "If the present stagnation in trade (says our correspondent) should continue through the winter, God alone knows what will become of the poor or the paymaster." None of the respectable clothiers had any thing to do with the late deputation from Frome. It was solely arranged by two individuals of talent in the humble walks of life.—Devizes Paper.

In Glasgow, since our last, there has not been much doing, and we cannot say that there is any material improvement in any species of manufactured goods. Rather more work continues to be given out than formerly, but at dreadfully depressed wages, and generally without any certainty of making sales.—Glasgow Free Press.

GLASGOW, AUG. 30.—The sales of sugar were small till yesterday, arising in a great measure from the holders asking high prices, from the very favourable accounts received from the foreign markets; yesterday, however, the sales exceeded 400 casks, at improving prices.—Ibid.

VAUXHALL.

The following address was spoken by Mr. Taylor at the close of the season on Friday evening:—

"LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—The Proprietors have assigned to me the pleasing duty of offering you their most sincere thanks, for the very distinguished patronage with which you have honoured the whole of the entertainments of this season.

"It has been their strenuous endeavour to encrease the respectability as well as the attractions of these Gardens: and to render them superior, in point of amusement, to any similar establishment in the world; how far the proprietors have met the public taste throughout the season, which terminates this evening, remains with you, ladies and gentlemen, to decide.

"The proprietors feel perfectly confident that unremitting attention on their parts to your future entertainments and accommodation, will ensure a continuance of your favour, and I have the honour, for them and the whole establishment, to bid you, for this season, most respectfully—FAREWELL!"

DISTRESSED PRINTERS.—We have the gratification of stating, that the Committee for the Management of the Funds for the Relief of the Distressed Printers of the Metropolis, continue to receive the support of a charitable and humane public; and we have also the pleasure of stating that ANDREW STRAHAN, Esq. has remitted the sum of Fifty Pounds towards relieving the wants of so deserving a body, who are now suffering the greatest privations.

Miss GRADDON has been delighting the good people of Glasgow with her sweet notes, from thence she proceeds to Edinburgh, where she will doubtless be equally successful.

The Mexican paper, El Sol, to the 25th June, contains an account of the Session of the Mexican Constituent Congress, in which the project of the Constitution was discussed. It was objected to the preamble of the law, that it mentioned the functions then in the course of being exercised to have been confided to them, "under the auspices of the Supreme Being;" and it was proposed that, "in the name of the Almighty God," should be substituted. Subsequently, it was suggested, that the words, "God, three in one," should be adopted; but, after rather a sarcastic conversation, the original expressions were agreed to.

Reports, on various matters of local or internal arrangement, were received from Committees which had sat, and days were named for taking them into consideration.

The Congress were then occupied with the discussion of the question, "That the state of Mexico is an integral part of the Mexican confederation." This, we should hardly have expected, would have been denied, or required to be affirmed. It was, of course, carried in the affirmative. The Constituent Act was, at length, voted on the 21st of June, to have been sufficiently discussed and adopted.

A variety of propositions were brought before the Congress, for the regulation of the tribunals of justice, and, among other resolutions, one for the encouragement of vaccination was carried.

The Pope has recently sent to the Duke of Coethen two fine paintings in oil representing the Virgin Mary, two silver statues of St. Peter and St. Paul, and a silver cross, containing some pieces of the true cross. It will be recollected that this Prince and his consort, who is related to the King of Prussia, abjured Protestantism a short time ago.

FATAL DUEL.—The principals in the affair near Kirkaldy, were, George Morgan, jun. Esq. banker in Kirkaldy, and David Landale, Esq. tanner there. The parties met on Wednesday se'nnight, at six o'clock in the morning, in Cardon Den, on the estate of Raith, the former attended by W. Millie, Esq. and the latter by Lieutenant Milne, R.N. Two medical gentlemen were also present. Having taken their ground at the usual distance, they fired, when Mr. Morgan received his adversary's ball in the left breast, and instantly expired. His body was brought to his own house about an hour after. Mr. Landale and his second have we understand, left Kirkaldy. Precognitions were taken during the day; and as the causes which led to this melancholy rencontre will become the subject of legal investigation, we must decline giving publicity to the statements which are, in the mean time, current. We have authority from the friends of the survivor to state, that measures are taken to bring forward his trial as early as the forms of Court will admit of. Mr. Landale will most readily present himself before a Jury of his country as soon as a day shall be appointed; temporary absence being only intended to avoid unnecessary confinement.—Caledonian Mercury.

When Fielding had finished his novel of Tom Jones, being much distressed, he sold it to an obscure bookseller for 25l. on condition of being paid on a certain given day. In the mean time, he showed the manuscript to Thomson the Poet, who was immediately struck with its great merit, and advised Fielding by all means to get free from the bargain, which he did without much difficulty, as the bookseller was not capable of estimating the value of his purchase. Thomson recommended the work to Andrew Miller, and the parties met at a tavern over a beef-steak and a bottle. Miller began with saying, "Mr. Fielding, I always determine on affairs of this sort at once, and never change my offer. I will not give one farthing more than two hundred pounds."—"Two hundred pounds!" cries Fielding. "Yes," says the other, "and not one farthing more." Fielding, whose surprise arose from joy, and not disappointment, shook him by the hand, sealed the bargain, and ordered in two bottles of wine. Miller got a very large sum by the sale of the book. He at different times during his life assisted Fielding with the sum of 2,500l., which debt he cancelled in his will.

PROCLAMATION FOR THE MEETING OF PARLIAMENT.

(From Friday's Gazette.)

BY THE KING.—A PROCLAMATION.

GEORGE, R.

Whereas our Parliament stands prorogued to Thursday, the second day of November next; we, with the advice of our Privy Council, do hereby publish and declare, that the said Parliament shall be further prorogued, on the said second day of November next, to Tuesday the fourteenth day of November next; and we have given order to our Chancellor of that part of our United Kingdom called Great Britain, to prepare a writ patent for proroguing the same accordingly; and we do further hereby, with the advice aforesaid, declare our Royal will and pleasure, that the said Parliament shall, on the said 14th day of November next, be held and sit for the dispatch of divers urgent and important affairs: and the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and the Knights, Citizens, and Burgesses, and the Commissioners for Shires and Boroughs of the House of Commons, are hereby required and commanded to give their attendance accordingly, at Westminster, on the said fourteenth day of November next.

Given at our Court at Windsor, the first day of September, one thousand eight hundred and twenty-six, and in the seventh year of our reign. GOD save the KING.

HOPS.—It is expected that the season for picking will commence generally on Monday next. Notices for hop-pickers are placarded in different parts of the metropolis, which will give employment to some thousands of the poor. The crops are said to be more superior, both in quantity and quality, than has been known for many years.

"The Monody on WEBER," just published by Cocks and Co., Princes-street, is a highly effective composition, and forms an admirable companion to the popular song, called "Not a Drum was heard," by the same author.

The funeral of Lady Noel took place last night by torch-light, but at so late an hour as to prevent us giving any detail of the ceremony. The body has lain in state for the three last days, and the public were admitted to a view. The funeral decorations of the hall and church were of the most magnificent description. An ante-chamber, the gallery (one hundred feet long), the dining-room, and the spacious ball-room, were hung and carpeted with black cloth, and lighted up with about 100 large sinumbra lamps. The body lay in the ball-room, under a canopy of state. The coffin was covered with rich crimson velset and gold furniture. On the plate is the following inscription:—"Harriet, the second wife of Sir Gerard Noel, Baronet, lineally descended by her father, the Reverend Joseph Gill, from the Duke of Wharton. Born 24th July, 1785; died 9th August, 1826; in the 42d year of her age." This room was lighted by two immense chandeliers, each weighing half a ton. They are the richest and most splendid things of the kind we have seen. Each contains 20 sinumbra lamps, and the massive burnished gold work of which they are composed contrasted beautifully with the still light the lamps threw around. Behind the canopy the hatchment and banners were displayed, and the whole produced much effect. The procession from the hall to the church was a walking one, the tenantry bearing 100 lighted torches. In the church another canopy was erected over the vault, and at that part of the funeral service where the clergyman consigns the dead to the earth, the coffin was gradually lowered by means of concealed machinery, to take its place amongst the ancestors of the house of Noel. The church at Exton is of itself an object of such beauty, and so rich in monuments, as to be well worthy a visit at any time. Some of the finest specimens from the chisel of Nollekens are to be seen here, and the ancient monuments are of the most finished and delicate description.—Stamford News.

MURDER AT COOLOCK.—The following particulars have transpired on the investigation by the Coroner of the horrid murder of his wife by a man named Long:—He returned home late on Saturday night, and shortly afterwards committed the horrid deed, by inflicting a number of wounds on his ill-fated victim. This dreadful scene took place in the kitchen of the house, after which he removed the body to the bed. He then washed himself, and changed his clothes, even to his linen; and, at an early hour on Sunday morning, he left the house. He was met by three men on his way from Coolock; they observed his extreme agitation, but, not guessing the cause of it, they did not attempt to take him into custody. A person who lodged in the house, and a boy who slept in it, proved upon the inquest, that they heard her cries calling for assistance; but, as the parties were in the habit of quarrelling, they took no particular notice of it. It is melancholy to state, shewing as it does the disinclination which pervades a certain class of society in this country to bring offenders to justice, even for the commission of the greatest crimes, that the circumstance of this murder was known to many persons before the murderer absconded; even the sister of the deceased and her husband, who were living in the immediate neighbourhood with Dr. Farran, and who were aware of the murder at four o'clock in the morning, never mentioned it to their master for several hours afterwards. Jealousy is supposed to have been the cause of this savage deed. On the inquest, two little girls, children of this wretched man and the deceased, were examined; the eldest was only ten years old, the other was two years younger. Their testimony fully established the fact of the murder.—Freeman's Journal.

The remains of St. Francois-de-Sales, which have just been deposited in a superb shrine of silver, were translated, on the 21st ult., to the church of the Visitation, at Annecy, in Savoy, and placed above the high altar, which is of marble, ornamented with rich gildings. Among the prelates present on this occasion was the Archbishop of Paris, who officiated. The King and Queen of Sardinia attended the ceremony.

THE ANTISEPTIC BOTANICAL TOOTH-POWDER—Cleanses, Whitens, and Preserves the Teeth in a manner quite unrivalled and fastens them even if loosened by mercury. Sold in Boxes, 2s. 9d. each, by I. V. SIMPSON (Proprietor) 28, Henrietta-street, Covent-Garden; by Messrs. Stradling, Royal Exchange; Johnson, 68, Cornhill; Anderson, 156, Bishopsgate Without; Pearson, 31, Fleet-street; Prout, 226, and Low, 330, Strand; Bayley and Blew, Cockspur-street; Hawkins, 11, Gattie and Pierce, 57, and Tuaner, 75, Bond-street; Simpson, 21, Piccadilly; Sanger, 150, Oxford-street; Colley, 5, Holles-street; Tosswill, Greenwich; Wright, Hammersmith; Bedell, and Ryder, Islington, and by most respectable perfumers and Medicine Venders throughout the kingdom.

IMPOSTURE UNMASKED.—The progress of Merit, although frequently assailed, is not impeded by Envy and Detraction. The aggression of ambuscade terminates in defeat; and conscious rectitude ultimately triumphs in the attainment of the grand object—public approbation The test of experience is the guarantee of favour, and has established WARREN'S BLACKING in general estimation; of which there exists not a stronger proof than the tacit acknowledgment of a host of servile imitators, who surreptitiously obtrude on the unwary a spurious preparation as the genuine article, to the great disappointment of the unguarded purchaser, and manifest injury of WARREN, whose character and interest by this iniquitous system are equally subject to detriment. It becomes therefore an indispensable duty to CAUTION THE PUBLIC against the manœuvres of Unprincipled Venders, who having no character to lose, and stimulated by avarice in their nefarious pursuits, aim at the acquisition of money through any medium than that of honour! The original and matchless BLACKING bears on each bottle a short direction, with the signature

ROBERT WARREN

All others are counterfeits; and in many instances the imposition labels are artfully interlined with a different address, in very small characters, between the more conspicuous ones of "No. 30," and "STRAND." It is earnestly recommended to Shopkeepers and others who are deceived by base fabrications of WARREN'S BLACKING, to return the detected trash to the source whence it came, and expose the machinations of rascality to merited obloquy.

WARREN'S BLACKING is surpassingly brilliant;—it excludes damp; gives pliancy to the leather; retains its pristine virtue in all climates; and, combining elegance with comfort, is an article equally of indispensable fashion and utility. Sold by every respectable Vender in Town and Country, in bottles, at 6d. 10d. 12d. and 18d. each.

THE BRITISH SPECIFIC, for re-producing and promoting the GROWTH of HAIR.—The principle of its operation is to cool and contract the pores which are opened by a redundancy of heat, occasioning a relaxation of the roots, and render them incapable of retaining the hair; to counteract which nothing is better calculated than the British Specific, as, from its invigorating and oleaginous properties, it almost immediately arrests the falling off, and affords such effectual nourishment to the roots, that persons giving it a fair trial may assure themselves of its speedily restoring it, even where it has become completely bald, however long it may have been so, and, if grey, gradually to restore it to its natural colour. The superiority of this preparation (the invention of a medical man) derives additional recommendation from its being, unlike other compositions for the hair, so extremely clean and agreeable, that its application is a real pleasure, and is only requisite to be generally known to receive the preference of every article in use for similar purposes. To be had only of D. Pedeu, 15, Burlington Arcade, Piccadilly, in bottles, 6s. each, or cases of four bottles for 1l., forward to order on receiving the amount, post paid.

NEW EDITION, THE TENTH, ENLARGED,

With Observations on the Danger of trusting to Nostrums, as an Internal Remedy for the Cure of Strictures. Illustrated by Cases. Price 3s.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS on STRICTURES of the URETHRA and RECTUM, recommending an improved system for their Treatment and Cure; illustrating its efficacy by numerous remarkable and highly important cases, in some of which, Strictures of from ten to twenty years duration have been totally removed in a few weeks, and its superiority thereby fully established over every other method hitherto practised. By C. B. COURTENAY, M.D. To which are added, Observations and Practical Comments on Gleet, Seminal Weakness, and the miseries occasioned by Self Abuse, for the cure of which a mode of treatment, the result of long and successful practice, and at once safe, speedy, and effectual, is adopted by the Author.

Printed for the Author, Robert-street, Adelphi; and published and sold by Jones and Sherwood, Paternoster-row; Onwhyn, 4, Catherine-street, Strand; Chapell, Royal Exchange; Marsh, 145, Oxford-street; Walker, 90, High Holborn; Chappell, 94, Pall Mall; Sutherland, 9, Carlton-street, Edinburgh; and may be had of all Booksellers.

"We earnestly recommend the cases related by Dr. Courtenay to the perusal of such of our readers as are afflicted with the complaints which the Author has made the subject of these Observations. Several instances are adduced of the recovery of perfect health from states which were considered hopeless by Practitioners of eminent talents, and very extensive experience. We entertain the highest opinion of Dr. Courtenay's professional skill, and congratulate him on his successful and judicious application to these severe and often fatal diseases."—European Magazine.

TO FAMILIES TRAVELLING, PROMENADING, and ENJOYING AQUATIC EXCURSIONS, &c. &c. are respectfully recommended the following Genuine Articles, which at this season of the Year are indispensable for the preservation of personal attraction;—

ROWLAND'S KALYDOR FOR THE COMPLEXION.

An inestimable, mild, and innocent production, powerfully efficacious in thoroughly exterminating Eruptions, Tan, Pimples, Freckles, Redness, and all Cutaneous Imperfections; producing a delicate White Skin, and a Juvenile Bloom to the Complexion; preserving it from the Heat of Summer.—In Travelling, Promenading, or enjoying Aquatic Excursions, it immediately allays the smarting irritability of the Skin, diffusing a Pleasing Coolness truly comfortable and refreshing; affords soothing relief to Ladies nursing their offspring; warranted perfectly innoxious for the most delicate Lady or Infant.

To Gentlemen after Shaving, it allays the irritating and smarting pain, and renders the Skin smooth and pleasant. Price 4s. 6d. and 8s. 6d. per bottle, duty included.

To Preserve the Human Hair, during Travelling, Bathing, and Violent Exercise, and to retain it in healthy vigour to the latest period of Life, is particularly recommended

ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL,

The first production of the age, and the Original and Genuine.

A Vegetable Production, possessing salubrious and wonderful nutritive properties, which prevents the Hair falling off, occasioned by excessive perspiration; is pre eminently successful in nourishing the Hair; preventing its falling off or turning grey, &c. and has the unequalled property of giving a most fascinating and delectable appearance to the Hair.—Price 3s. 6d.—7s.—10s. 6d. and 21s. per bottle. The distinguished sanction it has received from Royal and Illustrious Personages, in addition to the flattering testimonials transmitted of its efficacy, places this declaration above suspicion.

CAUTION.—In consequence of the high popularity of the above articles, Flagrant Impostors have made false statements, and counterfeited each; Copying Bills, Labels, and Bottles, which renders it indispensably necessary on purchasing, to ask for "ROWLAND'S," strictly observing that each Bottle of Rowland's Genuine Articles are enclosed in a Wrapper, Signed on the Label, in Red,

A. ROWLAND AND SON, 20, HATTON GARDEN.

Sold by appointment, by Mr. Hendrie, Perfumer, Titchborne-street; Mr. Smith, Messrs. Gattie and Peiree, 57, Mr. Delcroix, 158, D. Rigge, 35, New Bond-street; Bayley and Blew, Cockspur-street; Berry and Lloyd, Greek-street; Mr. Sanger, 150, Oxford-street; Mr. Low, 330, Prout, 226, Strand; Butler, Chemist, 4, Cheapside; Barclay and Sons, 95, Fleet Market; Mr. Rigge, 65, Cheapside; Mr. Sutton, Bow Church-yard; Mr. Edwards, 66, and Messrs. Newberry, St. Paul's Church-yard; Mr. Burgess, Holborn-hill; Mr. Kennaby, Bartholomew-close; Messrs. Evans, Long-lane; Messrs. Dunn and Co. Hatton-Garden; and all respectable Medicine Venders, &c.

SWAN WITH TWO NECKS, LAD-LANE, GENERAL COACH OFFICE.

Dover, Deal, Ramsgate, Margate, and Canterbury Patent Coaches Daily Morning and Evening.

THE following ROYAL MAILS depart from the above Inn every evening at half-past Seven, Sundays excepted. Every Sunday evening at Seven.——BATH and EXETER, through Devizes, Taunton, and Collumpton.——BIRMINGHAM (in 13 hours), through Stony Stratford, and Coventry.——BRISTOL, through Reading, Marlborough, and Chippenham.——CARLISLE and EDINBURGH through Chorley, and Garstang.——CHESTER through Salop, Ellesmere, and Wrexham.——EXETER, through Salisbury Blandford, and Dorchester.——FALMOUTH ROYAL MAIL.——HOLYHEAD, through Wolverhampton, Shrewsbury, and Bangor.——KIDDERMINSTER, through Birmingham, Dudley, and Stourbridge.——LIVERPOOL, through Dunchurch, Newcastle, and Congleton.——MANCHESTER, through Northampton, Derby, and Macclesfield.——MILFORD HAVEN, through Cardiff, Carmarthen, and Haverfordwest.——NORWICH, through Chelmsford, Colchester, and Ipswich.——PLYMOUTH ROYAL MAIL.

The following Post Coaches start regularly at the time specified.

MORNING COACHES.—BIRMINGHAM and HOLYHEAD, the Eclipse, through Coventry, at a quarter before 8. Passengers by this Conveyance have the privilege of resting one Night at Birmingham, proceeding next Morning, without additional expense.——BRIGHTON Light Safety Coach, through Riegate, at 9.——DERBY Light Coach (in 15 hours, two Coachmen only), at half-past 6.——HOLYHEAD Light Coach through Shrewsbury, quarter before 8.——LEICESTER Light Post Coach, through Northampton, at half-past 6.——NORWICH New Safety Coach (in 14 hours, one Coachman only) at 5.——NOTTINGHAM, Times, every Morning at half-past 6.——SOUTHAMPTON Light Coach every Morning at half-past 8, Tuesdays and Fridays at half-past 7, arrives in time for the Guernsey and Jersey Steam Packets.——WEYMOUTH and DORCHESTER (in 15 hours), at 5.——WINDSOR and ETON, at 7.

AFTERNOON COACHES.—BIRMINGHAM, the Balloon, through Stony Stratford, at half-past five.——BRISTOL, the Regent, through Reading, a quarter before four.——CARLISLE, GLASGOW, and EDINBURGH, through Manchester and Dumfries, a quarter before four. Passengers travelling by this conveyance have the opportunity of resting one night on the road, without additional expense.——CANTERBURY, the Tally-ho! half-past two (in 7 hours.)——CAMBRIDGE Tally-ho! (in 5 hours,) quarter past two.——COVENTRY, 4-inside Coach, a quarter before six.——DERBY, the Regulator, (in 18 hours) quarter before four.——DUDLEY and STOURBRIDGE, 4-inside Coach, at half-past five.——EXETER, 4-inside Coach, through Basingstoke and Honiton, at two.——EDINBURGH and GLASGOW, through Newcastle, at half-past four.——FALMOUTH and PLYMOUTH Light Coaches, at two.——LIVERPOOL, the Royal Alliance, (in 26 hours) at half-past four.——MANCHESTER, Royal Defiance, (in 24 hours) at four.——MANCHESTER, the Regulator, through Dunstable, quarter before four.——MILFORD HAVEN, through Newport and Carmarthen, at four.——NOTTINGHAM, (in 18 hours) through Loughborough, at a quarter before four.——ROYSTON and BUNTINGFORD, at half-past two.——TAUNTON, through Cross and Bridgewater, at four, at reduced fares.——TENBY, MERTHYR, and PEMBROKE, at four.——WARWICK and LEAMINGTON SPA, at half past five.——WINDSOR and ETON, at 4.

CHESTER and PARKGATE, every Morning at a quarter before eight, and Evening at half-past five.——PARIS New Light Diligence, by way of Dover, every Morning, at seven, and at half-past six in the Evening.

N. B.—Parcels and Luggage conveyed daily to all parts of the North and to every City and manufacturing Town in the Kingdom.

W. WATERHOUSE & Co. Proprietors.

NOTICE.—No Parcel, or Passenger's Luggage, will be accounted for above the value of FIVE POUNDS, unless entered as such and paid for accordingly.

MARRIED.—On the 29th ult., at Egham, G. Wigg, Esq., to Elizabeth, only child of the late C. J. Stone, Esq.—On Friday, at St. Clement Danes, Howell Jones, eldest son of Stephen Howell Phillips, Esq., to Julia Ann, only daughter of the late John Marriott, Esq.—On the 24th inst., at West Ashby, the Rev. W. M. Pearce, to Elizabeth, only child of the Rev. F. Rockliffe, B.C.L.—On Thursday last, the Rev. Edmund Harden, third son of Nathaniel Harden, Esq., of Hadley, to Emma, third daughter of the late T. Winckworth, Esq.

DIED.—On the 28th ult., Mr. John Lee Sprague.—On Thursday last, George Baker, third son of Mr. C. B. Harman.—On the 24th ult. Henry Paget, Esq.—On Wednesday evening, at Hackney, Mr. Thomas Barton.—On the 31st ult., Spencer Maryon Wilson, Esq., brother of Sir Thomas Maryon Wilson, Bart. of Kent.

London: Printed and Published by R. D. RICHARDS, at 342, Strand, corner of Catherine-street.

THE AGE.

"THE VERY AGE AND BODY OF THE TIME."

VOL. II. No. 71. SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 17, 1826. Price 7d

THEATRE ROYAL, DRURY-LANE.—The Public is respectfully informed, that this Theatre will OPEN on SATURDAY NEXT, September 23, 1826, with a favourite Comedy, a new Ballet Divertisement, and an Operatic Entertainment.

The Doors will be opened at Half-past Six o'Clock, and the Performances commence at Seven. Boxes, 7s. Second Price, 3s. 6d. Pit. 3s. 6d. Second Price, 2s. Lower Gallery, 2s. Second Price, 1s. Upper Gallery, 1s. Second Price 6d.

Boxes and Places, also Private and Family Boxes to be taken of Mr. Spring, Box Book-keeper, at the Rotunda of the Theatre, from Ten till Four. The Box-office will be open on Wednesday next.

THEATRE ROYAL, HAYMARKET.—To MORROW Evening, Fish Out of Water, with the Hypocrite, and 'Twixt the Cup and the Lip.—Tuesday, Intrigue, with Paul Pry, and Killing no Murder.—Wednesday, Paul Pry, with Quite Correct, with other entertainments.—Thursday, Paul Pry, with Of Age To-morrow, with other entertainments.—Friday, A Day after the Wedding, with the Clandestine Marriage.—Saturday, Peter Smink, with the Mountaineers, and other entertainments.

THEATRE ROYAL, ENGLISH OPERA HOUSE.—To-morrow, Monday, Before Breakfast, with The Boarding House, and Free and Easy—Tuesday, Before Breakfast, with Lying Made Easy and Jonathan in England.—Wednesday, The Oracle, with a popular entertainment.—Thursday, Before Breakfast, with Jonathan in England, and The Actress of All-Work, Maria, Miss Clara Fisher.

ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE, (ASTLEY'S,) Westminster-bridge. Positively the last night but five. For the BENEFIT of Mrs. WEST, Monday, Sept. 18, 1826.—The entertainments to commence at six o'clock, with the grand historical Spectacle of Missolonghi; or, the Massacre of the Greeks; after which, second time, grand Cavalry Manœuvres, illustrative and characteristic of England, Ireland, Scotland, and Wales, concluding with the National Arms, and Allegorical Picture. First time, Master West will sing the favourite Ballad of the Peasant Boy, and with Miss Philips, the ductto of "My pretty Page look out afar." Mr. Ducrow, as the Chinese Enchanter, riding his three uncaparisoned coursers at one time: and by particular desire, he will leap over a 5-barred gate, while standing on the bare backs of two hunters. The horse Salamander. Herr Cline on the tight rope. The whole to conclude with the last new after-piece of Mr. Moncricife, called the Sports of the Fields; or, the 1st of September.

THEATRE ROYAL, HAYMARKET.

FOR the BENEFIT of Mr. LISTON.—TO-MORROW, September 18, will be performed, the Farce of Fish out of Water. Sam Savoury, Mr. Liston; Charles Gayfare, Mr. Vining; Ellen Courtly, Mrs. Waylett. After which, The Hypocrite. Doctor Cantwell, Mr. W. Farren; Maw-worm, Mr. Liston; Old Lady Lambert, Mrs. Glover; Charlotte, (first time) Mrs. Waylett; the Young Lady Lambert, (first time) Mrs. Fancit. In the course of the evening, a Comic Address, entitled the Disadvantages of Popularity, will be spoken by Mr. Liston, in the character of Paul Pry. Madame Vestris will sing "Hurrah for the Bonnets so blue," "I've been Roaming," and, for this night only, "Buy a Broom," in character.—To conclude with the popular Farce called 'Twixt the Cup and the Lip. Simon Pengander, Mr. Liston.

SADLER'S WELLS.—Mr. T. DIBDIN'S NIGHT. To-morrow, Monday, A Grand Horse Race, to be ridden by Tom, Jerry, Logic, Jemmy Green, and Dusty Bob. Mr. Grimaldi, sen. will perform, with his son, for that night only. Mr. Williams will speak an address on the back of an Elephant, and sing a lamentation in the character of Bow Church Steeple, for the loss of her Bells. Mr. Blackmore will perform on the Cord Volante, and ascend to the Gallery in a Blaze of Fire Works. The other stage performances will be Tom and Jerry, with the Caliph and Cadi. Principal characters by Mrs. Fitzwilliam, Miss Stuart, Miss Healey, Messrs. Campbell, Foster, Walbourn, Williams, &c with a Song and Duet, for that night only, by Master Benson.

DIORAMA, REGENT'S PARK.—The two new Views now exhibiting, are The Interior of Rosslyn Chapel, painted by Mons. Dagnere, and a View of the City of Rouen, taken from Mount St. Catherine's, painted by Mons. Bouton, with various effect of light and shade, producing the most extraordinary illusion to the spectators.—Open daily from 10 till 4 o'clock.

N.B. Fine weather is not essential for seeing the present Views, as the appearance of sunshine is produced with equal effect on the most cloudy day.—Dimension of each picture, 70 feet by 50.

BATTLE OF POICTIERS.—MR. BULLOCK, respectfully announces that his PANSTEREOMACHIA; or, Model of the celebrated Battle of Poictiers, is NOW OPEN at 209, Regent-street.—This unique and curious Exhibition, representing the contending armies of France and England, in mortal combat, comprises upwards of 1,500 solid figures, beautifully modelled, with the strictest regard to historical truth, and the most accurate attention to the chivalry, heraldry, and costume, of the period to which it relates, which, with their pennons, arms, blazonry, and splendid accoutrements, present a grand and interesting display of British Military Achievement.—Admittance 1s.

MADRID IS NOW OPEN, in the large Circle PANORAMA, LEICESTER-SQUARE.—This interesting view of the City, and surrounding Country, taken by Mr. R. BURFORD in the year 1825, from the Tower of the Church of Santa Cruz, comprises the new Palace built by Philip V. The Buon Retiro, the favourite retreat of Ferdinand VI. The Prado, the long celebrated fashionable promenade of Madrid. The Plaza Mayor, or great square; and the Calle de Alcada, one of the finest streets in Europe, together with all the splendid Monasteries, Churches, &c. for which the Spanish capital is so celebrated, and a distant view of the Guardarramno Mountains, and the celebrated Monastery of the Escurial. MEXICO continues open. Admittance to each, one shilling.

THEATRES ROYAL.—DRURY LANE—A splendid PRIVATE STAGE-BOX, for Eight Persons, to be Let every Evening. Also several Admissions for this Theatre to be sold. Boxes in the best situations. Tickets, Admissions, Boxes, &c. for all Theatres, bought and sold on Commission. CHARLES WRIGHT, next the King's Theatre, Opera Colonade, who has on sale the finest Champaigne, 5s. 6d. per bottle.

BARBARY WALL-FLOWER SNUFF, to be had only of the Importer, GEORGE EDLIN, Importer of Foreign Snuffs and Segars, No. 6, Aldgate, corner of Saracen's Head Inn, and of his Agent, Mr. J. Nohill, 81, Lower Grosvenor-street, Bond-street.

To follow the Tiger,

FOR VAN DIEMEN'S LAND and NEW SOUTH WALES, the beautiful, new first class Brig, LION, ALEXANDER KENN, (late of the William Shand,) Commander. Burthen 275 Tons. Lying in the London Dock. Has excellent accommodations for Passengers. For Freight or Passage apply to Buckles, Bagster, and Buchanan, 33, Mark Lane.

Under engagement to sail this week,

FOR CALCUTTA direct, the fine new ship CANDIAN, FRANCIS REED, Commander. A 1. Coppered. Burthen 250 Tons. Lying in the City Canal. For Freight or Passage apply to Messrs. Hunter and Co. 59, Old Broad-street; or to Buckles, Bagster, and Buchanan, 33, Mark Lane.

MR. GUTHRIE will commence his LECTURES on the principles and practice of SURGERY, on TUESDAY, the 3d of October, at half-past six in the evening. Medical officers of the Navy, the Army, and the Ordnance will be admitted, on obtaining the recommendation of the heads of their respective departments, which must be presented to Mr. Guthrie, between the hours of half-past two and five, at his house, No. 2, Berkeley-street, Berkeley-square.

NEW MEDICAL SCHOOL, 58, Aldersgate-street, contiguous to St. Bartholomew's Hospital. The following COURSES of LECTURES will be delivered during the ensuing Winter, and will commence on Monday, the 2d of OCTOBER:—

ANATOMY and OPERATIONS of SURGERY.—Mr. Tyrrell.
DEMONSTRATIONS and DISSECTIONS.—Mr. Quain and Mr. Coulson.
SURGERY.—Mr. Lawrence and Mr. Wardrop.
HUMAN and COMPARATIVE PHYSIOLOGY.—Dr. Roget.
THEORY and PRACTICE of MEDICINE.—Dr. Clutterbuck and Dr. Tweedie.
MIDWIFERY and DISEASES of WOMEN and CHILDREN.—Dr. Davis
MATERIA MEDICA.—Dr. Tweedie.
CHEMISTRY.—Mr. J. T. Cooper.

For further particulars, apply either at the premises, or to Mr. Tyrrell, 17, New Bridge-street, Blackfriars, or St. Thomas's Hospital; or to Mr. Lawrence, 18, Whitehall-place, or St. Bartholomew's Hospital.

"BEFORE BREAKFAST."—The following Songs, Duets, &c. In the above popular musical entertainment, are published by J. B. CRAMER, ADDISON, and BEALE, 201, Regent-street.

"The merry flageolet," Song, sung by Miss Boden	2 0
"Banks of the Tweed," sung by Mr. Bland	1 6
"Country sports," sung by Mr. Mathews	2 0
"Hush pri'thee," trio, sung by Miss Boden, Messrs. Mathews and Bland	2 6

PIANOFORTES.—W. WALTER, (from Mr. Tomkison's) begs to recommend to those in want of a very superior Instrument, to inspect his stock of Grand, Cabinet, Cottage, and Square Pianos, which are warranted to be of the best description, at unusually low prices, and where the most decided satisfaction is not given, will be exchanged at the Manufactory, 118, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury.

Just published, by CLEMENTI and Co., 26, Cheapside,

BEAUTIES of SACRED HARMONY, consisting of the most popular Anthems, Hymns, Odes, &c, selected from the works of Arne, Arnold, Aldrich, Blake, Broderip, Croft, Giardini, Kent, Madan, Marcello, Purcell, and other eminent Composers; by T. Purday, price, in boards, 7s. 6d. Where may be had, by the same Author, the Morning and Evening Hymns, adapted to new Music, price 1s. 6d.

"NOW ALL THE TOWN IS CHERRY-RIPE," new medley Ballad, with characteristic etchings, founded on twelve popular songs sung by Madame Vestris, viz.—"Cherry-ripe," "I've been Roaming," "Light Guitar," "Lover's Mistake," "Buy a Broom," (by Horn*) "The Knight was Brave," "The Plain Gold Ring," &c. &c. by T. Williams, published at No. 2, Strand, price 2s. Ladies in the country desiring this favourite ballad, may now obtain it of any music or bookseller in the kingdom. N. B. New editions of the three popular glees, "Hark! Italy's Music," price 3s. "No, Mother, No," price 2s. 6d. "The Horn of the Chace," price 2s. 6d. by Chas. E. Horn.

* "Buy a Broom, by Horn (now singing at all the fashionable watering-places) is published as above, price 2s.

INTERRUPTED SACRIFICE.—NEW MUSIC, for the Piano Forte, the favourite Airs in Winter's Das Unterbrochene Opferfest, arranged in 4 books, (Flute ad. lib.), by J. F. Burrowes, each.. 4 0
Ditto, in 4 books, by ditto, as Duets, each 4 0
FAUST.—The Airs, in 3 books, from Spohr's celebrated Opera, by J. F. Burrowes, each 4 0
LA DAME BLANCHE.—The Airs, in 2 books, (Flute ad. lib.), by A.C. Whitcombe, each 4 0
The Overture to ditto, Flute ad. lib. 3 0
The Airs, in 2 books, as Duets, each 4 0
LARGO AL FACTOTUM, as a Duet, 3 0

Published by PAINE and HOPKINS, 69, Cornhill.

NEW FLUTE MUSIC.—WINTER'S INTERRUPTED SACRIFICE, as Solos, in Three Books, by Raphael Dressler, each 3 0
Boieldieu's La Dame Blanche, in two books, by ditto, each 3 0
Eightfavourite Airs from Der Freischutz, with variations, by Ernst 5 0
Il Crociato in Egitto (one or two flutes), in two books, by C. N. Weiss, each 3 0

Duets for Two Flutes.

Three grand Concertante, dedicated to G. Rudall, Esq. (10th set), Op. 67, R. Dressler 9 0
Three ditto, dedicated to J. Crosse, Esq. by Chas. Nicholson 7 6

Flute and Piano Forte.

Va gia varcasti, from IL CROCIATO and Sara, L'alma delusa, from RICCIARDO, by C. N. Weiss 3 0

Euterpe's Gifts.

No. 1. Grand Fantasia on two themes, from Der Freischutz, Op. 77, T. Berbiguier 4 0
2. Original Theme, with variations, Op. 65, R. Dressler 3 6
3. Grand Fantasia on Themes, from Il Barbiere di Seviglia, Op. 17, by Eugene Walckiers 6 0
4. Fantasia, dedicated to Sir George Smart, Op. 46, by A. B. Furstenau 3 0

Two Flutes and Piano-forte.

Four favourite Airs from the Interrupted Sacrifice, &c. by W. Bark 5 0
Theme from Op. 50, by T. Berbiguier 3 0

Three Flutes.

Grand Trio for Three Flutes, concertante, dedicated to the Amatours of the Flute, Op. 96, by C. N. Weiss 5 0
Ditto, dedicated to his Brother, Op. 102, by ditto 5 0
Ditto, dedicated to J. Winn, Esq. Op. 64, by R. Dressler 6 0

Published by PAINE and HOPKINS, 69, Cornhill.

NEW MUSIC.—Published by GOULDING and D'ALMAINE, 20, Soho-square.

PIANOFORTE.

Bishop's Air "Are you angry, Mother?" varied by G. Kiallmark, price	3 0
——— "Sun is o'er the Mountain," ditto	2 6
——— "My Araby, my noble Steed," T. A. Rawlings	2 6
——— "Are you angry, Mother?" ditto	2 6
Flowers of Sacred Harmony, No. 1. by T. Valentine	2 6
Winter's, "Opferfest" (The Oracle) Book 1. as duets, by I. F. Burrowes	4 0
Bishop's "Aladdin," for Pianoforte only, and as duets by do. in books	4 0
Meyer's "Medea in Corinto," for Pianoforte, by C. Dumon, in books	4 0

VOCAL.

"Buy a Broom!" sung by Miss Love, at Vauxhall, composed by H. R. Bishop	2 0
"The King! God bless Him!" Sung and composed by Mr. Braham, price	2 0
"A. B. C." comic duet, sung by Miss Love and Signor de Begnis, at Vauxhall, composed by I. Parry	2 0
"The Youth of the Valley," sung by Mr. Sinclair, at Vauxhall, by ditto	2 0
"Blame me not my gentle Laddie, sung by Miss Travis, ditto ditto	2 0
"Fair one take this rose," composed by Mrs. Miles	2 0
"The Bonny Lassie," ditto	2 0

A Selection of Songs by Bishop, Horn, Stevenson, &c. &c. arranged with an Accompaniment for the Spanish Guitar, by C. M. Sola.

☞ The admired Opera of "Medea in Corinto" is arranged for the Harp and Pianoforte, and for the Harp by N. C. Bochsa.

NEW SONGS.—Hurrah! for the bonnets of Blue, sung by Madame Vestris, composed by Alex. Lee 2 0
O'er the valley, O'er the Mountain, do. C. E. Horn 2 0
Lilies of the Valley, do. Sir J. Stevenson 2 0

NEW PIANO FORTE MUSIC.

Hertz's Brilliant Variations on Rossini's popular Air, "Aurora che Soigerai" 5 0
Hunten's Brilliant Rondo on Meyerbeer's celebrated Chorus, "Nel Silenzio" 3 6
Ries's Grand Variations on the National Air of "Rule Britannia" 6 0
Weisbecker's celebrated "Napoleon's Grand March" 2 0

 This March was performed at the Coronation of Napoleon.

Hull's Slow and Quick Marches, composed for the Fourth Dragoons Regiment 2 0
Ries's Grand Military Divertimento on the Duke of York's March 5 0
Cianchettini's Select Airs from the Opera of Medea. Book 1 and 2, each 4 0
Holst's arrangement of "Cherry Ripe," as a duett for Two Performers 3 6
Valentine's arrangement of "Cherry Ripe," for One Performer 2 0

New Editions of the following popular Works:—

Wilson's St. James's Quadrilles 3 6
Weippert's Cherry Ripe, do. 4 0
Musard's Kensington, do. 4 0
Duval's Lancers, do. 3 0
Willis's "Il Crociato," "Preciosa," and "Der Freischutz," do. each 2 0

Published by J. WILLIS & CO. Royal Musical Repository, 55, St. James's-street, (opposite Jermyn-street) London, and 7, Westmorland-street, Dublin, where may be found every variety of Grand, Cabinet, Cottage, Square, and Circular Pianofortes, Harps, &c. by the most eminent makers, at the lowest manufacturers prices.

Just published, price Sixpence.

CUMBERLAND'S BRITISH THEATRE, accurately printed from the Stage Copies, with Remarks, Biographical and Critical.

No. 93. The Stranger, with a fine wood engraving.
No. 92. The Disagreeable Surprise, with a Portrait of Mr. Hariey.
No. 91. High Life below Stairs, with a wood engraving.
No. 90. Doctor Bolus, a Serio-Comic-Bombastic-Operatic Interlude.
No. 89. The Honey Moon, a Comedy, by John Tobin.
No. 88. The Lord of the Manor, with engravings of Fawcett, Jones, and Liston, in character.
No. 87. Oberon, with a fine Portrait of Miss Vincent.
No. 86. The Good-natured Man, by Doctor Goldsmith.
No. 85. A Bold Stroke for a Wife, with a Portrait of Mr. Farren.

As a cheap, excellent, and correct Edition of dramatic Literature, this Work is without a rival.—Literary Chronicle, Sept. 9, 1826.

NEW MUSIC.—Just published at the ROYAL HARMONIC INSTIUTION, Argyll Rooms, 216, Regent-street.

The Songs, Duets, &c. in The ORACLE, or the Interrupted Sacrifice, composed by WINTER, and newly arranged by W. HAWES.

The Overture, 2s.
The rosy dawn hath driven, Chorus.
When battles conch is sounding, sung by—Mr. Atkins, 2s.
The trumpet first is sounded, sung by—Mr. Thorn, 2s.
We Maidens mark me, sung by—Miss Goward, 1s. 6d.
All hail to the God of our Fathers, Chorus.
Now by love and peace invited. Sestett and Chorus.
Oh when thine eye is throwing, Duet.—Miss Paton and Sapio, 2s. 6d.
All powerful Sun, sung by—Mr. Phillips, 2s.
There was a time ere sorrow, sung by—Miss Paton, 1s. 6d.
Between my hopes and fears suspended, Duet, 2s. 6d.
When will peace relieve my breast? sung by—Miss Hamilton, 1s. 6d.
How the plaguing varlet teases, Duet, by—Miss Goward and Thorn, 2s. 6d.
We hail thee Lord of Light, Finale, 1st Act, 10s
Tho' we all can feel thy sorrow, Quartett and Chorus.
In what sad hour, Trio
Oh heavens! the thought is frightful, Duet.
Hast never mark'd the flower, Song,—Miss Boden, 1s. 6d.
The Maid who'd wish to slumber, Quartett, 2s. 6d.
The Gloomy terrors of the grave, Scena, Mr. Sapio, 2s. 6d.
Farewell, yet not for ever, Quartett.
The evening is descending, Finale, 10s.

Burrows's Selection of Airs from Weber's Opera of Oberon, arranged for the Piano Forte, with Flute adlib, in four books, each 4s.

BOCHSA's Select Airs from the Oracle, for the Harp, and Pianoforte, with Flute and Violin accompaniments, 10s. 6d.; also the Overture to the above, arranged as above, price 5s.

DEATH FETCH.—The music in this admired and popular Opera, composed by C. E. Horn.

I'VE BEEN ROAMING.—Cavatina, sung by Madame Vestris, by C. E. Horn, price 2s.

OBERON.—The music in this popular Romantic and Fairy Opera, composed by the Carl Maria Von Weber.

 The Proprietors of the ROYAL HARMONIC INSTITUTION beg most respectfully to acquaint the Public, that the only correct copies of the Opera now performing at the English Opera House, called "THE ORACLE," are published by them, and that all other copies are spurious and an Invasion of their rights.

NEW VOCAL MUSIC.—"Love's Labour Lost," the admired Ballad singing by Madame Vestris with the most enthusiastic applause at the Theatre Royal, Haymarket, and nightly encored. Composed by Alexander Lee, price 2s. Published by Mayhew and Co., 17, Old Bond-street, where may be had, just published, the following:—

NEW SONGS.	SINGERS.	COMPOSERS.
Light Guitar, (4th edition)	Mad. Vestris	John Barnett
Fancy dipp'd her Pen in Dew	Miss Stephens	John Whittaker
A Voice whispered softly dear Mary	Miss Love	George Perry
"Yes, I will leave the festive Scene," in answer to the "Light Guitar"	Miss Paton	John Barnett
"Not a Drum was heard," the celebrated Ode on the Death of Sir John Moore	Mr. Sapio	Ditto
Love at Home, all alone	Miss Foote	J. Hart
Love's delightful Hour	Mr. Pearman	John Emdin
The Drummer Boy	Mad. Vestris	L. Devereux
The Queen of Bonnie Lasses	Mr. Braham	J. Hart
The Rose of the Desert	Mad. Vestris	John Barnett
The Joys of Liberty and Wine	Mr. Bedford	Ditto
Paul Pry. "Hope I don't Intrude," comic with the original Portrait of Mr. Liston	Mr. Liston	Pigwiggin
A wand'ring Minstrel weary came	Mrs. Humby	I. A. Wade
The "General Election," comic, written by Charles Dibdin the younger, with an illustration by Cruikshank	Mr. Mathews	John Barnett
Maiden heedful he. The Token Flowers	Mad. Vestris	Ditto
The Moorish Maiden	Mrs. Ashe	John Emdin
You ask a Song, you bid me sing	Mr. Broadhurst	G. Kiallmark
Genius of Freedom, (Grand Scena)	Miss Paton	G. Perry
I left the Bowl in Search of Love	Mr. Phillips	Mr. Phillips
England the home of the world	Mr. Braham	John Barnett

THE QUARTERLY REVIEW, No. LXVIII., will be published on the 26th Instant.

COUNTY FIRE OFFICE, and PROVIDENT LIFE OFFICE, Regent-street, London.—Established 1806.

PRESIDENT AND TRUSTEES.

The Duke of Rutland
The Marquis of Northampton
Earl Grey
Lord King, &c. &c.

DIRECTORS.

J. T. Barber Beaumont, Esq.
Francis Const, Esq.
Sir George Duckett, Bart.
Sir John Harington, Bart.
Hon. Frederick Hotham
Sir Richard King, Bart.
Sir S. B. Morland, Bart.
Hon. Thomas Parker
William Praed, Esq.
General Shrapnell
Sir William E. Welby, Bart.
Sir Robert Wilson.

&c. &c. &c.

CAPITALS—A MILLION STERLING AND UPWARDS.

The Profits are divided amongst those who now insure, as well as the original Members, in just proportion to their respective payments.

In the Fire Office, Returns during the last Thirteen Years, to the Amount of £52,000 have been paid to all Persons who have continued insured Seven Years, upon Annual as well as Septennial Policies, and whether they have been sufferers or otherwise.

In the Life Office, Bonuses of £13 8s. and £26 12s. per cent. have been divided during the last Fourteen Years.—Another Septennial Dividend will take place next year, in which these who now insure will participate.

Military Men are not charged additional, unless called into actual service.

Persons are at liberty to pass and repass to the Continent under limitations, without Licence and extra Premium.

Persons removing to unhealthy climates, or subject to bodily Infirmities, may be insured.

If any Person die by Suicide, Duelling, or the Hands of Justice, the full value which his Policy bore on the day previous to the time of his Death will be paid.

No Admission Fees are required, nor is any Charge made for Policies, except the Stamp Duty.

DISTRESS in SPITALFIELDS.—At a Meeting of the Committee, holden in the Vestry-room of Christ Church, Spitalfields, Sept. 13, 1826;

The Rev. RICHARD HARVEY in the Chair.

The Committee feel it to be their duty to make one more appeal to the charity of the British public before they finally close the subscription for the relief of the distressed Weavers in Spitalfields. Only £200 remains in the hands of their Treasurer, and the money distributed during the last week, notwithstanding the fresh reduction in the allowance, amounted to £293 7s.

The Committee lament to say, that unless much larger contributions are afforded in the course of the ensuing week than they have lately received, all relief whatever must be immediately stopped, and all means of subsistence must be taken away from upwards of 8,000 persons.

Amount before advertised £27,478 12 5

The Rev. T. A. Methuen	1 1	By Messrs. Drummond and Co.
Mrs. Leachman	2 0	A Lady	5 0
W. E.	5 0	By Messrs. Gosling and Co.
D. G. N.	10 0	Thos. H. Plumer, Esq. 2d don.	20 0
C. E.	35 0	X. Y.	10 0
By the Rev. R. Harvey.		By Messrs. Hammersley and Co.
The Rev. G. A. Hatch, 2d don.	10 0	Wm. Portal, Esq.	10 0
Miss Auhertin, 3rd don.	5 0	Mrs. Portal, 2d don.	10 0
Miss Cath. Auhertin, 3d don.	5 0	Miss Portal	5 0
Miss Mary Auhertin, 3d don.	5 0	X. Y. Z.	20 0
The Rev. R. Harvey, 2d don.	2 2	E. J. A. 2d don.	10 0
By Messrs. Barnett and Co.		By Messrs. Horries and Co.
P.	1 0	L. G. D.	5 0
By Sir W. Curtis, Bart. and Co.		By Messrs. Hoare and Co.
P. P. H. by Dixon and Co.	5 0	W. H. H.	2 2
By Messrs. Coutts and Co.		By Messrs. Marten, Cail and Co.
J. H. Peile, Esq.	10 0	H. G.	10 0
Sir R. A. Ferguson	5 0	By Messrs. Smith, Payne, and Co.
By Messrs. Hankey and Co.		A. A.	50 0
Lady Suffield, 2d don.	25 0

Subscriptions are received by the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor; Wm. Hale, Esq. Wood-street, Spitalfields, Treasurer; and by all the Bankers.

The Committee continue to sit in the Vestry-room, Spitalfields, on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, at 2 o'clock.

J. D. KINCAID, Sec.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

PARIS PAPERS.

(From the Etoile.)

CONSTANTINOPLE, AUG. 11.—The Government daily follows up its system of reform; and, according to the suggestion of the Grand Vizier, a Minister of Police has been created, who, independently of the privileges of a Pacha, has been invested with the power of life and death. The organization of the new troops is pushed on with activity, and appears to give much pleasure to the young people of the capital, as they have been seen some days imitating the European exercises with sticks, in default of muskets. Even the Sultan himself partakes with enthusiasm in the new exercise. He shows himself with the Selictar Aga and Berber Baschi, and other favourites, in the court-yard of the Seraglio, and exercises himself in the manual discipline of the Franks. His favourite plan seems to be the formation of a noble troop of body guards, composed of the sons of the grandees of the empire. He will have in them, at the same time, so many hostages for the loyalty of their fathers. They have already taken into the Seraglio a hundred, who are exercised with the young heir to the throne.

PARIS, SEPT. 12.—His Majesty the King of Bavaria arrived on the 4th at Biebrich, at the residence of his Highness the Duke of Nassau. The day after, his Majesty and his Highness proceeded to Johannisberg, where they dined. The King returned at night to Biebrich. His Majesty left yesterday morning, on his way back to Aschaffenbourg.

The Holy Father, by a bull, dated 12th May last, has authorised the translation of the chapter of St. John of Jerusalem, from Catana to Ferara. A Council of State of the order has passed a decree for the execution of this bull.

In consequence of this decree, the Knights departed on the 31st July, from Catana, with their archives and property, and proceeded to their new destination by the Adriatic, with the exception of the Commander Vela, President of the Chapter, and Commander of the Order, who took the route to Naples.

After a tedious and disagreeable voyage, the convoy of the Chapter arrived on the 26th August on the side of the mouth of the Goro. The Commander, Vela, arrived early in September at Ferrara. The Bishop of Terracina died on the 17th last month, at Naples.

A Journal announces to-day that Mr. Canning was to arrive at Paris in six days. He is expected on Thursday.

The following is from the Augsburg Gazette:—A courier, who was despatched on the 30th July, by way of Odessa, bringing letters from Messrs. de Woronzow and Ribeaupierre, has given information to M. Minziacky, that the Turkish Commissioners were at first unwilling to submit to quarantine, as contrary to the precepts of their religion; that they afterwards declared Akermann too distant from the frontiers, and proposed in consequence to carry on the conferences on the left banks of the Pruth. M. de Minziacky went immediately to the Reis Effendi, calling on him to expedite proper orders to the Commissioners. It is hoped that, in spite of the ambiguous, evasive, and laconic answers attributed to the Reis Effendi, the Porte will interpose no more obstacles to the opening of the conferences.

We cannot pretend, like the Augsburg Gazette, to know every day the diplomatic relations of the two parties, but we try, in general, to give our readers nothing but certain intelligence. It is very obvious that, to relate, as recent, transactions that have occurred a long time ago, is to a certain degree to deceive the public, who require results, and not conjectures. We have already announced the opening of the conferences.

In the Frankfort Papers of the 9th instant there is an article dated Smyrna, July 28, from the Oriental Spectator, which represents the Greeks, according to custom, to be sordid, ungrateful, and piratical; in a word, every thing that is stupid and despicable:

"SMYRNA, JULY 28.—Captain Davis, commanding the English brig Skylark, sailed again from Napoli on the 17th of July, after having landed his cargo of cannon and military stores. The Greeks received with contempt this tribute of European enthusiasm, saying to the Captain, in a reproachful tone, 'What have we to do with cannon! It is money that we want; it is money that you should have brought us.' They suffered the cannon and their carriages to be landed on the beach; and a month afterwards, when the Skylark sailed, the sand was beginning to cover them. The inhabitants of the neighbouring houses came every morning to break up the carriages to light the fire in their kitchens.

"Captain Davis sailed from Smyrna: he had some packages on board, and furniture, to the amount of 30,000 piastres. On the 20th of July, at day-break, he was surrounded, off Capo Doro, by seven misties; resistance was vain. The deck was soon covered with 300 pirates, who stole all they could lay their hands upon; money, goods, arms, provisions, clothes, cordage, sails, every thing, in a word, was carried off; they even stripped the officers and sailers of the shirts they wore. The unfortunate crew was two days without food, but had afterwards the good fortune to meet an American corvette, which kindly gave them provisions for their support till they could reach Smyrna."

(From the St. Petersburg Journal of Aug. 29.

ST. PETERSBURG, AUG. 17, (29).—Notwithstanding the importance of trade with Persia, it has been little understood up to this time in Europe. The Merchants of Constantinople know little of the market. The English is the only nation which trades direct with Persia, by the port of Benderbukhir, in the gulf of Persia, where they sell their merchandise either for ready money, or barter it against silk; and the English trade is very considerable. The festival, called Nourouz, which is celebrated at Tauris, Tcheran, and in all parts of Persia, at the end of February, is the most proper time for the sale of European merchandise. The Fair, which takes place at this time, continues a whole month. It is necessary to arrive at Sultanic, in the month of June, during the annual stay there of the Shach. This is the only town in Persia where goods are sold for cash, because there is no barter trade; at Tauris, on the contrary, the principal transactions are by barter; nevertheless, European cloth, of gold and silver, as also a small assortment of other goods, are bought for ready money. Persia receives from Constantinople, manufactured silk, cloth of gold and silver, and other French manufactures, for the purchase of which 300 merchants of Tauris make the journey annually; the Prince Abbas-Mirza ordinarily devotes 20,000 tomans in this sort of speculation. The distance from Tiflis to Tauris is about 600 versts. This journey, which is made with the convoys of merchandise in about twenty-two to thirty days, and which may be made on horseback in six to ten, is traversed by an infinity of rivulets, which must be forded, which occasions many difficulties at the time of the mountain thaw. At all times this road is free from danger, and provisions may be procured everywhere. The caravans consume ten days in going from Tauris to Sultanic, at which place a person on horseback may arrive in three.

At this present time, the Armenians send by the way of Tiflis and Ghilan, to the amount of 1,600,000 of Russian merchandise, the chief of which are glass-ware and chrystals, coarse calicoes, refined sugars, nankeens, printed calicoes, common cloths, and such like. This trade from Astracan is carried on by sea to Lenkoran, from whence the merchandise is forwarded to Tauris by horses. At Tauris there is an annual arrival by the way of Erzerum of ten to twelve caravans from Constantinople. According to the Persian custom-house registers, Persia imports, by this road, to the amount of four or five hundred thousand tomans of English and French goods, and gives in return, raw silk, Cachemere and Kerman shawls, tobacco, indigo, and pepper. Very little is brought from Smyrna, because the goods must be bought with ready money. Two or three hundred horses bring annually, from Trebizand to Tauris, glassware, pottery, porcelain, and ordinary cloths; from Benderbukhir, are brought sugar, coffee, indigo, printed cottons, coverlids, and English cotton goods, to a considerable amount. The value of the imports at Tcheran and Tauris, by this road, is reckoned at about a million of tomans. The shawls of Cachemere are also brought by the way of Benderbukhir, because the road by land is dangerous. Lastly, by the way of Bagdad, many English and French goods are brought, and by this road, at least, to the amount of 100,000 tomans, goods are brought to Tauris.

The Hobart Town Colonial Times, to the 15th of April, has been received. It contains no public news. There is a long discussion respecting certain opinions advanced in a letter by the Lieutenant-Governor, in which the outrages of the Bush-rangers are said to have been excited by the licentiousness of the Colonial press. There are also some alleged delinquencies on the part of the local authorities discussed; what they are, however, seems rather obscurely exemplified. The Bush-rangers were extinct, and some judicious hints are given for preventing their re-appearance. It was in contemplation, by the settlers on Macquarrie River, to erect and endow a Scots Church, and a bond for 100l. a year to a clergyman had already been entered into.

The Allgemeine Zeitung to the 7th instant has reached us. A Captain, who arrived at Trieste on the 31st ult., in 28 days from Samos, states, that the Turkish and Greek fleets were still cruising off that island, in sight of each other. This account comes down about fourteen days later than that received through the French Papers on Tuesday. It is also said that the Turks had been defeated at Athens, contrary to what has been asserted; but the news of the defeat requires confirmation.

A Liege Journal asserts, on the authority of letters from Rio de Janeiro, that in consequence of the neglect of the etiquette of the Brazilian Court, by the Envoy of the Netherlands, there is no prospect of a commercial treaty between the two nations. It seems, that, among other delinquencies, he rode to Court in a chaise, instead of a state carriage, and when he presented the Insignia of the Order, sent by the King of the Netherlands, he forgot to pull off his glove.

The Austrian Observer has accounts from Constantinople, to the 11th August. These state, that the extreme rigour shown towards the Janissaries and their adherents, has in a great degree abated, and that business, which had been interrupted, was once more going on as formerly. The discontent is said to have disappeared; but the Standard of the Prophet still remained unfurled, and the camp at the Seraglio was not broken up. The most satisfactory accounts continued to be received from the provinces.

A private letter from Java, of the 24th March, announces that the war there still continued. The great mass of the population was faithful to the Dutch Government, which was thus enabled to employ one part in putting down the other. Without, however, considerable reinforcements from Europe, it was supposed that the war might continue for some years yet.

From the Paris Papers lately arrived, is an article in the Journal des Debats, which states that an English squadron had appeared in the Mediterrancan, for the purpose of taking possession of the Balearic Islands, (Majorca, Minorca, and Ivica,) in case of necessity; that is, it seems, in case certain alleged negociations carrying on at Madrid by Mr. Lamb should not terminate satisfactorily. It is not mentioned what these negociations are; but we wonder that the same well-informed correspondent of the Journal des Debats, who ascertained the arrival of the English squadron, could not throw some light upon the diplomatic discussions between this country and Spain.

A curious reason is assigned by the Courrier Francais for the removal of the Duke de L'Infantado from the Spanish Cabinet. It is stated that several official Notes, written to him during his ministry, by Mr. Lamb, could not be found. His Excellency, we are further told, "was in the habit of receiving all sorts of papers without transmitting them to any one;" and that if any of those papers were wanted, the only way to get them was to apply to his favourite valet. This was certainly a novel and an expeditious method of transacting public business.

It is announced in letters from Akermann, that the conferences between the Turkish and Russian Plenipotentiaries were likely to stumble on the threshold; an unlucky omen. The former, it is said, are instructed to insist on the restitution of certain fortresses in Asia, which the latter are prohibited from conceding, because they had been repaired and enlarged at a great expense by Russia, when the safety of her frontiers imperiously required it. "It is known for certain," says the account, "that the Emperor Nicholas will never deliver these fortresses, and that the Russian Commissioners have instructions not to admit such a demand, even in the protocol."

Moscow, August 19.—The coronation will take place on the 5th of September for certain. Since the commencement of Lent there has been almost a total absence of balls and amusements. But strangers are tolerated in doing things which are not at all permitted to the Russians. M. de la Ferronays, the Duke of Ragusa, and the Duke of Devonshire, take a day in rotation, and their houses are well attended by company. The Russian houses most frequented are those of Prince Galitzin, Governor-General of Moscow, and of General Apraxin. The Emperor is slightly indisposed, and has not attended the parade these two days. His Majesty has for some time occupied the palace of the Countess Orloff, at one of the extremities of the city. He is better there than at the Kremlin, and this residence also agrees better with the health of her Majesty the Empress, which requires much attention. The Empress-mother resides at the Archiepiscopal palace.—Moniteur.

(From the Boston Gazette of September 12.)

A most dreadful fire took place at Crowland, about two o'clock on Sunday afternoon last, which raged with unabated fury until yesterday morning, when it was so far subdued as to prevent its spreading any further. It originated in a stack of fen fodder, on the premises of Mr. Joshua Fletcher, of that place, taking fire through being put together in too wet a state, which soon communicated to an oat stack adjoining, and from thence caught the neighbouring houses in South-street, notwithstanding the immediate attendance of the Crowland fire-engine, and those of Spalding, Thorney, and Peterborough. It is lamentable to add, that the scarcity of water in the neighbourhood prevented the engines being properly supplied; the flames, therefore, raged with dreadful fury, and we are sorry to say, that twelve houses, some barns, and several stacks of corn and hay, were entirely consumed. What is still more lamentable is, that most of the houses were occupied by poor labouring people, whose cries were dreadful in the extreme, as, by this accident, their little furniture was destroyed, as well as the corn they had industriously gleaned during the late harvest. The flames raged with such unbounded fury as to be distinctly seen at a distance of ten miles, at seven o'clock on Sunday evening.

Prince Charles of Prussia happened to arrive at Petersburg previous to his birth-day. On the morning of that day his Aide-de-Camp, his Secretary, and a Dr. Beck, who had accompanied the Prince in his journey, came to offer him their congratulations. He honoured them by an invitation to breakfast, and as all the guests happened to be musicinas, a quartett was proposed. The noise of the instruments kept them from hearing the roll of a carriage, and lo! the Empress, very simply dressed, entered the room, with two servants, carrying presents to the Prince, whom she also came to congratulate. The guests rose to withdraw, but the Empress insisted on their procceding with their quartett, and declared that she had come to breakfast with them. A quarter of an hour had hardly elapsed, when the Emperor arrived in his droschki, to present his felicitations to his brother-in-law; the suite of the Prince again rose to retire, but the Emperor would not allow them. "You seem all to be on such delightful terms of intimacy here," said Nicholas, "that I cannot but request you will allow me to join the party." There was, of course, no replying to this, and the whole six sat down to breakfast at the same table. The conversation was general, animated, and free from the least constraint. The visit of the Emperor continued for two hours.—German Paper.

PROVINCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

FRACAS AT BRIGHTON.

A circumstance has just occurred at Brighton, which has caused a good deal of conversation in the fashionable and scandal-loving coteries of that town. Mrs. Forbes, or rather Mrs. Forrest (for that is the name she is now known by), the female friend and companion of the late Mr. Fauntleroy, has been living in a house on the New Steyne. On Saturday last, a solicitor, who occupied the house adjoining (No. 25), put up in his parlour-window the following placard:—"Beware of the * * * house, No. 24, New Steyne;" and the occupants of the latter, in their turn, displayed one as follows:—"The public are requested to suspend their opinion of the infamous placard exhibited in the window of No. 25, next door, as the writer will have to prove it in a court of justice." The New Steyne has, in consequence, been the resort of numerous gazers to-day, who are at a loss to discover the reason of the placards being continued, as it is understood that Mrs. Fauntleroy had previously removed to another residence on the first appearance of the notice, and that she will, in a day or two, leave Brighton altogether.

This affair of Mrs. Forrest has led to a fracas, and a hearing before the Magistrates. The name of the solicitor by whom the placard was put up is Barrow, and in the examination, he stated, at an early hour, Mr. Ramsden (an officer of the Guards), and two other gentlemen (also believed to be officers), all of whom are in custody, came to his house, and abused him with the most opprobrious and offensive epithets, spitting in his face, and challenging him to come out and fight. A watchman happening to pass at the moment, took them into custody; and they were bound over by the Magistrates in their own recognizances of 100l. to keep the peace, and also to appear at the sessions. Warrants were also issued for the apprehension of the two ladies, on charges of keeping a disorderly house; but as it was understood they were about to leave the town, it is not unlikely they will take their departure before the warrant can be served upon them. It appeared on the examination, that Mrs. Forrest and her companion returned on Sunday night to the house on the New Steyne, and this accounts for the exhibition of the placards, which at the time caused so much surprise. Mr. Barrow stated to the Magistrates that the house was the resort of men of all ages, from sixteen to eighty, and that seventy or eighty different gentlemen had been there; but it does not appear that previously to the bills being put up, any thing was done to annoy or disturb the neighbourhood.

Mrs. Forrest, who is a pretty woman, and of fascinating manners, has resided here some weeks, driving a barouche, and living in very good style.—Brighton Herald.

NEW ASSEMBLY ROOMS AT BRIGHTON.—The site fixed on for the erection of a new and complete suit of Assembly Rooms, which has long been a desideratum here, under the sanction of the King, and the direct patronage of his Royal Highness the Duke of York, is on the east side of the Grand Parade, nearly facing the King and Queen Inn, a well-selected spot for it, as being almost in the centre of the many fashionable residences in that quarter, with a capital carriage-road, and plenty of space for all of the ornamental and the useful in the building that may be required. The ground has been taken on lease, at the annual rent of 250l., with a purchasing clause of 5,000l. any time within the first seven years.

On Wednesday evening last, a person had been enjoying himself at a snug public-house near Coventry; but, on the approach of night, had discovered that he had made too free with the contents of the landlord's casks, as well as his own purse. He accordingly ordered his horse to be saddled and bridled, which being promptly attended to, he mounted his Rosinante, and started for his "Sweet Home," which is not a day's march from the village of Fillongley. After many a stumble, he was met at his cottage-gate by his anxious family; he spoke not, but on a light being brought, they were struck with astonishment at the sight before them; the horse was stationary, and its rider fast asleep, with his head and arms resting on the animal's mane. The saddle and bridle were gone, they knew not where; but it is certain that some one had taken advantage of Morphens's votary on the road, and had afterwards placed him on his gentle nag, as he was there found. A reward of 5s. was offered by the bellman on Friday, in Coventry market, for the restoration of the lost property, but without success.

The bailiff of a gentleman at Worth, near Crawley, was making preparations with a friend to partake of the sports of the field, when, as they were leaving the house with the pieces loaded, his wife called him back to make arrangements for a harvest supper, which was to be held in the evening; while conversing, the trigger was accidentally touched, and the gun unfortunately went off, when the contents penetrated the calf of her leg, and drove the flesh from the bone against the door. She died in a few hours.

A person of gentlemanly figure and deportment, who subscribed his name A. G. M'Donald, attracted much attention in this town on Friday last, as he perambulated the streets playing the Scotch bagpipes, a man in the character of a servant walking behind him. He was quickly recognized as the Wandering Minstrel, of whom the papers have spoken, having undertaken, for a wager of 1,000l. to travel for six months in that character, and by voluntary contributions from the public, collect sufficient for his own subsistence, and reserve 100l. out of his receipts, clear of such expences. There is no reason to doubt but this person was the character he represented; he played the pipes through the various streets, and, as said by some, with much ability. He did not take money himself, neither did he who walked behind him ask any, but accepted only such as was offered, which was but trifling during our observation. Mr. M'Donald, however, was invited to several of the inns in the town, where he was very courteously received. He played much, and sung several songs with good effect, producing him in one house as much as fifteen, and in others ten shillings. The same person was at Ipswich on the 4th instant. Some thought they recognized in Mr. M'Donald the celebrated Captain Barclay; but we are assured such is not the case.—Chelmsford Chronicle.

Mr. Brady, a very respectable and extensive dealer in pigs, residing at Woodberrow, Somersetshire, has recently received an order from Mr. Bowman, of Bristol, to furnish him with 20 of the largest and fattest hogs that can be obtained in the county. Mr. Bowman, who is, it appears, one of the most extensive merchants in Bristol in the "swine line," has received instructions from his Majesty to procure, and prepare for immediate use, forty of the largest sides of bacon that can be got, and when the order is completed, to forward them to Windsor, expressly for his Majesty. Mr. Brady, therefore, has been actively employed in the execution of this extraordinary order, and he has already succeeded in purchasing 15 out of the 20 hogs required; some of them are so fat, that when down, they can scarcely get up, their legs not being able to sustain the weight of their bodies. Each side, when rendered into bacon by the process regularly adopted, will weigh about 160lb. or 11st. 6lb.

Tuesday night, a man of the name of Alexander, residing in Leith Wynd, in a fit of passion stabbed his wife in the neck with a knife. The woman was taken to the infirmary, but the wound was of so serious a nature, that she died in a few hours. We understand that the parties had frequent jars, which arose from jealousy on the part of the wife. Alexander is in custody.—Edinburgh Observer.

ment to me, as I have thought much of the pleasure I should have received, in a twofold degree, being—first, with her I hold dear, above every other object ; and secondly, to have seen some of my old friends at Bexley. However, God's purposes must be accomplished, therefore let us be patient under them. I know your goodness, my dear A., will excuse this unforseen occurrence. I shall expect to see you on your return, and believe me, it will not be long before we shall take a journey, not only to the Crays, but as far as Dover, when I hope, my dear A., we shall be as happy as man and wife can wish. God bless you and yours. Make my kind respects to your mother and sister, and respectful compliments to all your friends.

I conclude, my dear Ann,
Your sincerely affectionate,
" E. JARVIS.

" N. B. I shall expect you on Wednesday, if I mistake not."

Miss Elizabeth Whitehurst stated, that she kept a grocer's shop for many years at No. 23, Windmill-street, Tottenham-court-road, and a few months ago was introduced to the prisoner as a respectable builder and a widower. He appeared to be a sober, steady man, and was represented to her to be doing an extensive business as a timber-merchant ; she consented to become his wife. He told her his name was Edward J. Tollast, and that he had a contract from Lord Darnley to supply building materials. She was possessed of an independent property, and the prisoner urged his suit so warmly, that, on July 3, she became his wife. In a month, or thereabouts, afterwards, he left her for three days.

Miss Finlayson—That three days he was living with my aunt, having married her on the first of these three days.

The former witness added, that she traced the prisoner, after he finally deserted her, to a house in Church-street, St. Giles's, where the officer (Ledger) apprehended him.

Ledger said, that the prisoner was courting a female at the house where he secured him, to whom he had contracted to be married in a few days.

Mr. Halls said, it was fortunate he was stopped in his career, or he might have added another unfortunate woman to the list of his victims.

Miss Finlayson stated, that the prisoner received nearly 3001. from her aunt, Mrs. Hannah Gray, of Prospect-place, Camden-town, before the marriage took place. The marriage took place on the 10th of August ; the prisoner lived only three days with her aunt, and went away, carrying with him articles of jewellery, apparel, linen, &c., of considerable value. She had been at the trouble of getting certificates of three of the prisoner's marriages, which she produced.

Mr. Halls said the prisoner should be remanded, and he had no doubt, there would be numerous other charges against him, through the aid of the Press.

Major Sweeny appeared before Sir R. Birnie, to show cause why he should not give security to the Overseers of the parish of St. Martin's-in-the-Fields, that an illegitimate child, of which it was alleged he was the father, should not become chargeable to that parish.

The Major was attended by his solicitor and several officers of the army, and soon afterwards a young and handsome woman, most elegantly dressed, attended by a servant with a child in her arms, came into the office.

The Solicitor for the Major spoke to Sir Richard Birnie in a tone of voice to us inaudible, and Sir Richard replied, " Well, as the Major is so very anxious not to be shown up, I will hear the matter in the private room."

The parties went into the private room, and after hearing the statement of the mother of the child, and the answer to the charge by the Major, Sir R. recommended the latter to settle the matter with the parish by paying for the child's support.

The Major said he would rather carry the case to the Sessions, because he was positive he was not the father of the child.

Miss Ireland, the sister of the well-known swindler of that name, who was committed some time ago, stated, she was intimately acquainted with Major Sweeny in 1825. On the 11th of November in that year she was delivered of a girl, who was christened, at St. Martin's Church, " Georgiana Augusta." She had become chargeable to the parish of St. Martin-in-the-Fields. The father of that child was that gentleman (pointing to the defendant, Major John Paget Sweeny.)

Miss Ireland was shortly cross-examined by the Major, and replied—I have lived with a Mr. Mountain. I became intimate with Mountain in 1819. I lived with him in Barossa-place, in Mount-street, in the Haymarket, and in Villiers-street, Strand.

Miss Ireland said that she never admitted to any person in Mount-street that the child was Mr. Mountain's, nor did she say, as she remembered, that her mother, who lived in Ireland, had the care of two other children which she had had by Mountain.

The Major said he could prove her guilty of perjury.

Mr. Halls said, that the only way he could legally do that was by producing the record of her conviction for that offence in some court of justice.

Sir R. Birnie observed, that the Major had allowed that it was possible he might be the father of the child ; her oath must be taken. Still, if the Major thought proper, he might take the case on appeal to the Sessions.

The Major said that it was a conspiracy to extort money from him, and he certainly would carry the case to the Sessions.

Sir R. Birnie said it might be very true, but he was bound to believe the woman on her oath, and ordered the Major to pay 6s. weekly, and the costs previously incurred.

The Major then produced bail to prosecute his appeal.

LONDON FRAUDS.—On Thursday evening the sitting Magistrate (Mr. HALLS) was occupied for a considerable time in the examination of three women, to one of which was appended three children, the eldest about six, the second between three and four years of age, and the youngest (as the woman who succled it said) no more than four months old. The prominent facts of the case were as follow :—A gentleman connected with the Morning Chronicle newspaper, deposed, that he had witnessed the fraudulent behaviour of the prisoners on several previous occasions on the Surrey side of the Thames, particularly in the neighbourhood of Waterloo-road, Great Charlotte-street, &c., and on the present occasion they had chosen the door of the Morning Chronicle-office as the scite of their depredations on the pockets of the public.—Having seen them levy their fraudulent contributions for some time, he determined to put a stop to it, and for that purpose went to the door of the office, and asked what was the matter.—The two assistants immediately replied in the most piteous strains, that the poor woman was destitute of the slightest means of support for herself and three starving children ; that she had been obliged to sit down where she then was, or that she would have fainted with fatigue ; and a great deal more of similarly false appeals to the charitable feelings of the by-standers, nearly the whole of whom contributed from one penny to sixpence, as circumstances might dictate. The gentleman then asked one of the associates what business she had to take so warm an interest in the woman and children, who was, in his opinion, a most consummate impostor, upon which the assistant commenced abusing the gentleman in the most gross and indecent strain ; and on his retreating into the office of the Morning Chronicle, actually followed him twice, repeating the abusive language—however, the threat of an officer got rid of the whole, when the woman with the children showed no lack of vigour in making her escape. Shortly afterwards, the gentleman was proceeding along the Strand, when he found they had again taken up a position near the bottom of Catherine-street, and were repeating the same farce as effectually as they had previously done. The gentleman then went to the residence of Dundas, the beadle of St. Mary-le-Srand, who returned to the scene of action, and at the desire of the gentleman took the two coadjutors into custody. The whole party, including the children, were then conveyed to the Watch-house.—One of the two made considerable resistance, but was overpowered with the assistance of the gentleman who had brought the beadle to apprehend them. On arriving at the Watch-house, they were searched by the beadle, to which they all very strenuously objected, resisting the officer by every means in their power, at the same time using the most obsceue language, and accusing the beadle of indecent conduct in the performance of his duty.—On their persons was found several sixpences and some halfpence, and in the pockets of the two assistants, several duplicates of articles pledged.

On the Magistrate asking them severally what they had to say why he should not commit them as vagrants to the House of Correction, the most abusive of the two commenced a long harangue about the respectability of herself and husband, who, she said, had worked for a tauner in Russell-street, Bermondsey, for 14 years, earning three guineas per week, and that she herself could earn another guinea by sewing together with the morocco skins her husband dressed.

An intelligent fellow of an officer, on being asked by Mr. HALLS if he knew her, declared, that she had been as well as her husband and a son of theirs, scarcely ever out of Horsemonger-lane gaol, or Brixton House of Correction, for the last six years. The latter of which she had not been more than a week out of herself, and that her husband and son were now in confinement in the former, on a charge of felony. The other was more mildly spoken, and laid claim to far the greatest share of duplicates ; said, she knew nothing whatever of the woman and children, that she was a married woman living at Bermondsey, having a family of five children ; that she had been to the Royal Hospital at Chelsea to see an uncle who had been (or was) dangerously ill ; that the other woman had merely accompanied her in her walk from Bermondsey to Chelsea, and that being on their return home, they met with the woman and children, whom they previously had never known. The woman with the children was then called on to account for herself : she described herself as the wife of a destitute cotton-spinner, lately living in the neighbourhood of Manchester, who had enlisted into the 53d Regiment of Foot, and was now, with some other recruits at Woolwich.—A gentleman being present who had given the impostor a shilling on the previous Friday night, when she was playing off her deceptions as late as 11 o'clock, at the door of a house in St. Clement's Church-yard, informed the Magistrate of that circumstance, upon which he (the Magistrate) questioned her as to how long she had been in London.

Mr. HALLS—How long have you been in London ?

Prisoner—About five days.

Mr. HALLS—On what day did you arrive in town ?

Prisoner—I slept at Highgate last Thursday night, next door to the Mother Red Cap.

Mr. HALLS—Where were you on Friday night last, between 11 and 12 o'clock.

Prisoner—It was Highgate I left with my children on Friday morning.

The question was several times repeated, and as frequently evaded ; and on being charged with receiving the shilling, she told the gentleman he was a very wicked man, and denied ever having been in the Strand before. The children were in robust health, and looked (particularly the second in age) remarkably fine in feature, and handsome in face ; both the boys, however, seemed well tutored in the task they had to perform.

The Magistrate committed the whole of them to the House of Correction for seven days, as vagrants.

THE GREEK CAUSE.

MARYLEBONE-OFFICE.—On Friday another charge of fraud was made against the person calling himself Captain John Campbell, who, under the pretended authority of Lord Cochrane, professed himself commissioned to select a few enterprising young gentlemen, to serve as officers in the Grecian navy.

Mr. Edward William Jacques, a young gentleman of most respectable connexions, about 18 years of age, was the complainant ; he was accompanied by his solicitor, Mr. William Henry Goore, of No. 4, Bouverie-street, Fleet-street. Mr. Jacques stated that he had been apprenticed to Mr. Stanton, an engraver in Gray's-inn-lane, with a premium of 200l. ; but observing on the 10th July, in the window of Mr. Unwin, of Ludgate-hill, a placard as follows—

" Wanted immediately, for a particular service, a few active and enterprising nautical officers, and two clerks, of moral conduct and good education : they will require an outfit of about 50l. each. Inquire at the printer's, G. Neale, printer, 7, Fleet-street, near Fleet-market."

He felt inspired with a determination to serve the cause of freedom in behalf of the Greeks. The necessary inquiry having been made, he was referred to Captain John Campbell, at No. 34, Shoemaker-row, Doctors' Commons, with whom he entered into an engagement to pay 10l., and to receive a sub-lieutenant's commission in the Grecian navy. He then solicited Mr. Stanton's permission to withdraw from his service, which he obtained, without stipulating with him for a return of any part of the premium. A few days afterwards he received a letter from Campbell, to say that unless he immediately paid the 10l. and signed the bond, he would lose his appointment, for the whole of his list was filled up by persons of the first distinction and character. Mr. Jacques is an orphan, and has no particular friends in London ; but he has a powerful and kind friend in a Nobleman of the highest distinction in the country, who, with great condescension, gave him his advice in a first letter, and a remittance of 30l. in a second. Thus supplied with finances, Mr. Jacques not only advanced the proposed 10l., but he consented, under different pretences, to lend Campbell 6l. in addition. He became, also, responsible to him for his board and lodging, and pledged almost every article he was possessed of for his accommodation, even his linen is now withheld as security for the charge of washing. When Mr. Jacques became an inmate of Campbell's house, he found himself the only one upon the list. After three weeks a second was added, and, after a month, a third. The list has subsequently been augmented to sixteen or seventeen.

The letters from his illustrious friend were handed to Mr. Broughton, who said, " These letters do honour to the noble writer ; in the first, he with very great judgment asks you, whether your master approves of what you are doing ; and he gives his own opinion, that you will gain but little advantage from the pursuit. You then again press your request, and he sends you what you require. You possess a very great treasure in so powerful a friend, and I am sorry the proofs of his benevolence have not been applied to a better purpose. You stand, young man, on the brink of destruction. The 200l. is gone, the 30l. is gone, your home is gone—you possess a volatile spirit to a dangerous degree, and nothing but good advice, followed by good conduct, can save you from utter ruin."

Mr. Goore, the solicitor, said, that his knowledge of the circumstance was accidental ; he had known a Mr. Aggs, who is proprietor of the house in Shoemaker-row, from his infancy, and he introduced him to Campbell about three weeks ago as a person who had taken his apartments, and who was appointed by Lord Cochrane, under his own signature, to obtain young officers for the Greek service. Campbell professes to hold rank in the British navy ; there are several of that name in the list, but the fact is not ascertained.

Mr. Broughton said, the statement you have made confirms my opinion, that this is a notorious act of swindling : it is unnecessary for me to grant you a warrant, because Campbell is already in the custody of the sheriff, and a warrant granted upon a former charge is lodged as a detainer against him.

Mr. Goore said he knew he was in custody under four arrests, and he had yesterday lodged two detainers on civil actions against him. He also passes under two names, that of Captain John Campbell, and James Pattison Stewart. He is between 60 and 70 years of age.

Mr. Broughton asked Mr. Jacques, whether he had been introduced by Campbell to Mr. Currie, the tailor, of Regent-street.

He said, Mr. Currie had altered a blue naval coat for him, by putting on Grecian buttons. (It appeared by Mr. Currie's evidence on Wednesday night, that his acquaintance with Campbell originated from an accidental order for uniforms.)

Mr. Goore stated, that finding Mr. Jacques in such circumstances of disappointment and distress, he had given him a home with his family for the last fourteen days, and he expressed a determination to do all he could to serve him for the future.

Mr. Broughton—" Nothing more can be done in the present stage of the inquiry ; but the parties shall have due notice of further proceedings."

We are informed, that last Sunday week, Campbell sent two other young men, under a similar imposition, to Gravesend, there to hold themselves in readiness to embark on board the Royal Charlotte, as she would be down the river on Wednesday, for the purpose of proceeding in a direct course to the place of her destination, and it is supposed they are still looking out for the good ship under circumstances of anxiety and distress.

The Royal Charlotte has been shown to the young sailors, by way of excitement ; she is a Gravesend sailing-boat, for which probably a small deposit only has been paid. She has been caulked, and an action against Campbell is said to be pending for 20l. expended in that operation.

When Mr. Jacques visited her, she carried a white satin ensign, with a blue anchor at her mast-head, said to be presented by a person of distinction in the cause of the Grecks—he could not recollect the exact name.

HORRID MURDER.

The neighbourhood of Great Saffron-hill was in the highest degree of horror and alarm, in consequence of the discovery, at nine o'clock on Tuesday morning, of a barbarous and horrid murder, committed at No. 11, Lilly-street. The unfortunate victim is a woman named Ambrose, wife of a shoe-maker, and supposed to be sixty years of age. The circumstances under which the murder was supposed to have been committed are as follow :—

James Ambrose, husband of the deceased, came home on Saturday sennight about ten, and immediately went out again, saying to a lodger in the house, that there was no peace for him at home—the old woman was drunk again. He again returned at twelve, and nothing more was known, until, on Sunday morning, a young man named Brown, lodging in the next room, said to the landlady, that he was afraid something was the matter, as Ambrose and his wife were fighting in the night, and he heard the woman, after a violent blow had been struck, exclaim, " Lord receive my soul," after which a death-like silence ensued. In the course of Sunday, Ambrose told the landlady that his wife was gone to her sister's at Hampstead, and would not return till Monday, and in the course of Tuesday he several times came in and inquired if she had returned, and was answered in the negative. During the whole of Tuesday night he did not come home, and when Brown got up in the morning, he observed the door a-jar, but the lock shot, and without the key. He mentioned this circumstance, and Mrs. Jay, the landlady, went up stairs, knowing Ambrose had not been home, and knocked at the door, expecting to see his wife. No answer being given, she pushed the door, and saw the bonnet and shawl worn by the deceased hanging up. She became alarmed, and ran down stairs, stating her suspicions to Brown and another, who went up to ascertain the real state of the case. On first entering the room, nothing extraordinary was visible ; but on turning behind the door, a most appalling sight met their view. The wretched woman lay extended on the ground, weltering in her blood, which appeared to have proceeded from the right side of the head, where several dreadful wounds were visible. She appeared to have been dragged across the room, as the track of blood was distinctly seen on the floor. The body was evidently fast approaching a state of decomposition, and there is little doubt of the deed having been committed on Saturday night or Sunday morning. Strict search is making for Ambrose. Two chairs were placed before the body, which was covered with sacks.

On Wednesday a coroner's inquest was held on the body, and the jury returned a verdict of " Wilful Murder" against Ambrose.

On Friday the body of the unfortunate Ann Perry was removed from the parish work-house, where it had been ever since the Coroner's Inquest, to the burial ground in Gray's-inn-lane, where it was interred, in the presence of a large concourse of people.

The most lively interest was excited this morning, in consequence of its being reported that Ambrose had been taken into custody at the moment he was about to throw himself into the Regent's Canal, at Hackney, and that he had been taken to the Police Office, in Worship-street, for examination.

In consequence of this report, a vast number of persons proceeded from the neighbourhood of Saffron-hill to the Police-office, in order to speak to his identity, and at the opening of the office, numerous inquiries were made, but the officers were not aware of such a person being in custody.

On enquiring about Hackney, it was said that an old man, a shoemaker, had been prevented from drowning himself, but that his name was Orchard, and that he had been restored to his wife and family.

It was stated that the parish had determined on offering a handsome reward for the apprehension of the murderer, but that not yet being the case, we understand that it is the intention of the inhabitants of the neighbourhood to subscribe a sum of money as a reward, for the arrest of Ambrose.

By the Sound list, it appears, that from the 30th of August to the 2d instant inclusive, twenty-six vessels, bound to Great Britain, passed the Sound, laden with grain, principally oats, besides one with linseed.

DOVER, SEPT. 14.—This morning, at eight o'clock, the Right Honourable George Canning, with his lady, and Lord Hervey and suite, embarked in the Watersprite new steam-packet, for Calais, where they arrived after a passage of little more than two hours.

A short time since a female was forcibly taken away from her home, near Listowell, in the county of Kerry, by a band of ruffians. The girl had the reputation of having some fortune. She was carried at night a considerable distance on horseback, to the mountains of Abbeyfeale, in the county of Kerry. She was detained for some days in those mountains, when happily a party of gentlemen, who went out grouse shooting, came near to the house in which she was concealed. The unfortunate female made a bold effort to escape ; she ran with all her speed to the party, and succeeded in placing herself under their protection. She was safely conveyed to the town of Castle Island, where she lodged informations against all those who were concerned in the abduction.

A correspondent, who reminds us that Lord Stowell has declared that " a marriage in a foreign country, according to the forms which are binding in that country, is a valid marriage in England," asks—Whether an Englishman, going to Constantinople, there marrying a dozen or two of Turkish girls, which he may do " according to the forms which are binding in that country," and then bringing them to England, will here be allowed to enjoy them all quietly, without danger of prosecution for bigamy, and whether the husband and wives would be entitled to consider their union as " a valid marriage in England ?" Our correspondent expresses considerable anxiety for information on the subject, as he states that he is on the eve of sailing for Constantinople himself.

FRIDAY'S GAZETTE.

INSOLVENTS.

C. PETERS, East Church, Kent, farmer.——E. LOWE, Overton, Flintshire merchant. BANKRUPTCIES ENLARGED.

S. SEARS, Cleveland-street, Fitzroy-square, ironmonger.——W. SKINNER, Hatton-garden, apothecary.——J. G. MOOJEN, Mark-lane, merchant.——W. S. FURNIS, New Bond-street, hatter.

BANKRUPTCY SUPERSEDED.

M. HALLETT, Devonport, earthenware-dealer.

BANKRUPTS.

W. SMALLWOOD, Covent-garden-chambers, auctioneer.——J. WATKINS Castle-street, Holborn, coal-merchant.——J. LOWE, Manchester, oil-merchant. J. MURROW, Liverpool, money-scrivener.——J. NATION, Bath, butcher.——T. SNOW, Worcestershire, tanner.——W. W. KETTLE, Birmingham, button-maker.——J. and R. EMLEY, Nicholas-lane, brokers.——J. H. FARRAND, Suffolk, tanner.——H. BRODRIBB and G. WEBB, Bristol, grocers.

A DOUCEUR of 500*l.* to 1,000*l.* will be given to any person procuring for the Advertiser, a Gentleman recently retired from the Army, a respectable APPOINTMENT or SITUATION.—The utmost confidence may be relied on.—Apply by letter, post-paid, to Y. E. S. Mr. Thredder's, 74, Fleet-street.

WELBECK-STREET, CAVENDISH-SQUARE.

EXCELLENT HOUSEHOLD FURNITURE, Pier and Chimney Glasses, Marqueterie Cabinets, Parisian Clocks, a Mangle, and other Articles. To be Sold by AUCTION, by Mr. ROBINS, (of Warwick House, Regent-street,) on the Premises, No. 31, Welbeck-street, Cavendish-square, on Thursday, the 8th June, 1826, at eleven o'clock. By order of the Proprietor.

THE CAPITAL FURNITURE, comprising four post, couch, tent, press, and other bedsteads, and furnitures, beds and bedding, wardrobes, chests of drawers, dressing tables, and suites of drawing and dining room window curtains, in merino, damask, chintz, cotton, and morine; sofas, couches, and chairs en-suite; handsome marqueterie cabinets; excellent well-made cabinet articles in rosewood and mahogany; sofa, loo, card, pembroke, and dining tables; pedestal sideboard, secretaire, book-case, pier and chimney glasses; capital Turkey, Brussels, and other carpets, fenders and fire irons; a mangle; kitchen requisites, and other effects.

May be viewed on Wednesday, and morning of sale; and Catalognos had on the premises; at Garraway's; and of Mr. Robins, 170, Regent-street.

ACROSTIC.

ADDRESSED TO THE BEAUTIFUL AND SPARKLING MISS C. OPERA COLONNADE,

Charming Nymph! Ah, how inviting!
Hearts of mortals thus delighting,
All our dearest joys exciting,
Matchless still, in beauty glowing,
Pleasure from thy smile bestowing,
And with radiant wit o'erflowing!
Gods! if mine—those sweets possessing,
Nought I'd seek of other blessing,
Ever grateful—still caressing! COMUS.

CHARLES WRIGHT'S Champagne, 5s. 6d. per bottle. Opera Colonnade.

THE LONDON and WESTMINSTER WINE and SPIRIT COMPANY, No. 16, STRAND, opposite St. Martin's Church, have constantly on Sale—

	Per Dozen.		Per Dozen.
Port, Vintage 1820	27s to 30s	Bucellas	42s to 48s
Ditto, Crusted	36s to 42s	Claret, St. Julien	42s to 48s
Ditto, 5 to 8 years in bottle	48s to 56s	Ditto, Lafitte and Margaux	72s to 96s
Sherry, Pale and Brown	27s to 36s	Sparkling Champagne	72s to 84s
Ditto, Amontillado	42s to 48s	Ditto, and Creaming, of the first quality	90s to 96s
Cape, from	16s to 24s	St. Peray, dry and sparkling	63s to 72s
Madeira, West India	36s to 42s	Chablis	50s to 63s
Ditto, East India	48s to 60s	Hermitage, Red and White	72s to 84s
Teneriffe, Lisbon, Videnia, and Mountain	30s to 36s	Moselle, Sauterne, &c.	50s to 60s

Old Tom, Jamaica Rum, Cognac Brandy, Fern-tosh, &c. per imperial measure at reduced prices.—Bottled Stout, Cider, Perry, Burton and Edinburgh Ales.

☞ All Goods must be paid for on or before delivery.

Letters post paid, to be addressed William Godfree and Co. No. 16, Strand.

BRADBERRY'S PATENT SPECTACLES, upon unerring principles, to preserve the sight to extreme old age. It is necessary to caution the public against the use of improper Spectacles, as their effects prove injurious, instead of beneficial to the eye. The unremitted and anxious study Mr. BRADBERRY has paid to his glasses for upwards of 30 years, has called forth the most distinguished approbation of their merit from the medical profession, and from many thousands of persons of the highest rank and respectability.—To be had only at 28, Holles-street, the first door out of Oxford-street, next to the large Fruiterer's at the corner, facing Hanover-square, and at no other place in the United Kingdom.—Orders from the country immediately attended to. Removed from 332, Oxford-street.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH.—MR. WM. BEACALL, and Mr. ROSE, Surgeon Dentists, 13, Newman-street, Oxford-street having with unremitting diligence long made the Science of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, where mechanical contrivance is requisite, their peculiar study, continues to supply the loss of Teeth, with Natural or Artificial, in a superior manner, without the least pain, from a single Tooth to a complete Set, at little more than one-half the usual charges. Teeth cleaned if ever so discoloured, and rendered white and beautiful, without pain or injury to the enamel. Extracting, Stopping, and every operation on the Teeth and Gums.—Attends at home from Ten till Four.

THE ANTISEPTIC BOTANICAL TOOTH-POWDER—Cleanses, Whitens, and Preserves the Teeth in a manner quite unrivalled and fastens them even if loosened by mercury. Sold in Boxes, 2s. 9d. each, by I. V. SIMPSON (Proprietor) 28, Henrietta-street, Covent-Garden; by Messrs. Stradling, Royal Exchange; Johnson, 68, Cornhill; Anderson, 156, Bishopsgate Without; Pearson, 31, Flect-street; Prout, 226, and Low, 330, Strand; Bayley and Blew, Cockspur-street; Hawkins, 11, Gattie and Pierce, 57, and Tuaner, 75, Bond-street; Simpson, 21, Piccadilly; Sanger, 150, Oxford-street; Colley, 5, Holles-street; Tosswill, Greenwich; Wright, Hammersmith; Bedell, and Ryder, Islington, and by most respectable perfumers and Medicine Venders throughout the kingdom.

THE BRITISH SPECIFIC, for re-producing and promoting the GROWTH of HAIR.—The principle of its operation is to cool and contract the pores which fire opened by a redundancy of heat, occasioning a relaxation of the roots, and render them incapable of retaining the hair; to counteract which nothing is better calculated than the British Specific, as, from its invigorating and oleaginous properties, it almost immediately arrests the falling off, and affords such effectual nourishment to the roots, that persons giving it a fair trial may assure themselves of its speedily restoring it, even where it has become completely bald, however long it may have been so, and, if grey, gradually to restore it to its natural colour. The superiority of this preparation (the invention of a medical man) derives additional recommendation from its being, unlike other compositions for the hair, so extremely clean and agreeable, that its application is a real pleasure, and is only requisite to be generally known to receive the preference of every article in use for similar purposes. To be had only of D. Peden, 15, Burlington Arcade, Piccadilly, in bottles, 6s. each, or cases of four bottles for 1l., forward to order on receiving the amount, post paid.

TO FAMILIES TRAVELLING, PROMENADING, and ENJOYING AQUATIC EXCURSIONS, &c. &c. are respectfully recommended the following Genuine Articles, which at this season of the Year are indispensable for the preservation of personal attraction;—

ROWLAND'S KALYDOR FOR THE COMPLEXION.

An inestimable, mild, and innocent production, powerfully efficacious in thoroughly exterminating Eruptions, Tan, Pimples, Freckles, Redness, and all Cutaneous Imperfections; producing a delicate White Skin, and a Juvenile Bloom to the Complexion; preserving it from the Heat of Summer.—In Travelling, Promenading, or enjoying Aquatic Excursions, it immediately allays the smarting irritability of the Skin, diffusing a Pleasing Coolness truly comfortable and refreshing; affords soothing relief to Ladies nursing their offspring; warranted perfectly innoxious for the most delicate Lady or Infant.

To Gentlemen after Shaving, it allays the irritating and smarting pain, and renders the Skin smooth and pleasant. Price 4s. 6d. and 8s. 6d. per bottle, duty included.

To Preserve the Human Hair, during Travelling, Bathing, and Violent Exercise, and to retain it in healthy vigour to the latest period of Life, is particularly recommended

ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL,

The first production of the age, and the Original and Genuine.

A Vegetable Production, possessing salubrious and wonderful nutritive properties, which prevents the Hair falling off, occasioned by excessive perspiration; is pre eminently successful in nourishing the Hair; preventing its falling off or turning grey, &c. and has the unequalled property of giving a most fascinating and delectable appearance to the Hair.—Price 3s. 6d.—7s.—10s. 6d. and 21s. per bottle. The distinguished sanction it has received from Royal and Illustrious Personages, in addition to the flattering testimonials transmitted of its efficacy, places this declaration above suspicion.

CAUTION.—In consequence of the high popularity of the above articles, Flagrant Impostors have made false statements, and counterfeited each; Copying Bills, Labels, and Bottles, which renders it indispensably necessary on purchasing, to ask for "ROWLAND'S," strictly observing that each Bottle of Rowland's Genuine Articles are enclosed in a Wrapper, Signed on the Label, in Red,

A. ROWLAND AND SON, 20, HATTON GARDEN.

Sold by appointment, by Mr. Hendrie, Perfumer, Titchborne-street; Mr. Smith, Messrs. Gattie and Pelrco, 57, Mr. Delcroix, 158, D. Rigge, 35, New Bond-street; Bayley and Blew, Cockspur-street; Berry and Lloyd, Greek-street; Mr. Sanger, 150, Oxford-street; Mr. Low, 330, Prout, 226, Strand; Butler, Chemist, 4, Cheapside; Barclay and Sons, 95, Fleet Market; Mr. Rigge, 05, Cheapside; Mr. Sutton, Bow Church-yard; Mr. Edwards, 66, and Messrs. Newberry, St. Paul's Church-yard; Mr. Burgess, Holborn-hill; Mr. Kennahy, Bartholomew-close; Messrs. Evans, Long-lane; Messrs. Dunn and Co. Hatton-Garden; and all respectable Medicine Venders, &c.

TURKEY COFFEE of the FINEST QUALITY, at the following reduced prices:—Raw, 2s. 6d. per lb.—Roasted, 3s per lb. The Public are respectfully informed, that Government having reduced the Duty on Turkey Coffee, they may now purchase that article at the above-mentioned reduced prices, warranted of the finest quality, at John Marshall and Company's Tea and Coffee-Warehouse, No. 12, Southampton-street, Strand

THE East India Company's Sale of TEAS, having just closed, WHITBRIDGE & Co. 91, Cheapside, have again made extensive Purchases of the choicest that could be procured, which they are now Selling to the Public exactly at Wholesale Prices.

A LIST OF PRICES AS UNDER.

	s.	d.		s.	d.
Bohea from	3	2	Green from	6	2
Congou	4	8	Ditto	6	8
Good ditto	5	0	Fine ditto	7	0
Strong ditto	5	4	Bloom Hyson	8	0
Black leaf ditto	5	8	Good ditto	9	0
Fine ditto	6	0	Superior ditto	10	0
Superior ditto	6	4	Finest ditto	12	0
Pekoe flavour	6	8	Gunpowder	11	0
Fine Souchong	7	0	Finest ditto	14	0

PRIME MIXED TEA, 6s.

Jamaica Coffee	1	6	Fine Berbice	2s. 4d. to 2	8
Dutch ditto	2	0	Turkey	4	0

Fine Trinidad Cocoa 2s.

TO FAMILIES FURNISHING, TAVERN-KEEPERS, SCHOOL-MASTERS, and the Public in general.—The cheapest feather, feather-bed, and mattress warehouse in the kingdom, is TIBBATTS', No. 303, High Holborn, near Chancery-lane, for prompt cash.

Good poultry feathers only	0s.	10d.	per lb.
Best ditto, not to be equalled	1	2	do.
Excellent grey goose feathers, well dressed	1	6	do.
Very best ditto, fit for any purpose	2	0	do.
Good white goose feathers, well dressed	2	6	do.
Capital ditto, second quality	2	9	do.
Very best ditto, nearly half down	3	0	do.

A single Pound Sold.

Ticks sold at prime cost to purchasers of feathers.

Persons bringing their own ticks, may see them filled at the above prices; mattresses remade, altered, or taken in exchange; feather beds cleaned and dressed.

W. T. pledges himself to effectually destroy moth or other vermin in beds and mattresses, by a method peculiar to himself.

Horse-hair, wool, and feathers, seasoned so as to remain sweet in any climate.

CONSOLATION to the TREMULOUS WRITER. The Public may look to this most singular and unique invention with confidence, as an inestimable source of comfort to those who experience any difficulties in the command of the pen, occasioned by tremor in nervous affections, heat of climate, agitation of spirits, excess or over exertion, weakness from age or otherwise, injury of the thumb or fingers by sprain or otherwise, even to the loss of part. This happy relief exists in a little INSTRUMENT, the appearance of which, when in use, escapes observation, is capable of giving firmness, confidence, and freedom, and cannot fail to assist the declining powers of a good penman, and would materially improve the performance of a bad one. It is honoured by the patronage and recommendation of Sir Astley Cooper and other highly respectable professional gentlemen. A few minutes practice will prove its efficacy, and it has this advantage over all medicine, its power increases by use, and one prescription will last for life. Made in elastic gold, price 25s. each.—Sold for the patentee, by T. Tucker, 268, west side of St. Clements's Church-yard, Strand.—Letters from any part of the country, post paid, will be promptly attended to.—Name and Number on the Front of the House.

UPTON and CO.'S RECTIFIED SPERM OIL, 5s. 6d. per Imperial Gallon, or 4s. 9d. old measure. To obtain a brilliant and innoxious light is a great desideratum. The beauty of gas is unquestionable, but its deleterious properties render it extremely injurious for in-door use. Vide "Sir H. Davy's late Experiments on Gas." Sperm Oil, if purified to a high degree, gives a flame as brilliant as gas, without its pernicious effects. To this point of excellence Upton and Co. by a process exclusively their own, have succeeded in bringing it. They warrant their rectified Sperm Oil to burn with the brilliancy of the finest gas, without smell or smoke, with the advantage that, from its extreme purity, there is no waste. On its price they will only remark, that the public are the best judges of its moderation; but as lamp oils have an ascertainable value, viz. the quantity and quality of light to be obtained from them, they submit that the term cheap is misapplied when given to second-rate oils, which, when put to the above test, are found dearer than the more luminous kinds that are charged at a higher price.

†† All Casks and Bottles are sealed "Upton & Co." and such only are genuine.

The following established articles may also be had, viz.—Refined Mineral Paint, not requiring to be heated for use, at 15s. per cask. Lithic Paint, 30s. per cwt.—The Anti-Corrosive Paints, ground in oil, of Invisible Green, and other colours, from 30s. to 46s. per cwt. Genuine White Lead, 40s. Second, do. 36s. per cwt. Olive Greens, 6d. to 9d. Patent Grass, ditto, 1s. to 2s. 6d. per lb. Varnishes, Linseed Oil, Turpentine, &c. &c.

Chemical Oil and Colour Warehouse, 64, Queen-street, Cheapside. Discount allowed, or credit given on satisfactory references.

A PLEASING APPEARANCE.—The Grand Characteristic of Mrs. VINCENT'S CELEBRATED LOTION is—that it is no repellant, but gently and kindly opens the Pores of the Skin, extracting and dulcifying the Morbid Virus lurking in it. The most tender Lady or Child may at all times make use of it with the greatest safety. It removes every kind of Coarseness, Eruption, and unpleasant Appearance, and renders the Skin clear smooth, and transparent. Nothing has ever yet been found to compare to its effects and excellence; but its unexampled reputation having excited various Imitations, it is particularly recommended to ask for Mrs. Vincent's Gowland's Lotion, and see M. E. Vincent on the label of the genuine. —The following is a letter from Lady Catherine Lennox to Mrs. Vincent, the Proprietor:—

"Lady Catherine Lennox has the pleasure of stating that, by the use of two quart bottles of Mrs. Vincent's Gowland's Lotion, she is perfectly cured of a violent eruption upon her face and arms. She was recommended by her Physician to make use of the Lotion, which has exceeded her most sanguine expectations. Mrs. V. is at liberty to make use of her Name, as having experienced its healing virtues; and Lady Lennox will also recommend it as much as possible within the sphere of her acquaintance."

Sold, by appointment of Mrs. Vincent, at Bacon's, 150, Oxford-street; Butler's, 4, Cheapside; Newbery and Edwards's, St. Paul's; Sutton's, Bow Church Yard; Barclay's, Fleet Market; and by all the most respectable Perfumers and Dealers in Genuine Medicines in every Town in Europe, in Quarts, 8s. 6d.; Pints, 5s. 6d.; Half-pints, 2s. 9d.— To prevent Counterfeits, see M. E. VINCENT on the label of the genuine.

SILK AND BEAVER HATS.

AT a time like the present, it behoves the most opulent to act Economically in the purchase of a HAT, particularly when all the vehicles of Advertisements teem with pretended Cheap Goods! a name only, for one half of the Hats offered to public notice are in the end the dearest of all others. To purchase a good article, bearing a small profit, is the safe road to economy.

PERRING'S HATS are manufactured by workmen experienced in the trade, and are made of such qualities as cannot fail to meet the wishes of the Wearer.

The DOUBLE-EDGED SILK HAT surpasses any attempt at imitation, and is really the best Hat ever invented, price 17s. Good Wearing Silk Hats in a variety of Shapes, made in the usual way, 12s. to 15s.

BEAVER HATS can be made at almost any Price, but none are worthy the attention of the Wearer under 20s. 22s. and 24s.—such are of good texture, light, and water-proof, and will in the end prove in value equal to the purchase.

GENTLEMEN'S TRAVELLING CAPS of every description, in Furs, Cloth, Oil, Silk, &c. &c. at 12s. Waterproof.

YOUTHS' and BOYS' HATS in great variety. Light Summer Hats, &c. 413, Strand, two doors west of the Adelphi Theatre, and at Hammersmith.

 Gentlemen residing in the Country may meet with an early attention to their orders, by a remittance, or order of payment in Town. For the size, put a piece of String round the outside where the band goes. Shipping Orders expeditiously executed.

IMPOSTURE UNMASKED.—The progress of Merit, although frequently assailed, is not impeded by Envy and Detraction. The aggression of ambuscade terminates in defeat; and conscious rectitude ultimately triumphs in the attainment of the grand object—public approbation The test of experience is the guarantee of favour, and has established WARREN'S BLACKING in general estimation; of which there exists not a stronger proof than the tacit acknowledgment of a host of servile imitators, who surreptitiously obtrude on the unwary a spurious preparation as the genuine article, to the great disappointment of the unguarded purchaser, and manifest injury of WARREN, whose character and interest by this iniquitous system are equally subject to detriment. It becomes therefore an indispensable duty to CAUTION THE PUBLIC against the manœuvres of Unprincipled Venders, who having no character to lose, and stimulated by avarice in their nefarious pursuits, aim at the acquisition of money through any medium than that of honour! The original and matchless BLACKING bears on each bottle a short direction, with the signature

ROBERT WARREN

All others are counterfeits; and in many instances the imposition labels are artfully interlined with a different address, in very small characters, between the more conspicuous ones of "No. 30," and "STRAND." It is earnestly recommended to Shopkeepers and others who are deceived by base fabrications of WARREN'S BLACKING, to return the detected trash to the source whence it came, and expose the machinations of rascality to merited obloquy.

WARREN'S BLACKING is surpassingly brilliant;—it excludes damp; gives pliancy to the leather; retains its pristine virtue in all climates; and, combining elegance with comfort, is an article equally of indispensable fashion and utility. Sold by every respectable Vender in Town and Country, in bottles, at 6d. 10d. 12d. and 18d. each.

BURGESS' ESSENCE of ANCHOVIES, Warehouse, 107, STRAND, corner of Savoy Steps, London.—JOHN BURGESS and SON, being apprised of the numerous endeavours made by many persons to impose a spurious article for their make, feel it incumbent upon them to request the attention of the public, in purchasing what they conceive to be the ORIGINAL, to observe the Name and Address correspond with the above. The general appearance of the spurious descriptions will deceive the unguarded, and for their detection J. B. and Son submit the following caution:—Some are in appearance at first sight "Burgess' Essence of Anchovies;" others, "Burgis's," and many more without address.—JOHN BURGESS and SON having been many years honoured with such distinguished approbation, feel every sentiment of respect towards the public, and earnestly solicit them to inspect the labels previous to purchasing what they conceive to be of their make, which they hope will prevent many disappointments.

Burgess' New Sauce for general purposes having given such great satisfaction, continues to be prepared by them, and is recommended as a most useful and convenient sauce; will keep good in all climates.

Warehouse, 107, Strand, corner of the Savoy Steps.—The Original Fish-Sauce Warehouse.

MOGUL, OR REAL CHETNA SAUCE.

C. HODGSON, ORIGINAL INVENTOR AND SOLE PROPRIETOR, is induced to caution his Friends and the Public against several spurious Sauces offered for sale, under the title of "MOGUL, or REAL CHETNA."

C. H. will feel obliged if each purchaser of the above delicious Sauce will please to observe the Label: which should be signed, "C. HODGSON," and the Cork, sealed and impressed, "HODGSON'S MOGUL SAUCE," without which none can be genuine.

C. H. also begs to acquaint those who have not yet made a trial of this much approved Sauce, that the flavour will be found quite different, and far superior to any yet offered, for all kinds of Curries, Steaks, Stews, Chops, Hashes, Game, Grills, Broiled and Wild Fowl, Cold Meat, and for enriching Gravies, &c., and feels assured, that when tasted, it will fully justify what he has above stated. To Merchants and East and West India Captains, it is strongly recommended, being warranted to retain its full flavour in any climate.

To be had at the manufactory, No. 68, Long Lane, Borough, London, at the Piazza Coffee-house, Covent-garden, the Queen's Head Tavern, Holborn, and at any of the principal Oilmen and Grocers in Town and Country.

NEW EDITION, THE TENTH, ENLARGED,

With Observations on the Danger of trusting to Nostrums, as an Internal Remedy for the Cure of Strictures. Illustrated by Cases. Price 3s.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS on STRICTURES of the URETHRA and RECTUM, recommending an improved system for their Treatment and Cure; illustrating its efficacy by numerous remarkable and highly important cases, in some of which, Strictures of from ten to twenty years duration have been totally removed in a few weeks, and its superiority thereby fully established over every other method hitherto practised. By C. B. COURTENAY, M.D. To which are added, Observations and Practical Comments on Gleet, Seminal Weakness, and the miseries occasioned by Self Abuse, for the cure of which a mode of treatment, the result of long and successful practice, and at once safe, speedy, and effectual, is adopted by the Author.

Printed for the Author, Robert-street, Adelphi; and published and sold by Jones and Sherwood, Paternoster-row; Onwhyn, 4, Catherine-street, Strand; Chapell, Royal Exchange; Marsh, 145, Oxford-street; Walker, 90, High Holborn; Chappell, 94, Pall Mall; Sutherland, 9, Carlton-street, Edinburgh; and may be had of all Booksellers.

"We earnestly recommend the cases related by Dr. Courtenay to the perusal of such of our readers as are afflicted with the complaints which the Author has made the subject of these Observations. Several instances are adduced of the recovery of perfect health from states which were considered hopeless by Practitioners of eminent talents, and very extensive experience. We entertain the highest opinion of Dr. Courtenay's professional skill, and congratulate him on his successful and judicious application to these severe and often fatal diseases."—European Magazine.

IMPORTANT EXPOSURE.—The frequent attempts of "MISTER [Sidney Job] VAN BUTCHELL," a Pawnbroker's Apprentice, in 1808, a Banker's Clerk, in August 1819, to pass (after 1824) for an Assistant of the late Martin Van Butchell, who died in 1814, compels the eldest son, sole executor and successor, to state he has no connection with the said "Mr. S. J. Van Butchell."

EDWIN MARTIN VAN BUTCHELL, aged forty-five, twenty years Surgeon Accoucher and Surgeon, for the Cure of Fistulæ, Piles, Strictures, &c., without Cutting, Caustic or Confinement, established eighteen years, at 24, Broad-street, very nearly Golden-square, London.—At home till Twelve daily, Sundays excepted.

☞ From Oxford-street, Poland-street, runs into Broad-street—from Piccadilly, Great Windmill-street, leads to Broad-street, Golden-square.

"It is fortunate for the rising generation, the late Martin Van Butchell (who died in 1814) not more celebrated for his eccentricities than his utility, has not departed from the world without leaving an able successor to his practice. Edwin Martin Van Butchell, (Surgeon, for the Cure of Fistulæ, Piles, Strictures, &c., without Cutting, Caustic, or Confinement, eighteen years established, at 21, Broad-street, Golden-square, London,) is now almost as well known as his late Father. Such, indeed, is the estimation of his abilities, that a large Society of Journeymen Tailors have entered [1821] into a Subscription among themselves, in order that their afflicted brethren may have the benefit of his practical knowledge and abilities.

"They have paid Two Hundred and Forty-five Sovereigns in less than Five Years, for Twenty-four Members Cured to June, 1826."—Real Life in London, vol. 2, page 667.

SWAN WITH TWO NECKS, LAD-LANE, GENERAL COACH OFFICE.

Dover, Deal, Ramsgate, Margate, and Canterbury Patent Coaches Daily Morning and Evening.

THE following ROYAL MAILS depart from the above Inn every evening at half-past Seven, Sundays excepted. Every Sunday evening at Seven.——BATH and EXETER, through Devizes, Taunton, and Collumpton.——BIRMINGHAM (in 13 hours), through Stony Stratford, and Coventry.——BRISTOL, through Reading, Marlborough, and Chippenham.——CARLISLE and EDINBURGH through Chorley, and Garstang.——CHESTER through Salop, Ellesmere, and Wrexham.——EXETER, through Salisbury Blandford, and Dorchester.——FALMOUTH ROYAL MAIL.——HOLYHEAD, through Wolverhampton, Shrewsbury, and Bangor.——KIDDERMINSTER, through Birmingham, Dudley, and Stourbridge.——LIVERPOOL, through Dunchurch, Newcastle, and Congleton.——MANCHESTER, through Northampton, Derby, and Macclesfield.——MILFORD HAVEN, through Cardiff, Carmarthen, and Haverfordwest.——NORWICH, through Chelmsford, Colchester, and Ipswich.——PLYMOUTH ROYAL MAIL.

The following Post Coaches start regularly at the time specified

MORNING COACHES.—BIRMINGHAM and HOLYHEAD, the Eclipse, through Coventry, at a quarter before 8. Passengers by this Conveyance have the privilege of resting one Night at Birmingham, proceeding next Morning, without additional expense.——BRIGHTON Light Safety Coach, through Riegate, at 9.——DERBY Light Coach (in 15 hours, two Coachmen only), at half-past 6.——HOLYHEAD Light Coach through Shrewsbury, quarter before 8.——LEICESTER Light Post Coach, through Northampton, at half-past 6.——NORWICH New Safety Coach (in 14 hours, one Coachman only) at 5.——NOTTINGHAM, Times, every Morning at half-past 6.——SOUTHAMPTON Light Coach every Morning at half-past 8, Tuesdays and Fridays at half-past 7, arrives in time for the Guernsey and Jersey Steam Packets.——WEYMOUTH and DORCHESTER (in 15 hours), at 5.——WINDSOR and ETON, at 7.

AFTERNOON COACHES.—BIRMINGHAM, the Balloon, through Stony Stratford, at half-past five.——BRISTOL, the Regent, through Reading, a quarter before four.——CARLISLE, GLASGOW, and EDINBURGH, through Manchester and Dumfries, a quarter before four. Passengers travelling by this conveyance have the opportunity of resting one night on the road, without additional expense.——CANTERBURY, the Tally-ho! half-past two (in 7 hours.)——CAMBRIDGE Tally-ho! (in 5 hours,) quarter past two.——COVENTRY 4-inside Coach, a quarter before six.——DERBY, the Regulator, (in 18 hours) quarter before four.——DUDLEY and STOURBRIDGE, 4-inside Coach, at half-past five.——EXETER, 4-inside Coach, through Basingstoke and Honiton, at two.——EDINBURGH and GLASGOW, through Newcastle, at half-past four.——FALMOUTH and PLYMOUTH Light Coaches, at two.——LIVERPOOL, the Royal Alliance, (in 26 hours) at half-past four.——MANCHESTER, Royal Defiance, (in 24 hours) at four.——MANCHESTER, the Regulator, through Dunstable, quarter before four.——MILFORD HAVEN, through Newport and Carmarthen, at four.——NOTTINGHAM, (in 18 hours) through Loughborough, at a quarter before four.——ROYSTON and BUNTINGFORD, at half-past two.——TAUNTON, through Cross and Bridgewater, at four, at reduced fares.——TENBY, MERTHYR, and PEMBROKE, at four.——WARWICK and LEAMINGTON SPA, at half past five.——WINDSOR and ETON, at 4.

CHESTER and PARKGATE, every Morning at a quarter before eight, and Evening at half-past five.——PARIS New Light Diligence, by way of Dover, every Morning, at seven, and at half-past six in the Evening.

N.B.—Parcels and Luggage conveyed daily to all parts of the North and to every City and manufacturing Town in the Kingdom.

W. WATERHOUSE & Co. Proprietors.

NOTICE.—No Parcel, or Passenger's Luggage, will be accounted for above the value of FIVE POUNDS, unless entered as such and paid for accordingly.

MARRIED.—On Tuesday, at Southampton, Richard Graves, Esq. of London, to Miss Ann Dear, of Romsey.—On Friday, Lord Suffield, to Emily Harriet, youngest daughter of Evelyn Shirley, Esq. Eatington Park, Warwickshire.—On Monday, at Brailsford, Mr. R. Smith, of Camberwell, to Hannah Louisa, eldest daughter of J. Boden, Esq. of Ednaston Lodge, Derbyshire.—On Tuesday, Lieut.-Col. Lautour, C.B. and Knt. of the Guelphic Order, to Une Cameron Barclay Innes, eldest daughter of J. Innes, Esq. of Cowie, N. B.

DIED.—On the 13th inst. Catherine, wife of John Stapleton, Esq. of Thorp Lee, Surrey, late Secretary to the Barrack Department.—On Friday last, at Brighton, Wm. Dowler, Esq. one of the Deputy Commissaries of his Majesty's Forces.—On the 12th inst, Samuel Rust, Esq. of Bennet-street, Christ-church, Surrey.—On the 9th inst. at Chapel-street, Pentonville, Silas Hatherway, Esq. aged 75.—On Sunday last, at Camberwell, aged 22, Charles, youngest son of Robert Puckle, Esq.

London: Printed and Published by R. D. RICHARDS, at 343, Strand, corner of Catherine-street.

THE AGE.

" THE VERY AGE AND BODY OF THE TIME."

VOL. II. No. 73. SUNDAY, OCTOBER 1, 1826. Price 7d.

THEATRE ROYAL, DRURY-LANE.—On Tuesday, Romeo and Juliet; Romeo, Mr. Southwell, from the Theatre Royal, Dublin, his first appearance. With Abon Hassan.—Thursday, the Belle's Stratagem. With Der Freischutz.—Saturday, the Heir at Law. After which, the White Lady, or the Spirit of Avenel.—Mr. Braham, Mr. Liston, Mr. Cooper, Mrs. Bunn, Miss Kelly, and Miss Stephens, are engaged at this Theatre. Mrs. M'Gibbon and Mr. Edwin, from the Nottingham Theatre, will shortly make their appearance.

THEATRE ROYAL, HAYMARKET.—To MORROW Evening, the Belle's Stratagem. With Peter Smink, and the Children in the Wood.—Tuesday, the Rivals. With Peter Smink, and the Epaulette.—Wednesday, As You Like It, with other Entertainments.—Thursday, Rob Roy Macgregor, with other Entertainments.—Friday, the Duenna, with other Entertainments.—Saturday, the Clandestine Marriage, with other Entertainments.

THEATRE ROYAL, ENGLISH OPERA HOUSE. Monday, Before Breakfast, with Jonathan in England, and Presumption, Being positively the last night of Mr. Mathews' appearance this Season.—Tuesday, The Libertine, with The Spoil'd Child, and Presumption.—Wednesday, The Marriage of Figaro, with The Spoil'd Child, and Presumption—Thursday, The Vampire, with Gretna Green, and Presumption. Being the last night of the Company's performing this Season.

ADELPHI THEATRE, STRAND—Messrs. TERRY and YATES respectfully inform the Public that this Theatre will be opened for the Winter Season on Saturday Next, Oct. 7, on which occasion new entertainments will be presented. To the Old Favorites of the Theatre, several New Performers have been added, and every exertion has been used to render the Company Full and Effective. The names comprised in the following List are among those already engaged:—

Messieurs.		Mesdames.
Brun	Kelly	Angelina	Hawthorn
Buxton	Kerr	From the King's Theatre
Cadwell	Nixon	Boden	Henry
Camius	Paulo	Cadwell	Hughes
Chichini	Phillips	Chichini	Jefferson
T. P. Cooke	Pitt	Clair	Jorton
Corie	John Reeve	S. Clair	Kerr
East	Reynard	Curtis	Latilla
Elliott	Salter	Daly	Panormo
Foster	Sanders	E. Daly	S. Panormo
Gladstane	Shaw	Davis	Pitt
Gousio	S. Smith	Duval, Melanie	Taylor
Griffin	Terry	Fitzwilliam	Tayleur
Grove	Wrench	Frazer	Turnor
Jefferson	Yates

Stage Manager, Mr. Terry. Composer and Director of the Music, Mr. G. H. Rodwell. Leader of the Band, Mr. Callcott. Principal Scene Painters, Messrs. Tomkins and Pitt. Ballet Master, Mr. Hulin.

Boxes, 4s. Pit, 2s. Gal. 1s. Doors open at 6, commence a quarter before 7. Half-price at half-past 8. The Box-office will be opened on Wednesday, Oct. 4, and continue so every day from 10 till 4.

To follow the Candian,

FOR CALCUTTA, the fine, new, first class Ship, St. LEONARD, JOHN RUTHERFORD, Commander. Burthen 352 Tons. Lying in the West India Dock. Has good accommodations for Passengers. For Freight or Passage apply to Messrs. Hunter and Co. 59, Old Broad-street; or to Buckles, Bagster, and Buchanan, 33, Mark-lane.

To Sail early in October,

FOR VAN DIEMEN'S LAND and NEW SOUTH WALES, the remarkably fast-sailing coppered Ship TIGER, THOMAS RICHARDS, Commander. Burthen 325 Tons. Lying in the London Dock. Has excellent accommodations for Passengers, both in the Cabin and Steerage, and is peculiarly adapted for the conveyance of Horses and Cattle. For Freight or Passage apply to Buckles, Bagster, and Buchanan, 33, Mark Lane.

TRY IT!

Fine Port, and bright Sherry,—well worthy of name,
Two Shillings per Bottle,—Madeira the same;
Good Cape, Fifteen-pence,—and, the marvel to crown,
Champagne, Five and Sixpence,—the cheapest in Town!

Opera Colonnade. CHARLES WRIGHT.
Depots—65, Crawford-street, St. Mary-le-bone.
4, Sussex-place, Kent-road.
13, St. James's-street, Brighton.
Parade, Margate; and
Quiet-street, Bath.

THEATRES ROYAL.—DRURY LANE—A splendid PRIVATE STAGE-BOX, for Eight Persons, to be Let every Evening. Also several Admissions for this Theatre to be sold. Boxes in the best situations. Tickets, Admissions, Boxes, &c. for all Theatres, bought and sold on Commission. CHARLES WRIGHT, next the King's Theatre, Opera Colonade, who has on sale the finest Champaigne, 5s. 6d. per bottle.

THE THEATRES, COVENT-GARDEN and DRURY-LANE.—J. ANDREWS has the honour to acquaint his distinguished Patrons and the Public, that he has again secured the disposal of those LARGE PRIVATE BOXES at the TWO WINTER THEATRES, situated immediately over the Dress Circle, and commanding an entire view of the Stage. These Boxes, which are fitted up in the most commodious and elegant manner, with ante-room, fire, &c. will be let as usual by the Night Week, Alternate Week, or Season. Free Admissions at both Houses bought and sold on commission.

MRS. BELL'S PATENT CORSETS, universally admired, and superior to all others; are pronounced by the Faculty as the only Corsets that ought to be worn. Amongst Mrs. Bell's numerous Patterns of Corsets, are the following:—The Grecian Corsets give to the Bust such Grace, Ease, and Elegance, as to astonish the most fastidious Connoisseure of Corsets. The Armenian Corset prevents any aukward stoop in the Back, frequently conspicuous. The Corset to conceal Deformities and Defects in Females. The New Invented Corset, which prevents pressure on the Chest, and an antidote to Cancer, made without superfluities of Steel, Whalebone, or hard substances. The Bandage Corsets, invented for Pregnant Ladies, for before and after Accouchement, and for Ladies inclined to Corpulency. New Invented Riding, Bathing, Nursing, and Negligee Corsets. The above can only be had of Mrs. BELL, at her New Magasin de Modes, removed to No. 3, Cleveland-row, opposite St. James's Palace. Ladies waited upon within Ten Miles of London.

ALBION FIRE AND LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY, NEW BRIDGE-STREET, BLACKFRIARS, EMPOWERED BY ACT OF PARLIAMENT.
CAPITAL—ONE MILLION.

The Premiums of Fire Insurances effected with this Company, of the three ordinary Classes, have, with certain exceptions, been reduced as follows:—
in the first Class.....to 1s. 6d. per Cent.
in the second Class.....to 2s. 6d. per Cent.
in the third Class.....to 4s. 6d. per Cent.

Fire Policies, the renewals of which become due at Michaelmas will expire, unless renewed within fifteen days from that period.

The Company continues to undertake Insurances on Lives, on liberal Terms. No charge is made on Life Insurances, in the way of Admission Fine, or Entrance Money: and a large Commission is allowed to Solicitors, and others, by whom such Insurances are effected. WARNER PHIPPS, Secretary.

TO FAMILIES FURNISHING, TAVERN-KEEPERS, SCHOOL-MASTERS, and the Public in general.—The cheapest feather, feather-bed, and mattress warehouse in the kingdom, is TIBBATTS', No. 303, High Holborn, near Chancery-lane, for prompt cash.

Good poultry feathers only	0s.	10d.	per lb.
Best ditto, not to be equalled	1	2	do.
Excellent grey goose feathers, well dressed	1	6	do.
Very best ditto, fit for any purpose	2	0	do.
Good white goose feathers, well dressed	2	6	do.
Capital ditto, second quality	2	9	do.
Very best ditto, nearly half down	3	0	do.

A single Pound Sold.

Ticks sold at prime cost to purchasers of feathers.

Persons bringing their own ticks, may see them filled at the above prices; mattresses remade, altered, or taken in exchange; feather beds cleaned and dressed.

W. T. pledges himself to effectually destroy moth or other vermin in beds and mattresses, by a method peculiar to himself.

Horse-hair, wool, and feathers, seasoned so as to remain sweet in any climate.

NEW MUSIC, published by MORI and LAVENU, 28, New Bond-street, removed from Edward's-street, Manchester-square. The Overture and Airs in the Opera of the Interrupted Sacrifice, arranged as Duetts, for two performers on the Piano Forte, in three books, 4s. each.

The Overture, single, for Piano Forte, 2s. 6d.

New Songs.	Singers and Composers.
Bonny brae Scotland, 2nd edition	Miss Paton, N. Gow
Braes of Balendyne	Miss Paton, Pio Cianchettini
O, where's the harm of a little Kiss	Madame Vestris, J. Watson
Ah, Maiden Gardezvous, 3rd edition	Madame Vestris, Ditto
Blue Bonnets are over the Border	Mr. Braham, Cianchettini
Young Mary	Mr. Phillips, Dr. Arne

NEW FLUTE MUSIC by SAUST & DRESSLER, Just Published by R. COCKS & Co. Importers of Foreign Music, 20, Princes-street, Hanover-square, viz.—

BY SAUST.			BY DRESSLER.
La Dame Blanche	3	6	Flute, 4 books, by Rimbault, each	4 0
Interrupted Sacrifice	3	6	Faust	3 0
31 Sacred Melodies	3	6	Il Crociato in Egitto	3 6
Der Freyschutz, 1 and 2	6	0	Rossini's 6 Airs, operatic	3 6
Preciosa	2	6	Mozart's 12 do.	6 0
40 Irish Melodies	3	6	12 National do.	6 0
36 Scotch do.	3	6	Second Edition of his 24 Studies	6 0
Favorite Melodies, 1 to 6 each 3 or bound, 18s.	6		FLUTE & PIANO.
Foreign Melodies, 1 to 12, each 1 or bound, 14s.	6		12 Favorite Melodies, each	2 0
Interrupted Sacrifice, Piano and			12 Caledonian do. each	2 0

NEW MUSIC FOR THE PIANO-FORTE.
Just Published, by CLEMENTI and Co., 26, Cheapside,

OPERFEST; or, THE INTERRUPTED SACRIFICE. The Airs in this celebrated Opera, now performing at the Theatre Royal, English Opera-House, composed by Winter, arranged by Attwood, in three books, for the Piano-Forte, with a Flute ad. lib. accompt. price of each	4 0

Cramer's Fantasia, with favourite Airs, from ditto	4 0
Mozart's Symphonies for the Piano-Forte, Flute, Violin, and Violoncello, arranged by Clementi, each	8 0
Carnaby's Impromptu, with Favourite Airs	3 6
Ries' Vars. on "The Streamlet,"	3 0
Ditto's Rondo on "When shall we,"	3 0
Ditto's Grand March	2 0
Robin Adair; Vars. by Pixis	6 0
Weber's Rondo, brilliant	3 6
Kalkbrenner's Second Grand Concerto	8 0
Alelillo, a favourite Spanish Air; Vars. by Perez	4 6
Cianchettini's Divertimento, from Tehaldo ed Isolina	4 0
Picles Rondo, from La Jeune Femme Colere	3 0
Isabel: Vars. by Holst	2 0
Solis' Int. and Brilliant Rondo	3 0
Solis' Progressive Lessons, Nos. 1 to 6, each	1 0
Holst's Rondos and Airs, with Vars., Nos. 13 to 24, each	2 0
Moscheles' Fantasia on "German Grenadier's March"	3 0
Dulce Domum: Vars. by Rawlings	3 0
Minstrel's Harp; Vars. by ditto	4 0

NEW MUSIC.—Published by GOULDING and D'ALMAINE, 20, Soho-square.

PIANOFORTE.

Bishop's Air	"Are you angry, Mother?" varied by G. Kiallmark, price	3 0
———	"Sun is o'or the Mountain," ditto	2 6
———	"My Araby, my noble Steed," T. A. Rawlings	2 6
———	"Are you angry, Mother?" ditto	2 6
Flowers of Sacred Harmony, No. I. by T. Valentine		2 6
Winter's, "Opferfest" (The Oracle) Book I. as duets, by I. F. Burrowes		4 0
Bishop's "Aladdin," for Pianoforte only, and as duets by do. in books		4 0
Meyer's "Medea in Corinto," for Pianoforte, by C. Dumon, in books		4 0

VOCAL.

"Buy a Broom!" sung by Miss Love, at Vauxhall, composed by H. R. Bishop		2 0
"The King! God bless Him!" Sung and composed by Mr. Braham, price		2 0
"A. B. C." comic duet, sung by Miss Love and Signor de Begnis, at Vauxhall, composed by I. Parry		2 0
"The Youth of the Valley," sung by Mr. Sinclair, at Vauxhall, by ditto		2 0
"Blame me not my gentle Laddie, sung by Miss Travis, ditto	ditto	2 0
"Fair one take this rose," composed by Mrs. Miles		2 0
"The Bonny Lassie,"	ditto	2 0

A Selection of Songs by Bishop, Horn, Stevenson, &c. &c. arranged with an Accompaniment for the Spanish Guitar, by C. M. Sola.

☞ The admired Opera of "Medea in Corinto" is arranged for the Harp and Pianoforte, and for the Harp by N. C. Bochsa.

NEW SONGS.—Hurrah! for the bonnets of Blue, sung by Madame Vestris, composed by Alex. Lee 2 0
O'er the valley, O'er the Mountain, do. C. E. Horn.. ..... 2 0
Lillies of the Valley, do. Sir J. Stevenson 2 0

NEW PIANO FORTE MUSIC.

Hertz's Brilliant Variations on Rossini's popular Air, "Aurora che Soigerai"	5	0
Hunten's Brilliant Rondo on Meyerbeer's celebrated Chorus, "Nel Silenzio"	3	6
Ries's Grand Variations on the National Air of "Rule Britannia"	6	0
Weishecker's celebrated "Napoleon's Grand March"	2	0

 This March was performed at the Coronation of Napoleon.

Hall's Slow and Quick Marches, composed for the Fourth Dragoons Regiment	2	0
Ries's Grand Military Divertimento on the Duke of York's March	5	0
Cianchettini's Select Airs from the Opera of Medea. Book I and 2, each	4	0
Holst's arrangement of "Cherry Ripe," as a duett for Two Performers	3	6
Valentine's arrangement of "Cherry Ripe," for One Performor	2	0

New Editions of the following popular Works:—

Wilson's St. James's Quadrilles	3	6
Weippert's Cherry Ripe, do.	4	0
Musard's Kensington, do.	4	0
Duval's Lancers, do.	3	0
Willis's "Il Crociato," "Preciosa," and "Der Freischuta," do. each	2	0

Published by J. WILLIS & CO. Royal Musical Repository, 55, St. James's-street, (opposite Jermyn-street) London, and 7, Westmorland-street, Dublin, where may be found every variety of Grand, Cabinet, Cottage, Square, and Circular Pianofortes, Harps, &c. by the most eminent makers, at the lowest manufacturers prices.

NEW VOCAL MUSIC.—"Love's Labour Lost," the admired Ballad singing by Madame Vestris with the most enthusiastic applause at the Theatre Royal, Haymarket, and nightly encored. Composed by Alexander Lee, price 2s. Published by Mayhew and Co., 17, Old Bond-s reet, where may be had, just published, the following:—

New Songs.	Singers.	Composers.
Light Guitar, (4th edition)	Mad. Vestris	John Barnett
Fanny dipp'd her Pen in Dew	Miss Stephens	John Whittaker
A Voice whispered softly dear Mary	Miss Love	George Perry
"Yes, I will leave the festive Scene," in answer to the "Light Guitar"	Miss Paton	John Barnett
"Not a Drum was heard," the celebrated Ode on the Death of Sir John Moore	Mr. Sapio	Ditto
Love at Home, all alone	Miss Foote	J. Hart
Love's delightful Hour	Mr. Pearman	John Emdin
The Drummer Boy	Mad. Vestris	L. Devereux
The Queen of Bonnie Lasses	Mr. Braham	J. Hart
The Rose of the Desert	Mad. Vestris	John Barnett
The Soldier's Dream. (Rec. and Aria)	Mr. Vaughan	Ditto
The Joys of Liberty and Wine	Mr. Bedford	Ditto
Paul Pry. "Hope I don't Intrude," comic with the original Portrait of Mr. Liston	Mr. Liston	Pigwiggin
A wand'ring Minstrel weary came	Mrs. Humby	I. A. Wade
The "General Election," comic, written by Charles Dibdin the younger, with an Illustration by Cruikshank	Mr. Mathews	John Barnett
Maiden heedful he. The Token Flowers	Mad. Vestris	Ditto
The Moorish Maiden	Mrs. Ashe	John Emdin
You ask a Song, you bid me sing	Mr. Broadhurst	G. Kiallmark
Genius of Freedom, (Grand Scena)	Miss Paton	G. Perry
I left the Bowl in Search of Love	Mr. Phillips	Mr. Phillips
England the home of the world	Mr. Braham	John Barnett

PIANOFORTES.—W. WALTER, (from Mr. Tomkison's) begs to recommend to those in want of a very superior Instrument, to inspect his stock of Grand, Cabinet, Cottage, and Square Pianos, which are warrantod to be of the best description, at unusually low prices, and where the most decided satisfaction is not given, will be exchanged at the Manufactory, 118, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury.

NEW MUSIC.—Just published at the ROYAL HARMONIC INSTITUTION, Argyll Rooms, 246, Regent-street, the Songs, Duets, &c. in The ORACLE, composed by WINTER, and newly arranged by W. HAWES.

	s.	d.
Overture	2	6
The rosy dawn hath driven, Chorus.	5	0
When battles conch is sounding, sung by Mr. Atkins	2	0
The trumpet first is sounded, sung by Mr. Thorn	2	0
We Maidens mark me, sung by Miss Goward,	1	6
All hail to the God of our Fathers, Chorus	2	0
Now by love and peace invited. Sestett and Chorus	3	6
Oh whon thine eye is throwing, Duet, Miss Paton and Sapio	2	6
All powerful Sun, sung by Mr. Phillips	2	0
There was a time ere sorrow, sung by Miss Paton	1	6
Between my hopes and fears suspended, Duet, by Miss Paton and Phillips	2	6
When will peace relieve my breast? sung by Miss Hamilton	1	6
How the plaguing varlet teases, Duet, by Miss Goward and Thorn	2	6
Wo hail thee Lord of Light, Finale, 1st Act	10	0
Tho' we all can feel thy sorrow, Quartett and Chorus	3	6
In what sad hour, Trio	3	0
Oh heavens! the thought is frightful, Duet.	2	6
Hast never mark'd the flower, Song, Miss Boden	1	6
The Maid who'd wish to slumber, Quartett	2	6
The Gloomy terrors of the grave, Scena, Mr. Sapio	2	6
Farewell, yet not for ever, Quartett	4	0
The evening is descending, Finale	10	0

A New TREATISE on THOROUGH BASS, or the art of playing from a figured Bass, with examples, &c. &c. by Dr. Crotch.

Burrows's Selection of Airs from Weber's Opera of Oberon, arranged for the Piano Forte, with Flute adlib, in four books, each 4s.

I'VE BEEN ROAMING—Arranged by T. A. Rawlings, as a Rondo for the Pianoforte.

BOCHSA's Select Airs from the Oracle, for the Harp, and Pianoforte, with Flute and Violin accompaniments, 10s. 6d.; also the Overture to the above, arranged as above, price 5s.

DEATH FETCH.—The music in this admired and popular Opera, composed by C. E. Horn.

I'VE BEEN ROAMING.—Cavatina, sung by Madame Vestris, by C. E. Horn, price 2s.

OBERON.—The music in this popular Romantic and Fairy Opera, composed by the late Carl Maria Von Weber.

 The Proprietors of the ROYAL HARMONIC INSTITUTION beg most respectfully to acquaint the Public, that the only correct copies of the Opera now performing at the English Opera House, called "THE ORACLE," are published by them, and that all other copies are spurious and an Invasion of their rights.

Just Published in 4to, price 3s.

A CRITICAL ENQUIRY into a few facts connected with the TEETH, by G. WAITE, Esq. Surgeon Dentist, M.R.C.S. Lecturer on the Physiology of the Teeth. This work contains an account of the operation for excision.

Printed for CALLOW and WILSON, where may be had, by the same Author, the Dentist's Manual.

Just Published,

BLACKWOOD'S EDINBURGH MAGAZINE.—No. CXVIII. For OCTOBER, 1826.

CONTENTS.

I. The Irish Government—II. Four Autumnal Sonnets. By L.—III. Greece. No. I—IV. The Captive, a Dramatic Sketch—V. Horæ Hispanicæ. No. 13. El Maestro de Danzar—the Dancing-Master. By Pedro Calderon de la Barca—VI. Military Policy and Institutions of Great Britain. No. 2—VII. A Night in Duncan M'Gowan's—VIII. Anent Mungo Glen. From Mansie Wauch's Autobiography—IX. The Barber of Gottingen—X. Chapters on Churchyards. Chap. 9.—XI. Noctes Ambrosianæ. No. 28.—XII. Monthly List of New Publications.—XIII. Appointments, Promotions, &c.—XIV. Births, Marriages, and Deaths.

Printed for WILLIAM BLACKWOOD, Edinburgh; and T. CADELL, Strand, London.

LADIES at the COAST.—The PARISIAN SCOTCH WRAPPING CLOAK, of every Clan, are ready for the Season, at ROBERT LAW and Co.'s Warehouse, 99 and 100, Oxford-street.—Ladies sending their height, the colour or clan, and a remittance, will meet with Immediate attention.

THE IMPROVED SILK HAT ON BEAVER.—For Cash only.
They are made to suit the natural form of the Head.
The Colour is permanent. For durability, shape, and quality, they are unrivalled. } 15s.
HUGH FRANKS & Co.
Patentees of Improved Waterproof Hats,
Corner of Queen Street 70, CHEAPSIDE.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH.—MR. WM. BEACALL, and Mr. ROSE, Surgeon Dentists, 13, Newman-street, Oxford-street having with unremitting diligence long made the Science of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, where mechanical contrivance is requisite, their peculiar study, continues to supply the loss of Teeth, with Natural or Artificial, in a superior manner, without the least pain, from a single Tooth to a complete Set, at little more than one-half the usual charges. Teeth cleaned if ever so discoloured, and rendered white and beautiful, without pain or injury to the enamel. Extracting, Stopping, and every operation on the Teeth and Gums.—Attends at home from Ten till Four.

BRADBERRY's PATENT SPECTACLES, upon unerring principles, to preserve the sight to extreme old age. It is necessary to caution the public against the use of improper Spectacles, as their effects prove injurious, instead of beneficial to the eye. The unremitted and anxious study Mr. BRADBERRY has paid to his glasses for upwards of 30 years, has called forth the most distinguished approbation of their merit from the medical profession, and from many thousands of persons of the highest rank and respectability.—To be had only at 28, Holles-street, the first door out of Oxford-street, next to the large Fruiterer's at the corner, facing Hanover-square, and at no other place in the United Kingdom.—Orders from the country immediately attended to. Removed from 332, Oxford-street.

FRENCH BRANDY DISTILLERY, No. 7, SMITHFIELD BARS.

THE superiority of French Brandy to every other ardent Spirit is well known, and it is universally admitted that the British Distillers have for the last Century made numerous and expensive efforts to imitate this delicate Spirit, but without success; their imitations having invariably proved wretched in composition, and deleterious in effect.

This desideratum, hitherto unattainable, the FRENCH BRANDY DISTILLERY COMPANY, with the assistance of an efficient French Distiller (who has been for many years in the constant practice of making Brandy in France from Corn Spirit), have completely attained: and having perfected their arrangements to meet the most extensive demand, they have now the satisfaction of being enabled to offer the Public a supply of which only requires age, to equal in flavour, salubrity, and excellence, most of the Brandies imported from the South of France; and for British Wines and other domestic purposes decidedly superior: as it possesses more vinosity than Brandy made a considerable time: indeed they are confident their Brandy will be found superior to the majority of French Brandy consumed in the Country, which, from its usual adulterations, is at once rendered offensive to the palate and injurious to the constitution.

BRANDY AT 16s. PER IMPERIAL GALLON,

AT SIMPSON'S MEDICINE WAREHOUSE, No. 28, Henrietta-street, Covent-Garden, London, are sold:

The ARABIAN VEGETABLE PILLS, 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. per Box, free from mercury or antimony, inestimable as a Family Medicine for the removal of Indigestion, Bilious and Nervous Complaints, and as a mild Aperient.

The ROYAL ELIXIR of LIFE, in Bottles of 11s. each, strengthens the Stomach, increases the Appetite, dispels Spasms and Gout in the Stomach, and prevents all the inconveniences produced by excess at table.

The ANTISEPTIC BOTANICAL TOOTH-POWDER, 2s. 9d. per Box, cleanses, whitens, and preserves the Teeth, and fastens them, even if loosened by mercury.

These articles are sold (by appointment) at all respectable Medicine Venders, Chemists, and Druggists, throughout the kingdom.

Superior Eau de Cologne and Swiss Eau d'Arquebusade, Mason's Convent Soap, &c. &c.

BHURTPORE.

(From the Calcutta Government Gazette of April 24.)

GENERAL ORDERS BY THE RIGHT HONOURABLE THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.

Head-Quarters, Bhurtpore, Jan. 19, 1826.

The Right Honourable the Commander-in-Chief congratulates the army under his personal command, on the brilliant achievements that have crowned its services, in the assault and capture of the fortress of Bhurtpore.

The highly creditable manner in which the previous operations connected with the siege were carried on, the cheerful endurance of fatigue and hard labour, and the vigilance displayed on all occasions by every arm of the service, were duly appreciated by his Lordship, and gave earnest of that devoted gallantry and ardour which were shown yesterday in the assault of the enemy's fortified town. The total route of his force with immense slaughter, the evacuation of the strong citadel which immediately followed, and, finally, the capture of the usurper and his family, with most of his Chiefs, form the most complete series of successful events that the most ardent expectation could have contemplated; and have shed lustre over the brilliant performances of the day, without leaving a wish connected with the glory and reputation of the army unsatisfied.

Lord Combermere, guided by the usage of the service, now proceeds to the pleasing duty of particularising those officers by name, whose situations in command gave them opportunities of more particularly distinguishing themselves; but his Lordship desires to assure the Army in general, that, in thus complying with an established custom, he feels and acknowledges the difficulty he has in rendering justice to the merits and claims of a vast many, indeed of the whole, of those immediately engaged, wherein all performed their duty so entirely to his satisfaction.

To Majors-General Reynell and Nicolls belong (independent of their indefatigable exertions during the previous operations of the siege) the peculiar merit of forming and conducting the storming columns of their respective divisions, and by their animating example, carrying the enemy's works with a rapidity and energy that will long be remembered by all who witnessed the conduct of the troops when mounting to assault.

The arrangements which fell to the share of Brigadier-General Sleigh, C.B., commanding the cavalry, not only during the assault, but from the commencement of the investment of Bhurtpore, are to be appreciated by the fact, that none of the enemy escaped from the fort, but on the conditions of surrender, and that the capture of the usurper Doorjun Sal, with his family and almost every person of rank or authority under him, has been effected through the vigilance and gallantry of the several corps employed under his command.

The services of the 1st and 8th corps of Irregular Horse, under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Skinner, assisted by Major Fraser, throughout the siege, have frequently elicited the highest admiration and applause.

Nothing could exceed the devotion and bravery of this valuable class of soldiers, and Lieutenant-Colonel Skinner and Major Fraser fully merit this acknowledgment of his Lordship's unqualified approbation of their conduct and that of their men.

To Brigadier M'Leod, C.B., in the general command of the Artillery, and Brigadiers Hetzler and Brown, commanding the Siege and Field Artillery, respectively, the Commander-in-Chief feels greatly indebted for their highly creditable exertions: as also to the whole of the officers and men of the Artillery, for the excellent display of scientific correctness in their batteries, as well as for their commendable endurance of fatigue, which the nature of the service necessarily exposed them to.

The science, the devotion, and fortitude, evinced on all occasions by the officers and men of the Engineer Corps, including the Corps of Sappers and Miners, and detachment of the Pioneer Corps, it would be difficult to appreciate fully. Many were the instances displayed by this body that proved their worth, and excited general admiration. Brigadier Anburey, C.B., principal field engineer, and all the officers under him, are particularly entitled to the approbation and thanks of the Commander-in-Chief.

To Brigadier-Generals Adams, C.B., M'Combe, and Edwards, and to Brigadiers Murray, C.B., Childers, Whitehead, Patton, C.B., and Fagan, the Commander-in-Chief offers his best thanks for their exertions at the head of their respective brigades; nor can his Lordship omit from the list of officers, to whom his thanks are due, the names of Lieutenant-Colonels S. Nation, John Delamain, T. Wilson, H. S. Peppar, W. C. Baddeley, and Bowyer, and of Majors Fuller, Everard and Bishopp, of his Majesty's service, with that of Major George Hunter, as having been particularly brought to his Lordship's notice, for their conspicuous conduct on command of regiments and detachments engaged in the storm.

His Excellency greatly laments the loss of officers and men on this important occasion; but it affords him consolation to add, that, notwithstanding the vigorous and determined resistance every where evinced by the enemy, this loss has been confined within as narrow limits as could be looked for in the achievement of such a conquest.

The wounded officers and men have his Excellency's warmest sympathy for their sufferings, and an anxious solicitude for their comfort and speedy recovery:—among this number his Excellency cannot refrain from introducing the name of Lieutenant-Colonel Faithfull, whose previous wound deprived the service of his valuable aid.

The Commander-in-Chief gives his warmest thanks to Lieut.-Col. Watson, Adjutant General of the army, and to Lieut.-Col. Stevenson, Quarter Master General, for the indefatigable zeal and ability which they have displayed in carrying on the important duties of their respective departments.

To Major-General Sir S. Whittingham, Quarter Master General, and Lieutenant-Colonel M'Gregor, Acting Adjutant General of the King's troops, Lord Combermere has to return his best acknowledgments for their services.

Lieut.-Colonel the Hon. J. Finch, Military Secretary, and Captain Macan, Persian Interpreter, have merited the approbation and thanks of the Commander-in-Chief, not only for their assiduity and good judgment in carrying on the business of their respective offices, but for their zealous assistance in the field.

To Captain Dawkins, and the rest of his personal Staff, Lord Combermere, has to return his best acknowledgments for their zeal and activity upon all occasions.

Officiating Assistant-Surgeon Barber, at present attached to his Majesty's 16th Lancers, is directed to do duty with his Majesty's 14th Foot, and to join immediately.

Head-quarters, Bhurtpore, Jan. 20, 1826.

It is with feelings of deep regret, that his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief announces to the army the death of Brigadier-General Edwards of the wounds he received in the storming of Bhurtpore on the 18th instant. The gallantry evinced by this officer in leading his brigade during the assault, and the high character he bore, render his fall a public calamity as well as a private misfortune; but those friends who now grieve for his untimely fate, have the consolation of knowing that in life he was esteemed and respected, and in death mourned for and lamented.

Mr. Canning (says the Courrier Francais) has only made himself remarkable, in the few public places in which he has appeared, by the great simplicity of his costume and manners; his reputation is his only retinue; and it is quite sufficient to excite a powerful interest with regard to him wherever he is seen. Of this fact, those who were present at the Opera on Monday, and the next night at the Theatre Francais, had the means of satisfying themselves.

BOGOTA PAPERS.

SIMON BOLIVAR, LIBERATOR, PRESIDENT OF THE REPUBLIC, &c.

Bogota, June 19.—Most Excellent Sir,—I congratulate myself and Colombia on the assembly of the General Congress, which the people looked forward to, to complete the improvements of their administration, and to supply their legislative wants. I feel the greatest pleasure in announcing to Congress that perfidious Pasto has again acknowledged the titulary laws of Colombia; that the departments of the south are in perfect tranquillity, and extremely attached to the sacred law which has given existence to the glorious Republic of Colombia.

The liberating army of the south presents through me to the General Congress, the glorious laurels which it has gathered in the fields of battle of Yaguachi, Bombona, Riobamba, Pichincha, and Pasto, (and more recently in Junin, Ayacucho, and Callao.) On my part, faithful to my oath to obey the fundamental law of the Republic, I reiterate a second time to the Legislature of Colombia, my first promise to die, sword in hand, at the head of the army of Colombia, before I will allow the bond of union to be trampled upon which has presented to the world a nation composed of Venezuela and New Granada. The Constitution of Colombia is sacred for 10 years; it shall not be violated with impunity so long as blood runs in my veins, and the liberators are under my command.

Your Excellency will be good enough to transmit to the General Congress these sentiments of attachment to the Constitution and to the Members of the Legislature.

I am, with the highest consideration, your Excellency's attentive, obedient servant,

BOLIVAR.

Head-quarters in Tulcan, Dec. 31, 1822—12.

Fellow-countrymen!—Unite with Bolivar in the support of the fundamental laws. The cause of disorder and anarchy shall not triumph, so long as Bolivar, the Liberating Army, and the people are for the preservation of the Government of Colombia—for the glory and reputation of our country.

Communications have been received from the Departments of Maturin, Zulia, and Orinoco, which, from the nature of their contents, are deserving of the attention of the public, at a moment when the events of the 30th of April in Valencia, and what has subsequently taken place in several towns of the provinces of Caraccas and Carabobo, keep all good patriots and friends of Colombia in a state of anxiety.

The gallant General Bermudez, Commandant-General of the Department of Maturin, informs the Secretary of State for the War Department, in a despatch from Barcelona, dated the 11th of May, of what had occurred at Valencia on the 30th of April, and in conclusion observes:—

"I promise to the Government to act in these circumstances with all the activity and prudence which such a state of things demands; to defend the Orinoco,* in case any attempts should be made on its fidelity, and to do every thing in the power of the armed force under my command, towards reducing to obedience those turbulent spirits who wish to introduce moments of sorrow at the most prosperous period of the republic.

"It is needless, although extremely gratifying for a soldier who has devoted his whole existence to the defence of his country, to protest to the Government as I now do, that I will make every kind of sacrifice and effort to secure the triumph of the Constitution, the respect due to the legitimate Authorities, the preservation of the tranquillity and integrity of the Republic."

The Commander-General of the Zulia, General-in-Chief R. Urdoneta, under date of the 2d instant, informs the Secretary of War, that in the department not the slightest disturbance had occurred; and the Commandant-General of the Orinoco, General M. Guerrero, states, under date of the 4th instant, that in that department the only event that had taken place up to that time, was that General Paez had been acknowledged in Achaguas as Commandant-General of Venezuela, and Director of War as before, and that in the province of Varinas every thing was perfectly tranquil.—Gaceta de Colombia.

(From the Bogota Paper of the 6th of July.)

Public Credit.—The Intendant-General of Guayaquil has given official notice of having remitted to Panama, in a vessel of war, 44,000 dollars, the amount of a fourth part of the revenue of customs, destined by the Executive for the payment of the interest of the foreign debt. This is the only Intendant of the Maritime departments who has hitherto punctually complied with the orders of the Government.

* At the time this was written the additional law to the one of the territorial divisions of the department had not been received.

Female Intrepidity and Male Barbarity. New Orleans, Aug. 1.—A baker who lives in the suburb Marigny, having had a quarrel with his wife last Sunday, very gallantly put a rope round her neck, a l'Anglaise, and led her down to St. Anthony-street, until he came to a tree, over a branch of which, having thrown the rope, he was deliberately proceeding to hoist the woman, when succour came up. The aid was not from man. Near 20 of that sex had witnessed the whole of the husband's cruel proceedings, but the sight of a naked sabre in the hand of the monster kept them at a distance. Woman, in this instance, was saved by woman. A stout female ran up to the tree, pushed the hangman aside, untied the intended victim, and led her off in safety. We forbear saying more on this act of atrocity, as it is under a course of investigation before the magistrates.—American Paper.

We understand that the acquittal of Armstrong, who was tried at Stirling on Thursday se'nnight, for the murder of John Boyd, near Falkirk, in April last, produced a great sensation among the inhabitants of the latter town. On Saturday, placards were posted up in the most public places, announcing that "the inhabitants of Falkirk, viewing with horror the acquittal of a murderer, a crime against which all nature cries aloud, and as no shedder of blood shall live here, notice is hereby given to the criminal, that if he does not leave this place in twenty-four hours, he shall be hanged on the spot." But their expression of indignation against the crime, and the person whom they believed to be guilty, did not stop here, for having prepared an effigy of the man, it was displayed at the Cross about six o'clock in the evening, after having been carried through the streets. It represented a murderer with a knife in his hand, a rope about his neck, and a white cap on his head. A barrel was then prepared, filled with combustibles, and a young chimney-sweep having ascended to the place where the effigy was suspended, cut it down and handed it to some of the mob, who consigned it to the flames, and afterwards displayed it upon a pole while burning. Many hundreds of all sorts of people assembled in a few minutes to witness the mock execution, and they appeared to express as much satisfaction while the ceremony went on, as if they had really believed that a murderer was punished; indeed, the loud shouting and turbulence of the crowd brought to the memory of many present the Porteus mob at Edinburgh. They dispersed, however, without committing the smallest outrage otherwise, and every one seemed pleased with this public expression of contempt. M'Nab and M'Laren, two of the four who were supposed to be implicated went about the streets during Saturday afternoon, reading the advertisements, and afterwards visited, and deliberately examined the spot where the bloody deed was done. It is remarkable that the evidence of M'Laren, which was considered the most direct, was never taken in court. We understand that, in consequence of the jury having acquitted Armstrong, several of the special constables of Falkirk have refused to act for the future in that capacity. On Monday M'Nab again appeared on the streets, but was immediately assailed by a band of women, who in a few minutes drove him out of town, with Billingsgate imprecations and showers of stones.—Falkirk Paper.

STATE OF TRADE.

Manchester.—It is with great pleasure that we again report a steady amendment in trade. In twist, there is not yet much actual advance; prices, however, are obtained which the buyers last week refused to give, and the demand continues good. Calicoes of most descriptions, we believe, are somewhat higher; and heavy goods (fustians, &c.) cannot be purchased on as favourable terms as heretofore. The stocks in spinners' and manufacturers' hands are now generally small; but there is still much machinery standing idle, or not working full time, and too many hands unemployed to afford much hope that any material advance in wages is likely soon to take place.—Manchester Guardian.

Glasgow.—With us there has not been that vivacity in manufacturing that was anticipated. Manchester seems to be taking the start in the return to a larger business, but we have no doubt that Glasgow will speedily follow. The tone is healthy, and the reason why more is not done may be found in the characteristic caution of the country, which prevents masters from finishing more work than they can presently sell. There has been little done in cotton wool, notwithstanding which, prices look up, and the intelligence from Liverpool will, doubtless, make them look up still more,

Glasgow, Sept. 23.—The following are the sales of the week:—16 Sea Islands, 12¾*d.* 17 Stained do, 7⅞*d.* to 8¼*d.* 128 Boweds, 6⅞*d.* to 7¼*d.* 198 Orleans, 7¼*d* to 8*d.* 16 Demeraras, 8⅜*d.* to 9½*d.* 261 Egyptians, 7⅞*d.* to 8½*d.* 111 Surats, 5⅝*d.* to 6*d.*—In all, 747 bales.

Imports—None. Our sugar market has continued rather sluggish this week, and the sales have been confined to the immediate wants of the trade. The holders, however, are extremely firm; and the buyers, in some instances, have added the offers they made at the commencement of the present week. There is a very general opinion that sugars will not decline materially.—Glasgow Free Press.

Societies are forming in most of the manufacturing towns of Yorkshire and Lancashire, for affording clothing to the distressed poor during the approaching winter.—Leeds Mercury.

A regulation is about to be adopted by the bleachers, which, if countenanced by the manufacturers, may be the means of preventing a great number of thefts during the ensuing winter—Glasgow Chronicle.

Whitehaven Bank.—The assignees of Messrs. Adamson, Johnson, and Co., late bankers, Whitehaven, attended at the Bush Inn, Carlisle, on Wednesday last, and paid a dividend of 13s. 4d. in the pound, to all creditors resident in this neighbourhood, whose debts had been previously proved. This early and ample dividend is alike creditable to the late firm and to the assignees.—Carlisle Patriot.

Wentworth and Co.—The sum of 50,000*l.*, the purchase-money of the Birthwaite estate, including the minerals (late the property of Mr. Rishworth, the banker), will not be paid, it is said, until the next spring, and, of course, the dividend to the creditors to be then made, will, from this cause, be considerable. —York Herald.

Macclesfield.—We have but little to add to our last week's report of the state of trade. Slow and almost imperceptible as the amendment is, it must be acknowledged that the prospect brightens. Many more hands find employment now than was the case lately, though great numbers are either out of work or put upon short time. It is not a little cheering to observe, that those of our manufacturers who are capitalists, evince a disposition to embrace every favourable opportunity of encouraging the silk manufacture in this district; and we have no doubt that their exertions will ultimately be crowned with success. In our immediate neighbourhood, the cotton trade is reviving, though slowly; at Bollington, some factories that were for a time stopped, now employ the hands three days in the week, and other factories at full work. Our accounts from Manchester, Blackburn, Leeds, Huddersfield, Bradford, Wakefield, and other large manufacturing towns, all concur in stating, that obvious improvement has taken place in commercial affairs, and that the improvement, though not rapid, is likely to be permanent.—Macclesfield Herald.

Some idea may be formed of the distress in this town, when we state, that there is at this time no less than eight hundred and fifty-three dwelling-houses uninhabited in the borough, exclusive of those in Sutton and Huddersfield.—Macclesfield Herald.

Oldham, Sept. 21.—The turn-out amongst the cotton-spinners here begins to assume a more serious aspect; it is calculated that about 1,500 hands are out of employ. Messrs. Collins and Lancashire have engaged a number of what are termed "nob-sticks" to work their machinery; these men, however, are in jeopardy, and have to creep to their work by stealth, and return in the same manner. No actual violence has hitherto been committed; but, from the precautions taken, it seems to be apprehended. The presence of the military has been requested once or twice, but without effect, the officer declining to act without the sanction of a magistrate. Special constables have therefore been had recourse to, and a number have begun to act in that capacity, strengthened by a body of master manufacturers.

We are gratified to observe that the standard for copper again advanced at the ticketing on Thursday.—West Briton.

RE-CAPTURE OF THE BRIG MONARCH.

(From the Liverpool Courier of Wednesday.)

This morning the brig Monarch, Captain Mondell, arrived here. It will be recollected, that this vessel was taken by the Brazilian squadron some time ago, for attempting to violate the blockade of Buenos Ayres. The following is an account of the manner in which Captain Mondell succeeded in regaining possession of his vessel:—it appears, that after being condemned at Monte Video, a prize-master and twenty-five men, seven of whom were soldiers, were put on board the Monarch for the purpose of navigating her to Rio. Previously, however, to sailing from Monte Video, Capt. Mondell had succeeded in secreting some arms under the bed of the mate, who, with his cook, had been left on board the brig. When within about 200 miles of Rio, Captain Mondell commenced putting in practice his plan for the recovery of the vessel, and having, with the assistance of the mate and cook, succeeded in overpowering the prize-master and the watch at that time upon deck, he, by threats, obliged him to call up the hands from below, singly; and as each man came up, he was seized by Captain Mondell and delivered to the mate and cook, who pinioned and fastened him to the bolt-rings. Thus taken by surprise, scarcely any resistance was offered, with the exception of one black, who appeared very loth to surrender without some fighting. The Brazilians being all secured, Captain Mondell was anxious to dispose of them as quickly as possible; but as their number was too great to render it safe to trust them in a boat with their hands at liberty, unless at a considerable distance from the brig, Captain Mondell took the precaution of placing the long-boat in slings, and into this, after putting on board a stock of provisions, a compass, and their clothes, he put the Brazilians, their arms being still pinioned, with the exception of one. The boat was then lowered into the water, and the remaining seaman was put on board, with his hands at liberty, and a knife, for the purpose of setting his comrades at liberty. By this means sufficient time was allowed for the Monarch to gain such a distance from the boat, as to render vain any attempt on the part of the Brazilians to re-capture her. Two of the Brazilians, one of whom is an officer, volunteered to come with Captain Mondell, and with these two, and his mate and cook, he has succeeded in bringing the vessel safe into this port.

The brig Stag, one of the British vessels seized by the Brazilians, sailed from Monte Video two days before the Monarch. Captain Mondell is of opinion that Captain Lashley would try to re-capture her.

charged with begging, at the bar, and one "smasher" (a passer of bad money) waiting to be examined.

Mr. Conant read the order, and said, "Very well, let the prisoner alluded to in this order be brought in and placed with the other prisoners at the bar."

Colonel Archdall was accordingly ushered in by an officer, and placed within the bar close by the side of one of the vagrants, where he remained until the smasher and the vagrants' cases were disposed of.

Mr. Conant then addressed him thus (Mr. Fitzpatrick having first read the order aloud)—"Mr. Archdall, there is an order from the Court of King's Bench that you shall be discharged upon entering into your own recognizances in 500l.; you will be discharged on your entering into those recognizances." Are you ready to do so?

Prisoner—I am.

Mr. Fitzpatrick then proceeded to take the prisoner's recognizances, preparatory to which he questioned him thus for his necessary information:—

Mr. Fitzpatrick—Prisoner, where did you reside when you were taken into custody? Prisoner—In South Audley-street.

Mr. Fitzpatrick—What number? Prisoner—No. 21.

Mr. Fitzpatrick.—Are you of any profession or business?

Prisoner—I am an officer on half-pay.

Mr. Fitzpatrick—What rank? Prisoner—A lieutenant.

Mr. Fitzpatrick—Of what regiment? Prisoner—The 17th Foot.

Mr. Fitzpatrick—Then, Richard Archdall, you acknowledge yourself to be indebted to our Sovereign Lord the King, in the sum of 500l.: it is upon condition that you do personally appear at the next Quarter Sessions of the peace, to be holden for the city and liberties of Westminster, then and there to answer any indictment or indictments that may be preferred against you by Frederick Withers, on the detestable charge of ———. Are you content to that?

Prisoner—I am.

The prisoner was then sent about his business.

Not the slightest alteration has taken place in the prisoner's appearance from his confinement. This person was, in the year 1809, a Major, and subsequently the Lieutenant-Colonel commanding the 40th regiment of foot; but while so in command was removed from the service for having a soldier of the regiment severely flogged without going through the ceremony of a court-martial. He next purchased a Cornetcy, and afterwards a Lieutenantcy in the 11th Light Dragoons, from which he exchanged to the half-pay of the 17th Foot, where he now is placed.

On Friday evening, a short time before the closing of the above office, Mr. Withers, senior, entered, accompanied by his son, Frederick Withers, who was the complainant in the charge of a detestable nature upon which Richard Archdall, formerly Lieutenant-Colonel of the 40th regiment of Foot, and at present on the half-pay as Lieutenant of the 17th of the line, was held to bail at this office, but discharged by order of the Court of King's Bench on Thursday night, on his own recognizance.

Mr. Withers addressing Mr. Conant, the sitting magistrate, said, that he had that morning, with much astonishment, seen by the public papers, that Colonel Archdall had been discharged out of custody the night before, on entering into his own recognizances of 500l.; and he, Mr. Withers, was the more surprised at this, because Mr. Dyer, the committing magistrate, had told him that no alteration of the bail, or discharge of the prisoner, should take place without he (Mr. Withers) or Mr. Harmer, his solicitor, was apprised of it beforehand; and now, without the slightest intimation from any quarter, of any proceeding of the kind being in contemplation, he sees it for the first time in the newspapers, that the prisoner is set at liberty.

Mr. Conant assured Mr. Withers that neither Mr. Dyer, nor any other magistrate of this office, had any thing whatever to do with the discharge of Mr. Archdall: that person was discharged on his own recognizances, under a direct order from the Chief Justice of the Court of King's Bench to that effect, and which order every magistrate is bound immediately to obey, without attempting to question its propriety.

Mr. Withers said, that the discharge of the prisoner in such a sudden and extraordinary manner, without meeting with any opposition, would now, in the public mind, cast an imputation upon the characters of him (Mr. Withers) and his son, particularly as neither themselves nor their solicitor attended, either before the judge, or at this office, to oppose his liberation, or protest against his discharge upon such terms; and the public would therefore suppose that the matter was hushed up, and most probably would think that he and his son had received some pecuniary inducement to consent to let the prisoner go at large; but so far from such being the case, Mr. Withers declared that no offer of the kind had ever at any time been made from the friends of Colonel Archdall, and if there had, it would have been indignantly rejected, for that no inducement on earth should ever make him (Mr. Withers) or his son relinquish the prosecution.

Mr. Conant said that both Mr. Dyer and himself were certainly not a little surprised when they first heard of the order to discharge Archdall on his own recognizances, and their impression at the moment was that some imposition or deception had been practised on the Chief Justice of the King's Bench; they therefore considered that a communication should be made to Mr. Harmer, of the magistrate's intention to discharge the prisoner forthwith, under the Judge's order; but it has since appeared, that a person did actually attend before the Judge on the part of the prosecutor, when the order was issued, as before said; the magistrates were undoubtedly surprised at the order, because as the case against the prisoner appeared at this office, none could be more clearly made out.

Mr. Fitzpatrick, the chief clerk, said that he had received a letter from Mr. Butler, one of Mr. Harmer's clerks, stating that he had attended on the part of the prosecutor, before the Chief Justice of the King's Bench, when the application was made, and the order issued for the discharge of Colonel Archdall.

"Then," said Mr. Withers, with much surprise, "I know nothing about it; I never heard of it. Mr. Harmer never told me that such a thing was even intended, and the first I heard of it was by the newspapers this morning. I called twice to-day on Mr. Harmer about it, but could not see him, and as my character and that of my son are at stake, some friends of mine advised me to come down at once to this office and speak about it. All my son has to depend upon through life is his character, and I fear it must suffer by this business, for the world will not believe but that we connived at Mr. Archdall's discharge. Had I known of the application to the Court of King's Bench, I could, on the clearest evidence, have satisfied the Lord Chief Justice that the bail ought not to be reduced either on the score of the Colonel's property, or his general character. I have been a great deal employed in seeking out evidence, and preparing for the prosecution, and I could prove, by the young man who lived before my son in the service of Colonel Archdall, that he was obliged to quit the service in consequence of his master's abominable conduct, and that the lad was obliged, during the latter period of his servitude, actually to sleep every night with a part of his clothes on, to protect himself from a repetition of a horrid line of conduct practised towards him in an assault attempted by Colonel Archdall one night at the Bull and Mouth Inn, in the City, where they were stopping for the night to go by coach next day to the country.

Mr. Conant said, that he did not believe that Mr. Dyer, or any of the magistrates at the office, at all suspected that Mr. Withers, or his son, had in any way compromised the business; and there could not, with justice, be any prejudice of the sort against them in the public mind.

The youth, Frederick Withers, who is a remarkably fine lad, said, that he much feared the discharge of Colonel Archdall, under such mysterious circumstances, would injure him through life. Already the Governors of the National Guardian Institution, on seeing the account that morning in the papers of the prisoner's discharge, expressed their displeasure, and he was afraid they suspected that he or his father had been induced to consent; and it would be a serious thing for him to incur the displeasure of an institution like that under the care of which he was.

Mr. Conant said that there did not appear to be the slightest ground to suspect either father or son of any connivance, and they might still indict Archdall at the Sessions if they thought fit.

Mr. Withers said that he most assuredly should indict him, and he would consult directly with Mr. Harmer on the subject, but he feared the indictment would be of little avail, as in all probability the Colonel would be far enough off by that time.

Mr. Withers, and his son then withdrew to consult with their solicitor, Mr. Harmer, as to what was best to be done.

UNION-HALL.—Two women, named Jones and Madden, were placed at the bar under the following circumstances:—

Maisey, the night constable of St. George's, stated, that on the previous night, a person of respectability, who resides at Sheerness, and who arrived in London a few nights ago, ventured into the company of the girls at the bar, and was robbed of a purse containing 75l. Immediately subsequent to the robbery the gentleman in question gave information of it, which led to the apprehension of the prisoners.

Mr. Chambers—Was any of the property found in their possession?

Maisey replied in the negative, although the gentleman was convinced they were the persons who had robbed him.

Mr. Chambers—Where is the gentleman? let him come forward and give his evidence against these women.

Maisey said that the gentleman refused to appear, being a married man, and apprehensive the circumstance might reach the ears of his family.

Mr. Chambers—Then I shall not detain these women any longer. What are their characters?

Maisey—They are notorious thieves as well as prostitutes; they rob most of the men that venture into their society.

Mr. Chambers—As the person who was robbed does not think proper to appear, the prisoners are discharged.

CORONER'S INQUESTS.

Wednesday afternoon an Inquest was held at the Black Boy and Horse Shoe, Nicholas lane, Lombard-street, before Thomas Shelton, Esq. Coroner, on the body of Mr. Samuel Scholey, aged 45, ham and tongue merchant, late of Nicholas-lane, who hanged himself. The case excited considerable interest in the neighbourhood, and the jury-room was excessively crowded by the most opulent inhabitants, who were acquainted with the deceased.—Richard Lane deposed, that he was in the service of the deceased as shop-boy. At half-past six o'clock on Tuesday morning, on entering the shop, he found his master suspended by a small cord. He made an alarm, and Mr. Hamilton, who resides next door, came and cut him down. A surgeon was sent for, but to no purpose, the deceased being quite dead. Mr. Thomas Dudley deposed, that he was clerk to the deceased during the last five years. Latterly he observed a great alteration in the decensed's manners, which he attributed to his having lost, within the last week, 400l. in the Greek Stock, and 100l. in the Peruvian. The deceased was a man of great property; he had informed witness that he had received an injury some years ago on the back of the head, which caused temporary derangement whenever the moon changed, and he laboured under a delusion that he would one day or other die mad. He had lately purchased an estate from a person named Wilmot, but witness was not sufficiently acquainted with the transaction to elucidate it.—John Poulton, shopman to the deceased, had been with him twenty-one years. The deceased was lately much changed in his mind and manners. He used to walk about in a melancholy mood for hours together, and would bite his lips as if in great agony. He had advanced money on the purchase of an estate, with which he was not satisfied, and on Friday last he said to witness, "John, that Wilmot has broken my heart." Mr. Scholey was a very regular, abstemious, and hardworking man. A partner belonging to the firm of Hughes and Co., solicitors, of Clement's-inn, stated, that the deceased had purchased an estate by auction, and had advanced money upon it, and was ultimately to have possession of it for 3,000l. He conceived that too much money had been asked by Wilmot, whose conduct he said he did not like. He had acted for the deceased, who was a very acute man, but on Friday last, when witness was in his company, he stared wildly at him, and appeared quite absent. Mr. Cornelius Price, surgeon, was called in, but the deceased was quite dead. A friend of the deceased stated, that he had observed such a strange alteration in him, that he cautioned the servants to keep a strict watch over him, as it was his impression prior to the commission of the act, that he would perpetrate it. He said to witness, that vexation and trouble was the cause of his illness. Several of the Jury, &c. spoke as to the melancholy alteration in the deceased within the last two or three weeks, and after a moment's consultation, they returned a verdict, "That the deceased committed the act himself, being at the time in a state of temporary derangement."

An Inquest was held at the Crown and Dolphin, Cannon-street, on John Burgess Lambert, formerly a respectable plumber and glazier in that neighbourhood. It appeared that the deceased had latterly accustomed himself to excessive drinking. On Tuesday, in the early part of the forenoon, he went into the Crown and Dolphin, and appeared so lethargic and stupid, from a previous debauch, that the landlord had him conveyed into the tap-room, where, in a few minutes, he breathed his last. A surgeon, who subsequently examined the body, gave it as his opinion, that death was brought on by suffocation, caused by inebriety. Verdict, "Died from excessive drinking."

Madame Vestris introduced the new song of "Hurrah for the Bonnets of Blue," on Wednesday night, at the Haymarket Theatre, with the most complete success. This pleasing melody bids fair to rival in public favour, Horn's celebrated Ballad, "Cherry Ripe."

The Duke of Devonshire has relinquished the plan of erecting several ornamental villas on a part of his domains at Chiswick, although all the preliminaries relating to the letting of the ground were nearly completed.—Evening Paper,

An old author mentions the curious fact, that from the time when London was erected into a corporate city, to the year 1616, there were only two Lord Mayors who were bachelors; namely, John Mathew (mercer), in 1490, and Sir John Leman, in 1616.

A case of combination (says a letter from Dublin, dated Sept. 26), has come before the Lord Mayor, which proves the extensive nature of these societies. Mr. Carolan, a carpenter, having refused to comply with the demands of his journeymen, they left their work, and Mr. Carolan proceeded to Glasgow, and engaged others in their place. No sooner had they arrived in Dublin, than their lives were threatened, and they ultimately demanded their tools. This was refused, and they were unable to return home. They now summoned Mr. Carolan for a week's wages. It appeared, however, that they had been treated by the combinators, and supplied with necessaries. The Lord Mayor strongly advised the men to go to work, and was disposed to postpone the business, in order to enable the workmen to come to an understanding with Mr. Carolan; but being pressed for a decision, he said he would dismiss the complaint, as it was not clear to him but the men had entered into the combination of the city carpenters. The case was then dismissed, and the parties left the Mansion-house, threatening further proceedings.

A WIFE POISONED BY HER HUSBAND.

On Friday and Saturday (22d and 23d ult.) an inquest was held at Bankhouse, in Gosforth, before W. Bragg, Esq., Coroner, on view of the body of Sarah Fox, wife of Robert Fox, who died on the preceding Tuesday, under circumstances which fully called for investigation, when the following evidence was adduced:—

Mary Pharaoh, sworn, said—I am mother of the deceased, who, with her husband, lived at our house. On Saturday last deponent and her husband went from home about five o'clock in the afternoon, to attend a christening at a neighbour's house, and left the deceased quite well, and in good spirits, considering her situation, being pregnant and near her confinement. About half-past seven the same evening, Robert Fox, husband of the deceased, came to the house where we were, and told me I must go home immediately, Sarah was very ill. I considered this illness to proceed from precursory labour, and made no further inquiries, but went towards home with him immediately. On the road I asked Robert how Sarah was held; he said she was very sick, and did not think she would live till morning, and that Margaret (a younger sister) was also very bad. I considered Margaret's indisposition as a trifling cold, and said to Robert that Sarah's illness was merely the beginning of labour. On arriving home I asked Sarah how she felt herself: she said she was very bad, and that Bob had warmed her some coffee which was left from morning; it had a bad taste; he had put something into it. He said she took fancies, but he would make her a better cup, by putting more sugar into it; this cup was worse than the first; she could not drink it. Little Margaret tasted it, and was also sick. The remaining part was put into the pig's meat, and the pig was the same way affected as my two daughters. I considered hyssop tea would be of service in allaying sickness, and made some and took it to my youngest daughter, who said that it had the same bad taste as the coffee. I thought the bad taste complained of arose from the water having stood in the kettle the whole of the day; I therefore washed the kettle well out, and made some more cups of tea, of which they both drank, and thought it good. I then asked the deceased if she would eat any thing; and she replied in the affirmative. I made her a posset of milk, bread, and beer, of which she ate, and said it was very good, and what was left she would take it after a bit. Robert, her husband, desired me to go to bed, and he would take care of her till the morning. I accordingly went to bed, and on Sunday morning when I arose, I asked her how she had rested, and how she was. Her answer was, that she was very bad, and that her husband had given her the remainder of the posset, and had put some more stuff into it, as it had the same bad taste which the coffee had. During the whole of Sunday she continued to retch very much, and about four o'clock on Monday morning she was delivered of a still-born child, which had a very unnatural appearance, being quite black. The sickness still continued, and I asked her if she could not eat any thing. She said she could not, her throat was so bad, and was burning. She frequently complained of the head-ache, pain in the stomach, and a burning heat in her throat, attended with great thirst, and drank large quantities of water and beer. The deceased said, in the presence of her husband, "that the stuff he put into the coffee made her bad." He said, "I put nothing into it;" but she replied, "You did, and you brought the stuff from Whitehaven on Thursday." To this he made no answer. The deceased then said, "You have poisoned me and killed my child; but killing me is nothing to killing my child. I freely forgive you, and I hope God Almighty will forgive me my sins, and I expect you will suffer as much on earth as I have done" She died the following day.

Several witnesses were also examined, who attended the deceased during her illness, whose testimonies fully corroborated that of Mrs. Pharaoh.

Fox, the husband of the deceased, positively denied having been in any druggist's shop in Whitehaven.

Mr. Saul, of Whitehaven, was sworn, and said, I am a druggist in Whitehaven, and perfectly remember Fox calling at my shop on Thursday, the 14th of September. He wanted some arsenic, he said, for killing rats. I refused to let him have it, but in consequence of a person who was in the shop at the time saying he knew him, I sold him what he asked for, and wrapped it up in three different papers, and wrote the word "Poison" upon them, to prevent any accident.

Mr. Wright, surgeon, of Gosforth, opened the body in presence of Messrs. Thompson and Dawson, of Whitehaven, and Mr. Lawson, of Egremont, who were all of opinion that the deceased came to her death by poison.

After the Coroner had read over the various evidences, the Jury retired, and on their return a verdict was given, "That Sarah Fox came to an unnatural death by poison, and likewise that Robert Fox, her husband, was guilty of procuring and administering the same to her."

Fox was instantly taken into custody, and committed to Carlisle Gaol to take his trial at the next Assizes.—Cumberland Packet.

[The unfortunate woman, it is said, was married at the instigation of the parish to the prisoner.]

CHANCELLORSHIP OF IRELAND.—Rumour has been busy in appointing a successor to his Lordship. The names of Mr. Plunkett and Mr. Saurin have been respectively mentioned as the individuals assigned to fill this important station.—Dublin Correspondent.

The father of Marshal Ney died lately at Nancy, in France. He had reached a great age, and was universally esteemed in the place where he lived for the excellence of his conduct.

A man is now applying to be made a parish watchman who is said to be the undoubted heir to a considerable landed estate, and nearly related to a Sussex Baronet.—Morning Paper.

It was yesterday reported in Bradford, that 8,000l. had been received there from Government, for the purpose of aiding the commissioners of the intended turnpike-road from that town to Halifax, by way of Thornton, in making the road. 2,000l. of the above sum is said to be a gift, and the other 6,000l. a loan at interest. The line of the projected road will be very commodious, and runs through a beautiful vale.—Leeds Intelligencer.

On Saturday last, Christopher Epworth, Esq., late Major in the Royal Marines, son of the late Admiral Epworth, and brother to Captain Epworth, R. N. while in the act of signing his name to a document in the church of Totness, fell down in an apoplectic fit, and almost immediately expired. The deceased had but a few weeks since retired from the service, having sold his commission.—Plymouth Journal.

OSTEND, SEPT. 22.—The damage done by the late explosion is estimated, at present, at 3,000,000 of francs. It is fortunate at the moment of the explosion the gates were opened, otherwise the whole town would have shared the fate of the barracks. There are here three other powder-magazines, at which the guards are doubled. The garrison is usually performing its exercise at the hour when the explosion took place; but it happened that for some days past this had been omitted, on account of the fever now prevalent, otherwise it is likely that few of the men would have escaped. Our environs now present a most melancholy appearance. M. Wieland, commissary of the district, suffers a loss of 30,000 francs. We have seen a farm, which is unfortunately situated in one of the three directions which the explosion took. For the space of eight minutes this farm, and the fields to the distance of half a mile from the explosion, were covered with a shower of stones, some of them four to six feet long. The house and all the out-buildings are beaten in; the son of the family was killed; the mother is probably dead by this time of the wounds she received. Five cows and oxen are killed, and others are dangerously wounded. The fruit-trees in the gardens are shattered to pieces, and there is scarcely a trace of vegetation to be seen.

PRICE OF STOCKS UP TO FOUR O'CLOCK YESTERDAY.

BRITISH.

Bank Stock,	India Stock,
Red. 3 per Cent.	India Bonds, 30 32
3 per Cent. Cons. 80⅞	Exch. Bills, 1000, 15 16 pm.
3½ per Cent. Red.	Do. 500, 15 17 pm.
New 4 per Cent. 95⅛	Do. Small, 18 19 pm.
4 per Cent. 1826,	Do. Advertised,
Long Anns.	Cons. for Acc. 80⅛ 80¼

THE BIRMINGHAM GAS COMPANIES.

[We freely insert the following, in contradiction of the letter we published last Sunday, particularly as we have heard, since then, that the statements of our former correspondent, on which alone we delivered judgment, are entirely false—and therefore the writer's name is entirely at the service of the NEW GAS COMPANY.]

TO THE EDITOR OF THE AGE NEWSPAPER.

Sir,—Having inserted your correspondent's letter, who signs himself "Amicus Justitiæ," on the subject of the two Gas Companies here, I hope your own amor justitiæ will induce you to publish a few observations in reply, as it appears, that in the zeal of his advocacy of the Old Company's interests, this "Friend to Justice" has suppressed some rather important facts.

At the time the New, or Staffordshire Gas Company, was projected, it is not too much to say, that BIRMINGHAM was the worst lighted town in England. The lamps were small—the Gas impure—and the complaints loud and general. Repeated remonstrances from the Commissioners of the Birmingham Street Act, were neither met courteously, or treated with the respect they were entitled to; and there was certainly a very general feeling of dissatisfaction. In this state of things, it was not surprising that many of the inhabitants should be eagerly desirous to avail themselves of the means of supplying themselves from a better source, and the clause permitting an appeal to the Quarter Sessions, was, in consequence, inserted in the bill of the New Company.

But it is not therefore to be inferred, that their opponents were slumbering at their post, and that this clause was smuggled through Parliament! On the contrary, it was long and learnedly argued, and every thing advanced in favour of the Old Company's interests, that the ingenuity of their legal advisers could suggest. Notwithstanding which, Parliament sanctioned the appeal, on the very proper ground, that whatever contract the Commissioners had found it necessary to make in the first instance, the public was entitled to the advantages of free competition, and they (the Commissioners) were bound to protect its interests, and not to interpose vexatious restrictions.

But your Correspondent does not seem to be aware how much the tenor of his arguments are at variance with his own conclusions, or he could scarcely have pretended fear lest the success of the New Company should be a means of establishing the very monopoly for which he so earnestly pleads in favor of the Old.

The truth is, your friend "Amicus Justitiæ" has undertaken a bad cause, and though, I doubt not, well paid for his present advocacy, will hereafter find a more profitable avocation than that of writing up a Company who have played their own game so badly. The Staffordshire Gas Company has entitled itself to the best support of the town, by giving an infinitely better and purer light than it had before, and the feeling of the inhabitants generally, is decidedly in its favour. Whether the power of appealing to the Sessions is, or is not, right in the judgment of your Correspondent, matters but little—it is to be corporated in the Act of Parliament, and both parties must abide the issue. The Commissioners have done all they can, and in the judgment of many, something more than they ought, to protect the interest of the Old Company—they might possibly have sufficient reasons for refusing to be bound by the decision of the Chairman of the Quarter Sessions, on the last appeal---be this however, as it may, hey have determined to try the issue of another, and the result will he, that the battle will be won, as many battles have been before, by Young Gas.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient Servant,
AMICUS VERITATIS.

Accounts have been received from Captain Clapperton, up to the 4th March, 1826, dated Eyo, Hio, or Katungo, at which date, it appears that he was quite well, although he had had a serious attack of illness.

The stone-bridge erecting across the Serpentine -river in Hyde-park is proceeding rapidly. It consists of five arches, of about 30 feet span. It will be level on the top, without any rise towards the middle, as the arches are all of equal height. It is building from the design of Mr. Rennie, by Messrs. Jonathan and Banks, the contractors.

TUESDAY'S GAZETTE.

BANKRUPTCIES ENLARGED.

T. Wilkinson, West-square, Surrey, underwriter——W. Hickman, Great Coxwell, Berkshire, butcher.

BANKRUPTCIES SUPERSEDED.

J. W. Wakeford, Bolton-le-Moors, linen-draper——E. Jones, Great Sutton-street, Clerkenwell, coal-merchant.

BANKRUPTS.

B. Mege, Copthall-buildings, Throgmorton-street, merchant——J. Peak, New Ormond-street, Holborn, bricklayer——T. Bannister, Norwood-green, Middlesex, brewer——J. G. Foster, Lower Phillimore-place, Kensington, hill-broker——W. I. Gregory, Manchester, upholsterer——J. Stone, Manchester, lace-dealer——N. Shiers, Aldermanbury, warehouseman——T. Wigglesworth, Colne, Lancashire, rope-manufacturer——M. Wetherspoon and J. R. Walford, Liverpool, merchants——T. Gilson, Nottingham, hosier——T. Manley, Dawlish, Devonshire, builder——W. Bradshaw, Manchester, tailor——T. Thomas, Swansea, grocer.

FRIDAY'S GAZETTE.

INSOLVENTS.

J. ICKLER, Upper Marylebone-street, tobacconist——J. PERRING, Turnmill-street, Clerkenwell, baker.

BANKRUPTCIES ENLARGED.

G. KEATING, Waterloo-road, Lambeth, linendraper——J. COHEN, Great Prescot-street, Goodman's-fields, upholsterer——J. ALLKINS, Mount-street, Grosvenor-square, tailor.

BANKRUPTS.

J. HUNT, Holywell, Flintshire, innkeeper——J. F. HOLWHEDE, Liverpool, merchant——J. DAVIES, Newport, Monmouthshire, currier——B. MOONEY, Hanover-street, Long-acre, victualler——W. MOGG, Wincanton, Somersetshire, dealer——S. WORTHINGTON and J. HODGKINSON, Manchester and Salford, calenderers——W. PICKTON, Liverpool, timber-merchant——F. DUTTON, Little Queen-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields, stationer——S. ASH, Upper Russell-street, Bermondsey, tanner——R. CORRY, Henstridge, Somersetshire, innkeeper——J. H. GIBBS, Chiswell-street, Finsbury-square, oilman——C. PETERS, East-church, Kent, farmer.

SILK AND BEAVER HATS.

AT a time like the present, it behoves the most opulent to act Economically in the purchase of a HAT, particularly when all the vehicles of Advertisements teem with pretended Cheap Goods! a name only, for one half of the Hats offered to public notice are in the end the dearest of all others. To purchase a good article, bearing a small profit, is the safe road to economy.

PERRING'S HATS are manufactured by workmen experienced in the trade, and are made of such qualities as cannot fail to meet the wishes of the Wearer.

The DOUBLE-EDGED SILK HAT surpasses any attempt at imitation, and is really the best Hat ever invented, price 17s. Good Wearing Silk Hats in a variety of Shapes, made in the usual way, 12s. to 15s.

BEAVER HATS can be made at almost any Price, but none are worthy the attention of the Wearer under 20s. 22s. and 24s.—such are of good texture, light, and water-proof, and will in the end prove in value equal to the purchase.

GENTLEMEN'S TRAVELLING CAPS of every description, in Furs, Cloth, Silk, &c. &c. at 12s. Waterproof.

YOUTHS' and BOYS' HATS in great variety. Light Summer Hats, &c.

4, 3, Strand, two doors west of the Adelphi Theatre, and at Hammersmith.

 Gentlemen residing in the Country may meet with an early attention to their orders, by a remittance, or order of payment in Town. For the size, put a piece of String round the outside where the band goes. Shipping Orders

MR. GUTHRIE will commence his LECTURES on the principles and practice of SURGERY, on TUESDAY, the 3d of October, at half-past six in the evening. Medical officers of the Navy, the Army, and the Ordnance will be admitted, on obtaining the recommendation of the heads of their respective departments, which must be presented to Mr. Guthrie, between the hours of half-past two and five, at his house, No. 2, Berkeley-street, Berkeley-square.

NEW MEDICAL SCHOOL, 58, Aldersgate-street, contiguous to St. Bartholomew's Hospital. The following COURSES of LECTURES will be delivered during the ensuing Winter, and will commence on Monday, the 2d of OCTOBER:—

ANATOMY and OPERATIONS of SURGERY.—Mr. Tyrrell.
DEMONSTRATIONS and DISSECTIONS.—Mr. Quain and Mr. Coulson.
SURGERY.—Mr. Lawrence and Mr. Wardrop.
HUMAN and COMPARATIVE PHYSIOLOGY.—Dr. Roget.
THEORY and PRACTICE of MEDICINE.—Dr. Clutterbuck and Dr. Tweedie.
MIDWIFERY and DISEASES of WOMEN and CHILDREN.—Dr. Davis
MATERIA MEDICA.—Dr. Tweedie.
CHEMISTRY.—Mr. J. T. Cooper.

For Further particulars, apply either at the premises, or to Mr. Tyrrell, 17, New Bridge-street, Blackfriars, or St. Thomas's Hospital; or to Mr. Lawrence, 18, Whitehall-place, or St. Bartholomew's Hospital.

THE LONDON and WESTMINSTER WINE and SPIRIT COMPANY, No. 16, STRAND, opposite St. Martin's Church, have constantly on Sale—

	Per Dozen.		Per Dozen.
Port, Vintage 1820	27s to 30s	Bucellas	42s to 48s
Ditto, Crusted	36s to 42s	Claret, St. Julien	42s to 48s
Ditto, 5 to 8 years in bottle	48s to 56s	Ditto, Lafitte and Margaux	72s to 96s
Sherry, Pale and Brown	27s to 36s	Sparkling Champagne	72s to 84s
Ditto, Amontillado	42s to 48s	Ditto, and Creaming, of tno first quality	90s to 96s
Cape, from	16s to 24s	St. Peray, dry and sparkling	63s to 72s
Madeira, West India	36s to 42s	Chablis	50s to 63s
Ditto, East India	48s to 60s	Hermitage, Red and White	72s to 84s
Teneriffe, Lisbon, Vidonia, and Mountain	30s to 36s	Moselle, Sauterne, &c.	50s to 60s

Old Tom, Jamaica Rum, Cognac Brandy, Fern-tosb, &c. per imperial measure at reduced prices.—Bottled Stout, Cider, Perry, Burton and Edinburgh Ales.

☞ All Goods must be paid for on or before delivery.

Letters post paid, to be addressed William Godfree and Co. No. 16, Strand.

BURGESS' ESSENCE of ANCHOVIES, Warehouse, 107, STRAND, corner of Savoy Steps, London.—JOHN BURGESS and SON, being apprised of the numerous endeavours made by many persons to impose a spurious article for their make, feel it incumbent upon them to request the attention of the public, in purchasing what they conceive to be the ORIGINAL, to observe the Name and Address correspond with the above. The general appearance of the spurious descriptions will deceive the unguarded, and for their detection J. B. and Son submit the following caution:—Some are in appearance at first sight "Burgess' Essence of Anchovies;" others, "Burgis's," and many more without address.—JOHN BURGESS and SON having been many years honoured with such distinguished approbation, feel every sentiment of respect towards the public, and earnestly solicit them to inspect the labels previous to purchasing what they conceive to be of their make, which they hope will prevent many disappointments.

Burgess' New Sauce for general purposes having given such great satisfaction, continues to be prepared by them, and is recommended as a most useful and convenient sauce; will keep good in all climates.

Warehouse, 107, Strand, corner of the Savoy Steps.—The Original Fish-sauce Warehouse.

MOGUL, OR REAL CHETNA SAUCE.

C. HODGSON, ORIGINAL INVENTOR AND SOLE PROPRIETOR, is induced to caution his Friends and the Public against several spurious Sauces offered for sale, under the title of "MOGUL, or REAL CHETNA."

C. H. will feel obliged if each purchaser of the above delicious Sauce will please to observe the Label: which should be signed, "C. HODGSON," and the Cork, sealed, and impressed, "HODGSON'S MOGUL SAUCE," without which none can be genuine.

C. H. also begs to acquaint those who have not yet made a trial of this much approved Sauce, that the flavour will be found quite different, and far superior to any yet offered, for all kinds of Curries, Steaks, Stews, Chops, Hashes, Game, Grills, Broiled and Wild Fowl, Cold Meat, and for enriching Gravies, &c., and feels assured, that when tasted, it will fully justify what he has above stated. To Merchants and East and West India Captains, it is strongly recommended, being warranted to retain its full flavour in any climate.

To be had at the manufactory, No. 68, Long Lane, Borough, London, at the Piazza Coffee-house, Covent-garden, the Queen's Head Tavern, Holborn, and at any of the principal Oilmen and Grocers in Town and Country.

DISTRESSED LETTER-PRESS PRINTERS of the METROPOLIS.—The Committee grntefully thank a liberal Public for the Subscriptions received since their last Advertisement; they regret the necessity of again most urgently soliciting the assistance of the Public, the number of distressed Applicants remaining undiminished, and there being no prospect at present of the least improvement in Trade.

Committee-Room, Three Herrings, Bell-yard, Temple-bar,
September 28, 1826.

Amount before Advertised	£1,080 16s. 9½d.
Two Week's Subscription from Compositors and Pressmen (in employ) in the Metropolis	£ 72 2s. 3d.
Amount of Donations since received	£104 19s. 0d.

☞ Subscriptions will be gratefully received by the Committee, at the Three Herrings, Bell-yard, Temple-bar, who attend every Monday and Tuesday Evenings. Also, by Messrs. Cowie and Strange, 60, Paternoster-row, and 24, Fetter-lane; Messrs. Shaw and Sons, Printers, 137, Fetter-lane; Mr. Hetherington, Popular Encyclopedia Office, 30, Kingsgate-street, Holborn; Mr. Monkhouse, Grove House Tavern, Camberwell; Messrs. Lowe and Harvey, Printers, Playhouse-yard, Blackfriars; Messrs. Bagster and Thoms, Printers, Bartholomew-close; Mr. Phillips, Bookseller, George-yard, Lombard-street; and by the Proprietors of all Country Newspapers.

HAZARD & Co. Contractors, most positively assure the Public, that this is the Last and Only opportunity of gaining a Fortune by the Lottery.

HAZARD & Co. having been eminently successful in selling Capitals of Thirty Thousand Pounds, feel a pleasing confidence in recommending this Last and Only Scheme to Public Notice, as it contains the unprecedented number of SIX PRIZES OF THIRTY THOUSAND POUNDS!

With every Ticket a Prize, forming the unequalled aggregate of Three Hundred and Eighty-nine Thousand Pounds!

All to be decided in One Day, WEDNESDAY, 18th Instant.

Being the Last of all Lotteries in this Kingdom.

Tickets and Shares are selling by HAZARD and Co. Contractors, Royal Exchange Gate; 26, Cornhill; and 324, Oxford-street; who sold in One Lottery, All the Prizes of £30,000! and during a short period, Nine Prizes of £30,000, £25,000, and £20,000; and in the Lottery drawn on the 1st of March last, Three Prizes of £20,000!

THE BRITISH SPECIFIC, for re-producing and promoting the GROWTH of HAIR.—The principle of its operation is to cool and contract the pores which are opened by a redundancy of heat, occasioning a relaxation of the roots, and render them incapable of retaining the hair; to counteract which nothing is better calculated than the British Specific, as, from its invigorating and oleaginous properties, it almost immediately arrests the falling off, and affords such effectual nourishment to the roots, that persons giving it a fair trial may assure themselves of its speedily restoring it, even where it has become completely bald, however long it may have been so, and, if grey, gradually to restore it to its natural colour. The superiority of this preparation (the invention of a medical man) derives additional recommendation from its being, unlike other compositions for the hair, so extremely clean and agreeable, that its application is a real pleasure, and is only requisite to be generally known to receive the preference of every article in use for similar purposes. To be had only of D. PEDEN, 209, Regent-street, and 15, Burlington Arcade, Piccadilly, in bottles, 6s. each, or cases of four bottles for 1l., forward to order on receiving the amount, post paid.

IMPOSTURE UNMASKED.—The progress of Merit, although frequently assailed, is not impeded by Envy and Detraction. The aggression of ambuscade terminates in defeat; and conscious rectitude ultimately triumphs in the attainment of the grand object—public approbation. The test of experience is the guarantee of favour, and has established WARREN'S BLACKING in general estimation; of which there exists not a stronger proof than the tacit acknowledgment of a host of servile imitators, who surreptitiously obtrude on the unwary a spurious preparation as the genuine article, to the great disappointment of the unguarded purchaser, and manifest injury of WARREN, whose character and interest by this iniquitous system are equally subject to detriment. It becomes therefore an indispensable duty to CAUTION THE PUBLIC against the manœuvres of Unprincipled Venders, who having no character to lose, and stimulated by avarice in their nefarious pursuits, aim at the acquisition of money through any medium than that of honour! The original and matchless BLACKING bears on each bottle a short direction, with the signature

ROBERT WARREN

All others are counterfeits; and in many instances the imposition labels are artfully interlined with a different address, in very small characters, between the more conspicuous ones of "No. 30," and "STRAND." It is earnestly recommended to Shopkeepers and others who are deceived by base fabrications of WARREN'S BLACKING, to return the detected trash to the source whence it came, and expose the machinations of rascality to merited obloquy.

WARREN'S BLACKING is surpassingly brilliant;—it excludes damp; gives pliancy to the leather; retains its pristine virtue in all climates; and, combining elegance with comfort, is an article equally of indispensable fashion and utility. Sold by every respectable Vender in Town and Country, in bottles, at 6d. 10d. 12d. and 18d. each.

TURKEY COFFEE of the FINEST QUALITY, at the following reduced prices:—Raw, 2s. 6d. per lb.—Roasted, 3s. per lb. The Public are respectfully informed, that Government having reduced the Duty on Turkey Coffee, they may now purchase that article at the above-mentioned reduced prices, warranted of the finest quality, at John Marshall and Company's Tea and Coffee-Warehouse, No. 12, Southampton-street, Strand.

"CHARLES WRIGHT—AT HOME."

Seek not to cross the distant main,
Among the wine-cup's sweets to gain
The cheapest and the best:
CHARLES WRIGHT, through all the vinous train,
For these—crown-wreath'd with bright champagne,
His pledge—at Home—will still maintain,
So—Put it to the Test.

Opera Colonnade. C. W.
Champagne, 63s. and 72s. per Dozen.
Depots, 13, St. James's-street, Brighton;
Parade, Margate; and
Quiet-street, Bath.

UPTON and CO.'S RECTIFIED SPERM OIL, 58. 6d. per Imperial Gallon, or 4s. 9d. old measure. To obtain a brilliant and innoxious light is a great desideratum. The beauty of gas is unquestionable, but its deleterious properties render it extremely injurious for in-door use. Vide "Sir H. Davy's late Experiments on Gas." Sperm Oil, if purified to a high degree, gives a flame as brilliant as gas, without its pernicious effects. To this point of excellence Upton and Co. by a process exclusively their own, have succeeded in bringing it. They warrant their rectified Sperm Oil to burn with the brilliancy of the finest gas, without smell or smoke, with the advantage that, from its extreme purity, there is no waste. On its price they will only remark, that the public are the best judges of its moderation; but as lamp oils have an ascertainable value, viz. the quantity and quality of light to be obtained from them, they submit that the term cheap is misapplied when given to second-rate oils, which, when put to the above test, are found dearer than the more luminous kinds that are charged at a higher price.

†† All Casks and Bottles are sealed "Upton & Co." and such only are genuine.

The following established articles may also be had, viz.—Refined Mineral Paint, not requiring to be heated for use, at 15s. per cask. Lithic Paint, 30s. per cwt.—The Anti-Corrosive Paints, ground in oil, of Invisible Green, and other colours, from 30s. to 46s. per cwt. Genuine White Lead, 40s. Second, do. 36s. per cwt. Olive Greens, 6d. to 9d. Patent Grass, ditto, 1s. to 2s. 6d. per lb. Varnishes, Linseed Oil, Turpentine, &c. &c.

Chemical Oil and Colour Warehouse, 64, Queen-street, Cheapside. Discount allowed, or credit given on satisfactory references.

IMPORTANT EXPOSURE.—The frequent attempts of "MISTER [Sidney Joh] Van Butchell," a Pawnbroker's Apprentice, in 1808, a Banker's Clerk, in August 1819, to pass (after 1824) for an Assistant of the late Martin Van Butchell, who died in 1814, compels the eldest son, sole executor and successor, to state he has no connection with the said "Mr. S. J. Van Butchell."

EDWIN MARTIN VAN BUTCHELL, aged forty-five, twenty years Surgeon Accoucheur and Surgeon, for the Cure of Fistulæ, Piles, Strictures, &c., without Cutting, Caustic, or Confinement, established eighteen years, at 24, Broad-street, very near Golden-square, London.—At home till Twelve daily, Sundays excepted.

☞ From Oxford-street, Poland-street, runs into Broad-street—from Piccadilly, Great Windmill-street, leads to Broad-street, Golden-square.

"It is fortunate for the rising generation, the late Martin Van Butchell (who died in 1814) not more celebrated for his eccentricities than his utility, has not departed from the world without leaving an able successor to his practice. Edwin Martin Van Butchell, (Surgeon, for the Cure of Fistulæ, Piles, Strictures, &c., without Cutting, Caustic, or Confinement, eighteen years established, at 24, Broad-street, Golden-square, London,) is now almost as well known as his late Father. Such, indeed, is the estimation of his abilities, that a large Society of Journeymen Tailors have entered [1821] into a Subscription among themselves, in order that their afflicted brethren may have the benefit of his practical knowledge and abilities."

(They have paid Two Hundred and Forty-five Sovereigns in less than Five Years, for Twenty-four Members Cured to June, 1826.)—Real Life in London, vol. 2, page 667.

NEW EDITION, THE TENTH, ENLARGED,

With Observations on the Danger of trusting to Nostrums, as an Internal Remedy for the Cure of Strictures. Illustrated by Cases. Price 3s.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS on STRICTURES of the URETHRA and RECTUM, recommending an improved system for their Treatment and Cure; illustrating its efficacy by numerous remarkable and highly important cases, in some of which, Strictures of from ten to twenty years duration have been totally removed in a few weeks, and its superiority thereby fully established over every other method hitherto practised. By C. B. COURTENAY, M.D. To which are added, Observations and Practical Comments on Gleet, Seminal Weakness, and the miseries occasioned by Self Abuse, for the cure of which a mode of treatment, the result of long and successful practice, and at once safe, speedy, and effectual, is adopted by the Author.

Printed for the Author, Robert-street, Adelphi; and published and sold by Jones and Sherwood, Paternoster-row; Onwhyn, 4, Catherine-street, Strand; Chapell, Royal Exchange; Marsh, 145, Oxford-street; Walker, 90, High Holborn; Chappell, 94, Pall Mall; Sutherland, 9, Carlton-street, Edinburgh; and many be had of all Booksellers.

"We earnestly recommend the cases related by Dr. Courtenay to the perusal of such of our readers as are afflicted with the complaints which the Author has made the subject of these Observations. Several instances are adduced of the recovery of perfect health from states which were considered hopeless by Practitioners of eminent talents, and very extensive experience. We entertain the highest opinion of Dr. Courtenay's professional skill, and congratulate him on his successful and judicious application to these severe and often fatal diseases."—European Magazine.

TO FAMILIES TRAVELLING, PROMENADING, and ENJOYING AQUATIC EXCURSIONS, &c. &c. are respectfully recommended the following Genuine Articles, which at this season of the Year are indispensable for the preservation of personal attraction;—

ROWLAND'S KALYDOR FOR THE COMPLEXION.

An inestimable, mild, and innocent production, powerfully efficacious in thoroughly exterminating Eruptions, Tan, Pimples, Freckles, Redness, and all Cutaneous Imperfections; producing a delicate White Skin, and a Juvenile Bloom to the Complexion; preserving it from the Heat of Summer.—In Travelling, Promenading, or enjoying Aquatic Excursions, it immediately allays the smarting irritability of the Skin, diffusing a Pleasing Coolness truly comfortable and refreshing; affords soothing relief to Ladies nursing their offspring; warranted perfectly innoxious for the most delicate Lady or Infant.

To Gentlemen after Shaving, it allays the irritating and smarting pain, and renders the Skin smooth and pleasant. Price 4s. 6d. and 8s. 6d. per bottle, duty included.

To Preserve the Human Hair, during Travelling, Bathing, and Violent Exercise, and to retain it in healthy vigour to the latest period of Life, is particularly recommended

ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL,

The first production of the age, and the Original and Genuine.

A Vegetable Production, possessing salubrious and wonderful nutritive properties, which prevents the Hair falling off, occasioned by excessive perspiration; is pre eminently successful in nourishing the Hair; preventing its falling off or turning grey, &c. and has the unequalled property of giving a most fascinating and delectable appearance to the Hair.—Price 3s. 6d.—7s.—10s. 6d. and 21s. per bottle. The distinguished sanction it has received from Royal and Illustrious Personages, in addition to the flattering testimonials transmitted of its efficacy, places this declaration above suspicion.

CAUTION.—In consequence of the high popularity of the above articles, Flagrant Impostors have made false statements, and counterfeited each; Copying Bills, Labels, and Bottles, which renders it indispensably necessary on purchasing, to ask for "ROWLAND'S," strictly observing that each Bottle of Rowland's Genuine Articles are enclosed in a Wrapper, Signed on the Label, in Red,

A. ROWLAND AND SON, 20, HATTON GARDEN.

Sold by appointment, by Mr. Hendrie, Perfumer, Titchborne-street; Mr. Smith, Messrs. Gattie and Peirce, 57, Mr. Deleroix, 158, D. Rigge, 35, New Bond-street; Bayley and Blew, Cockspur-street; Berry and Lloyd, Greek-street; Mr. Sanger, 150, Oxford-street; Mr. Low, 330, Pront, 226, Strand; Butler, Chemist, 4, Cheapside; Barclay and Sons, 95, Fleet Market; Mr. Rigge, 65, Cheapside; Mr. Sutton, Bow Church-yard; Mr. Edwards, 66, and Messrs. Newberry, St. Paul's Church-yard; Mr. Burgess, Holborn-hill; Mr. Kennaby, Bartholomew-close; Messrs. Evans, Long-lane; Messrs. Dunn and Co. Hatton-Garden; and all respectable Medicine Venders, &c.

BIRTHS.—On the 18th ult. the Viscountess Milton, of a son.—On the 24th ult. the Countess of Longford, of a daughter.—On the 23d ult. the Lady of Sir David Erskine, of a daughter.—On the 25th ult. tha Hon. Mrs. William Rodney, of a daughter.—The Lady Sarah Murray, of a son.

MARRIED.—On Friday, Mr. Wm. Rooke, Professor of Music, to Eleanor, youngest daughter of the late Wm. Blagg, Esq. of Pimlico.—On the 26th ult. G. W. Tapps, Esq. M. P. to Clara, eldest daughter of Augustus Elliott Fuller, Esq. of Ashdown House, Sussex.—On the 27th ult. Sir James Fitzgerald, Bart. to Augusta Henrietta, second daughter of the late Vice-Admiral Sir T. F. Freemantle.—On the 27th ult. Count Demetrius de Palatiano, to Catherine Eliz. eldest daughter of James Marrie, Esq. of Great Cumberland-place.—At Copenhagen, Count Gustave Blucher, to Emily, eldest daughter of Chamberlain Ferrall.

DIED.—On the 23d ult. Miss Dalrymple, only daughter of Gen. Dalrymple.—On the 26th ult. Elizabeth Augusta, second daughter of Captain H. T. Davies, R. N.—On the 27th ult. Matilda Ottley, wife of Captain Richard Hoare, R. N.—On the 27th ult. Jane, wife of the Lord Bishop of Bath and Wells.—On the 29th of April last, at Sattara, in the East Indies, Lieut. E. Burgess, Adjutant of the 24th Bombay Infantry.

London: Printed and Published by R. D. RICHARDS, at 343, Strand, corner of Catherine-street.

THE AGE.

" THE VERY AGE AND BODY OF THE TIME."

VOL. II. No. 74. SUNDAY, OCTOBER 8, 1826. Price 7d.

THEATRE ROYAL, DRURY-LANE.—On Monday Next, Pizarro, Rolla, Mr. Wallack; Elvira, Mrs. M'Gibbon, her 1st appearance on this stage these five years Cora, Mrs. W. West. After which a new Musical Romance, called The White Lady; or the Spirit of Avenel.—Tuesday, Romeo and Juliet; Romeo, Mr. Southwell, Mercutio, Mr. Hooper; Juliet, Mrs. W. West—Thursday, The Belle's Stratagem; with Der Freischutz—Saturday, The Will; or the Man of Straw.

THEATRE ROYAL, HAYMARKET.—To MORROW Evening, Peeping Tom, with The Lord of the Manor, and A Rowland for an Oliver.—Tuesday, The Rivals, with A Day after the Wedding, and The Epaulet.—Wednesday, The Duenna, with Of Age To-morrow, and The Children in the Wood.—Thursday, The Heir at Law, with My Grandmother, and The Epaulet.—Friday, The Purse, with The Jealouse Wife, and Midas.—Saturday, Clandestine Marriage, and the Two Pages of Frederick the Great.

ADELPHI THEATRE, Strand.—Messrs. Terry and Yates respectfully inform the Public, that this Theatre is open for the Winter Season.—Monday, October 9, 1826, and during the Week, will be presented, The Pilot.—The Pilot, Mr. Terry. Lieutenant Barnstable, Mr. Yates. Long Tom Coffin, Mr. T. P. Cooke. Captain Burroughcliff, (a genuine Yankee riglar) Mr. J. Reeve. Miss Katherine Plowden, Mrs. Hughes.—After the Burletta, a New Ballet Divertisement, called, La Fete des Natinns!—To conclude with (for the second time) a New Comic Burletta, with entirely New Scenery, called Old Love and Young Love.—Baron Rosenberg, Mr. Terry. Frederick, Mr. Yates. Des Champs, Mr. Wrench. Amelia, Miss Boden. Julietta, Mrs. Hughes.—A Splendid Comic Burletta, in Three Acts, is in forward Preparation, with various other Novelties.—Boxes, 4s. Pit, 2s. Gallery, 1s. Doors open at six, commence at a quarter before seven. Half-price at half-past eight. Box-office open from ten till four, where places may be taken, and Private Boxes had nightly, of Mr. Campbell.

DIORAMA, REGENT'S PARK.—The two Views now exhibiting, are The Interior of Rosslyn Chapel, painted by Mons. Daguere, and a View of the City of Rouen, taken from Mount St. Catherine's, painted by Mons. Bouton, with various effects of light and shade, producing the most extraordinary illusion to the spectators.

N. B. Fine weather is not essential for seeing the South west Views, as the appearance of sunshine is produced with equal effect on the most cloudy day. The Dimension of each picture is 70 feet by 50—Open daily from 10 till 4 o'clock.

FOR CALCUTTA, the fine, new, first class Ship, St. LEONARD, JOHN RUTHERFORD, Commander. Burthen 352 Tons. Lying in the West India Dock. Has good accommodations for Passengers. For Freight or Passage apply to Messrs. Hunter and Co. 59, Old Broad-street; or to Buckles, Bagster, and Buchanan, 33, Mark-lane.

FOR VAN DIEMEN'S LAND and NEW SOUTH WALES, the remarkably fast-sailing coppered Ship TIGER, THOMAS RICHARNS, Commander. Burthen 325 Tons. Lying in the London Dock. Has excellent accommodations for Passengers, both in the Cabin and Steerage, and is peculiarly adapted for the conveyance of Horses and Cattle. For Freight or Passage apply to Buckles, Bagster, and Buchanan, 33, Mark Lane.

THEATRES ROYAL.—DRURY LANE—A splendid PRIVATE STAGE-BOX, for Eight Persons, to be Let every Evening. Also several Admissions for this Theatre to be sold for 5l. 5s.; also for Covent Garden, 6l. 6s.—Adelphi Theatre—To be let every evening, a Private Stage Box. Boxes in the best situations. Tickets. Admissions, &c. for all Theatres, bought and sold on Commission. CHARLES WRIGHT, next the King's Theatre, Opera Colonade, who has on sale the finest Champaigne, 5s. 6d. per bottle.

MR. WILLIAM KINNAIRD JENKINS, who had the honour to instruct her late Royal Highness Princess Charlotte of Wales in Dancing, by appointment of his present Majesty, respectfully acquaints the Nobility and Gentry, that he has removed from Devonshire-street, to No. 4, Harley Place, Devonshire Place.

FINISH OF LOTTERIES.

SWIFT & Co. respectfully inform the Public, that the last and only remaining Day of Drawing the State Lottery is WEDNESDAY, the 18th of This MONTH, when SIX Prizes of £30,000, and all the other Capitals in the Scheme, will be determined. Every Ticket will receive £5, independent of any Sum to which it may be entitled. In the last Lottery containing £30,000 Prizes, SWIFT & Co. sold TWO out of Four of them, at their offices, 11, Poultry; 1, Strand, and 31, Aldgate High-street.

I'VE BEEN DRINKING.

A PARODY ON "I've been Roaming."

I've been drinking, I've been drinking
CHARLEY WRIGHT's Champagne so sweet;
And I'm thinking, and I'm thinking,
With its like I ne'er shall meet.

I've been drinking, I've been drinking
Such Champagne! so brisk and rare!
And I'am hinting, and I'am hinting
'Tis the wine to banish care.

I've been drinking, I've been drinking,
'Till I fell quite fast asleep,
And I'm winking, and I'm winking,
So to bed I now will creep.

I've been drinking, I've been drinking
That prime stuff! CHARLES WRIGHT's Champagne!
And I'm thinking, and I'm thinking,
I'll "repeat the dose again!"

Opera Colonnade, 63s. and 72s. per dozen.

THE IMPROVED SILK HAT ON BEAVER.—For Cash only.

They are made to suit the natural form of the Head. The Colour is permanent. For durability, shape, and quality, they are unrivalled..... } 15s.

HUGH FRANKS & Co.
Patentees of Improved Waterproof Hats,
Corner of Queen Street 70, CHEAPSIDE.

A PATENT BEAVER HAT.—C. COVINTON, in offering to the Public a Beaver Hat of a quality, shape, and appearance decidedly superior to any yet manufactured, begs leave briefly to state wherein its superiority consists. The best Beaver Hats of the usual manufacture, will, on account of the thinness and length of the fur or nap, assume a very rough and unsightly appearance on being exposed to the wind. Now this Hat, even if exposed to the roughest weather, will alway present an uniform and beautiful smoothness, in consequence of a peculiar method resorted to in disposing the nap or fur, which is remarkably short and thick. It is also perfectly waterproof, light, elastic, and of astonishing durability. C. C. is confident that one trial only will ensure the esteem this unrivalled Hat really merits.
124, Cheapside, two doors from Wood-street.

SILK AND BEAVER HATS.

AT a time like the present, it behoves the most opulent to act Economically in the purchase of a HAT, particularly when all the vehicles of Advertisements teem with pretended Cheap Goods! a name only, for one half of the Hats offered to public notice are in the end the dearest of all others. To purchase a good article, bearing a small profit, is the safe road to economy.

PERRING'S HATS are manufactured by workmen experienced in the trade, and are made of such qualities as cannot fail to meet the wishes of the Wearer.

The DOUBLE-EDGED SILK HAT surpasses any attempt at imitation, and is really the best Hat ever invented, price 17s. Good Wearing Silk Hats in a variety of Shapes, made in the usual way, 12s. to 15s.

BEAVER HATS can be made at almost any Price, but none are worthy the attention of the Wearer under 20s. 22s. and 24s.—such are of good texture, light, and water-proof, and will in the end prove in value equal to the purchase.

GENTLEMEN's TRAVELLING CAPS of every description, in Furs, Cloth, Oil, Silk, &c. &c. at 12s. Waterproof.

YOUTHS' and BOYS' HATS in great variety. Light Summer Hats, &c.
413, Strand, two doors west of the Adelphi Theatre, and at Hammersmith.

 Gentlemen residing in the Country may meet with an early attention to their orders, by a remittance, or order of payment in Town. For the size, put a piece of String round the outside where the band goes. Shipping Orders expeditiously executed.

Just published, by CLEMENTI and Co., 26, Cheapside,

NO. 3, of BLEWITT'S ORGAN SERVICE of the United Church of England and Ireland, price 3s.—(To be continued.)

"Mr. BLEWITT is entitled to the thanks of all young Church Organists, for the very clear and perspicuous manner in which he has led them through the whole of the Service. There is also displayed considerable taste in his delicate touches, in the form of Voluntary, upon the Swell—in his Interludes, &c."—Harmonicon for October 1826.

KIRKMAN (late Tuner at Broadwood's) begs leave to record the grateful sense he entertains of the support and approbation with which he has been hitherto favored, and respectfully to announce his charges for TUNING as undermentioned:—Grand Pianoforte 5s.; Cabinet 4s.; Square 3s. 6d.: by the year (monthly), 6½ Octave Grand Pianoforte, 2l. 10s.; Cabinet, 2l. 2s.; and Square, 1l. 11s. 6d. Instruments out of town attended at stated periods, or otherwise, on terms equally reasonable. 15, Mortimer-street, Cavendish-square.

NEW VOCAL MUSIC, published by WILLIAM HORN, 8, Frederick Place, Borough, and sold by SCHIOUSE and Co. 263, Regent-street:—

"When should Ladies Listen," sung by Madame Vestris	2 0
"Rose Buds,"	2 0
"Marinette,"	2 0
"Tho' the heart of a Maiden,"	1 6
"How roses came red," Duet	2 0
"Rest Lady Rest," Duet, the words by T. Moor, Esq.	2 6
All the above popular Songs, composed by Chas. E. Horn.
"England Europe's Glory," sung by Mr. Braham, composed by H. I. Jackson	1 6

NEW MUSIC, published by MORI and LAVENU, 28, New Bond-street, removed from Edward's-street, Manchester-square. The Overture and Airs in the Opera of the Interrupted Sacrifice, arranged as Duetts, for two performers on the Piano Forte, in three books, 4s. each.

The Overture, single, for Piano Forte, 2s. 6d.

New Songs.	Singers and Composers.
Bonny brae Scotland, 2nd edition	Miss Paton, N. Gow
Braes of Balendyne	Miss Paton, Pio Cianchettini
O, where's the harm of a little Kiss	Madame Vestris, J. Watson
Ah, Maiden Gardezvous, 3rd edition	Madame Vestris, Ditto
Blue Bonnets are over the Border	Mr. Braham, Cianchettini
Young Mary	Mr. Phillips, Dr. Arne

Two Grand Overtures, The Ruler of the Spirits, and The Jubilee, arranged as Quintetts, by Masi, price 12s.

NEW MUSIC.—Published by GOULDING and D'ALMAINE, 20, Soho-square.

PIANOFORTE.

Bishop's Air "Are you angry, Mother?" varied by G. Klallmark, price	3 0
——— "Sun is o'er the Mountain," ditto	2 6
——— "My Araby, my noble Steed," T. A. Rawlings	2 6
——— "Are you angry, Mother?" ditto	2 6
Flowers of Sacred Harmony, No. I. by T. Valentine	2 6
Winter's, "Opferfest" (The Oracle) Book I. as duets, by I. F. Burrowes	4 0
Bishop's "Aladdin," for Pianoforte only, and as duets by do. in books	4 0
Meyer's "Medea in Coriuto," for Pianoforte, by C. Duncon, in books	4 0

VOCAL.

"Buy a Broom!" sung by Miss Love, at Vauxhall, composed by H. R. Bishop	2 0
"The King! God bless Him!" Sung and composed by Mr. Braham, price	2 0
"A. B. C." comic duet, sung by Miss Love and Signor de Begnis, at Vauxhall, composed by I. Parry	2 0
"The Youth of the Valley," sung by Mr. Sinclair, at Vauxhall, by ditto	2 0
"Blame me not my gentle Laddie, sung by Miss Travis, ditto ditto	2 0
"Fair one take this rose," composed by Mrs. Miles	2 0
"The Bonny Lassie," ditto	2 0

A Selection of Songs by Bishop, Horn, Stevenson, &c. &c. arranged with an Accompaniment for the Spanish Guitar, by C. M. Sola.

☞ The admired Opera of "Medea in Corinto" is arranged for the Harp and Pianoforte, and for the Harp by N. C. Bochsa.

NEW SONGS.—Hurrah! for the bonnets of Blue, sung by Madame Vestris, composed by Alex. Lee 2 0
O'er the valley, O'er the Mountain, do. C. E. Horn.. ..... 2 0
Lllies of the Valley, do. Sir J. Steveoson 2 0

NEW PIANO FORTE MUSIC.

Hertz's Brilliant Variations on Rossini's popular Air, "Aurora che Soigeral"	5 0
Hunten's Brilliant Rondo on Meyerbeer's celebrated Chorus, "Nel Silenzio"	3 6
Ries's Grand Variations on the National Air of "Rule Britannia"	6 0
Weisbecker's celebrated "Napoleon's Grand March"	2 0

 This March was performed at the Coronation of Napoleon.

Hull's Slow and Quick Marches, composed for the Fourth Dragoons Regiment	2 0
Ries's Grand Military Divertimento on the Duke of York's March	5 0
Cianchettini's Select Airs from the Opera of Medea. Book 1 and 2, each	4 0
Holst's arrangement of "Cherry Ripe," as a duett for Two Performers	3 6
Valentine's arrangement of "Cherry Ripe," for One Performer	2 0

New Editions of the following popular Works:—

Wilson's St. James's Quadrilles	3 6
Weippert's Cherry Ripe, do.	4 0
Musard's Kensington, do.	4 0
Duval's Lancers, do.	3 0
Willis's "Il Crociato," "Preciosa," and "Der Freischutz," do. each	2 0

Published by J. WILLIS & CO. Royal Musical Repository, 55, St. James's-street, (opposite Jermyn-street) London, and 7, Westmorland-street, Dublin, where may be found every variety of Grand, Cabinet, Cottage, Square, and Circular Pianofortes, Harps, &c. by the most eminent makers, at the lowest manufacturers prices.

NEW MUSIC.—Just published at the ROYAL HARMONIC INSTITUTION, Argyll Rooms, 246, Regent-street, the Songs, Duets, &c. in The ORACLE, composed by WINTER, and newly arranged by W. HAWES.

	s.	d.
Overture	2	6
The rosy dawn hath driven, Chorus.	5	0
When battles conch is sounding, sung by Mr. Atkins	2	0
The trumpet first is sounded, sung by Mr. Thorn	2	0
We Maidens mark me, sung by Miss Goward,	1	6
All hail to the God of our Fathers, Chorus	2	0
Now by love and peace invited. Sestett and Chorus	3	6
Oh when thine eye is throwing, Duet, Miss Paton and Sapio	2	6
All powerful Sun, sung by Mr. Phillips	2	0
There was a time ere sorrow, sung by Miss Paton	1	6
Between my hopes and fears suspended, Duet, by Miss Paton and Phillips	2	6
When will peace relieve my breast? sung by Miss Hamilton	1	6
How the plaguing varlet teases, Duet, by Miss Goward and Thorn	2	6
We hail thee Lord of Light, Finale, 1st Act	10	0
Tho' we all can feel thy sorrow, Quartett and Chorus	3	6
In what sad hour, Trio	3	0
Oh heavens! the thought is frightful, Duet.	2	6
Hast never mark'd the flower, Song, Miss Boden	1	6
The Maid who'd wish to slumber, Quartett	2	6
The Gloomy terrors of the grave, Scena, Mr. Sapio	2	6
Farewell, yet not for ever, Quartett	4	0
The evening is descending, Finale	10	0

A New TREATISE on THOROUGH BASS, or the art of playing from a figured Bass, with examples, &c. &c. by Dr. Crotch.

Burrows's Selection of Airs from Weber's Opera of Oberon, arranged for the Piano Forte, with Flute ad lib, in four books, each 4s.

I'VE BEEN ROAMING—Arranged by T. A. Rawlings, as a Rondo for the Pianoforte.

BOCHSA's Select Airs from the Oracle, for the Harp, and Pianoforte, with Flute and Violin accompaniments, 10s. 6d.; also the Overture to the above, arranged as above, price 5s.

DEATH FETCH.—The music in this admired and popular Opera, composed by C. E. Horn.

I'VE BEEN ROAMING.—Cavatina, sung by Madame Vestris, by C. E. Horo, price 2s.

OBERON.—The music in this popular Romantic and Fairy Opera, composed by the late Carl Maria Von Weber.

 The Proprietors of the ROYAL HARMONIC INSTITUTION beg most respectfully to acquaint the Public, that the only correct copies of the Opera now performing at the English Opera House, called "THE ORACLE," are published by them, and that all other copies are spurious and an Invasion of their rights.

NEW VOCAL MUSIC.—"Love's Labour Lost," the admired Ballad singing by Madame Vestris with the most enthusiastic applause at the Theatre Royal, Haymarket, and nightly encored. Composed by Alexander Lee, price 2s. Published by Mayhew and Co., 17, Old Bond-street, where may be had, just published, the following:—

NEW SONGS.	SINGERS.	COMPOSERS.
Light Guitar, (4th edition)	Mad. Vestris	John Barnett
Fancy dipp'd her Pen in Dew	Miss Stephens	John Whittaker
A Voice whispered softly dear Mary	Miss Love	George Perry
"Yes, I will leave the festive Scene," in answer to the "Light Guitar"	Miss Paton	John Barnett
"Not a Drum was heard," the celebrated Ode on the Death of Sir John Moore	Mr. Sapio	Ditto
Love at Home, all alone	Miss Foote	J. Hart
Love's deligbtful Hour	Mr. Pearman	John Emdin
The Drummer Boy	Mad. Vestris	L. Devereux
The Queen of Bonnie Lasses	Mr. Braham	J. Hart
The Rose of the Desert	Mad. Vestris	John Barnett
The Soldier's Dream. (Rec. and Aria)	Mr. Vaughan	Ditto
The Joys of Liberty and Wine	Mr. Bedford	Ditto
Paul Pry. "Hope I don't Intrude," comic with the original Portrait of Mr. Liston	Mr. Listnn	Pigwiggin
A wand'ring Minstrel weary came	Mrs. Humby	I. A. Wade
The "General Election," comic, written by Charles Dibdin the younger, with an Illustration by Cruikshank	Mr. Mathews	John Barnett
Maiden heedful be. The Token Flowers	Mad. Vestris	Ditto
The Moorish Maiden	Mrs. Ashe	John Emdin
You ask a Song, you bid me sing	Mr. Broadhurst	G. Kiallmark
Genius of Freedom, (Grand Scena)	Miss Paton	G. Perry
I left the Bowl in Search of Love	Mr. Phillips	Mr. Phillips
England the bome of the world	Mr. Braham	John Barnett

Just Published, by G. and J. CARY, No. 86, St. James's-street.

A MOVEABLE PLANISPHERE, exhibiting the face of the Heavens for any given hour of the day throughout the year, as also the time of the rising and setting of the Stars, designed to assist the Young Student in acquiring a knowledge of the relative situations and names of the Constellations, by FRANCIS WOLLASTON, F. R. S. Price 12s.

Just Published, in 3 vols. post 8vo. price 30s.

ALLA GIORNATA; or, To THE DAY. A Novel.

Printed for SAUNDERS and OTLEY, Public Library, Conduit-street.

BRITISH AND FOREIGN PUBLIC LIBRARY, Conduit-street, Hanover-square. From this extensive and valuable Library, Subscribers in every part of the Kingdom or Continent, are supplied with the best books in the English, French, Italian, and German Languages, together with every new and interesting Work, and in any quantity. The superior arrangements of this Library having caused its plans to be imitated, and its advertisements copied, to prevent mistakes, it has become necessary to mention this fact. Catalogues and Cards of Terms to be had on application.

The following New Works will be Published in October, by Mr. COLBURN, 8, New Burlington-street,

THE TOR HILL. By the Author of "Brambletye House." 3 vols. post 8vo.

"Oh! what was love made for, if 'tis not the same
Thro' joy and thro' torments, thro' glory and shame?
I know not, I ask not, if guilt's in that heart;
I but know that I love thee, whatever thou art!" THOS. MOORE.

II. RECOLLECTIONS of the LIFE of JOHN O'KEEFFE (the celebrated Comic Dramatist.) Written by Himself. And comprising numerous very curious and original Anecdotes of distinguished persons of his time, in England and Ireland, from the year 1755 to the present time. In two vols. 8vo. with a Portrait.

III. A Second Series of TALES of the O'HARA FAMILY, 3 vols. post 8vo.

IV. PERSONAL NARRATIVE of a JOURNEY from INDIA to ENGLAND, by Bussorah, Bagdad, the Ruins of Babylon, Curdistan, the Court of Persia, the Banks of the Caspian Sea, Astrakhan, Nishney Novogorod, Moscow, and St. Petersburgh, in the year 1824. By Captain the Hon. GEORGE KEPPEL.

V. MEMOIRS of the LIFE of MRS. SIDDONS. By JAMES BOADEN, Esq. Interspersed with Anecdotes of Authors and Actors, and intended as a Companinn to the Author's Life of her Brother, Mr. Kemble. Printed uniformly, in two vols. 8vo. with a fine Portrait, engraved by Turner, from a Picture by Sir Thomas Lawrence. Price 28s.

VI. TALES of a VOYAGER, 3 vols. post octavo.

VII. MEMOIRS of the LIFE of Dr. PARR. By the Rev WM. FIELD, 8vo. portrait.

VIII. TRUCKLEBOROUGH HALL. A Novel. In 3 vols.

DIEGO—Mungo, can you be honest?
MUNGO—Vat you give me, Massa?

IX. The YOUNG RIFLEMAN'S COMRADE, or Narrative of his Military Adventures, Imprisonment, and Shipwreck. Edited by Goethe; and printed uniformly with "The Adventures of a Young Rifleman;" in 1 vol. post 8vo. 9s. 6d.

X. NAPOLEON IN THE OTHER WORLD. Editions in French and English, 1 vol. 8vo.

XI. A Second Edition of the Adventures of a YOUNG RIFLEMAN, 1 vol. 9s. 6d.

THE WASP.—No. II. (published YESTERDAY), contains—Frightful Dream of Widow Coutts—Progress of a Citizen—Impromptu on Peter Moore—Quacks of the Day (No. 2.)—William Jerdan, the notorious Cockney Critic—Aphorisms of Madame Vestris, Lord Eldon, Kemble, Forbes, and C. Mathews—A Poet's Voyage in search of a Dinner—Poetical Address of Elliston to Arnold—A Peep into Rogers' Picture Gallery—Sir W. Curtis's Voyage from Blackfriars to Westminster—Wilkes' Treatise on Swindling—Copious Extracts from Barry Cornwall's new Tragedy—Young Canning's latest Pun—Peake's Impromptu on Miss Paton—The newest Jokes against P. P. P. Croly—Joseph Hume and King Solomon—Brabam's extraordinary Pun—Blackwood and the Wasp—Data—Contemporary Criticism, &c. &c. Price Four-pence.

London: Printed and Published by W. JEFFREYS, No. 11, York-street, Covent-garden.

 No. I. is still on sale. The WASP may be had of all Newsvenders and Booksellers.

TURKEY COFFEE of the FINEST QUALITY, at the following reduced prices:—Raw, 2s. 6d. per lb.—Roasted, 3s. per lb. The Public are respectfully informed, that Government having reduced the Duty on Turkey Coffee, they may now purchase that article at the above-mentioned reduced prices, warranted of the finest quality, at JOHN MARSHALL and Company's Tea and Coffee-Warehouse, No. 12, Southampton-street, Strand.

IMPORTANT DISCOVERY for PRESERVING the TEETH, and CURING TOOTHACH.—Mr. CLARK, Inventor of the Cupping Apparatus for which a Medal was awarded by the Society of Arts, respectfully acquaints the Nobility and Gentry, that he has discovered, and for some time successfully practised, a new and safe method of Curing Tootbach, and restoring decayed teeth to their former usefulness, without extraction, or even the slightest pain. Mr. C. having long made the cure and preservation of the teeth, the subject of laborious and at last successful research, solicits inquiry into the principles on which he acts; the leading features of which are an imperceptible process of destroying the exposed portion of a nerve, and a cement for filling decayed teeth, which hardens as soon as applied.

Reference can be given to eminent Medical Gentlemen, and others, who have experienced, or witnessed, the benefits of the new system.

Natural and Artificial Teeth from one to a set supplied, and all necessary operations connected with the teeth performed, in the most approved manner.
5, King-street, Holborn.

NEXT WEDNESDAY WEEK.

BISH, in soliciting for the last time the favours of his best Friends, the Public, assures them that on Wednesday, 18th Instant, a Ticket must gain £30,000

Wednesday, 18th Instant, a Half must gain £15,000
Wednesday, 18th Instant, a Quarter must gain £7,500
Wednesday, 18th Instant, an Eighth must gain £3750
Wednesday, 18th Instant, a Sixteenth must gain £1,875
Wednesday, 18th Instant, All Six of £30,000 will be drawn,

Every Number decided, and every Ticket a Prize.

Wednesday, 18th Instant, All Lotteries end for Ever.

Tickets and Shares are selling by BISH, Stock-Broker, 4, Cornhill, and 9, Charing Cross; who shared and sold within the last Twelve Months, Five of £30,000—Four of £21,000—Nine of £20,000—and in the very last Drawing, 3d of May, 1,833, (Class B) £21,000, and 3,925, (Class A) £21,000!

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

The contents of the Paris and other Foreign Journals during the week are more than usually interesting. The Emperor of Austria is very ill, and Prince Metternich has arrived at Vienna to be present at a meeting of the whole of the Members of the Imperial Family, to decide upon the capacity of the Crown Prince to exercise Imperial power on the demise of the reigning Emperor. By one class of men the rumour was propaguted that the disqualification of his Imperial Highness proceeded from a difference of opinion with Prince Metternich and the Austrian Grandees on Holy Alliance politics; by unother, that the understanding of the Heir Apparent was considered below the usunl stan lard of legitimate Emperors. The suspicion implied in the latter report was no doubt the cause of the Imperial assemblage which has caused so much speculation; but we may now add, that by the general concurrence of the family, it has been decided that nothing should be done to change the order of succession.

Sunday week Paris was visited by u tremendous storm of thunder and lightning, attended with torrents of rain. The lightning fell at Versailles, and totally destroyed the farm called the Ferme du Park de Gally, situate between St. Aix and Versailles, belonging to the King.

Accounts from Spain speak of continued disturbanees in the provinces. The Royalist Volunteers of Mercia and Roa having revolted, their example has been followed by the same class of fanatics in Tarasona, in Arragon. The latter found even the clergy scarcely bigotted enough to deserve protection from their insults. At Peniscola and Valladolid disturbances have occurred, in which this licensed mob of volunteers were the prime agitators. The Canon Ostalaza, who has been called by the formidable name of the exterminating angel, was at the head of the troubles in Murcia.

The payment of the Haytian indemnity to France encounters some difficulty, and has already experienced an unexpected delay. French ships of war are waiting at St. Domingo to convey to France funds which are not forthcoming.

At Lisbon paeparations are on foot to assemble the Cortes under the new Constitution.

Accounts from Havre mention that the importation of raw cotton from North America into France is very large, and is rapidly increasing: last week it amounted to 7000 bags in that one port.

The rumours respecting the breaking up of the negociations between the Russian and Turkish Commissioners ut Akermann are repeated with encreased confidenee. It is said that the Russian Government, though it has reeeived recent despatches from its Georgian frontier, is not yet sufficiently informed respecting the late incursion of the Persians as to decide whether they betray a settled purpose of war, or a tumultuous movement of temporary fanaticism, which the Schah did not encourage, and could not suppress. The Russian General Yermoloff was, however, concentrating his troops, and waited only for their union to eommence aggressive operations.

The King of the Netherlands has issued a decree, declaring Curacoa a free port, to be thrown open to the navigation and trade of all nations on the 1st of January 1827, without payment of import, export, or tonnage duties, the ships remaining only subject to such charges as the safety of the ship and cargo, and the excise or consumption, required.

The Federal Republic of Central America has entered into a contract with a Company at New York, for the purpose of cutting a canal to effect a navigable communieation between the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans. The undertakers are very sanguine as to the practieability of the scheme, as well as the nutional and commercial advantages to be derived from its execution.

Advices have been reeeived from the Gold Coast to the 20th of July, confirming the reports recently circulated of the disposition manifested by the Ashantees to act hostilely against our possessions in that quarter, and those of our Allies. In a proclamation issued by Lieutenant-Colonel Purdon, it is stated that the King of Ashantee was within three days' mareh of Accra, and it was supposed he meditated an attack on that place, and suhsequently upon the rest of the forts and sentiments on the Cold Coast. Prompt measures had been in eonsequence adopted, to arm all persons residing within the said settlement, for the purpose of repelling any aggression by those ruthless barbarians. Private letters state their force variously, from twenty to fifty thousand men. Great alarm prevailed, not so mueh from any dread of the real power of the Ashantees, as from the apprehension of the savage eruelties to whieh the residents would be exposed, should only partial and transitory success attend their ineursion.

Among the ordnance captured at Bhurtpore is a neat iron six-pounder, with the following inscription:—"Jacobus Monteith, me feeit Edinburgh, Anno Dom. 1612."

BRUSSELS, OCT. 3.—The cause of the catastrophe at Ostend is still involved in mystery. Government has not yet direeted any inquiry to be made on the spot by a military commission, as was expected. The King's Attorney at Bruges has been twice at Ostend to interrogate, but discovered nothing.—As a proof how much our Government is favourably disposed towards the Greek eause, I can apprise you of the fact, that one of the King's brigs, the Hawk, stationed in the Levant, has taken under convoy a vessel commanded by a Captain Akkermann, whieh sailed some time ago from Antwerp, with stores for the Greeks, sent by the Hellenic Committees of this country. She is bound to Smyrna, whence she will proceed to Napoli di Romania.

It appears from the Sierra Leone Gazettes to the 26th June, that the abhorred traffie in slaves is still carried on under the French, Spanish, and Portuguese flag.

Frankfort papers to the 30th ult. contains an article dated Petersburgh, Sept. 16, which repeats the aecount of some mitigation of the sentences lately passed on the Russian conspirators, having been ordered by the Emperor Niehelas, on the oecasion of his coronation. The several fixed periods of banishment are abridged, in some cases considerably, in others only nominally. Those, for instance, who were to go to Siberia for life, are now to remain there "only twenty years!"

From a Cuba paper of Aug. 6:—"On the 13th of July a fire broke out at St. Thomas's; a great many buildings were consumed, and amongst others the Custom-house; also the house of the Secretary of the Archives, the Danish church, and ten merchants' warehouses. It is not stated that any lives were lost."

THE POET SCHILLER.—We copy from a Frankfort Paper a most remarkable article. A more singular ceremony than that here deseribed of a son depositing the skull of his father in a public library, we do not remember to have met with.

"WEIMAR, Sept. 19.—The day before yesterday the bust of Schiller, a masterpiece of Danneiker's, was placed with great solemnity in the Grand Ducal Library. This fete, the preparations for which had long since heen made, was deferred till the arrival of M. Ernest Schiller, son of the great poet, and one of the Judges in the Court of Appeal at Cologne. On the same day, the son of the poet, in the name of the united families of Schiller Wollzogen, solemnly deposited the skull of his father in the Grand Ducal Library at Weimar. It is placed inside of the pedestal whieh bears the marble bust of Schiller, which is an admirable likeness. The ceremony was terminated by a discourse suitable to the occasion, delivered by the Chancellor M. Von Muller."

We can state, upon authority, that M. Rocafuerte, Mexican Charge-d'Affaires, has just received the offieial intelligence that 500,000 dollars were lying, all ready packed, at Vera Cruz; and also, that his Government advise him that a further remittance was preparing, and a part of which would very probably be in time to catch the firigate; at all events, not less than 500,000 would be sent by the above conveyance. We are also able to state, positively, that M. Camacho, will come passenger in the Hussar.

FIRE AT CONSTANTINOPLE.

The Austrian Observer of the 24th ult. contains the following details of the dreadful conflagration which has devastated Constantinople, of which only a portion, and that very imperfeet, had previously reached us through the Paris Papers:—

"CONSTANTINOPLE, SEPT. 7.—The taking down of the Standard of the Prophet, which was to have taken place on the 31st August, was necessarily delayed to the 2d of September, on account of the dreadful fire whieh broke out at Constantinople just before the hour when the several Officers of State were to assemble for this ceremony. This fire, which has destroyed nearly an eighth part of this immense capital (about 6,000 houses), continued for thirty-six hours. The violence of the wind, the want of water, and the extraordinary drought, lessened the efficacy of the succour which the public authorities directed, with indefatigable zeal, to the various parts to which the rage of the flames extended. The immense magazines, known by the name of Khans, Besestins, and and Tscharchis, the hotels of almost all the Ministers and great Officers of the Empire, the palace of the Grand Vizier, called the Sublime Porte, the palace of the Armenian Patriarch, with the Patriarchal Church, and many other public buildings, are reduced to ashes. The loss of the Government is estimated at above six millions of piastres; that of the Turkish and Armenian merchants and tradesmen above fifty millions. It has not been certainly discovered whether this great disaster is to be ascribed to accident or malice: many circumstances indicate that, if the origin was accidental, it was propagated by the discontented, for it is certain that the fire broke out all at once in very distant quarters, where neither the direetion nor the force of the wind could have carried it.

"The measures adopted by the Grand Vizier, in concert with the Seraskier, were as energetic as rapid. About 8,000 troops and four brigades of field artillery were stationed in the interior of the Seraglio, in order of battle; all the streets were occupied by soldiers, and no rioters ventured any where to show themselves.

"The Sultan has opened all the gates of his palace to receive the unfortunate families that seek an asylum; several thousands women and children are lodged in palaces belonging to the Government; others have received ample pecuniary relief. A part of the magazines will be rebuilt at the expence of the Government, and the building of the new barracks is deferred till after the erection of the public buildings, which are indispensable to commerce. The Seraskier mingled with the firemen to encourage them, and worked with all his strength for two hours; the Chiefs of the several corps vied with him in activity and exertion to preserve order.

"The great majority of the people ascribe this misfortune to the cruel vengeance of the Janissaries, who are become objects of universal execration. The Sultan, to stop one source of discontent, which might lead to a re-action, has resolved to revoke the Firman which abolished, without distinction, all the Essames issued after the war in Egypt. Partial payments have already been made to several thousand individuals, whose demands were rejected a few days before.

"The Standard of Mahomet was replaced on the 2d, with the usual ceremonies, in the apartment allotted for the preservation of the relics of the Prophet. At the same time the camp in the interior of the Seraglio was broken up, and the Grand Vizier accompanied by all the Ministers, has gone to the former palace of the Aga of the Janissaries, which, after the events of the 15th June, was assigned to the Chief Mufti. Another residence will be assigned to the latter, whieh the Sultan will seleet for him."

DETAILS OF THE EVENTS IN CHILOE.

The Serjeant-Major of the 4th battalion, Geronimo Jose Valenzuela, communicates the following intelligence:—

"On the night between the 24th and 25th of April, arrived at the port of San Carlos, in the English vessel Alexander Adams, Don Pedro Aldunate, brother to the Governor, Don Jose Santiago, coming from Callao. The said Don Pedro brought from Lima a commission to raise the troops in the garrison in favour of Don Bernardo O'Higgins, with u particular charge of treating for this purpose with Don Manuel Fuentes, Serjeant-Major of Artillery, who, on account of the absence of the Governor, Aldunate, organizing the militia of that province, held the situation of interim Governor. Fuentes and Don Pedro Aldunate, taking advantage of these circumstances, brought about an insurrection among the troops at two o'clock in the morning of the 3d of May. To accomplish this objeet on the same night, the interim Governor, Fuentes, went to the house of Valenzuela (who commanded at the time the 4th battalion), accompanied by Capt. Olivares, Lieut. Rojas, and Ensign Silva, all of the same battalion, and a party of soldiers, and without any communieation surprised him, and took him prisoner, confining him in his quarters in the same house. On the following day, Captain Aranda and Lieutenant Morlen came to visit him, and communicated to him that Captain Don Andres Olivares had taken the command of the battalion; that Captain Don Antonio Henriquez executed the duties of serjeant-major in the same battalion; that the reason for this insurrection was the arrival at these islands of Don Pedro Aldunate, commissioned by O'Higgins to effect it; that he assured them that General Bolivar had offered to O'Higgins 4,000 men to mareh upon Chile; that the latter had not reeeived the offer immediately, requiring two months to form his determination; that, for insuring his objeet, O'Higgins had sent orders to exeite a mutiny among the troops of Chile, as well as eommissioners to the towns of Conception, Santiago, and Coquimbo, to form partisans among the troops there stationed, and to have them ready to assist him when he should enter Chile.

"He knew that, without any opposition, the chiefs of the insurrection could gain over in Chiloe the 4th battalion and the company of artillery. The Goveruor Don Jose Santiago Aldunate, arrived at the city on the said 3d of May, at twelve o'clock in the morning, and at night they apprehended him and made him prisoner, along with the brother of the deponent, Adjutant-Major Don Francisco Valenzuela. The deponent knew that the intention of the mutineers was to send the Governor, Aldunate, to Valparaiso, in the brig Livonia, whieh was in the port of San Carlos, discharging her cargo to return to Valparaiso. In the night of May 4th, the deponent, his brother above-mentioned, and Lieut. Don Lorenzo Diaz, embarked on board the national brig Levante, which sailed the following day to Valparaiso. The Commandant of that brig put on shore the deponent and his brother on the coast of San Antonio on the 27th inst. at their own request, out of fear that the ship should not arrive soon enough at Valparaiso, to whieh they were destined; and they arrived on the 27th at night, Lieut. Diaz having remained on board because he had not boldness enough to leap on shore. At the moment of the deponent's arrival at Valparaiso, and after his conversation with the Governor, he proceeded to this capital, where he arrived to-day at six o'clock in the morning."

On Thursday evening, the ship William and Fanny, of Portsmouth, was brought into Southampton, seized by the officers of the preventive serviee on the Leap station, having on board upwards of 12 large cases filled with machinery for the making of lace, and intended, as it is supposed, for exportation to France. It appears the vessel had shipped her eargo at a smug place called Beaulie, about nine miles distant, and having taken in a quantity of faggots, gave out that she was bound for Weymouth with the same: the depth of the vessel in the water first excited the attention of the offieers, who, upon bringing her to, found she had no papers, and proceeding to overhaul her, discovered a shipment of machinery, amounting to some thousands in value. The whole of the cases have been landed at our Custom-house.—Southampton Paper.

OUTRAGES IN IRELAND.

On Sunday night, as a patrol of the police were on duty near Charleville, in Mullingar, they were attacked by a numerous party of Rockites, all armed, and consisted of about 50 men. Overwhelmed by numbers, the police were all knocked down, and two of them dangerously wounded. There are very little hopes of the serjeant's recovery, he having received several wounds on the head. We understand that one of the Rockites was shot, and immediately carried off by his eumrades.

On Saturday night last, the kitchen and offices adjoining the dwelling-house of Messrs. John and William Graham, of Abbeyland, near Ballinacarig, in this county, were set on fire by some incendiaries, and consumed. The dwelling-house, and the lives of the inmates were providentially saved. The house of Mr. Graham's herd was feloniously burned the same night.

A few nights ago, a party of Rockites levelled a wall, on the lands of Capt. Gamble, of Halston, in this county, and ordered the masons not to work for him.

A notice was posted on the church-door of Street, in this county, ordering Peter Nisell, who is married to a Protestant, to get his child christened by the sign of the eross, on pain of death.

A few nights since, a house in Bonavaley, near Athlone, was attacked by the Rockites, because the inmates did not comply with their mandates. The occupier, a man of the name of Norton, made his escape through the midst of them, not before he received a cut from some instrument like a seythe on a pole, by whieh he lost a finger. They then entered the house, and most savagely treated a young woman, Norton's niece, whom they left in a pitiable situation.

The neighbourhood of Westmeath, and in fact the greater part of the county, is in such a disturbed state that many respectable Protestant families are preparing to fly for refuge to towns where the military are stationed, and others are determined on setting off for England before the winter commences. The Protestants of this county are imperiously called on to form a union for their own protection. County meetings must be immediately held. Protestants can no longer submit to insult and outrage.—Westmeath Journal.

MANUFACTURERS IN THE WEST.

The town of Bourton, Dorsetshire, has been long celebrated for the manufacture of linen tick, and the demand has been, up to the present period, such as to afford full employment to its population. The trade, however, has lately fallen off considerably, and the stock prepared for the autumn sales, when it is generally cleared off (thereby enabling the manufacturer to keep his men on through the winter) now remains on hand. In consequenee, about twenty of the principal manufacturers of Bourton, Silton, Mere, Gillingham, and Bayfidd, employing together about two thousand hands, held a meeting last week, when it was reluctantly resolved to dismiss half their hands. The consumption of flax in the West of England, tick, sail-eloth, and dowlas manufactories, is calculated at about 50 tons per week, or 2600 tons per year, whieh would require 13,000 acres of land to raise, and give constant occupation to between 4000 and 5000 men and boys. This branch of industry, most important to the West of England, is now nearly extinguished, owing to the partial application of the free trade system. The principal manufacturer states, that he has never known any thing like the present want of demand for the articles he makes, and that this does not arise from his being undersold, or the North-country men being able to make better goods than he, but to the universal want of demand. He says that during the war he was obliged to turn off some hands in eonsequence of a deficiency of the raw material, but they found agricultural labour, and he afterwards took them on again, but he never before wanted sale for his goods. The twenty manufaeturers who met together, consume in full work about 520 tons of flax per year, and until a few years past they were principally supplied from the home grower. Since flax has been imported duty free, the supply of English flax has been wholly inadequate to the demand, and this year scarcely any has been grown. As a proof of the superiority of English flax, he states, that ut the last Yeovil market, he gave full 25 per cent. more for English dew-ripened flax than he could huy foreign, for, although the former is always paid for in eash, and the latter at eight months' credit. A very extensive manufactory for superfine eloths and kerseymeres has recently been erected on a part of the far-famed, and naturally beautiful domain of Fonthill. It is situated on the boundary of the lake towards Tisbury. There are some neat eottages built at the side of it for the work-people. The mill, which is driven by a water-fall from the lake, is said to be of immense power. The manufacture is in its infaney, but is capable of furnishing employment to at least one thousand hands. At present there are about 130 employed, many of whom came from Chippenham to found the establishment. These people are constantly employed, and earn good wages. The proprietor, Mr. Mortimer, is a nephew of the wealthy Mr. Farquhar, and having a large quantity of land, it is understood that eaeh one of the workmen in the manufactory will have a portion of land annexed to his cottage, in order that he may aceustom his family to the cultivation of the soil; so, that in the event of any failure of trade, the people may not be reduced to that misery which is too often the result of training the population to manufactures exclusively. In the neighbouring parish of Hindon, Mr. Beckford some time since appropriated twelve aeres of land for gardens to the poor, which is found to be of great use to them, and he demands no rent for it. Fonthill is in the parish of Tisbury, whieh is of great extent, and ineludes the house und farms of Mr. Benett, one of the Members for Wiltshire. This gentleman farms about 1100 aeres of land, and did some time since keep in hand nearly 5000. The farmers here eomplain greatly of the low price of wool and stock sheep. The wool whieh was worth 2s. 3d. the lb. will not sell for more than 7d. at present. The labourers here are paid about 8s. per week, and if they have large families, their wages are made up to 1s. 3d. each person per week from the parish. The grass lands and turnips were never known so fine at this season of the year.

Mr. Jaekson, a baker, in Foley-place, was convicted at Marylebonne, on an information laid by the Imperial Gas Company, in the sum of 50l. for laying on an additional pipe, and 40s. for each day on which it was used.

The most promiuent trait of beauty in either sex is a fine Head of Hair; and youth of both sexes are particularly advised to attend to that inestimable ornament, as that attended to in youth, is a sure preservative, and fixes a stamiua for a beautiful Head of Hair.—The only article that really possesses nutritious virtues for promoting a luxuriant growth of Hair is Rowland's Macassar Oil, which eradieates the Scurf easy and pleasant, prevents the hair falling off or turning grey, strengthens and produces beautiful flowiug eurls, and renders hair that is harsh and dry, as soft, smooth, and glossy as silk.—Ask for Rowland's Maeassar Oil, and observe the siguature "A. Rowlaud and Son."

It is known that many of the distriets of Colombia on whieh Paez relied for assistance, have declared against him, and renewed their oath of fidelity to the existing eonstitution. We have before us a narrative of what took place at Carthagena on this occasion, published in the shape of a pamphlet. It is dated the 6th July. The members of the municipality then took an oath not to deliberate about a change of the central for a federal government, till the expiration of the ten years specified in the constitutional act, and to support with their lives and fortunes the present Government. There seems to be a great deal of disenssion in the Republic whether a central or a federal Government is the best for Colombia; and a loud desire is expressed by one party to call the Grand Convention (as they call it) to decide the point.—Times.

MIDDLESEX SESSIONS.

John Taylor, a young man of respectable appearance, stood indicted for assaulting Mrs. Winifred Piles.

Mrs. Piles being called, deposed that she was returning with her husband, from a visit, along the Whitechapel-road, about 12 o'clock at night, when the defendant and another man came up to them, and the defendant, without saying a word, or receiving the slightest provocation, raised his left arm, and struck her a violent blow on the left temple, from the effects of which she reeled and fell backwards on the ground. Her husband left her to secure the prisoner, and while he was absent a female came up and supported her. The blood was flowing profusely from the temple where he struck her. On her husband's return, a coach was procured, in which she was conveyed home. A surgeon was called in, under whose care she continued some time. For three days she was confined to her bed.

Mr. Piles corroborated this evidence.

Mr. Adolphus said he was instructed by his client, that the affair was entirely accidental on his part; that himself and friend had been drinking freely, and that the latter, out of a lark, had pushed him against the lady, and thus occasioned the injury now complained of. He did not mean to justify the act of his client, for drunkenness could be no excuse for outrage; he mentioned it only in extenuation.

The Jury found him Guilty.

The Chairman said it was a most atrocious case, and sentenced him to three months' imprisonment.

John Latham was charged with an assault upon W. Thomas. The assault being of the slightest nature, the Chairman fined the prisoner 6s. 8d.

The prosecutor left the Court, but after a short while returned, and addressing the Court, stated that he had been detained for 16s. 6d. fees.

The Chairman said that it was not on his (the Chairman's) account that he had been so detained.

Mr. Phillips said that prosecutors paid dearly for seeking the protection of the law; it was, in fact, the dearest commodity in England, He was afraid that it was a very great inducement to people to take the law in their own hands.

The Chairman said, that however he might regret it, he could not alter the law.

Prosecutor—How long can I be detained for the non-payment of the demand?

Chairman—For ever.

Prosecutor—Then I suppose the sooner I pay it the better.

Mr. Thomas then paid the fees, 12s. of which went to the Jury and the remainder to the crier and other officers.

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

MANSION-HOUSE.—The Waldeck Company.—Thursday. Mr. Finch, the solicitor, of Coleman-street, applied to the Lord Mayor for summonses against the Hon. Washington Shirley, 26, Montague-street, Portman-square; Captain Page, East India Warehouse; William Hall, Esq. Crosby-square; and Thomas Emmet, Esq., Holborn. Then there were—Thomas Moore, Esq.; P. P. Goldschmidt, Esq.; Arnold Berger, Esq.; and Gottlieb Berger, Esq., whose names he (Mr. Finch) believed to be fictitious. The Surveyor and Engineer was, W. J. Hantock, Esq.; the Assay Master, P. N. Johnson, Esq., M.G.S.; Solicitors, Messrs. Tomlinson, Bennell, and Cooper; Bankers, Sir J. Perring, Barber, Shaw, and Co.; and Secretary, Mr. M. G. Mitchell. It was proposed that a capital of 500,000l. be raised in 5,000 shares of 100l. each; 1l. to be paid on the allotment, and 2l. more on the Report of a Committee at a General Meeting of the Proprietors. The prospectus went on to state, that "The possessions of his Serene Highness the Prince of Waldeck have been long considered the most valuable in Germany, in gold, silver, copper, lead, and iron mines (the latter being in quality superior to the Swedish); but, owing to a want of sufficient capital and machinery, they have been lying dormant, and now offer to British Capitalists a most advantageous opportunity for public investment.—A grant duly ratified being obtained from his Royal Highness, it is intended to form the above Association for the purpose of working them with English machinery. The peculiar advantages attending these mines are—1st. Their proximity to the manufacturing towns of Iserloon, famous for brass founderies; Solingen, famous for iron and steel; Stolberg, famous for brass; Elberfeld, the seat of the Rhenish West India Company, and many others of smaller note; and owing to the immense quantity of metal consumed by these towns, it is anticipated that nearly the whole produce will be purchased by them; at present they are compelled to obtain it at a very disadvantageous rate from Russia, Sweden, and Norway, and they are looking forward with great anxiety to the success of the present undertaking.—2. The river Weser running close to the mines, the surplus produce can, at a cheap rate, be exported to Bremen, Hamburg, and England.—3. The mountains are covered with wood, the necessaries of life cheap, consequently the price of labour is very low.—4. The shafts being only from 40 to 50 fathoms deep, little expense will be incurred in working the mines.—5. The mines being at present in work, it is expected they will in a short time produce a dividend, and that not more than one-tenth of the capital subscribed will be required for at least twelve months, and then only on complete success, and for the enlargement of the undertaking.—6. The grant being under a liberal Prince, anxious for the employment and welfare of his subjects, great advantage will be derived from his sanction and patronage.

"M. G. MITCHELL, Sec."

Mr. Finch said, he had to adduce evidence of the strongest character, namely, that of a witness who was present at the meetings of the proprietors, and who was cognizant of all their proceedings.

This witness stated, that he was now clerk to Messrs. Dickensons, of Old Broad-street, solicitors. He had formerly been in the service of the solicitors whose names had been procured for the prospectus (on an assurance of its respectability), and had, in their behalf attended the several meetings of the Directors. Believing the statements set forth in the prospectus, he had bought 50 shares.

The Lord Mayor asked the witness whether he had money of his own to make an investment to the extent of 50 shares.

The witness did not answer this question. Indeed his situation and appearance answered it for him.

The Lord Mayor asked him whether the grant from the liberal Prince was produced to the shareholders, or whether any security was shewn to them.

The witness replied, that there were some papers produced at one of the meetings by a German named Ashalt. They were in German, but no one could read them, and every one presumed that they were documents. (Laughter.)

His Lordship asked what was the number of shares which were taken in this concern?

Mr. Jellico said, that 2,000 shares were issued; 13,000 were applied for, and that 1380 were paid upon. The Directors got 1l. upon each share. The person who was most connected with this concern, was a Mr. Mitchell, the Secretary, of No. 6, Queen's-row, Walworth. In all the meetings which the witness attended, the chief and only subject of discussion was, that of the means of keeping up their shares in the market. It was at first proposed to issue 5000 shares, and to ask 3l. on each; when Mitchell said they would never get them up to a premium if they sent out so many as these, and required such a deposit. He proposed the reduced number of 2000, with the deposit of 1l. per share. This proposition was adopted. About March or April last, witness applied to Captain Page on the subject, when the latter avowed to him that they had never any intention of working the mines, and that they merely brought it forward to catch the Bears with. Only 50l. had been paid to the printer and tavern-keeper, and no satisfactory account could be got of the remainder of the money; and the witness represented that there was no indication of an intention to return the remainder of the money. It was believed that a great part of it had been spent in endeavours to get up the prices of the shares in the market. The Hon. Mr. Shirley was Equerry, or something of that kind, to the Duke of Sussex. The witness declared that he knew nothing of the real state of things until some time after he had purchased the shares.

The Lord Mayor was of opinion upon the case, as stated and proved before him, that an indictment would lie against the parties. The legitimate object of bringing them before him could only be, to hold them to bail to appear and answer the charge. They were parties who were well known, and he thought that no apprehension could be fairly entertained that they would run away. If it were intended to make use of any proceeding before him, to force an accommodation, he could not lend himself to it.

Mr. Finch said that his Lordship's aid was sought as the cheapest and most summary for the parties.

The Lord Mayor said, it could not be more cheap or summary than that of the indictment, which must be the next step after bringing the parties before him; and he, therefore dismissed the complaint, recommending the prosecutors to proceed at once to the indictment.

BOW-STREET.—Mr. Grindell, sen., accompanied by his solicitor, Mr. Haddon, entered the office to prefer a charge of illegal restraint against his nephew, Mr. Charles Grindell, and Mr. Hunter.

The defendants being brought into Court, Sir Richard Birnie, the presiding Magistrate, enquired of Ledbetter, the officer, when and where he met with Mr. Grindell, sen.?—At Bolton-house, Tunbridge Wells, replied Ledbetter, in the custody of the defendants.

On his telling them the nature of his visit, they immediately stated that they relinquished all control over him.

Sir Richard Birnie, turning to Mr. Grindell, sen., said, I shall ask you but one question, sir. Was it with or without your consent that you were conveyed to Tunbridge Wells?

Mr. G. sen—Entirely without my consent.

Sir R. Birnie to the defendant—What could have induced you to take so aged a gentleman as you now see before you to a place, without his consent, and there use him in the manner you are described to have done?

Mr. Charles Grindell.—I considered change of air would have been beneficial to him, besides I have had Dr. Burrowes's opinion, and he considers that the complainant is incapable of managing his affairs, and requires a person to be in constant attendance with him, and I will prove it before the Lord Chancellor, as it is my intention to sue out a commission of lunacy.

Sir R. Birnie—Were you never confined?

Mr. G., jun.—Never, but my father was, as the complainant can prove. I am heir at law, and will throw it into Chancery.

Heir at law! exclaimed the Magistrate, what makes you heir at law? one would imagine that you were in expectation of large landed estates.

Sir Richard Birnie then enquired of Mr. Grindell, sen. whether he feared any thing from his nephew.

Mr. G. sen.—That I do; I should not at all like to be near him, nor that he should have any access to my house.

The Magistrate then desired that they should find good bail to answer the charge, and give 24 hours' notice thereof.

Mr. Hunter then stepped forward, and inquired of the Bench what amount of bail would be required.

"That," replied Sir Richard, "depends greatly upon the respectability of the parties."

Edward Cooper, another of the party against whom a warrant had been issued for an assault on Mr. Grindell and his niece, under circumstances of a strange and flagrant description, was brought before Mr. Minshull, by Ledbetter, the officer, who has been indefatigable in his efforts to secure the offenders. Mrs. Grindell was in attendance, and also her solicitor, Mr. Haddon.

Mrs. Grindell being sworn, repeated her former testimony, identifying the prisoner as one of the two men who were placed as keepers in the room with her uncle two days prior to the assault on herself. The prisoner, she said, was the least violent of the party; he seemed willing to act with temperance and moderation, while the rest, and particularly Cochran, the other keeper, were very different in their conduct. He came on Monday, in company with Cochran, to take charge of her uncle, and on Tuesday morning she paid him 5s, for his trouble, and he went away. He returned, however, in the evening, with the compliments of Captain Deane and Mr. Stinton, to say that in their opinion it was not safe to leave only one person in charge of Mr. Grindell, sen. She insisted, however, that the prisoner should not stop, as her uncle did not require his attendance. Mrs. Grindall added, that the prisoner admitted to her that he was one of the persons who assisted to confine her uncle in a strait waistcoat.

The prisoner, in his defence, admitted that he had done so. He was one of the porters, he said, of St. Luke's Hospital, and he went to Mr. Grindell's house by desire of Mr. Stinton, Captain Deane, and Mr. C. Grindell.

Mr. Minshull observed, that in consideration of the forbearance he displayed on the occasion, and his having acted by the direction of others, he should not require him to find bail to any great amount. Himself in 40l. and two sureties in 20l. each would answer. The prisoner found bail for the amount required, and was discharged. He is a very young man, decent in his appearance, with a simple country look.

Soon after, Mr. Charles Grindell, who was allowed, by his own desire, to remain in the watchhouse until he should procure bail, came forward in custody, to state, that in consequence of his not being enabled to procure the required sureties, he should be obliged to go to gaol, and he requested as a favour that he might be sent to the House of Correction in Cold Bath-square, in preference to another prison.

Mr. Minshull told him, if the indulgence of another day would be any object to him, he might remain in the watchhouse.

The prisoner, however, said, that as it was rather uncertain when he could obtain bail, having written to friends in the country for that purpose, whose answers might be delayed for some time, he should prefer to go to prison at once.

He was then removed to the above-named gaol.

Joseph Kent, the proprietor of the Red Lion Inn, in the Strand, appeared to answer the complaint of Johnson, the noted informer, for keeping his house open at a late hour.

Mr. Taylor, counsel for the defendant, made some preliminary objections, grounded on the informality of the proceedings; but they were overruled by Sir Richard Birnie.

John Rawlins, a hair-dresser, being examined for the prosecution, stated, that he went into the house of the defendant at half-past twelve o'clock on the night of the 29th of September, and there saw three women and two men drinking at the counter. The men were tossing for a pot of beer.

Cross-examined by Mr. Taylor—He was paid weekly by Johnson; had no interest in the result of this prosecution, as his pay was the same whether he succeeded or not; he was about ten months in the employ of the informer, who had summoned the defendant five or six times before this for similar offences, but did not succeed in convicting him at either time.

Witness here began to manifest symptoms of rudeness, and refused to answer any more of the learned counsel's questions, because, as he stated, he did not know him to be a professional man.

Mr. Taylor appealed to the Magistrates, stating that he was a Barrister, and had a right to have his questions answered,

Sir Richard Birnie—I don't know that you are a Barrister.

Mr. Taylor—I am John Sidney Taylor, Sir, of the Middle Temple, and was the first person who defended a prosecution of a similar description as this under the late act, and succeeded in having the conviction quashed at the Quarter Sessions. I feel disposed to pay due deference to the magisterial chair, and in return I will expect to be treated as an advocate. The learned counsel then contended, that the defendant's house did not come under the purview of the Act, as it was an inn for the reception of travellers, and the defendant had not only a right to have it open at all hours, but was subject to be fined if he refused at any time to entertain such persons. He then called witnesses to prove that the defendant was in the habit of entertaining travellers, and that a Greenwich coach booked there, and occasionally called for passengers after the theatrical amusements were over. Two gentlemen gave evidence as to the respectability of the house.

Sir R. Birnie having consulted with Mr. Robinson, a country magistrate, observed, he did not imagine that the legislature contemplated that houses of this description, respectably conducted, should be subject to the restrictions contained in the Act, and dismissed the charge. The decision gave much satisfaction, and was received with applause by a numerous audience.

ARCHDALL'S CASE.

MARLBOROUGH-STREET.—Mr. Butler, the clerk of Mr. Harmer, came to this office, and stated to the sitting magistrate, Mr. Dyer, that the statement made on the previous day by Mr. Withers on the subject of Colonel Archdall's liberation was very erroneous, because the fact was, that Mr. Withers had been made acquainted with the whole of the proceedings that were going on before the Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench; and another error was, that it had been represented that Colonel Archdall was discharged on his own recognizances; whereas the fact was, that the Lord Chief Justice only made the order for his liberation on his procuring two bail in 150l. each, besides his own recognizance in 500l.

The Magistrate said that the Lord Chief Justice's order said nothing about any bail beyond the prisoner's own recognizances, and he (the magistrate) had not heard before that there was any other bail required.

Mr. Butler said that there must then be some mistake in the copying of the order by the clerk in Court, because he was present when the Judge made the order, and it distinctly was for two bail in 150l. each.

Mr. Butler handed to the magistrate a letter from Mr. Harmer, which Mr. Dyer read, (addressed to the magistrates,) stating, that he had carefully attended to the case of the prosecutor in the application to the Court of King's Bench to reduce the bail; but that the Lord Chief Justice, upon sufficient affidavits, felt satisfied that the bail ought to be reduced; so that the insinuations thrown out by Mr. Withers, as published, were totally without foundation, as he had been informed of the whole of the proceedings, and the amount of bail was reduced by the Learned Judge only on a full investigation of the case, and a conviction that the ends of justice would be sufficiently satisfied by the prisoner being held to bail in two sureties of 150l. each, and himself in 500l.

The Magistrate said, that there could be no doubt that Mr. Harmer had properly attended to his client's interests. The only cause of any mistake as to the bail was, that no allusion was made to the Chief Justice's order to any thing further than the prisoners own recognizance, but the matter was now explained.

The young man who calls himself Charles Wilmott, and says he is the son of the renowned Princess Olive of Cumberland Poniatowski, attended again on Wednesday at this office to have his case considered by the parish officers of St. Giles's, before the magistrates.

One of the parish officers said that he had taken the information of the young man, and in consequence, had waited upon the Princess Olive in the rules of the King's Bench prison, and that that lady, in the most solemn manner declared, "so help her God, the applicant was no son of hers."

The young man again repeated that he was the son of the Princess Olive, as she called herself, and he would give his oath of it; for the Princess had told him so, and privately acknowledged him as her son, although she now thought fit to deny him, and his father was Mr. Anthony Askew. Mr. and Mrs. Bell, formerly living in Lincoln's Inn New-square, had brought him up from infancy, and for some time he went by the name of Bell, until they told him who his mother and father were, and he then applied to his mother, who acknowledged it; and besides, the doctor, who had delivered the Princess Olive of him, had since identified him, and was ready to prove that he was the same. The magistrates then ordered that the young man should supply all necessary information to the parish officers, and tell who this doctor was that had brought him into the world.

A person here came forward with a bundle of papers in his hand, to speak, he said, on behalf of her Royal Highness the Princess, but the magistrates declined hearing him.

UNION-HALL.—Wonderful Dog.—On Thursday, a middle-aged person, named Philip Vincent, dressed in a fashionable manner, residing in Lambeth-walk, summoned a strolling player, named Wood, to show cause why he (Wood) refused restitution of the wonderful dog Brain, late of Drury-lane Theatre.

Mr. Vincent stated, that he had reared the dog from a puppy, and about two years ago it had disappeared. All trace of it was lost, till it was found in the possession of the defendant.

Mr. Harmer, who attended for the defendant, stated, that the statute, under which the summons was granted, expressly mentioned that there must be a charge of theft, but in the present case no such charge was made. The dog was bought by, and had been in the possession of, the defendant for a length of time, as was proved by the play-bills (a quantity of those of Warwick, and other Theatres, was handed to the Magistrate).

The Magistrate (J. S. Caldwell, Esq.) said, that as there was no charge of felony, it did not come under his jurisdiction.—Case dismissed.

The peculiar excellencies of the female character were never, perhaps, more powerfully delineated than in the New Novel of "Alla Giornata," in which the noble authoress has evidently given much of that personal remark, which being open only to high rank, become so much the more valuable from being so seldom recorded. Written as this elegant work certainly has been, under the most inspiring recollections, it is not surprising to find it possessing a charm to rivet the attention and interest the feelings, of which but few, even of the most favoured productions of the press, can attempt to boast.

Suicide.—A most determined act of self-destruction was committed at Ashton-upon-Riddle, on Saturday week, in the house of Mr. Westmore, watchmaker, of Preston. A gentleman named Thompson, who was a confidential clerk in a respectable house at Manchester, and was formerly in a similar situation in this town, arrived at Mr. Westmore's residence, in Ashton, and was received by his sister, Mrs. Westmore. She, perceiving symptoms of mental aberration about the unfortunate gentleman, endeavoured to amuse him by drawing his attention to the garden and various objects about the place, till at length he expressed a wish to retire to his bed-room, and was accordingly shown into it. In about ten minutes, Mrs. Westmore heard a groan, and after twice calling to her brother, and after twice receiving indistinct replies, she became alarmed, and called for assistance. The unhappy man was discovered lying on the floor in a pool of blood, with his throat severed in a horrible manner, a razor lying near his right hand, and altogether in a condition which precluded all hope from human aid. He died almost immediately. An inquest has since been held before R. Palmer, Esq., and it appearing that the deceased was subject to mental disease, the Jury returned a verdict of Insanity.—Blackburn Mail.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

PRICE OF STOCKS UP TO FOUR O'CLOCK YESTERDAY.

BRITISH.

Bank Stock,	India Stock, 241½
Red. 3 per Cent.	India Bonds, 32
3 per Cent. Cons. 80	Exch. Bills, 1000, (1½d.) 18
3½ per Cent. Red.	Do. 500,
New 4 per Cent. 95⅝	Do. Small,
4 per Cent. 18[illegible],	Do. Advertised,
Long Anns.	Cons. for Acc. 80⅛ 79⅞ 80⅛

PARIS, Oct. 3.—Extract of a private letter:—"You will regret to hear that the celebrated tragedian Talma is in a most dangerous state, and very faint hopes are now entertained of his recovery. He is lingering at the village of Enghien, about six leagues from Paris, in the beautiful valley of Montmorency, whither he some time ago repaired for the benefit of the mineral waters. The accounts received this afternoon are, I am told, still worse."

A Committee of the Congress of Mexico has proposed to set apart 200 dollars, to assist in printing the work of a native Mexican, Chimalpain, containing a history of the Conquest of the Mexican Empire by the Spaniards. Chimalpain is known to have composed his history about the year 1582.

The Colombian (a Caraccas Paper) to the 17th of August, arrived yesterday. Under the head of Caraccas, August 16, it is mentioned, that on the 10th of July, Colonel O'Leary, Aid-de-Camp to Bolivar, had arrived at Bogota, with important despatches for the Government and for General Paez. The contents had not transpired. It is also stated, that Bolivar declines taking any part in the war between Brazil and Buenos Ayres. The Liberator was to have returned to Bogota by the end of November, but the circumstances which had arisen made it probable his arrival would be somewhat accelerated. At the date of his Aid-de-Camp's reaching that city, Bolivar was supposed to be at Panama.

Extract of a letter from Sweden—"Died at Stockholm, on the 16th Sept. the Dowager Viscountess Boyne, at the residence of her friend, the Baroness Oxenstierna, widow of the late Swedish Ambassador at the Court of Great Britain."

A dinner of condolence was given on Friday at Huntingdon, to the friends of Lord John Russell, in honour of his late defeat. The Noble Lord's father (the Duke of Bedford) very considerably sent a liberal supply of game on the melancholy occasion. Lord John was absent, being at present in Paris. By Easter, it is expected that he will return, and then a very splendid festival is to be got up, at which, it is to be hoped, he will be sufficiently recovered (in spirits) to attend.

The St. Petersburgh Journal, to the 20th September, arrived yesterday. It contains, under date of Sept. 18, lists of promotions and favours granted on the occasion of the Coronation. Among them we find a rescript addressed to Count Nesselrode, conveying to him a grant of land to be enjoyed by him and his descendants. The new titles which have been granted on this occasion are also enumerated, as well as the sentences which have been mitigated.

We have already stated that the Countess of Lieven had been raised to the rank of a Princess. The title of Count has been bestowed on Gen. Tatischeff, Lieutenant-General Czernischeff, Lieut.-General Kouroula, Baron Gregory Stroconoff, and Lieut.-General Pozzo di Borgo, his Majesty's Ambassador at Paris: these titles are hereditary.

The following is the flattering testimonial rendered by the Emperor to the services of Count Nesselrode, in the rescript abovementioned:—

"The talents which distinguish you, and the manner in which you employ them in the service of our country, had drawn on you the particular attention of the late Emperor Alexander, our beloved brother. You have had the honour to execute his wise resolutions at the most glorious periods of his reign.—You continue to justify his choice and his confidence, and have already given us proofs of your inviolable attachment to ourself. By this, and by your able management of the important department committed to your care, you have acquired a claim on our favour. To give you a proof of it, we have chosen the day of our Coronation, and by an Ukase to our Minister of Finance, dated this day (meaning that this example is not to be taken as a precedent) we have assigned a portion of land in the Government of Tamboff, which unites peculiar advantages, and which we give you in full property for ever. May this new recompence, descending from generation to generation, perpetuate among your descendants, the honourable recollection of your services, recognized by one of the greatest Sovereigns, as well as of our esteem for you. "We are, &c.

"NICHOLAS.

"Moscow, Aug. 22, (3d Sept.) 1826."

Letters have been received from Captain Franklin and Dr. Richardson; as well. They were on the Great Bear Lake, and nothing to impede the successful progress of this interesting expedition.

It is stated on unquestionable authority, that in Ireland 16 priests have recently renounced the errors of the Church of Rome, and become members of the Reformed Church.

The quantity of cyder which is expected to be made in Devon will be far beyond what was calculated, the late rains having had the effect of causing a rapid growth of the apples. From the same cause turnips are astonishingly improved.

The lowest estimate for building the London University in Gower-street, is 107,767l. and is undertaken by Mr. Lee.

It is now positively asserted that Lord Amherst has been recalled from India. The grounds of complaint against the Governor-General are said to be—1, the delay in sending home the Report of the Court of Inquiry on the mutiny and massacre at Barrackpoor; 2, that the grievances of the native troops, disclosed in evidence before that court, were not immediately redressed; and, 3, that the Council at Bengal forwarded this important Report without any comments.

We are sorry to say that the typhus fever has visited the poorer classes of society of late, in Southover, and has carried several to the grave. In one row of houses in this parish there are several attacked with this fatal disease. Two were buried last week, and several lie in a most dangerous state, no hopes being given of them by the medical attendants.—Lewes Paper.

Three of the persons engaged in the atrocious murder of Mr. Burne, near Athlone, have been arrested, and are now in safe custody in Roscommon Gaol.

On Saturday se'nnight a female, about thirty-three years of age, threw herself into the river, near the sluices at the entrance of Shoreham harbour: when the body was found, life was totally extinct. It appears that she was a native of Ireland, and had been in service at Brighton, but left her situation. The cause of the rash act is not discovered, but it was not owing to pecuniary difficulties, as it is known that she returned three sovereigns which a lady had sent her a day or two before. A coroner's inquest has been held on the body, and returned a verdict of "Lunacy."

SUICIDE.—Late on Thursday evening, a female of respectable appearance, apparently about thirty years of age, presented herself at the gate on the Middlesex side of Waterloo Bridge, and told the gate-keeper that she had not a penny to pay the toll, but she would leave a basket, which she carried in her hands, and redeem it by paying the penny when she returned. When she got to the second recess on the bridge, she mounted the parapet, and threw herself headlong into the Thames, and was drowned. Her basket is hanging in the gate-house for any person to view it, in he hope that it may lead to a discovery of her friends.

Letters from Havre of the 30th ult. state that an estafette had arrived there, with accounts that M. Bucket, Agent for France in Colombia, had been recognised by that Government, in consequence of which orders have been sent to the different ports of France to admit vessels under the Colombian flag.

On Thursday, Mr. Mills, the landlord of Stewart's Rents, Great Wild-street, fell down in the street in a state of insensibility, and shortly afterwards expired.

A fire broke out at Porter-street, Newport-market, in the house of a person, who sells "ready-fried flat fish;" but it was fortunately got under without doing any serious mischief.

The liberal benefactor, under the signature of Londinensis, who sent 500l. to the distressed workmen at Sheffield, has contributed a further sum of 500l. to the same benevolent purpose.

ATTEMPT AT SUICIDE.—On Tuesday morning, between seven and eight o'clock, the family of —— Leggatt, Esq. of Harley-street, Cavendish-square, was thrown into the greatest alarm, in consequence of a young female, named Maria Goodger, in the service of the family as nursery-maid, having attempted to put a period to her existence by hanging. An unfortunate attachment is supposed to have been the cause.

On Saturday se'nnight, Daniel Taylor, a private of the 5th Dragoon Guards, stationed at Preston, was killed by his own horse, under the following circumstances. Taylor, at the time of the accident, was engaged at the New Cock stables, in that town, in trimming the animal, and it being one of vicious propensities, a comrade was placed at its head, whilst another held up one of its fore legs. With these precautions it was considered that all chance of accident was removed, but, notwithstanding, the unruly beast contrived to make a desperate effort, and, while the deceased was in the act of trimming the off hind leg, with the the other, it is supposed it struck the poor fellow in the head, and almost split it asunder. Mr. Briggs, the nearest surgeon, was in immediate attendance, and performed the necessary operations. So terrible was the concussion, that it became necessary to remove a large piece of the skull—the brains protruded, and in other parts the most shocking factures had been made. Of course his case was hopeless; he lingered, however, till Wednesday, about two o'clock in the morning, on which day he expired.—Blackburn Mail.

On the forenoon of Saturday se'nnight, Biggar was visited with one of the most tempestuous winds which had been experienced in that neighbourhood for many years. The whole morning was stormy, but not calculated to excite much alarm, until about ten o'clock, when the wind increased, and continued for the space of half an hour to blow a perfect hurricane. During that short time three or four roofs were completely blown up by the violent pressure of the wind admitted into the house during the momentary act of opening the door, and thereby the astonished and affrighted inmates were at once exposed to all the reckless fury of the contending elements. Scarcely a single thatched roof in the town or neighbourhood has escaped injury. The town was a scene of confusion and alarm. The wind roared with thundering majesty, signboards, slates, and chimney-cans were dashed with fury to the street, trees fell crashing to the ground, and windows were shivered to pieces. The inhabitants ran to and fro in a state of bustling anxiety, some carrying ladders, barrows, ropes, planks of wood, &c.; others, both men and women, on the tops of houses busily employed, some of whom descended with greater rapidity, and in less measured steps, than they wished, but all lending their feeble endeavours to counteract the effect of the storm; casks and tubs rolled furiously along the street; hats, nightcaps, Kilmarnock bonnets, and wigs, were equally the playthings of the capricious blast, and thereby exposed many a bald head, whose organic bumps had long been concealed from the rude examination of phrenological inspection. Fragments of thatch, foliage of trees, and black portentous clouds driven before the wind, darkened the atmosphere, which, by throwing a deep and death-like shade over the field of desolation, added greatly to the impressive grandeur of the scene. Had the storm continued for a very short while longer, every thatched house must have become unroofed, and every stack-yard a heap of confusion. But, fortunately, the wind began to abate, and nature, as if exhausted after the violent excitement, soon sunk into the silence of a breathless repose.—The Scotsman.

TRIAL FOR MURDER.—READING (PENNSYLVANIA, AUG. 22.—On Friday, the 11th inst., before the Court of this county, came on the trial of Lydia Karshner, for the murder, in June, 1825, of Mary Ann Thrine, a child of about two years old. The prisoner, at the time she committed the act, was proved on the trial to have been 14 years and nine months old, is small of her age, and has the appearance of being younger than she really is, which circumstances excited the sympathies of all who attended the trial, and which very likely saved her from the gallows. From the testimony, it appeared that the prisoner was in the service of Mr. Mathias Thrine, the father of the murdered child, of Long Swamp township. The day before the murder was committed, Lydia was engaged in washing some articles of clothing, one of which the child had mischievously dragged from the washing-tub over some old ground bark from the tan-yard, and stained. The mother of the child attributed it to Lydia's carelessness, and scolded or chastised her for having permitted the child to do so, which it seems, prompted her to revenge. On the following day, towards evening, some geese and goslings were going towards the tan-yard, which the child ran after, followed by Lydia. When the geese had got to an old tan-pit, filled with water, one of the goslings fell in, and the child stooping down to look at it, Lydia gave her a push, which precipitated her into the pit head foremost. Shortly after, Mrs. Thrine asked Lydia where Mary Ann was; she replied, that she had gone to her grandmother's, close by, or that she did not know where she was. The mother not finding her child at its grandmother's, went to the tan-pit, and there discovered it floating on the water, dead. An inquest was immediately summoned by Justice Albright, who sat until late in the night, and until the prisoner voluntarily confessed to the Reverend Mr. German, the pastor of a neighbouring church, that she had caused the death of the child as above mentioned. Lydia was then conveyed to the gaol of this county, where she has since remained. The jury having patiently and attentively heard a mass of testimony, and the very able and ingenious arguments of the counsel on both sides, returned at about half-past seven o'clock on Wednesday, having been engaged in the trial nearly a week. In a short time, they returned with a verdict of murder in the second degree. His Honour Judge Porter sentenced her to a servitude of five years in the Penitentiary at Philadelphia, a proportionable part of which time to be in solitary confinement.—American paper.

FRIDAY'S GAZETTE.

BANKRUPTCIES ENLARGED.

J. NOAKES, Watling-street, dealer in cloth.—W. WATSON, Bishopsgate-street, innkeeper.

BANKRUPTCIES SUPERSEDED.

C. COATES, New Bond-street, druggist.—S. LAKEMAN, jun. Dartmouth, maltster.

BANKRUPTS.

J. WILLIAMS, Llanllwchaiam, Montgomeryshire, flannel-manufacturer.

R. PATTENDEN, Henfield, Sussex, victualler.

TUESDAY'S GAZETTE.

INSOLVENTS.

W. H. Stamp, and W. Nicholson, of Norway wharf, Millbank-street, Westminster, timber-merchants.

BANKRUPTCY SUPERSEDED.

T. Bourne, of Wyke-Regis, Dorsetshire, printer.

BANKRUPTS.

J. Wallace, Liverpool and Belfast, merchant.—R. Pomeroy, jun. Brixham, Devonshire, banker.—J. Jackson, Macclesfield, silk-throwster.—J. Taylor, Ageeroft, Lancashire, calico-printer.—A. Child, jun. Walcot, Somerset hire, carpenter.—J. Wheeler, Cardiff, builder.—W. Sims, Fair-Oak, Bishops-Stoke, Hampshire, schoolmaster.—J. Nuttall Wirksworth, Derbyshire, saddler.—J. Harris, Plymouth, joiner.

TRY IT.

Fine Port and brisk Sherry—well worthy of name,
Two Shillings per Bottle—Madeira the same;
Good Cape, Fifteen-pence—and, the marvel to crown,
Champagne, Five and Sixpence—the cheapest in town!

Opera Colonnade. CHARLES WRIGHT.

Depots—65, Crawford-street, St. Mary-le-bone.
4, Sussex-place, Kent-road.
13, St. James's-street, Brighton.
Parade, Margate; and
Quiet-street, Bath.

THE LONDON and WESTMINSTER WINE and SPIRIT COMPANY, No. 16, STRAND, opposite St. Martin's Church, have constantly on Sale—

	Per Dozen.		Per Dozen.
Port, Vintage 1820	27s to 30s	Bucellas	42s to 48s
Ditto, Crusted	36s to 42s	Claret, St. Julien	42s to 48s
Ditto, 5 to 8 years in bottle	48s to 56s	Ditto, Lafitte and Margaux	72s to 96s
Sherry, Pale and Brown	27s to 36s	Sparkling Champagne	72s to 84s
Ditto, Amontillado	42s to 48s	Ditto, and Creaming, of the first quality	90s to 96s
Cape, from	16s to 24s	St. Peray, dry and sparkling	63s to 72s
Madeira, West India	36s to 42s	Chablis	50s to 63s
Ditto, East India	48s to 60s	Hermitage, Red and White	72s to 84s
Teneriffe, Lisbon, Videnia, and Mountain	30s to 36s	Moselle, Sauterne, &c.	50s to 60s

Old Tom, Jamaica Rum, Cognac Brandy, Fern-tosh, &c. per imperial measure at reduced prices.—Bottled Stout, Cider, Perry, Burton and Edinburgh Ales.

All Goods must be paid for on or before delivery.

Letters post paid, to be addressed William Godfrey and Co. No. 16, Strand.

AT SIMPSON'S MEDICINE WAREHOUSE, No. 28, Henrietta-street, Covent-Garden, London, are sold

The ARABIAN VEGETABLE PILLS, 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. per Box, free from mercury or antimony, inestimable as a Family Medicine for the removal of Indigestion, Bilious and Nervous Complaints, and as a mild Aperient.

The ROYAL ELIXIR of LIFE, in Bottles of 11s. each, strengthens the Stomach, increases the Appetite, dispels Spasms and Gout in the Stomach, and prevents all the inconveniences produced by excess at table.

The ANTISEPTIC BOTANICAL TOOTH-POWDER, 2s. 9d. per Box, cleanses, whitens, and preserves the Teeth, and fastens them, even if loosened by mercury.

These articles are sold (by appointment) at all respectable Medicine Venders, Chemists, and Druggists, throughout the kingdom.

Superior Eau de Cologne and Swiss Eau d'Arquebusade, Mason's Convent Soap, &c. &c.

BURGESS' ESSENCE of ANCHOVIES, Warehouse, 107, STRAND, corner of Savoy Steps, London.—JOHN BURGESS and SON, being apprised of the numerous endeavours made by many persons to impose a spurious article for their make, feel it incumbent upon them to request the attention of the public, in purchasing what they conceive to be the ORIGINAL, to observe the Name and Address correspond with the above. The general appearance of the spurious descriptions will deceive the unguarded, and for their detection J. B. and Son submit the following caution:—Some are in appearance at first sight "Burgess' Essence of Anchovies;" others, "Burgis's," and many more without address.—JOHN BURGESS and SON having been many years honoured with such distinguished approbation, feel every sentiment of respect towards the public, and earnestly solicit them to inspect the labels previous to purchasing what they conceive to be of their make, which they hope will prevent many disappointments.

Burgess' New Sauce for general purposes having given such great satisfaction, continues to be prepared by them, and is recommended as a most useful and convenient sauce; will keep good in all climates.

Warehouse, 107, Strand, corner of the Savoy Steps.—The Original Fish-Sauce Warehouse.

MOGUL, OR REAL CHETNA SAUCE.

C. HODGSON, ORIGINAL INVENTOR AND SOLE PROPRIETOR, is induced to caution his Friends and the Public against several spurious Sauces offered for sale, under the title of "MOGUL, or REAL CHETNA."

C. H. will feel obliged if each purchaser of the above delicious Sauce will please to observe the Label: which should be signed, "C. HODGSON," and the Cork, sealed and impressed, "HODGSON'S MOGUL SAUCE," without which none can be genuine.

C. H. also begs to acquaint those who have not yet made a trial of this much approved Sauce, that the flavour will be found quite different, and far superior to any yet offered, for all kinds of Curries, Steaks, Stews, Chops, Hashes, Game, Grills, Broiled and Wild Fowl, Cold Meat, and for enriching Gravies, &c., and feels assured, that when tasted, it will fully justify what he has above stated. To Merchants and East and West India Captains, it is strongly recommended, being warranted to retain its full flavour in any climate.

To be had at the manufactory, No. 68, Long Lane, Borough, London, at the Piazza Coffee-house, Covent-garden, the Queen's Head Tavern, Holborn, and at any of the principal Oilmen and Grocers in Town and Country.

THE BRITISH SPECIFIC, for re-producing and promoting the GROWTH of HAIR.—The principle of its operation is to cool and contract the pores which fire opened by a redundancy of heat, occasioning a relaxation of the roots, and render them incapable of retaining the hair; to counteract which nothing is better calculated than the British Specific, as, from its invigorating and oleaginous properties, it almost immediately arrests the falling off, and affords such effectual nourishment to the roots, that persons giving it a fair trial may assure themselves of its speedily restoring it, even where it has become completely bald, however long it may have been so, and, if grey, gradually to restore it to its natural colour. The superiority of this preparation (the invention of a medical man) derives additional recommendation from its being, unlike other compositions for the hair, so extremely clean and agreeable, that its application is a real pleasure, and is only requisite to be generally known to receive the preference of every article in use for similar purposes. To be had only of D. PEDEN, 209, Regent-street, and 15, Burlington Arcade, Piccadilly, in bottles, 6s. each, or cases of four bottles for 1l., forward to order on receiving the amount, post paid.

NEW EDITION, THE TENTH, ENLARGED,

With Observations on the Danger of trusting to Nostrums, as an Internal Remedy for the Cure of Strictures. Illustrated by Cases. Price 3s.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS on STRICTURES of the URETHRA and RECTUM, recommending an improved system for their Treatment and Cure; illustrating its efficacy by numerous remarkable and highly important cases, in some of which, Strictures of from ten to twenty years duration have been totally removed in a few weeks, and its superiority thereby fully established over every other method hitherto practised. By C. B. COURTENAY, M.D. To which are added, Observations and Practical Comments on Gleet, Seminal Weakness, and the miseries occasioned by Self Abuse, for the cure of which a mode of treatment, the result of long and successful practice, and at once safe, speedy, and effectual, is adopted by the Author.

Printed for the Author, Robert-street, Adelphi: and published and sold by Jones and Sherwood, Paternoster-row; Onwhyn, 4, Catherine-street, Strand; Chapell, Royal Exchange; Marsh, 145, Oxford-street; Walker, 90, High Holborn; Chappell, 94, Pall Mall; Sutherland, 9, Carlton-street, Edinburgh; and may be had of all Booksellers.

"We earnestly recommend the cases related by Dr. Courtenay to the perusal of such of our readers as are afflicted with the complaints which the Author has made the subject of these Observations. Several instances are adduced of the recovery of perfect health from states which were considered hopeless by Practitioners of eminent talents, and very extensive experience. We entertain the highest opinion of Dr. Courtenay's professional skill, and congratulate him on his successful and judicious application to these severe and often fatal diseases."—European Magazine.

BIRTHS.—At Usage House, East Barnet, Herts. The Lady of Sir Thomas Whelan, of a son.—On the 3d inst, the Lady of the Rev. R. B. Grenlaw, of Ealing, of a daughter.—On the 2nd instant, in Upper Berkeley-street, Portman-square, the lady of Francis Swinfen, Esq. of a daughter.

MARRIED.—On the 3d inst. at Norwood Green, Middlesex, J. P. Beavan, Esq. of Clifford-street, to Jane, eldest daughter of the late W. A. Thackthwaite, Esq.—S. Eastaugh, cordwainer, to Sarah Watling, both of Darsham, in Suffolk. The ring was purchased and the fees amounting to 9s. paid by the bridegroom all in farthings!—Oct. 2. at St. James's Church, Bristol, James Dodsley Cuff, Esq. of Stockwell, Surrey, to Sarah, only daughter of Mr. Barry, of Montague Parade, Bristol.—On the 3d inst. at Bishop's Stortford, Herts, Mr. J. Battyll, of Stapleford, Cambridgshire, to Miss Elizabeth Shaw, niece of the late Mrs. Sheffield, Rochester, Kent.—At Dunstable, on the 2d. inst F. Arnold, Esq. of Queen's College, Cambridge, to Jane, eldest daughter of the Rev. S. Piggott, Rector of Dunstable.—G. A. Crawley, Esq. of the Inner Temple, to Caroline, third daughter of David Powell, Esq. of Loughton, Essex.—Major T. A. Brandreth, of the Royal Artillery, to Mary, widow of the late Major Bennet, of the Royal Engineers.

DEATHS.—John Jacob Hind, Esq. of Langham Hall, Essex, aged 72.—Mr John Boreham, of Sudbury, aged 86.—Mr. James Taylor, of Great Oakley, aged 82.—At Sudbury, Mr. Christopher Hill, of the Corn Exchange, Mark-lane.—At his seat, Denne Park, Sussex, James Eversfield, Esq. aged 31.—Oct. 3, at Newtown, St. Loe, the Rev. Geo. Hawkins.—On the 3d inst. at Peckam House, Surrey, Henry Smith, Esq. in the 85th year of his age.—On the 27th ult. at the Vicarage of Milton, the Rev. John Yates,—At Maldon, in a rapid decline, Lieut. E. Hundson, R. N. in the 34th year of his age.—September 25, Mr. T. Crafter, of the Bricklayer's Arms Inn, Kent-road, aged 55 years.—On the 30th of Sept at Hare Hatch, aged 48, the Rev. Phillip Trant Nind, Vicar of Wargrave Berks.—On Wednesday last, in Sloane-street, Ann, relict of the late Frogmere Cummins, Vicar of Cardington, Bedfordshire.—At Guilford, on Friday the 22d ult. at a very advanced age, Mrs. Tickner, relict of the late Mr. Tickner, Alderman of that Borough.

London: Printed and Published by R. D. RICHARDS, at 343, Strand, corner of Catherine-street.

THE AGE.

"THE VERY AGE AND BODY OF THE TIME."

VOL. II. No. 79. SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 12, 1826. Price 7d.

THEATRE ROYAL, DRURY LANE.—On Monday, the Tragedy of Douglas, with Der Freischutz, and other Entertainments. On Tuesday, the Will, the Knights of the Cross, and other Entertainments. On Wednesday, the Devil's Bridge, and the Miller's Maid. On Thursday, Cymbeline, with the White Lady.

THEATRE ROYAL, HAYMARKET.—To MORROW Evening, Quite Correct, and Paul Pry.—Tuesday, Paul Pry, with Fish out of Water. In the course of the evening, Madame Vestris will sing Buy a Broom.—Wednesday, Paul Pry, with John of Paris, and a Farewell Address, to be spoken by Madame Vestris, with other entertainments, being the last night of the Company's performance this Season.

ADELPHI THEATRE, Strand.—On Monday, and during the Week, will be performed an entirely new splendid Comic Burletta, called The Barber and his Brothers. The Barber, Mr. Wrench, with the Married Bachelor; after which The Runaway. To conclude with Tom Thumb.

Boxes, 4s. Pit, 2s. Gallery, 1s. Doors open at 6, commence ½ before 7.

DIORAMA, REGENT'S PARK.—The two Views now exhibiting, are The Interior of Rosslyn Chapel, painted by Mons. Daguere, and a View of the City of Rouen, taken from Mount St. Catherine's, painted by Mons. Bouton, with various effects of light and shade, producing the most extraordinary illusion to the spectators.

N.B. Fine weather is not essential for seeing the present Views, as the appearance of sunshine is produced with equal effect on the most cloudy day. The Dimension of each picture is 70 feet by 50—Open daily from 10 till 4 o'clock.

DRURY-LANE, COVENT-GARDEN, ADELPHI.

Private Boxes at the Theatres, per Season or per Night,
In the choicest situations, both for hearing and for sight;
Inviolable Sanctums—Terms, the lowest ever made,
Enquire of CHARLES WRIGHT,—via, Opera Colonnade.
N. B. Champagne Imperial, the Cheapest in the Trade.

To follow the TIGER,

FOR VAN DIEMEN'S LAND and NEW SOUTH WALES, the beautiful, new first class brig, LION, ALEXANDER KENN, (late of the William Shand), Commander. Burthen 275 Tons. Lying in the London Dock. Has excellent Accommodations for Passengers. For Freight or Passage apply to Buckles, Bagster, and Buchanan, 33, Mark Lane.

WANTS a Situation as a Lady's Maid,—understands Hair Dressing, and Dress Making, has lived many years in that situation; speaks good French, has no objection to travel abroad. The most unexceptionable references can be given. Further particulars will be given at the Spread Eagle Coach Office, No. 18, Castle Square, Brighton.

LADIES at the COAST.—The PARISIAN SCOTCH WRAPPING CLOAK, of every Clan, are ready for the Season, at ROBERTSHAW and Co.'s Warehouse, 99 and 100, Oxford-street.—Ladies sending their height, the colour or clan, and a remittance, will meet with immediate attention.

BARBARY WALL-FLOWER SNUFF, to be had only of the Importer, GEORGE EDLIN, Importer of Foreign Snuffs and Segars, No. 6, Aldgate, corner of Saracen's Head Inn, and of his Agent, Mr. J. Nobil, 81, Lower Grosvenor-street, Bond-street.

GENUINE EAU DE COLOGNE.—Just received direct from Messrs. R. E. and M. Farina, of Cologne, a fresh supply of this celebrated article, of the finest quality, and to be had of J. C. Hose, late Kinnard, 309, High Holborn, two doors from Chancery-lane.

REMOVAL.—Mr. CLARK, DENTIST, begs leave to acquaint his Friends, that he has REMOVED from Grosvenor-street, to 35, Brunton-street, Berkeley-square.

MR. G. WAITE, SURGEON-DENTIST, Member of the Royal College of Surgeons, Author of "The Surgeon-Dentist's Manual," &c. Associate of several English and Foreign Literary Societies, &c. will commence a Course of Lectures on the Teeth on Friday, the 24th instant, at half-past Seven o'Clock, p. m.—Particulars to be had at Mr. Waite's residence, 2, Old Burlington-street.

MR. GUTHRIE will commence his LECTURE on the Anatomy and Diseases of the Eye, on Thursday, the 17th instant, at ten o'clock, at the Royal Westminster Infirmary for Diseases of the Eye, Warwick-street, Golden-square.

Students attending Mr. Guthrie's Evening Lectures on the Principles, Practice, and Operations of Surgery, are entitled, of right, to the Lectures on Diseases of the Eye.

DISEASES of the SKIN, SCROFULA, and CANCER.

MR. FARR will commence his next Course of LECTURES on the Physiology, Pathology, and treatment of these diseases, TUESDAY, the 21st of November. These Lectures are designed and given for the instruction of Medical Students.

A new and improved mode of Treatment will be proposed for Diseases which have hitherto been considered Incurable, and the fallacy of such opinions fully proved by references to cases already cured.

For further particulars apply to Mr. Farr, 29, Upper Montague-street, Montague-square.

TO Surgeons, Apothecaries, and Chymists.—To be disposed of, a good Retail and Practice in a populous and most respectable Neighbourhood, a small distance from London, where no other of the Profession is near. Not one farthing wanted to be laid out in any way whatever. It has been recently newly fitted up in a neat and handsome manner; established eight years, rent very low, house very commodious, coming-in from 400l. to 500l. including a good Lease, House Fixtures, &c.—For Particulars apply (if by letter, post paid), at Mr. Hose's, Druggist, 309, High Holborn, or at Mr. Gill's, Printing-house-square, near Apothecaries'-hall.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH.—MR. WM. BEACALL, and Mr. ROSE, Surgeon Dentists, 13, Newman-street, Oxford-street having with unremitting diligence long made the Science of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, where mechanical contrivance is requisite, their peculiar study, continues to supply the loss of Teeth, with Natural or Artificial, in a superior manner, without the least pain, from a single Tooth to a complete Set, at little more than one-half the usual charges. Teeth cleaned if ever so discoloured, and rendered white and beautiful, without pain or injury to the enamel. Extracting, Stopping, and every operation on the Teeth and Gums.—Attends at home from Ten till Four.

BRADBERRY'S PATENT SPECTACLES, upon unerring principles, to preserve the sight to extreme old age. It is necessary to caution the public against the use of improper Spectacles, as their effects prove injurious, instead of beneficial to the eye. The unremitted and anxious study Mr. BRADBERRY has paid to his glasses for upwards of 30 years, has called forth the most distinguished approbation of their merit from the medical profession, and from many thousands of persons of the highest rank and respectability.—To be had only at 28, Holles-street, the first door out of Oxford-street, next to the large Fruiterer's at the corner, facing Hanover-square, and at no other place in the United Kingdom.—Orders from the country immediately attended to. Removed from 332, Oxford-street.

TURKEY COFFEE of the FINEST QUALITY, at the following reduced prices:—Raw, 2s. 6d. per lb.—Roasted, 3s. per lb. The Public are respectfully informed, that Government having reduced the Duty on Turkey Coffee, they may now purchase that article at the above-mentioned reduced prices, warranted of the finest quality, at John Marshall and Company's Tea and Coffee-Warehouse, No. 12, Southampton-street, Strand.

TURKEY CARPETS.—C. HINDLEY, having received upwards of Three Hundred real Turkey Carpets, some of which are of very large dimensions, begs to remind the Nobility and Public, he is selling them at nearly half the usual charge, and any size of the most brilliant colours and quality may be had, warranted free from damage, at the Carpet Warehouse, 32, Berners-street, Oxford-street, where all applications will be duly answered.—Some slightly damaged very cheap.

THE IMPROVED SILK HAT ON BEAVER.—For Cash only.

They are made to suit the natural form of the Head.
The Colour is permanent. For durability, shape, and quality, they are unrivalled..... } 15s.

HUGH FRANKS & Co.
Patentees of Improved Waterproof Hats,
Corner of Queen Street 70, CHEAPSIDE.

NEW COMIC SONGS—Published by T. HOLLOWAY, No. 5, Hanway-street, Oxford-street.

	COMPOSERS.	SINGERS.
"All the Blue Bonnets"	Somebody	Any body.
"Phrenology"	do.	do.
"Buy a Brush"	do.	do.
"Apple Fritters"	Mr. Fry.	Everybody.
"Oh 'tis Love, 8th Edition"	Somebody	Nobody.
"The Hussars"	do.	The Tenth.

Sold also by H. FALKNER, 3, Old Bond-street.

☞ The Public are cautioned against numerous imitations of these Classical Compositions, which are never out of print.

"NOW ALL THE TOWN IS CHERRY RIPE," a Medley Ballad, founded on Twelve Popular Songs sung by Madame VESTRIS, viz. "Cherry Ripe," "I've been Roaming," "Buy a Broom," (by Horn), "The Knight was Brave," "The Plain Gold Ring," &c. &c. by T. Williams, published at No. 2, Strand, and sold by all Music-sellers, Price 2s.

New Editions of the following established Pieces:—"Hark! Italy's Music" (Three Voices), Horn, 3s.; "Beside the Low Grot," ballad, T. Cooke, 1s. 6d.; "The Wolf is Out," new bass Song, ditto, 2s.; "Hark through the Woods," duett, ditto; "The Watch-Word," duett, Horn, 2s. 6d.; "George and Victory," duett, 2s. 6d.—N. B. Mr. Horn's New Ballad "Hafez' Love," will be out in a day or two.

ROSSINI'S LAST NEW OPERA.—Just published by Willis and Co. 55, St. James-street (opposite Jermyn-street), London, and 7, Westmoreland-street, Dublin.

The Overture, Songs, Duetts, Trios, and Chorusses, with English and French Words of "Rossini's New Opera," "The Siege of Corinth," which is now performing at the Academie Royale," with distinguished applause.

Willis and Co. beg to acquaint the public that the Opera of "The Siege of Corinth," and that of Maometto 2nds (also by Rossini) are two distinct works, and that the "Siege of Corinth" cannot be published by any other house in this country than that of J. Willis and Co. whose exclusive property it is.

A few of the pieces in this Opera are selected by the Composer from his Opera Maometto, but with considerable alterations and additions, and which can only be published by Willis and Co.

 In the Press, Labarre's Fantasia, and Variations for the Harp, on the favourite Greek March in Rossini's new Opera "The Siege of Corinth;" also, Labarre and de Beriot's Fantasia for the Harp and Violin, on the celebrated Chorus sung during the deposition of the Greek Flag in the above highly popular Opera.

THE BROOM GIRL'S SONG.—A great assortment of Guitars by the most approved Makers, for sale or on hire MORI & LAVENU, 28, New Bond-street.

Gentle Ladies fare ye well, arranged as a Song, Duet, or Trio, set to one of their national Melodies, sung by them in the streets of London, the poetry by Wm. Balls, price 2s.

Buona Sera Mio Signore, from Rossini's Opera of Il Barbiere di Seviglia, arranged for the Pianoforte by Angs. Meves, price 3s.

The Beauties of Winter's Opera of the Oracle, arranged for the Pianoforte; with flute and violoncello accompaniments ad lib. by Pio Cianchettini, price 4s.

The White Lady Quadrilles, taken from Boildieu's Opera, La Dame Blanche, arranged for the Pianoforte, by M. Dunvis, price 3s.

Weber's two Grand Overtures, the Jubilee, and Ruler of the Spirits, arranged as Quintetts by Masi, price 12s.

The Braes of Ballandyne	Miss Paton.	Pio Cianchettini
Bonny Brave Scotland	Ditto.	R. Gow
O where's the harm of a little kiss	Mad. Vestris.	J. Watson
Ah Maiden Gardez vous	Ditto.	Ditto
Blue Bonnets are over the borders	Mr. Braham	Cianchettini
Young Mary	Mr. Phillips	Dr. Arne.

Just Published, in 3 vols. post 8vo. price 27s.

RECOLLECTIONS of a PEDESTRIAN. By the Author of "The Journal of an Exile."

"The light and lively sketches which fill these volumes, are evidently written by one who has not walked from Dan to Beersheba only to find all barren, but who has certainly made use of both his powers of amusement and information, in his description and animated narratives.—LITERARY GAZETTE.

Printed for SAUNDERS and OTLEY, Public Library, Conduit-street.

NEW AND ELEGANT STUDY.

Just Published, in one large vol. 8vo. with 20 plates, price 21s. plain, 30s. coloured, FLORAL EMBLEMS. By HENRY PHILLIPS, F. L. and F. H. S., Author of "Pomarium Britannicum, &c.

This work is designed to embody all that could be gathered from the most eminent writers on the beautiful adaptations of Floral Language, and hence to teach the practice of that delicate and amusing mode of communication, of which Lady M. W. Montagu speaks, when she says, that "in Turkey you may, through the assistance of these 'Emblems,' either quarrel, reproach, or send letters of passion, friendship, or even news, without ever inking your fingers, no fruit or flower being without a verse attached to it." The Grammar and Dictionary which the work contains, exemplify the Theory, and the Plates the Practice, of this elegant Art.

Printed for SAUNDERS and OTLEY, Public Library, Conduit-street.

BRITISH and FOREIGN PUBLIC SUBSCRIPTION LIBRARY, 50, Harley-street, Cavendish Square.

The Nobility and Gentry are respectfully informed that subscribers to this Library are supplied with every new work, the instant of publication.

Subscribers also have the right of choosing from a most extensive and valuable collection, whatever books they may desire in all languages, which are regularly forwarded to them immediately on application.

E. LLOYD & SON, are most desirous of rendering this Library as complete as it is possible, and they can with confidence assure the Public that it possesses facilities not commonly to be met with in Circulating Libraries in general. Any work of merit and general interest, not to be met with in the Catalogue, Subscribers may direct the purchase of.

Catalogues and Terms to be had on application, or sent to any part of London and the Country.

NEW PARLIAMENT.—In 1 vol small 8vo. price 6s. 6d.

THE POLITICAL PRIMER; or ROAD TO PUBLIC HONORS.

The object of this Work is to initiate the young political aspirant in the art of making a figure in the House. Among the subjects discussed are:—"Speaking in general"—"Speaking to a circle of Friends"—"Speaking at Convivial Meetings"—"Speaking in the House of Commons, in the House of Lords, and in Council, before the King"—"On Petitions to the Legislature"—"On Memorials." The Work contains, also, Hints and Rules for rendering the Art of Electioneering quite easy to the most unpractised capacity.

"This is a book of very considerable talent."—TIMES.

"The Author displays no slight knowledge of human nature, and of the arts by which public men in this country make the people subservient to their views."—MORNING CHRONICLE.

Printed for Henry Colburn, 8, New Burlington Street. (Removed from Conduit Street.)

Just published by HENRY COLBURN, New Burlington-street, (removed from Conduit-street.)

THE TOR HILL. By the Author of Brambleyte House." 3 vols. post 8vo.

"Oh! what was love made for, if 'tis not the same
Thro' joy and thro' torments, thro' glory and shame?
I know not, I ask not, if guilt's in that heart;
I but know that I love thee, whatever thou art! THOMAS MOORE.

2. RECOLLECTIONS of the LIFE of JOHN O'KEEFFE (the Veteran Comic Dramatist.) Written by himself. And comprising numerous very curious and original Anecdotes of distinguished persons, in England and Ireland, from the year 1755 to the present time. In 2 vols. 8vo. with a Portrait, 28s.

3. THE YOUNG RIFLEMAN'S COMRADE, a Narrative of his Military Adventures, Imprisonment, and Shipwreck. Edited by Goethe; and printed uniformly with "The Adventures of a Young Rifleman;" in 1 vol. post 8vo. 9s. 6d.

4. A Second Edition of the ADVENTURES of a YOUNG RIFLEMAN. 1 vol. post 8vo. 9s. 6d.

5. A second Series of the O'HARA FAMILY. 3 vols. post 8vo.

And in a few days will be published,

6. MEMOIRS of the LIFE of MRS. SIDDONS. By James Boaden, Esq., interspersed with Anecdotes of Authors and Actors, and intended as a Companion to the Author's Life of Mr. Kemble. Printed uniformly, in 2 vols. 8vo. with a fine Portrait, engraved by Turner, from a Picture, by Sir Thomas Lawrence. Price 28s.

7. TALES of a VOYAGER.—Stories told at Sea during a Voyage recently made to the Arctic Ocean. Interspersed with curious anecdotes, and a Narrative of the various Adventures of the Voyage. 3 vols. post 8vo.

PIANOFORTES.—W. WALTER, (from Mr. Tomkison's) begs to recommend to those in want of a very superior Instrument, to inspect his stock of Grand, Cabinet, Cottage, and Square Pianos, which are warranted to be of the best description, at unusually low prices, and where the most decided satisfaction is not given, will be exchanged at the Manufactory, 118, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury.

MR. BELLAMY respectfully informs the Nobility and Gentry, his Patrons and Pupils, that his Academy will Open for the Season on Tuesday, the 21st instant. The study of Thorough Bass, and the principles of harmony on Mr. Logier's System as usual; as also the vocal school, upon Mr. Bellamy's peculiar method of Solfeggi. Days and hours of attendance, Tuesdays and Fridays from Ten to Four. Further particulars may be known on application at the Academy, No. 19, Upper Berkeley-street, Portman-square.

NEW MUSIC.—VOCAL.

"BUY A BROOM!" sung by Miss Love, composed by H. R. Bishop 2 0
"Bonnie Lassie," (Of a' the airts, &c.) composed by Mrs. Miles 2 6
"No longer the Song of the Lark," composed by J. Barnett 2 0
"Now the gentle Dews of Spring,"..... ditto 1 6
"Like the Flower of the the Valley,"..... ditto 1 6
"The King! God bless Him!" Sung and composed by Mr. Braham 2 0

 The Public are respectfully cautioned that the original "Buy a Broom," sung by Miss Love, is composed by Mr. Bishop.

PIANO-FORTE.

Burrowes' Airs from Winter's "Opferfest," as duets, in books, each, 4 0
——— Bishop's "Aladdin, do. and for piano-forte, in books, each 4 0
Dumon's——— Meyer's "Medea in Corinto," for piano-forte, in books, each 4 0
Rawlings' Rondo on the Air "Buy a Broom," 2 6
Neate's Pastoral Dance, Op. 13, dedicated to Lady Huntley..... 3 0
Potter's (C.) Rondo on "Bonnie Jem,"..... 3 0

 The admired Opera of "Medea in Corinto" is arranged for the harp and piano-forte, by N. C. Bochsa.

GOULDING and D'ALMAINE, 20, Soho-square.

Just Published,

THE Music in the admired popular Comic Opera, the Two Houses of Grenada, now performing at the Theatre-Royal, Drury-Lane, composed by J. Augustine Wade, Esq.

Where is the spring time of youth and of pleasure?—sung by Mrs. Geesin.
Ask not my Love—Bravura—ditto, ditto.
Love was once a little boy—sung by Miss Graddon.
Oh, ne'er with such bliss—ditto, ditto.
Oh, young maiden hearts beware—ditto, ditto.
If love's dream be o'er—sung by Mr. Braham.
Oh, do you remember the first time I met you—ditto, ditto.
Up, comrades, up—ditto, ditto.
Away, light vows of woman's love—sung by Mr. Horn.
For love and beauty's sake—ditto, ditto.
Love has its own sweet pleasures—Duet—sung by Mrs. Geesin and Miss Graddon.
I've wandered in dreams to the moonlight's home—Duet—sung by Mrs. Geesin and Mr. Braham.
Serenades are pleasant things—Comic duet—sung by Miss Cubitt and Mr Harley.
In what new home does love now dwell—Echo duet—sung by Mr. Horn and Miss Graddon.
Fair moon, on tow'r and tree, and stream—Duet—sung by Mrs. Geesin and Mr. Braham.
With love and thee—Duet—sung by Mrs. Geesin and Mr. Braham.

To be had of F. T. LATOUR, Musicseller to his Majesty, 50, New Bond-street.

MADAME VESTRIS'S NEW SONGS.

Just Published, by MAYHEW and Co., 17, Bond-street, London,

THE Bavarian Girl's Song, "BUY A BROOM," with an original and finely executed Portrait of Madame Vestris (in Character) by Gauci, arranged expressly for her, by Alexander Lee.—Price 2s.

NEW SONGS.	SINGERS.	COMPOSERS.
Love's Lahour Lost	Mad. Vestris,	Alex. Lee
Smiles and Tears	Ditto,	Ditto
England the Home of the World	Mr. Braham,	J. Barnett
Fancy dipp'd her Pen in Dew	Miss Stephens,	J. Whittaker
Light Guitar (4th edition)	Mad. Vestris,	J. Barnett
A Voice whispered softly, Dear Mary	Miss Love,	Geo. Perry
Yes, I will leave the festive Scene, in answer to the Light Guitar	Miss Paton,	J. Barnett
'Not a Drum was heard," the celebrated Ode on the Death of Sir John Moore	Mr. Sapio,	Ditto
Love's Delightful Hour	Mr. Pearman,	J. Emdin
The Queen of Bonnie Lasses	Mr. Braham,	J. Hart
The Joys of Liberty and Wine	Mr. Bedford,	Ditto
Paul Pry, "Hope I don't intrude," comic, with the original Portrait of Mr. Liston	Mr. Liston	Pigwiggin
The General Election, comic, written by Charles Dibdin the younger, with an illustration by Cruikshank	Mr. Mathews,	J. Barnett
Maiden, heedful be, The Token Flowers	Mad. Vestris,	Ditto
The Moorish Maiden	Mrs. Ashe,	J. Emdin
You ask a song, you bid me sing	Mr. Broadhurst,	G. Kiallmark
I left the Bowl in search of Love	Mr. Phillips,	Mr. Phillips

NEW MUSIC.—Just published at the ROYAL HARMONIC INSTITUTION, Argyll Rooms, 246, Regent-street, the Songs, Duets, &c. in The ORACLE, composed by WINTER, and newly arranged by W. HAWES.

	s.	d.
"Overture"	2	6
"The rosy dawn hath driven," Chorus.	5	0
"When battles conch is sounding," sung by Mr. Atkins	2	0
"The trumpet first is sounded," sung by Mr. Thorn	2	0
"We Maidens mark me," sung by Miss Goward,	1	6
"All hail to the God of our Fathers," Chorus	2	0
"Now by love and peace invited." Sestett and Chorus	3	6
"Oh when thine eye is throwing," Duet, Miss Paton and Sapio	2	6
"All powerful Sun," sung by Mr. Phillips	2	0
"There was a time ere sorrow," sung by Miss Paton	1	6
"Between my hopes and fears suspended," Duet, by Miss Paton and Phillips	2	6
"When will peace relieve my breast?" sung by Miss Hamilton	1	6
"How the plaguing varlet teases," Duet, by Miss Goward and Thorn	2	6
"We hail thee Lord of Light," Finale, 1st Act	10	0
"Tho' we all can feel thy sorrow," Quartett and Chorus	3	6
"In what sad hour," Trio	3	0
"Oh heavens! the thought is frightful," Duet.	2	6
"Hast never mark'd the flower," Song, Miss Boden	1	6
"The Maid who'd wish to slumber," Quartett	2	6
"The Gloomy terrors of the grave," Scena, Mr. Sapio	2	6
"Farewell, yet not for ever," Quartett	4	0
"The evening is descending," Finale	10	0

The Overture to "OBERON," arranged for a full Orchestra, by C. M. Weber, price 10s.

A New TREATISE on THOROUGH BASS, or the art of playing from a figured Bass, with examples, &c. &c. by Dr. Cretch.

Burrows's Selection of Airs from Weber's Opera of Oberon, arranged for the Piano Forte, with Flute adlib, in four books, each 4s.

I'VE BEEN ROAMING—Arranged by T. A. Rawlings, as a Rondo for the Pianoforte.

BOCHSA's Select Airs from the Oracle, for the Harp, and Pianoforte, with Flute and Violin accompaniments, 10s. 6d.; also the Overture to the above, arranged as above, price 5s.

DEATH FETCH.—The music in this admired and popular Opera, composed by C. E. Horn.

I'VE BEEN ROAMING.—Cavatina, sung by Madame Vestris, by C. E. Horn, price 2s.

OBERON.—The music in this popular Romantic and Fairy Opera, composed by the late Carl Maria Von Weber.

 The Proprietors of the ROYAL HARMONIC INSTITUTION beg most respectfully to acquaint the Public, that the only correct copies of the Opera now performing at the English Opera House, called "THE ORACLE," are published by them, and that all other copies are spurious and an Invasion of their rights.

N.B. The whole of the Music in the New Opera of PEVERIL OF THE PEAK, by C. E. Horn, now performing with such enthusiastic applause at the Theatre Royal Covent Garden, is now published, and may be had separate.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

GERMAN PAPERS.

ODESSA, Oct. 18.—The following is the substance of the important additional convention proposed by the Russian Commissioners at Akermann, and accepted by the Turkish negotiators. The article concerning Servia will probably make a great impression on all the Greeks.

Art. 1. Confirmation of the trenty of Bucharest, which is to be considered as inserted at full length in the present Convention.

Art. 2. Determination of the frontier in Bessarabia, according to article 4 of the treaty of Bucharest. The frontiers are to be determine as fixed in the protocol of the conference of August 21, 1817, between Baron Stroganoff and the Turkish Commissioners.

Art 3. All preceding conventions relating to the principalities of Moldavia and Wallachia are confirmed. The Porte engages to renew the Hatti Scheriff of 1802, within six months after the signing of the present Convention. In consideration of the present situation of those provinces, and it having been thought fit to intrust the government of them to Molldavian and Walachian Boyars, an alternative to which Russia has assented, the Porte accedes to the clauses which have been specified for this object in the convention. These clauses relate to the choice of the Princes, which, according to the ancient custom, is to be made by the two Divans, and confirmed by the Porte, which is only to give the investiture to the new Hospodars; to the re-eligibility of the Hospodars, their deposition, resignation, and the duration of their government; to regulations for the levy of the taxes and ground-rents, and the entire remission of these ground-rents for two years; to the return of the Boyars who have emigrated during the revolution; and the number of Beschlis and Bash Beschli Agas, which is fixed by the Hospodars and respective Divans, without any deviation from the proposition fixed before the year 1821.

Art. 4. As Russia, in conformity with the 3d article of the treaty of Bucharest, has restored to the Porte the conquered fortified places in Asia, the frontier between the two empires shall continue henceforth as it now is.

Art. 5. The advantages promised to the Servians by the 8th article of the treaty of Bucharest shall be given to them in the course of a year after the signing of the present convention. These advantages, as the deputies require them, are—the levying of the taxes and ground-rents once for all; the return of the districts (some villages) detached from Servia; freedom of trade, permission to travel with own passports, freedom of religion and of the administration of justice; the administration of estates situated in Servia belonging to Turkish owners, but with the obligation to give an account of the produce; the establishment of schools and printing-offices; the exclusion of the Turks from Servia, except garrisons in the fortresses, &c.—"Every other demand to be made by the Servians, which is not incompatible with the duty of good subjects to the Sultan, shall be granted by the Porte."

Art. 6. Liquidations of the concerns and claims of the subjects of both parties, including the robberies of the Barbary corsairs, and the damage done since 1821 by the violation of the existing treaties. A mixed commission shall conclude this liquidation in eight months, and the gross amount of the sums to be fixed shall be paid to the Russian legation at Constantinople.

Art. 7. This article is divided into four points:—

1. All the points contained in the 7th article of the treaty of Jassy, in regard to the Barbary Powers, are retained; and the Porte further engages, in the time of two months after the delivery of the reclamations of the Russian Legation, to make good to the Russian Legation, out of the Imperial treasury, every injury done by the Barbary States, in case the latter shall not immediately do so themselves, in compliance with the first firmans to be addressed to them for the purpose.

2. The Porte promises to fulfil all the obligations laid upon it by the commercial treaty with Russia of 1783, and especially the 21st, 31st, and 35th articles; as well as every thing that guarantees the free passage of ships under the Russian flag.

3. The Porte grants the trans-shipment of goods, and hinders every innovation.

4. The Porte accepts the good offices of Russia, with respect to the admission of all flags into the Black Sea that have hitherto been excluded from it.

Art. 8. The ratification of the present Convention shall take place within four weeks, or sooner if possible.

THE GREEKS.

The public is aware that the Greek nation has been not much better treated in America in the building and equipment of certain frigates, than in England in raising the money for paying this and other expenses resulting from the glorious struggle in which Greece is engaged. A pamphlet has been put into our hands, published at New York, on the subject of the frigates, by the Greek Deputy or Agent Contostavlos. The statement is to this effect:—That an application was made to two houses, that of Le Roy, Bayard, and Co. and that of G. G. and S. Howland, to build the frigates; that the houses in question accepted the job with gratitude; that they gave in an estimate for one frigate, amounting to 247,5000 dollars, and engaged to finish the two in six months. In the space, however, of five months, the contractors had already drawn for and received more by 200,000 dollars than the estimated cost of the two frigates, and neither of them were yet launched. The building of the frigates was, in truth, not announced as near its conclusion till eleven months from the commencement, instead of six; and then the expense of each, instead of 240,000 dollars, was 550,000 dollars; and the Greek Deputies were informed that they should not sail till the money was paid.

We have almost exhausted our fund of investigation and indignation on the English contractors for Greek loans; and therefore have but little left to bestow on the conduct of the American contractors. Suffice it to say, that a squabble ensued between M. Contostavlos and the two houses of Bayards and Howlands: law is had recourse to; arbitrators are appointed; their award is unsatisfactory; and to be brief, the pamphlet thus concludes:—(Times.)

"But, what will fill every bosom with horror, remains still to be told. I think I mentioned that the Deputies, in commissioning these two frigates, wrote to both houses not to undertake the building of them in case the laws of the United States should be opposed to their construction and departure. Messrs. Bayards and Howlands answered that there was no law to prevent it, and without any further trouble undertook their construction. It was now, during the arbitration, contended by my counsel, and must be acknowledged on all hands, that this transaction was illegal, and that the frigates were subject to seizure and confiscation at every moment, and at the instigation of any man who should choose to be an informer. Was it then generous, was it just, was it Christianlike, in these arbitrators, after having awarded to these houses a commission amounting altogether to 86,381 dollars 60 cents for the building of these two frigates, to award and order their balances to be paid, and throw upon a foreigner not only the whole responsibility of the law, but also the impossibility of sending out this last resource to his his country?—Generous reader, whoever you are, calm your anxiety. The frigate, the only frigate, which cost 155,000l. sterling to the Greek nation, is now on her way to Greece. For the same country that gave birth to these arbitrators, gave also existence to Henry D. and Robert Sedgwick; without whose intervention and assistance, the generous way in which, through their disinterested solicitations, a bond to an amount of 600,000 dollars has been signed by several individuals, and their unparalleled exertions, the frigate, with this award, could never leave these American shores! These two gentlemen, with the upright and noddle-minded John Duer and B. Robinson, constituted my counsel. The noble, the independent, the fatherly way (for friendly does not express half the feelings of my heart) in which they have defended this sacred cause, has acquired for them my gratitude and the gratitude of my country."

STATE OF TRADE.

The linen trade of Dundee still continues flat, and many are out of employment. The late rise in flax and yarns has not been followed by a corresponding rise in the manufactured article; and though a fair profit is obtained by those who were able to purchase largely at the low prices, yet it requires no great discrimination to perceive that such a trade cannot long be pursued to advantage. Either yarns must fall or cloth must rise. Of the latter, we are sorry to say, there is at present no prospect. The mill-spinners feel no necessity of reducing the price of yarns; for several very respectable manufacturing houses in the sister kingdom have found their way to the Dundee market, and purchased flax yarn to a great extent.—Montrose Review.

The state of the cotton trade has been worse during the last fortnight in this quarter. Fewer sales of yarn have been made, and some descriptions have been disposed of a shade lower. That the attempt of the operatives in this branch of manufacture to maintain the same prices for spinning as when yarns sold a third higher, is considered hopeless by themselves, may be inferred from the fact, that several of the staunchest adherents of the combination are now making zealous application at the mills that are not stopped, for liberty to work at the reduced prices.—Glasgow Chronicle.

The state of trade is a barren, and just now an unpleasant, subject, because we have it not in our power to announce any change for the better. Business at Manchester is dull, and consequently much depressed here also: many weavers are without employ, and if our poor committee did not contrive to employ a considerable number in improving some parts of the town, the most direful distress would be felt. By their exertions, and those of the Ladies' Clothing Charity, whose labours are most indefatigable and praiseworthy, the poor are just kept from starvation; but, nevertheless, it is heart-rending to observe the difference in the persons and cottages of the poor weavers, compared with what they were ten or even five years ago. How they are to endure the rigour of the coming winter, we really cannot imagine, and we fear that, unless a very speedy alteration take place in trade, the petty shopkeepers will be reduced to an equally destitute condition.—Blackburn Mail.

MURDER AT CARLISLE.

[From the Carlisle Patriot.]

On Monday last, John Ray, of Carlisle, labourer, was committed to Carlisle Gaol, charged on the verdict of a coroner's inquest, with the murder of Jane Myers. It appeared that on the night of Saturday, the 7th of October, the prisoner and others were in Myer's room in Ritson's-lane, drinking whiskey, when some angry words arose between Myers and Ray, in consequence of her refusal to fetch more liquor. After this, all the parties left the room, except the prisoner, the deceased, and a girl of the town named Draper. Ray recurred to the deceased's refusal to get the whiskey; and not satisfied with using threatening language, he knocked the old woman off her chair, violently kicked her in various parts of the body, and dragged her about the room by her feet, &c. The poor woman cried out that he was murdering her. At this moment the persons who had previously been in the room returned and knocked at the door. Ray looked out at the window, and said that he had done the old woman's business for her. He then left the house, and Myers with difficulty got into bed with Draper. The next day the prisoner returned. He went to Myers's bed, threw aside the curtains, and unfeelingly asked her how she was after the good licking he gave her on the preceding night; he also again indulged in language amounting to a declaration that his intention had been and was murder. The deceased kept her bed, and grew worse; but no medical man was called in till within a few days before her death, when she was visited by Mr. Graham, surgeon. He found marks of blows, and swellings on her head, breast, sides, and other parts of her body; and the patient laboured under strong fever, resulting from the injuries she had received, and this fever terminated her life. Mr. Graham expressed an opinion, however, that if medical advice had been obtained sooner, the blows would not have proved mortal. Other evidence was produced, corroborative of the prisoner's threatening language, and the Jury returned a verdict of "Wilful Murder."

Ray has before been in gaol on a charge of theft, and the whole of the parties concerned, in fact, are persons of bad character and immoral habits.

MURDERS NEAR LEATHERHEAD.

Ever since the perpetration of the murders at Fetcham, considerable suspicion has been attached to a man named William Page, alias Cobbler Will, the paramour of Mary Ayres, the granddarghter of John Akehurst, who was so inhumanely murdered on the night of the 13th of October. Although every exertion has been made since the murders to discover the retreat of the nbove individuals, no intelligence whatever was learnt respecting them until Saturday morning last, when it appears Mary Ayres went into the shop of a tobacconist at Weybridge, and having asked to be supplied with half an ounce of tobacco, commenced of her own accord to converse on the subject of the late murders to the person who served her. "Why," said she, "I have heard lately, that John Akehurst and his housekeeper Elizabeth Haynes, have been murdered at Fetcham."—"Yes," said the shopkeeper, "and a dreadful murder it has been." She replied, "Then John Akehurst was my grandfather, and the man that I live with is the person who is suspected of having committed the murders." She then said, "My name is Mary Ayres, and I am now going towards Oakshot, where my father and mother live, to show them and the world that I am innocent." The tobacconist allowed her to depart; but soon after she had left Weybridge, she was met by a constable named Watson, who, it appears, had gained previous information of the road she had taken. When the constable first saw her she was walking along the road, smoking a pipe of tobacco. Watson then said, "I am a constable, and am going over to Fetcham, have you any objection to accompany me there?" "Not the least in the world," answered Mary Ayres; "I shall go wherever you like to take me, conscious of my innocence." Watson then drove on to Fetcham, to the residence of J. Hankey, Esq., where an examination of this woman took place before that gentleman, the Rev. J. G. Bolland, and the Rev. Mr. Heberden. The examination took place at a late hour on Saturday night.

Mr. Bolland then commenced the examination, and put the following questions to her:—

Mr. Bolland—You are the grand-daughter of John Akehurst, who was murdered lately in his cottage at Fetcham?—"Yes, Sir, I am," said she.

Mr. Bolland—Where were you on the 11th of Oct. the day on which Leatherhead fair began?

Mary Ayres having taken a short time to recollect herself, said, "Oh, the 11th of October, I was at Weyhill fair, in Hampshire, along with Will Page."

How long ago is it since you saw your parents at Oakshot?—The last time I saw them was in the latter end of September.

Who was with you at the time?—Will Page was along with me.

Where did you go from thence?—We went from thence to Catherine Hill fair, which was held on the 2d of October. After the fair was over, we went to Basingstoke, from thence across to Petersfield fair; after that we proceeded to Winchester, and as it was then drawing near the time for Weyhill fair, we then began our journey in that direction, and arrived at Andover the day previous to Weyhill fair, which we entered on the 11th of October.

Mr. Bolland—Can you bring forward any persons to prove they had seen you at the fair you speak of?—Yes, Sir, there is a man named Bignold, who travelled with Will Page and myself; he is in the neighbourhood of Fetcham now, and will prove what I have stated to be correct. There were also two Irishmen in our company during the whole time we stayed at Weyhill; those men could be easily found to prove the fact.

What have you been doing since the conclusion of Weyhill fair?—Why we packed up, and came on the road towards home, and on the way called at several other minor fairs in our route.

Mr. Bolland—When did you hear the report of your grandfather and his housekeeper having been murdered?—We did not hear of them until within the last week or so.

Mr. Bolland, as well as the other Magistrates, expressed considerable surprise at the circumstance, and asked whether or not, soon after leaving Weyhill, she did not hear any persons speak on the subject of the murders that had been committed near Leatherhead?

Mary Ayres accounted for the circumstance of not hearing of the murders, by saying that neither herself nor Will Page were in the habit of having scarcely any intercourse with the people of the towns which they passed through.

Mr. Bolland asked her the name of the place where she first heard the report of the murders?—She replied that it was at a village not many miles from Weybridge. On hearing it, they hastened forward to that place; and on their arrival she went into a tobacconist's shop, and told the shopkeeper that her name was Mary Ayres, and of the suspicion that was attached to herself and Will Page, as being the perpetrators of the murders.

Mr. Hankey—Where did you leave Page? How is it that he did not come forward with you?—Mary Ayres replied that Page was now in his tent at Weybridge; that he directed her to go on to Oakshot, and promised to meet her on the following day at that place; adding, that he would carry the tent and the whole of their baggage, and be with her in the afternoon at Oakshot.

The Magistrates here sent a messenger over to the Bell public-house, where the man named Bignold before alluded to, was in waiting. Bignold (on his arrival) swore that he was in company with Mary Ayres and Wm. Page from the commencement to the conclusion of Weyhill fair; that he afterwards travelled with them to other fairs on their way back into Surrey, and added, that none of them heard of the murders of her grandfather and Elizabeth Haynes until their arrival within a short distance of Weybridge. He concluded his evidence by saying, that it was impossible for any one to assert with truth that Mary Ayres had been seen in the neighbourhood of Leatherhead during the fair at that place.

At this stage of the investigation, messengers were dispatched for the purpose of bringing forward a man named Smith, who, it will be recollected, had asserted, soon after the murders were perpetrated, that he had seen Mary Ayres at Leatherhead fair. This man, on being confronted with the woman, having closely examined her features and dress on the present occasion, and having been asked by Mr. Bolland whether he was still of the same opinion as to her identity, replied that he was still convinced that she was the person whom he had seen in the fair.

Mr. Bolland here very closely questioned Smith on the points which he had asserted, and the Magistrates all concurred in the opinion that Smith must have been mistaken with regard to the identity of the woman.

On the day following (Sunday), a constable having been sent to take Page into custody, met that individual on the road from Weybridge, coming towards town, and apprehended him. Page did not evince any agitation on apprehension; but, on the contrary, said that he was most happy to go any where, or before any persons, to vindicate his character from the imputation that now attached to it.

Mr. Bolland (to Page)—How long ago is it since you were at Leatherhead fair?

Page said that he had not been there since last October twelve months, and requested that if any persons were now present who asserted such a circumstance, that he should be most anxious to be confronted with them, in order to convince the Magistrates that there was no truth in the assertion.

Several individuals who were present at Leatherhead fair, and were in attendance on the present occasion, were now asked whether they had seen Page or Ayres in the fair? No person, however, came forward to prove that important fact, except Smith, who still adhered to his former statement respecting the identity of Mary Ayres; but he could not take upon himself to swear that he had ever seen Page until the present occasion.

The bundles belonging to Page were then ordered to be examined, but there was nothing found except some of their old clothes, their bedding, and shoemaker's tools, which he used in his business.

The Magistrates consulted together for a short time, and expressed their opinion that there was no evidence to warrant them in detaining either of the parties.

RE-APPREHENSION OF M. AYRES AND W. PAGE.

Watson having again searched the property of Will and Mary Ayres, found a gown and other articles, which he considered were important, as far as they confirmed the evidence of Smith. He therefore took Will and Mary Ayres again into custody, and had them locked up in the cage at Weybridge.

The following are the particulars of the investigation before the Rev. Mr. Bolland, which took place on Tuesday evening, at the Bell Tavern, Fetcham:—

Mr. Watson, the constable of Weybridge, was examined. He stated that he had searched the travelling baggage, apparel, &c. belonging to the prisoners, and found a considerable quantity of leather, and a variety of working tools used by Will in his business of shoemaking; he also found a velveteen jacket, a flannel jacket, and a pair of trowsers, which had spots of blood on them. He produced the articles, and the Magistrates examined them. He further stated that he found a gown, amongst other articles of wearing apparel belonging to Mary Ayres, which appeared to him to have marks of blood on it. This he produced to the Magistrate, who inspected it. Witness also produced a silver tea-spoon and two pint pots, the marks on which had been obliterated.

Cobbler Will exclaimed that it was all stuff about there being marks of blood on the clothes; so help him God, he and Mary were innocent of the murder, and the clothes had been spotted in consequence of their having been put on the sore back of a poor donkey.

The Rev. Mr. Bolland expressed much doubt if the marks on the apparel were caused by human blood.

Smith, who had previously stated that he saw Mary Ayres at Leatherhead fair, was re-examined, and he persisted in his former statement.

The Rev. Mr. Bolland did not seem to give much credit to this witness's evidence, and he observed that it was very strange, if Mary Ayres was at the fair both days, that only one individual in the town, where she was so well known, should be able to speak to that fact; and as she had surrendered herself, and confirmed her statement that she was at Weyhill fair at the time of the murder, by the testimony of Bignold, he did not think, upon such evidence as had been given against her, he should be warranted in committing her.

A question was put to the prisoner Page, alias Cobbler Will, relative to a case of highway robbery and horse-stealing. In reply, he used the most disgusting language; he told the Magistrate he might be cursed, and find them out. He was asked by what means he and Mary Ayres had obtained a subsistence for some time? He replied that sometimes he made shoes and sold them, sometimes he attended fairs, and sometimes Mary prostituted herself to get a few shillings, and they managed as well as they could, for all must live by some means or other. He did not care a curse what they did with him, and they might hang him the next minute.

The Magistrate told Cobbler Will to discontinue the use of such abominable language; and having consulted with Grassmith, the officer of Union-hall, upon the subject of some evidence which had been obtained against the prisoner, concerning a felony which had been committed in Hampshire, he (the magistrate) said, that he had made up his mind to commit Cobbler Will to Horsemonger-lane Gaol for re-examination on a future day.

Mary Ayres was asked if she would attend the next examination. She stated her willingness to come forward at any time.

Watson, the constable, stated, that he would keep possession of a horse and donkey, and the other property which he had seized belonging to Cobbler Will.

Cobbler Will swore that Watson wanted to steal the property; but the whole of it belonged to Mary Ayres, and had been bought with money of hers, and ought, as she had been discharged, to be delivered up to her.

Watson said something about expences which he had incurred in apprehending the prisoner; and said that the horse was Cobbler Will's, and not Mary Ayres's. He knew of whom Cobbler Will had bought the horse, and he thought that he ought to keep possession of it.

The Rev. Mr. Bolland said, that from the admission of Watson, it appeared that the horse had been fairly obtained by the prisoner, and he thought it ought not to be detained.

Watson did not concur with the opinion of the magistrate, and ventured to expostulate in no very moderate or polite terms against giving up the property; but the Magistrate insisted upon the constable returning it to Mary Ayres.

A warrant of commitment was made out against Cobbler Will, and given to Grassmith, who conveyed him in a chaise to Horsemonger-lane Gaol, where he arrived at ten o'clock at night.

Grassmith was despatched into the country early on Wednesday, by order of the Magistrates, for the purpose of collecting together all the clothes, tools, and other articles belonging to Page and Mary Ayres, in order to discover, on examination, whether amongst them any thing should be found that would be likely to lead to the discovery of the perpetrators of the murders. The officer having executed the duty upon which he was despatched, reached town again at an early hour on Thursday morning, bringing with him a variety of property belonging to Page, consisting chiefly of clothes, and the tools with which he worked at his trade of shoemaking. Shortly after his arrival, Hall, the chief constable, and Pople, the officer, both of whom have been absent for some days collecting information on the subject of the murders, brought up Mary Ayres in custody, from Fetcham.

At 11 o'clock, on the arrival of the presiding magistrate, R. J. Chambers, Esq., he directed the chief constable to proceed to Horsemonger-lane gaol, and bring before him Page and Mary Ayres. The prisoners were accordingly conducted to the office in a coach, followed by a vast multitude of people, who were anxious to get a sight of two individuals against whom strong suspicions has been attached ever since the commission of the murders.

The crowd had increased to such a degree before the entrance into the office, that it was found necessary to place constables outside in order to prevent the confusion and inconvenience attendant upon a mob of that description. Previous to the examination of the prisoners, R. Hedger and S. Davis, Esqrs., magistrates of the county, entered the office, when a conversation took place between them and Mr. Chambers, the result of which was, that it was judged necessary for the ends of public justice that the investigation should be strictly private for the present. The prisoners were therefore taken into the private parlour and separately examined before the above-named magistrates, on suspicion of having been implicated in the murders of John Akehurst and Elizabeth Haines. In the course of the investigation, which lasted from 11 o'clock until half-past 5 in the afternoon, several witnesses were examined, whose evidence corroborated that of Smith given before the Rev. Mr. Bolland, at Fetcham, with respect to the identity of Page and Ayres, as having attended Leatherhead fair on the 11th of October, two days previous to the perpetration of the murders. The man, nicknamed "Screw," was also examined, and his depositions were taken at great length by Mr. Staples, the chief clerk. They are of the utmost importance as regards the charges against the prisoners.

At the conclusion of the investigation, the magistrates, under all the circumstances of the case, remanded the prisoners for further examination on a future day, desirous that they should be kept separate while in gaol. They were then taken back to Horsemonger lane gaol in the coach which awaited for them, followed by a concourse of spectators.

MURDER.—A horrid crime was committed at a cottage on Barnet-common, about half-past 11 o'clock on the night of Saturday se'nnight, on a labouring man named Lawford, about 23 years of age, who had for these two years past cohabited with a female named Susan Bartrup, alias Long Snke. The parties had quarrelled, which they had often done before, and it appears she stabbed him immediately beneath the collar bone on the right side with such desperation that he died almost instantly. The wretched woman herself gave the first intimation of the affair, by running out of the cottage, and exclaiming, "Murder!" Her next door neighbour, Daniel Jenkins, on entering her apartment, and finding Lawford lying on the ground, ran to alarm others; and two persons, named Cook and Field, were soon on the spot, when they found the wretched woman, who had now become perfectly conscious of the horrid deed she had committed, supporting the head of the victim to her passion, but he had now expired. The parties immediately sent to two surgeons of the vicinity, and also for a constable to secure Susan Bartrup. It is hardly necessary to add, that on the arrival of the medical gentlemen, their professional aid was useless. The instrument with which Bartrup perpetrated the deed was a butcher's knife; it was found on the table, covered with a cloak. From the direction of the wound, it is conjectured that Lawford was reclining in a chair when the fatal blow was struck, as it is stated to us that his cheek was slightly grazed by the knife before it entered his side. An inquest sat on Monday to investigate the murder of John Lawford. A verdict of wilful murder was returned against Susan Bartrup, and she was committed to Hertford gaol.

On Monday morning last, a deliberate and atrocious murder was committed on a man of the name of Richard Power, an industrious tenant of Lord Clancarty, resident in the neighbourhood of Loughrea. It appears that this diabolical and bloody act was committed about day-light on the morning of Monday, by three men, who tied a rope round his neck in the first instance; and having nearly strangled him, were about departing, when the unfortunate man declared his knowledge of the parties, when they returned and finished the horrid deed. There is no possible cause assignable for this savage and premeditated murder, excepting that Power suffered his children to attend the school established in the neighbourhood; and the late harangues delivered by the priests and demagogues have inflamed the people's minds to a state of the most furious excitement.—Dublin Evening Mail.

O'Keeffe's Recollections of his Life, just published, will be found, as might naturally be expected, full of anecdote and droll scenes, detailed with the same humour which has made his "Wild Oats," his "Modern Antiques," and his other mirthful Dramas (in spite of their frequent repetition for the last thirty years) such constant favourites with theatrical audiences. His present Work is dedicated to his Majesty, who has, on more than one occasion, condescended to honour the Author with his special favour.

THE LORD MAYOR'S SHOW.

Thursday being the day appointed by prescriptive custom for swearing in the new Lord Mayor before the Barons of the Exchequer, and for the late Lord Mayor rendering up his accounts to them, most of the usual preparations were made for the performance of the ceremony with the customary pageantry.

Guildhall and the old Court of King's Bench were crowded with company long before five o'clock. The number of persons invited absolutely exceeded the accommodation which the spacious hall and the adjoining apartments afforded; and we observed several unfortunate wights, who could not obtain seats, eyeing, in much despair, the enviable situations which had been obtained by those gentlemen and ladies who had appeared early on the scene.

At half-past six the Lord Mayor entered the hall in grand procession, followed by the late Mayor, and a number of persons of distinction. Amongst them we observed the Earl of Liverpool, Mr. Canning, Mr. Peel, Mr. Huskisson, Prince Polignac (the French Ambassador), Lord Chief Justice Best, Mr. Justice Gaselee, Mr. Justice Holroyd, Chief Baron Alexander, Mr. Baron Hullock, the Master of the Rolls, Lord Mountcharles, Sir G. Cockburn, Sir B. Martin, &c.

The dinner (of which we cannot speak in very laudatory terms, nor yet of the wines, some of which, particularly the hock and a species of champagne, that savoured strongly of home-manufacture, were exceedingly bad), having been despatched with all due diligence,

The healths of the King, the Duke of York and the Army, and the Duke of Clarence and the Navy, were proposed and drank with the accustomed honours.

The Lord Mayor then proposed, with three times three, the "Health of the late Lord Mayor, wishing him every happiness and comfort in his retirement."

The late Lord Mayor, in returning thanks, declared that he had, to the utmost of his power, while in office, watched over the tranquility and prosperity of the City of London.

The Lord Mayor next gave the "Health of Prince Polignac, the Ambassador of his Majesty the King of France, trusting that the amity which at present existed between the two kingdoms, might continue unbroken." (Cheers.)

Prince Polignac expressed the deep sense he entertained of the honour which had just been conferred on him. His Court, he could assure those whom he now addressed, was actuated by the best feelings towards this country. For himself, he felt proud to be entertained by the chief men of this ancient and wealthy city; and he heartily wished that its trade and commerce might continue to flourish with unabated prosperity. (Cheers.)

The Lord Mayor, after a short prefatory eulogium, proposed the health of the Earl of Liverpool, with three times three, which was loudly cheered.

The Earl of Liverpool returned thanks. He felt most deeply the gratifying manner in which his health had been given, and the flattering way in which it had been received. In the discharge of his public duty, he could not be insensible to the good opinion of any respectable class of his fellow-citizens, but he must feel, most particularly, so ardent a mark of approbation, coming, as it did, from a body which represented the metropolis of this kingdom. (Cheers.)

The Lord Mayor proposed, with three times three, the health of the Right Hon. George Canning, on whose eloquence and general talents he pronounced a warm eulogium. (Much applause.)

Mr. Canning, in returning thanks, adverted to the period when all Europe was engaged in a war of more than ordinary magnitude. That time had gone by, and the labours of those who held high official situations were, in consequence, considerably lessened. Those labours were now comparatively light and trivial; and as they were directed towards the cultivation of peace, and the diffusion of arts and commerce throughout the world, they carried with their success reflections of the most gratifying nature. They had this day heard, in their own language, uttered by an illustrious foreigner, what were the sentiments entertained towards Great Britain, by that country, with which, for 20 years, they had struggled for the mastery of the world. Those sentiments, he was happy to say, were of the most conciliatory description; and he was sure it would be most satisfactory to the assembly, when he declared, that the feelings which had been this day expressed on the part of France, would have been re-choed, with delight, had the representatives of the other European Courts been present. Successfully to cultivate the continuance of the peace and tranquillity which now happily prevailed, would afford a sufficient reward for all the labours to which, as a public man, he must necessarily be exposed. (Cheers.)

The Lord Mayor then proposed the health of the Right Hon. Robert Peel, to whose courteous conduct, and persevering exertions, in his situation of Secretary of State for the Home Department, he could bear, from experience, the most decisive testimony; as, in his situation of Sheriff, he was frequently obliged to hold communication with the Right Hon. Gentleman on subjects of considerable importance.—(Drank with three times three, and great applause.)

Mr. Peel returned thanks. The public approbation which his conduct had this day received was peculiarly valuable, because the situation which he had the honour to hold placed him in constant communication with the municipal body, who, therefore, had a full opportunity to judge of his proceedings. He must say that those communications had afforded him the most unmixed satisfaction. He could truly assert, that during the period of five years in which he held his present situation of Secretary of State for the Home Department, there had not, for one moment, been an interruption of the cordial understanding which subsisted between him and the authorities of the city of London, and which was so essential to the good government of the city.

The Lord Mayor next proposed, with three times three, the health of the Right Hon. W. Huskisson.—(Much applause.)

Mr. Huskisson returned thanks. If the manner in which he had hitherto discharged his duties merited their approbation, that approbation constituted his reward, and would stimulate him to further exertions. The manufacturing interests of this country had, it was well known to all, encountered great difficulties and distresses. As to the cause of those difficulties and distresses, and the best mode of removing them, various speculative opinions were afloat. He would not touch upon those opinions now; but he was prepared to say that he would be ever ready to receive advice on those momentous subjects from the citizens of London; and that he would use every effort in his power to advance the commerce and to uphold the manufacturing interests of Great Britain.—(Applause.)

The healths of the Master of the Rolls, of the new Lord Mayor, of the Judges, of the Attorney and Solicitor-General, and of the City Members, were severally given; and thanks having been returned, the company retired to the Council-chamber, which had been fitted up as a ball-room, at a quarter before ten o'clock.

Mr. Sheriff Winchester was elected an Alderman on Monday, in the room of the late Mr. Magnay.

Mr. Farebrother has been elected Alderman of the Ward of Lime-street, in the room of Mr. Bridges, resigned.

Mr. Waithman intends, immediately after the meeting of the House of Commons, to give notice of a motion on the subject of the connexion of a considerable number of Members of the new Parliament with some of the Joint Stock Companies, which raged with such disastrous effects in the City some months ago. It is said that not fewer than 187 Members of Parliament were directly or incidentally connected with these speculations, and the names of some of them have been given, whose individual profits, from participation in the delusions, amounted to upwards of 100,000l.

ACCIDENT BY A STEAM-BOAT.

The following letter from the Agents to Lloyd's at Hull, dated 7th inst. was received on Thursday morning:—"Arrived the United Kingdom steam-ship, from London to Leith. Left Southend, on Saturday, the 4th, at 4 p. m. and was obliged to put into the Humber on Sunday, and brought up in Grimsby roads at 5 p. m. She weighed again yesterday morning at 11; but after proceeding about eight leagues to the northward, again brought up in Grimsby roads at 2 p. m. Several of the passengers being desirous of coming up here, in order to proceed by land, the Graham, Grimsby steam-packet, this morning went alongside the United Kingdom to receive them; about 20 got on board, and when nearly ready for leaving the ship, the Graham's boiler burst, and I am truly concerned to add, that five persons are killed or drowned, and about 20 others very seriously scalded and otherwise hurt, most of whom belong to Grimsby or Hull. I believe none of the passengers belonging to the United Kingdom were hurt. The Graham was subsequently towed up by the United Kingdom at half-past 1 p. m."

FURTHER PARTICULARS.

GRIMSBY, Nov. 7.—A very melancholy accident happened here this morning, the particulars of which, according to the accounts which we have received, are as follows, viz.:—The United Kingdom steam-packet, from London for Edinburgh, having put into Grimsby-roads for shelter, the Graham, steam-packet, from this port, with passengers for Hull, went alongside the former vessel to take out such passengers as might be desirous of proceeding to Hull, and thence to Edinburgh, by land. Shortly after, the engine of the Graham was stopped, the boiler burst, with a tremendous explosion, by which Mr. John Blorr, a respectable corn-dealer of this town, is said to have been literally blown to atoms, as no part of him was ever afterwards seen; he has left a wife and ten children to deplore his loss. John Potton, a labourer, was killed on the spot; two other persons are said to have been killed. A gentleman and a lady were blown a considerable height, and fell into the water; they were immediately picked up, and do not appear to be much injured. Several other persons were severely scalded. One gentleman, who was looking over the side of the United Kingdom packet, was killed on the spot, his head being literally shattered to pieces. After the accident, the Graham was towed up to Hull by the United Kingdom, and as the weather is stormy, we do not expect to hear any further particulars before to-morrow afternoon. I am extremely sorry to add, that a culpable negligence is supposed to attach to the conduct of the proprietors or their agents, who, it is said, were aware that the boiler was in a defective state.

HULL, Nov. 7.—An accident of a most fearful kind occurred at Grimsby this morning. As the Graham, steam-packet, which plies between Grimsby and this port, was just about to start, the boiler burst. Six persons are dead; many are much injured; some so much, as to leave little hopes of their recovery; and others are said to be drowned. The engineer was not in her at the time of the accident, having gone on board the United Kingdom Edinburgh steam-packet, which vessel had been forced to put into Grimsby by stress of weather. The Graham has been towed up by the United Kingdom. The matter will be fully investigated to-morrow before George Coulson, Esq.; and it is devoutly to be hoped that if culpability attaches, some means will be devised to punish it in a manner becoming so great an enormity.

Mr. Boaden's Memoirs of our great Tragic Actress, Mrs. Siddons, are expected in a few days. This Work is intended as a companion to the Author's "Life of Mr. Kemble," with which it is printed uniformly. It is dedicated, by permission, to his Majesty, and will be illustrated by a remarkably fine Portrait, engraved by Turner, from a picture by Sir Thomas Lawrence.

The Tales of a Voyager, announced for publication, consist, we understand, of about Twelve Stories, told at sea, during a voyage to the Polar Ocean, and connected with a narrative of the actual progress of the vessel, as lately made from England to that dreary region. This is certainly an original idea, and, if well executed, cannot fail to be very attractive. That sufficient comfort to admit of a resort to the pastime of Tale-telling, should be obtained in exploring the desolation of the "icy north," is a great triumph of the skill and enterprise of civilized man. It affords, at all events, a striking contrast to the diversion of Boccaccio's Florentine Dames and Cavaliers, who related their stories in the luxurious gardens and sunny fields of Italy.—Morning Chronicle.

In the case of "Bligh v. Wellesley," tried on Wednesday se'nnight, the postponement of which was only granted upon the terms that, in case a verdict was given for the plaintiff, he should have judgment as of Trinity Term, we understand that such was the promptitude evinced on the part of the plaintiff, that a writ of capias ad satisfaciendum was issued on the very night of the trial, the process executed, and the money (6,000l.) paid immediately.—Evening Paper.

MAGISTERIAL APPOINTMENTS.—G. Marriott, Esq., who heretofore usually officiated as Deputy Chairman at the Westminster and Middlesex Sessions, in the absence of Francis Const, Esq., has been appointed one of the Magistrates of Queen-square, and took his seat on the bench on Wednesday morning, in the room of Edward Markland, Esq., who has retired from public duty, in consequence of continued indisposition.

A work of great promise from the pen of a lady of high rank in the fashionable world, is just announced, entitled, "Almacks." in which, from some particulars which have transpired, much curious anecdote and information respecting the secret history of that distinguished coalition may be expected.

Thursday afternoon, just after the return of the civic procession from Westminster by Water, as two children were crossing Great Surrey-street, from Upper Ground-street, on their return home in Green-walk, Holland-street, they were robbed of their caps, value 18s. by a fellow who got clear off, although the street was crowded at the time.

One of the bidders for the Devizes turnpike tolls, on Saturday se'nnight, very gravely entreated the commissioners to pause before they lent any further assistance towards the improvements of the turnpike-roads, by lowering the hills, &c. as the great alterations that had already been made, rendered two horses only necessary where four were formerly required. He stated that it would be the means, if not speedily checked, of so reducing the tolls as to ruin the persons who might take them.

We copy the following from the Mail:—"CONTINUANCE OF THE REFORMATION.—Yesterday, at Cavan, fourteen more persons abjured the errors of Popery in the parish church of that town, making in all, within the last month, sixty-one!—Dublin Evening Post.

The oyster season on the coast within the vicinity of Jersey, in which upwards of 400 vessels are employed, has happily terminated without any molestation on the part of French vessels.

It has been contested whether the right to bequeath be a right of nature, or dependent on arbitrary compact and positive law. In support of these theses, Leibnitz has derived a curious argument from the maxims of the immortality of the soul. He supposes the will of the soul of the testator, as declared, that this, or the other determinate person, shall thereafter become the proprietor of its goods, as continuing in this soul, and accompanied by its rightful effects. But if we consider that the goods of the testator were not so much the property of a metaphysical being, the soul—as of a physical being, the man, who, by his death, has lost all property in this world, all capacity of possessing and enjoying any thing here, and of making his will to be known, we shall find ourselves much disposed to let the validity of testaments depend upon the prescriptions of civil law, which have in view the good of living society, and not on the presumed will of a being which is transported into another system of things.

FRIDAY'S GAZETTE.

INSOLVENTS.

JOHN GRIFFIN and J. MOORE ADAMS, Strand, goldsmiths.

J. HARRIS, Bristol, brickmaker.

BANKRUPTCY SUPERSEDED.

W. DAVY, Norwich, ironfounder.

BANKRUPTS.

C. T. BASKETT, Poole, wine-merchant: solicitors, Messrs. Durant and Welch——J. RAMSDEN, Huddersfield, woollen-cloth manufacturer: solicitors, Messrs. Jaques and Battye——W. SMITH, Bristol, provision-merchant: solicitors, Messrs. Evans and Shearman——J. FERGUSON, Newark, mercer: solicitors, Messrs. Holme, Frampton, and Loftus——T. FLOWER, Melksham, Wiltshire, timber-dealer: solicitors, Messrs. Nethersoles and Barron——M. S. SCHLESINGER, Upper Stamford-street, Waterloo-road, merchant: solicitors, Messrs. Gregson and Pemberton——R. WROTTS, Great Titchfield-street, linendraper: solicitor, Mr. Jones——W. and C. PRICE, Baldwin's-gardens, Gray's-inn-lane, glass-manufacturers: solicitor, Mr. Lloyd——J. ALLEN, Oxford, chinaman: solicitor, Mr. Bridger——E. SHACKELL, Southampton, cabinet-maker: solicitors, Messrs. Slade and Jones——W. PENNINGTON, Crosthwaite, Westmoreland, paper-maker: solicitor, Mr. Jackson——W. BONSFIELD, Gutter-lane, Cheapside, warehouseman: solicitors, Messrs. Bowden and Walters——M. JACOBS, Charles-street, Soho-square, glass-merchant: solicitor, Mr. Norton——W. LAMB, Nottingham, lace-manufacturer: solicitors, Messrs. Macdougall, Son, and Bainbrigge——J. HALL, Shrewsbury, and J. HAVOCK, Liverpool, merchants: solicitors, Messrs. Addington, Gregory, and Faulkner——H. OLDERSHAW, Bulwell, Nottinghamshire, miller: solicitors, Messrs. Macdougall, Son, and Bainbridge——J. BROMLEY, Stafford, shoe-manufacturer: solicitors, Messrs. Clowes, Orme, and Wedlake——J. AVELING, Great Charlotte-street, Fitzroy-square, grocer: solicitors, Messrs. Butler and Teague——C. E. HORN, Judd-street, Brunswick-square, music-seller: solicitor, Mr. M'Duff——W. SHAW and J. L. ALEXANDER, Clifton-street, Finsbury-square, merchants: solicitor, Mr. Wadeson——W. STRUTTON, Commercial-road, Lambeth, timber-merchant: solicitors, Messrs. Blacklow and Jones——J. and F. WORTHAM, Oxford-street, and Leamington, Warwickshire, linen-drapers: solicitor, Mr. Spurr——W. PARKINSON, Greek-street, Soho, carver and guilder: solicitor, Mr. Partington——J. EVANS, Marchmont-street, Burton-crescent, linen-draper: solicitor, Mr. Hewitt——J. MEYER, Grace's-alley, Wellclose-square, umbrella-manufacturer: solicitor, Mr. Isaacs——R. WRIGHT, Hollinwood, Lancashire, hat-manufacturer: solicitor, Mr. Norris——S. KILE, St. Clement's, Oxfordshire, bookseller: solicitors, Messrs. Robinson and Hine.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

We must request the indulgence of our Correspondents until next week.

THE AGE.

LONDON, NOVEMBER 12.

The betrayers of Greece have been further exposed during the week. The patriotic Mr. ELLICE has addressed two letters to a morning paper in exculpation of his conduct. We have subjoined the letters, that the reader may be enabled to judge how far he has succeeded in his object. The Times, in speaking of the second letter, says—"We are unwilling to press more heavily at present upon a man, one of whose crying and really most pitiable sins seem to us to be an utter inability to defend himself. We shall therefore touch no more upon the charges. We shall only shew him how, even in the relative matter, he cannot write without involving himself in contradictions. He calls the contract with the French contractors "conditional," and that with the English ones "absolute;" and yet, immediately a ter, he says, "that his advice to the Deputies not to hesitate in their decision (that is, in ratifying this latter contract) was founded on certain reasons, one of which was, that if the arrangement with the English contractors failed, after the negociation had proceeded so far," &c. Thus, after having once asserted the contract to be absolute, he shews twice that it was not so, and that it was not even concluded.

Again, after having said (without the slightest reason, by the way) that the Deputies "are all either guilty or innocent," he takes care to invalidate that opinion, in the next sentence, by stating that they were totally detached from each other; that they had nothing in common; and that his time "had been wasted in endeavouring to reconcile their quarrels with each other." We are sure it would be a much more hopeless task, if it were imposed on the Deputies to make them reconcile him with himself."

Messrs. J. and S. RICARDO have also published a letter addressed to M. LURIOTTIS, in which they accuse him, in direct terms, of falsehood, and call upon him not to run away, which they suspect he is on the point of doing, till he has answered the very grave charges which they bring against him.

They follow up their letter by a statement of the course whith he has thought proper to pursue, and state that he is possessed of as great a talent for gain, as any English philanthropist. They further say, that it appeared to them that he was a paragon of virtue, and was actually making a personal sacrifice, when the real effect of his operations was to saddle Greece with 14,000 bonds at 53, the market price being 23; or, in other words, to escape from a loss, or realise a profit of 30 per cent.!

The RICARDOS put forth no claim to those lofty sentiments, by which "the friends of suffering Greece" pretend to have been animated, but endeavour to vindicate their conduct as members of the Stock Exchange, whom no reasonable man would ever suspect of much disinterested or romantic feeling. The Times will not let off poor Mr. ELLICE upon any terms, and conclude their observations on one of his letters with the following pointed remarks:—

"But there is another part of Mr. ELLICE's letter, of which we cannot speak in terms of reprehension sufficiently strong. Mr. LURIOTTIS had stated (and the committee had published the statement), that he had refused to accept any part of the 7,500*l.* set aside for the Greek deputies. On this Mr. ELLICE says, that he does not know what credit is due to Mr. LURIOTTIS for this claim to disinterestedness, and therefore (because he does not know) advises the public to suspend their judgment upon it till they have some information respecting it from his colleagues. We do not believe that there ever took place in human affairs, or that there ever will take place in public writing, any case like this in which a man, having no accusation to bring against another, not daring to charge him with a falsehood, but simply disbelieving, or pretending to disbelieve, what he says, shall upon his own incredulity have requested the public to suspend their judgment, or, in other words, to hold an unaccused person as a suspicious character.—Mr. ELLICE, what right have you to call upon the public to suspend their judgment respecting Mr. LURIOTTIS, because YOU do not know what credit is due to him? Ask the public to suspend their judgment upon yourself, if you please, till you shall have published a more satisfactory explanation of your conduct. Such a request on your part would be precedented and ordinary. But let the public deal as they please with others.

"We know not, really, whether it is from incapacity or intention on the part of the writer, but the rest of the letter is written in so confused a manner, that we really cannot extract out of it, what Mr. ELLICE would wish to state, or to have believed, respecting the 10,000*l.* which was said to have been placed in the hands of his bankers, as soon as the contract was signed for building a boat, for which these 10,000*l.* were to pay. 'He has now received from town,' he says, 'the particulars of the money he received for the steam-boat.' Very well. How did he receive them? By the Threepenny Post. 'And although the money was certainly placed at his immediate disposal, there never was a balance of 2,000*l.* in the hands of the persons to whom the management of this part of the business was confided.' Who said there was? What is meant by this irrelevant matter? It is probable that Mr. ELLICE, as well as others, dipped in the same transaction, may talk of the discovery now making with regard to the Greek loan, 'as a nine-days' wonder.' We shall therefore explain what occurrences do, and what do not, come under that proverbial description of a nine-days' wonder. They are nine-days' wonders which have reference to people that are never heard of afterwards, that sink into obscurity for ever, when the bustle of the affair which brought them into peculiar notice has subsided. But no man who means in future to appear upon the stage of public life, can ever suffer a transaction in which his credit or honour are concerned to subside, without affording the fullest explanation of his conduct. Such a transaction will revive again and again in the general remembrance, so long as he lives and attracts notice."

TO THE EDITOR.

"SIR,—Since my contradiction of the statements respecting my conduct, a letter has appeared from Mr. Luriottis, not containing, it is true, any direct charge against me, but an evident insinuation, that the part I took, and the advice I gave the Deputies on the occasion of the last loan, was from interested motives.

"The case stands thus:—1st. I am accused of having received 14,000*l.* of Messrs. Ricardos' commission; and then, to give an appearance of plausibility to this idle falsehood, Mr. Luriottis alleges my extreme anxiety to induce his colleague and himself to conclude the contract with Messrs. Ricardo. The ridiculous nonsense about my sending a messenger to him at night, and paying him a visit at a most unusual hour in the morning, it is necessary to premise, is pure and absolute fiction. The truth is, I was anxious the Deputies should take advantage of the favourable circumstances of the moment to carry into effect the instructions of their Government; Mr. Luriottis was dispatched to Paris, to see what could be done there, and, during his absence, his colleagues, on a previous understanding with him, that they should conclude a contract if possible here, made the arrangement with Mr. Ricardo. In the mean time, Mr. Luriottis had engaged in a provisional one at Paris, at the ostensible price of 59; but, if I remember rightly the details, on much worse terms, when the commission and other deductions were considered, than in that with Messrs. Ricardo. But Mr. Luriottis might also have added, that my opinion and wish was, the loan should, if possible, have been divided between Paris and London, although Mr. Ricardo objected to it, and his objections were conclusive. I had no hesitation in advising the Deputies, rather to cancel the provisional arrangements in France, than to run the risk of Messrs. Ricardo throwing up the contract here. It is true I was very desirous that Commissioners should be named to superintend the application of the money. It is no enviable office for any person to undertake; but if commissioners had been appointed, no body, I presume, will now doubt, that part of the money would have passed as safely through their hands, as through those of these worthy deputies. I knew nothing of the allowance made out of the commission to these gentlemen, till some time after the contract for the loan, and I avoided all conversation or discussion with them on the subject. I know not, therefore, what credit is due to Mr. Luriottis for his claim of singular disinterestedness—but I would advise the public to suspend their judgment on this subject, till they have some information respecting it, from his colleagues. If he be not more correct on this point, than on some others, implicit reliance is not to be placed on his testimony, and it should always be recollected that he has now the field to himself. Mr. Orlando is on his way to Greece, and Mr. Zaimis is at Napoli; but before the contradiction or explanation of their colleagues' statement can be received, Mr. Luriottis knows perfectly well the public attention and excitement on these subjects will have passed by.

"I have now received from town the particulars of the money received for this steam vessel, and I was certain I had given directions that none should be taken till it was required for actual payments, or immediate engagements. The fact is, although the money was certainly placed at my immediate disposal, it was only taken in this manner, and there was never a balance of 2,000*l.* in the hands of the persons to whom the management of this part of the business was confided. Mr. Luriottis knows as well as I do, the causes of the delay in the outfit of the vessel, although it does not suit his purpose to state them. None of them are imputable to myself, or to Captain Hastings, who had the superintendence of her construction, and was most zealous and assiduous. Mr. Galloway was at first alone to blame; and when the larger expedition of this class of vessels was decided upon, it was considered useless, and he represented that it would interfere with his preparations, for the greater object, to press him to devote all his attention to the completion of this one boat, which it was not then intended to send out alone.

"I have thus, Sir, once for all, broken through the silence I had prescribed to myself on this subject; and nothing shall again induce me to offer further explanation, or to embark in a newspaper war with Mr. Luriottis, or some of the other worthy disputants.

"I remain, Sir, your humble Servant,

"Snettisham, Nov. 4." "EDWARD ELLICE.

TO THE EDITOR.

"Snettisham, Nov. 7.

"SIR,—I certainly did not intend to take further notice of the calumnies with which I have been assailed relative to the Greek affairs, but it is necessary to deal more specifically with the insinuations in your paper.

"Four charges, if I must so call them, have been made against me:—

"1st. That I received 10,000*l.* in March, 1825, on account of a steam-vessel, to be constructed under the directions of Captain Hastings, which I retained in my hands, deriving a profit from it for nearly two years.

"2d. That I received 14,000*l.* from Messrs. Ricardo.

"3d. That I advised the Deputies to reject a conditional contract for a loan made in Paris, by Mr. Luriottis, at the price of 59, from interested motives.

"And, lastly—In your Paper I am further charged with having stipulated with Messrs. Ricardo, that I should furnish all supplies of military stores, &c., required by the Greek Government, and to be paid for out of the funds of the loan.

"In respect to the second and last charges, I know not what more I can say, than that they are absolutely groundless and gratuitous falsehoods.

"With respect to the steam boat, although it is true I received an order upon Messrs. Ricardo for 10,000*l.*, I only required that order as a security, without which I did not choose to enter into personal responsibility, on the faith of indemnity from the Greek Deputies. I did not receive the money upon this order, and it was only paid to those through whom I made the necessary arrangements, as they required it for current payments, or engagements; and I have ascertained that there was at no time an advance exceeding 1700*l.*, and seldom exceeding half that sum.

"It is also true that Mr. Galloway failed in his engagements as to the stipulated period for the completion of the machinery. He was afterwards expressly directed to devote his whole time to the preparation of the other vessels, and gave this reason for the further delay that occurred. With all this I had nothing to do; and I must add, in justice to Captain Hastings, who superintended the whole process, from the laying down of the keel of the vessel, to taking the charge and command of her when she went to sea, that nothing was omitted on his part that zeal, industry, and perseverance, could supply.

"With respect to the loan, so far from desiring the Paris contract to be rejected, it was always my wish the money should be raised equally, if practicable, in France and England; but, despairing of any arrangement in Paris, an absolute contract had been made by the Deputies with Messrs. Ricardo; and M. Luriottis arrived, with his provisional agreement, the day after his colleagues had not only stipulated for the amount of the loan, but that if more money was required, it should be raised; if they thought fit to undertake it, through the agency of Messrs. Ricardo. These gentlemen did not consider it for the interest of their subscribers that the loan should be divided, and a categorical answer required whether the contract was to be ratified by all the parties or not. The especial reasons for my advice to the Deputies not to hesitate as to their decision, was, first—that the loan in Paris was only for a portion of their wants; and that, although it was negotiated at the nominal price of 59, the stipulated deductions in favour of the French agents so far exceeded Mr. Ricardo's commission, and the other reservations in the English contract, that the proceeds would have been less; and, lastly, from the conviction that if the arrangement failed with Mr. Ricardo, after the negociation had proceeded so far, it would have been impossible to raise the money in this country. And I am ready to admit, with my past experience, my sincere and deep regret, that this was not ultimately the result.

"I do not understand the principle on which, in an editorial article, you have been persuaded to add your last charge to the others that preceded it. It is impossible it could have originated in any other motive than that of pure malice on the part of your informant; for there is not the shadow of a pretence on which such a calumny could be grounded; and surely a little enquiry was due to common justice, before giving circulation to it. I never made such a stipulation, or any other, with Messrs. Ricardo. I never dealt with a shilling of this or the former loan (except for the cost of the steam-boat.) I never supplied either stores, arms, or any other material to the Deputies, or their Government; and I reject with scorn the imputation, that I could have, in any instance, looked to my connexion with them as a source of profit. I have neither myself derived, nor has any one connected with me derived, one penny of advantage in these transactions.

"If I have had any concern in the Greek loan, it has been to a very limited extent, and with other persons; and Messrs. Ricardo, at the time of the contract, were unaware that I intended to take the least interest in it. But this has been no profitable operation, although, to its vast extent, I fully expected that it would have been so, and I entered into it solely with the object of profit, which I suppose is the general principle on which persons deal in such speculations. And now, Sir, I hope I have at last satisfied you, by an explicit and categorical answer to your enquiries. What Mr. Luriottis says or does is perfectly immaterial to me, and I only hope he may return to his native country with a character and a conscience more pure than those he ascribes to his colleagues in their absence. My conviction is, they are all guilty or all innocent. I am now reaping the reward of many an anxious hour, wasted in endeavouring to reconcile their quarrels with one another, and with other people, in the hope they might devote their united exertions to the cause of their country. I have not only their faults and omissions to account for, but those of others; and I could add to this letter, forced from me solely in vindication of my own character, some remarks on the manner in which my name has been referred to by other persons, in these transactions, if I thought a continuation of these discussions likely to contribute, in the smallest degree, to any possible good.

"I am, Sir, your obedient Servant,

"EDWARD ELLICE."

The following notice was lately written over the fencing round the estate of old BYNG, the M. P.:—

"All dogs found here will be shot."

To which an ill-natured wag added,

"Like that old dog, the Admiral."

The following convention for adjusting the reciprocal claims of Brazil and Portugal on each other, though concluded at the same time with the treaty of peace and alliance, more than a year ago, has never been published in this country. Its most important article is that in which Brazil engages to pay to Portugal the sum of 2,000,000*l.* sterling, in satisfaction of all admitted demands, taking upon itself the obligation of paying the last Portuguese loan in London as part of the said 2,000,000*l.*, and stipulating to make up the difference between the amount of that loan and 2,000,000*l.* in the course of a year from the ratification of the treaty. We make our version from a Portuguese copy of the treaty. It appeared in the Lisbon Gazette some time ago.

"In the name of the Holy and Indivisible Trinity.

"Having established in Art. 9 of the treaty of peace and alliance, signed at the present date between Portugal and Brazil, that the public claims of both Governments are to be reciprocally received and decided, either by the restitution of the objects reclaimed, or by an equivalent indemnity, agreeing that, for the adjustment of them, both of the high contracting parties will make a direct and special convention; and considering that the best means of terminating this question is to fix and adjust immediately, by a certain amount (all right of further demands on both sides being extinguished), the undersigned Sir Charles Stuart, Privy Counsellor to his Britannic Majesty, Grand Cross of the Order of the Tower and Sword, Plenipotentiary of his Most Faithful Majesty the King of Portugal and the Algarves, and the most illustrious and most excellent Louis Jose de Carvalho e Mello, of the Council of State, Dignitary of the Imperial Order of the Crusade, Commander of the Orders of Christ and of Conception, Minister and Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, and the Most Illustrious and Excellent Baron de Santa Martha, Grandee of the Empire, Member of the Council of State, and Gentleman of the Imperial Chamber, Dignitary of the Imperial Order of the Crusade, and Commander of the Orders of Christ and of the Tower and Sword; and the Most Illustrious and Most Excellent Francisco Villela Barboza, Member of the Council of State, Grand Cross of the Order of the Crusade, Knight of the Order of Christ, Colonel of the Imperial Corps of Engineers, Minister and Secretary of State for the Department of Marine and Inspector General of Marine, Plenipotentiary of his Majesty the Emperor of Brazil, under the mediation of His Britannic Majesty, have agreed, in virtue of their respective full powers, to the following articles:—

"Art. 1. His Imperial Majesty agrees, on sight of the demands presented from Government to Government, to give to that of Portugal the sum of 2,000,000l. sterling, all demands of whatever kind being extinguished between the parties by this payment, as well as all right to indemnity of this nature.

"Art. 2. For the payment of this sum, his Imperial Majesty takes on the treasury of Brazil the loan which Portugal contracted in London in the month of October, 1823, paying the remainder to make up the amount of the said 2,000,000l. in the space of a year after the ratification and publication of the present treaty.

"Art. 3. There shall be excepted from the rule established by the 1st article of this convention, the reciprocal demands made by each party for the transport of troops, and the expenses incurred for the soldiery.

"For the liquidation of these demands, a mixed commission shall be appointed in the manner established by the 8th article of the treaty above-mentioned.

"Art. 4. The present convention shall be ratified, and the mutual exchange of the ratifications shall take place at Lisbon within the space of five months, or sooner if possible.

"In testimony of this, we the undersigned Plenipotentiaries of his Majesty the King of Portugal and the Algarves, and of his Majesty the Emperor of Brazil, in virtue of our full powers, sign the present convention, and affix to it the seals of our arms.

"Done in the city of Rio de Janeiro, the 29th day of the month of August, 1825.

(Signed)
"Sir CHARLES STUART,
"LUIZ JOSE DE CARVALHO,
"Baron de SANTA MARTHA.
"FRANCISCO VILLELA BARBOZA."

COURTS OF ENQUIRY.

We have already apprized the reader that a Court of Enquiry has been instituted in the Royal Horse Guards Blue, for the purpose of ascertaining whether Lord WILLIAM LENNOX writes for THE AGE!!! and, in imitation of so laudable an example, we have pretty good reason to know that the following extra Courts will also be immediately held, on the subjoined list of individuals, and for the purposes set down against their respective names:—

On JOHN EASTHOPE, M.P. For having lent money under cent. per cent., and for having induced TIL CHATTERTON to study Malthus on Population, &c. &c. &c.

On Mr. FOX LANE. For having stopped fox-hunting on his premises.

On Lord GLENGALL. To ascertain how his LORDSHIP became possessed of the 25*l.* he sent Mrs. CONNOR, and to examine the security he has given Messrs. ROWLEY, CAPRON, and WELD, for paying the costs incurred by a sweep in His LORDSHIP'S service, to prosecute one person that is connected with this paper, and some others, who are not.

On Mr. O'NEIL. For having changed his name from GEOGHAGEN to O'NEIL.

On Mr. AULDJO (facetiously termed by BALL HUGHES Young Jo). For having been loo'd to the tune of 6,000*l.*

On JOHN WILKS, Junior, M.P. For mis-spelling his own name, and writing SCOTT instead, on the back of a draft.

On Mr. HEBER. For having made an improper use of hartshorn, and to ascertain to what extent.

On the Hon. G. PETRE. For not paying up his subscription to the Steam Washing Company, and attempting to lower the price of soap in the market.

On BALL HUGHES. For having made away with a part of his wife's goods.

On Mr. THOMAS RAIKES. To ascertain how far he is implicated in an accident that has happened to one of the City stages, from one of the horses having shied at a very ordinary face near London Wall.

It having been announced last week, on "authority," in most of the daily papers, that legal proceedings had been adopted, at the instigation of several noblemen and gentlemen, against "a certain Sunday newspaper," the gossips of the day, in the plenitude of their conjectures, immediately fixed the imputation upon the Journal under our controul; and the occurrences of the few days past have proved that they were not altogether mistaken. It may be imagined, by the wavering and the weak, that we shall shrink from any controversy upon such a subject, from a supposed impossibility of meeting the question; but, throwing back such an absurd insinuation in their teeth, we proceed at once to enter into the circumstance, with every degree of amour propre.

The readers of THE AGE may remember that, early in the present year, a conspiracy, headed by the Earl of GLENGALL and Mr. RAIKES, was entered into, for the avowed purpose of prosecuting the paper, which, however, on a mention by us of its discovery, was, for the time being, abandoned—a few days preceding the late vacation, it was again taken up by the leaders of the gang, and the particulars of their movements are already before the public. From that moment to the present, every artifice that a collected purse and opinion could suggest and sanction, every trick which knavery could invent, and every attempt which impudence could conceive, and blackguardism execute, has been proceeded in by the parties, with the sole view of totally extirpating our property—an aim which has been levelled by the first-named of these personages, from the earliest moment of our Journal being established. Their efforts we have hitherto met, and shall continue to meet, with the consideration to which they are entitled—undismayed by any temporary triumph they may enjoy, and in no respect led away from a prosecution of those important objects, in the furtherance of which the principles of our paper are so deeply involved. The view which has been taken by us of society, and the exposures we have given of its enormities, which a perfect intimacy therewith has enabled us to do, has naturally enough drawn upon us the indignation of those on whom we have had to comment—persons who, aware and ashamed of the various proceedings of their life, blush deeply for the exposition of a villany, they never blushed at, while committing. To the animosity of these gentlemen has been added that of others, who, in tampering with us to cloak their misdoings, have been egregiously disappointed, of some for the invariable exclusion of their lucubrations from the columns of our paper, and of many more, through a degraded envy of the popularity with which the public has been pleased to receive it. That we should therefore incur the hostility of the splenetic, is not altogether to be wondered at—that we have done so, is herein admitted.

But the result of all this, while it may temporarily persecute us, will effect a benefit to society, and a general public good, the advantages of which are at present denied to it, and with that object in view, we pray to be pardoned for entering into this egotistical digression, in the same ratio that we shall be regarded for bringing about such an important desideratum. The several defences to be entered upon by us, in the progress of these legal fulminations, will be the means of bringing into contact numerous parties, under circumstances the most peculiar imaginable. The heads of families shall be in open array against their contingent members, for the prevention of that ruin, pro futuro, under the existing effects of which they are now suffering—the persons complaining of having been thus maligned, will be produced, to testify how far the complaints which they have so industriously made to their champions, are correct, or not—the participators in those daily and nightly excesses, which constitute the existence of the higher walks of life (from whose actions example must always descend to those in rank below them), will be confronted with their principals; and, by the united evidence of such people, not only will the truth, however severe it may have been expressed, of our remarks become manifest, but the establishment of such truth will produce a reformation, which has hitherto been hoped for in vain. We repeat, what we have so long and so strenuously asserted, that the land is literally groaning with the vices intermittently practised by individuals constituting that misnomer, HIGH LIFE—the events of every day declare it, unfortunately, to the world, and if some correction be not inflicted on those who are guilty of them, the "pride, pomp, and circumstance" of England's nobility, whose high chivalric character has been for centuries the astonishment and admiration of mankind, will fall from its imperial state, and sink into that eternal ruin in which the luxuries and wantonness of other empires eventually overwhelmed their sons, in long-departed ages. ROME, and GREECE, and CARTHAGE! where are those countries now? The owl hoots through the roofless halls, and the ivy mantles the shattered columns, of one—the next is bondaged by the invading oppressor,—the third, a pile of stones—the dissipations of BRITAIN, in whom are concentered the wisdom and glory of the whole, with an accession of commercial consequence to which they were total strangers, may level her estate to theirs.

We fearlessly court the hour when these investigations will be exhibited to public opinion, and when we shall be enabled to lay before that tribunal a more enlarged view of those transactions, whose consequences we have been presuming to anticipate. When that moment arrives, shall be arraigned some of the many victims of those hot-beds of infamy and plunder, where the FASHION of our nation hourly assemble, to hurry on their own, and others' ruin—from their lips shall be spoken those glaring truths, whose secrets now lie buried—and, by their admissions, we may hope to see those hells on earth, in whose abyss have been absorbed so many thousands of worldly substance, swept from the very face of it. Let the contemplative eye behold the gorgeous structures built and building in the western part of the metropolis, and then let it be remembered to what purposes they are deveted—in their polluted chambers are planned the ruin of woman's virtue and man's pride—the pampered pauper, who has risen into nobility by the industry of his forefathers, here broods in silence over the projects he has formed for blasting his more gifted compeer; and in those recesses, which the law has not hitherto penetrated, is committed nightly the everlasting degradation of hundreds of high lineage. The inexperienced reader knows nothing of all this, and a recital of some of the common occurrences which take place within those prostituted walls, would—

> ——"Freeze his young blood,
> Make his two eyes, like stars, start from their spheres,
> And each particular hair to stand on end,
> Like quills upon the fretful porcupine!"

To an exposition of these continued exploits, it is, that we have directed all our best energies, and for which we have come under the protective arm of the law; but the distribution it may deal on us, for so doing, will be lost sight of, in that which it will extend to these outrages on which we have had to expatiate; and while, therefore, we can feel that, by the steps we are pursuing, we can benefit the public weal, there is no circumstance that can befal us which will ever deter us from sacrificing personal interest, on the great shrine of NATIONAL SAFETY.

THEATRICALS.

There has been such a profusion of rhodomontade circulated respecting Miss MITFORD'S play of Foscari, that very little appears left for us to say, at least in its favour. This lady has just capabilities enough to put together a few pleasing sentences, in somewhat harmonious language, and on this account has been held up by a class of people, in a light she is never destined to send forth—an order of admiration as dangerous to the idol, as it is absurd in the idolizers. The little work of Our Village, by this authoress, may be considered the standard of her literary attainments—it possesses interest without obscurity, and an easy style of composition, without pretension or ostentation; but the praise thus properly bestowed on that, must with that stop, for to talk of such a writer aiming at the lofty dignity of tragedy, is to talk completely at random. The Julian of Miss MITFORD was as trashy an attempt at this climacteric of the histrionic art, as ever was exhibited on the stage—the Foscari is only as many degrees better, as time and a trifling quantity of experience will enable any one, under similar circumstances, to produce—but upon this latter production we should certainly have felt more disposed to be charitable, if it had not been ushered into public notice under the sanction of the press and the managers, with, of course, the authoress's concurrence, as a species of competition with the work bearing the same title, from the pen of the deathless Lord BYRON. If it is supposed, for one moment, by either herself or her friends, that this lady can approach, in a whole play, any one line of this immortal poet, we can only laugh at the egregious and most presumptuous idea—she could no more write it, than we could eat it when written; and that with us would evidently be a matter of difficulty, when we cannot even now swallow what she has written.

The poetess has been very successful, however, in the result of her lucubrations, which is to be attributed to the admirable acting displayed in it by Messrs. YOUNG, C. KEMBLE, and WARDE, supported very agreeably by Mrs. SLOMAN. In the former of these gentlemen, the only fault we would presume to insinuate, is a little too much feebleness (of action) thrown into the Doge's character, and that rectified, he might write ne plus ultra to his proudest hopes. None ever did, or ever can, act the lover, of either reality or romance, so beautifully as C. KEMBLE, and in his delineation of the younger Foscari was apparent, to its fullest extent, the grace, the passion, the intenseness, and the general charm, by which he first won, and has so long held, the high tide of public approbation. It seems to us, that in Count Erizzo, as in his Iago, Mr. WARDE, with all his genius, makes the villany too apparent, or rather palpable—the discovery of the actual qualities of either part should be made manifest in a manner considerably less studied—it should appear the natural result of the man's depravity, rather than the actor's forced method of displaying it—but we should be sorry to be hypercritical with Mr. WARDE, who, for the most part, is a finished, and most gentlemanly artist. Of Mr. SERLE'S performance, it is only necessary to say, that a more sublime touch of the mountebank was seldom exhibited, out of the precincts of a fair—he has not a pretension for the avocation he has entered upon, and when he becomes most impassioned, to endeavour to convince you that he has, his voice is "as sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal." Young RAYMOND, of the Haymarket, who is engaged at this theatre, will soon relieve us of this outrageous specimen of self-importance. Foscari may live a night or two longer: but the first wet day, or foggy night, will send it to "the tomb of all the Capulets."

We have been most agreeably, as is but too frequently the case, disappointed in our prediction of PLANCHE'S farce of Returned "killed," which is quite as acceptable a bagatelle as we have for a long time met with—an eulogium particularly due to the author, who, out of slender materials, has put together some very busy scenes, and very smart dialogue. The success of the piece is, to a certain extent, attributable to the eminent talents of Mr. W. FARREN, although we would not be thought to detract, by the praise we have such pleasure in bestowing on him, from that which is proportionably due to others. The trifle is one of the most agreeable we have for some time witnessed, and one calculated to bring, what is technically called, some good half-prices.

We cannot, at this present writing, call to mind any little bits of interest, in which this glorious profession is involved, that would be of any particular amuse[illegible]

or information to an admiring public. To be sure, Mr. C. KEMBLE, who does not know even how to spell "arch-jesuit," has prevailed on a Miss JARMAN to break her engagement with Mr. HARRIS, the Dublin patentee, and she is consequently about to exhibit at Covent-garden Theatre. The object which this engagement has in view is two-fold, from all we can understand—first to annoy and injure his partner, Mr. HARRIS, because that gentleman had occasion to knock Master CHARLES down some few years since, and secondly, to dispossess Miss CHESTER; but report says, neither one point nor the other will be effected—for they say that Miss JARMAN is a very mediocral actress, and no great beauty in the bargain, while Miss CHESTER can lay claim to both attributes. After, however, reading Mr. KEMBLE's letter to Mr. SINCLAIR, exhibited by Mr. SCARLETT, in his motion on Thursday last, for a new trial, we are surprised at nothing which "My dear Mr." Manager can do, and can only say, that no pecuniary temptation would ever get us, were we mimes, under such power, and no bond induce us to believe we were safe, while we happened to be under it. Agreeably to our predictions, we find that Madame VESTRIS had a regular bumper on Monday last; boxes, private and public, pit, gallery, and slips! After this, she need be under no apprehension of scurrilous publications. Among those who have been her latest persecutors are a petty-fogging monkey, practising the law, in Water-lane, Blackfriars, whose name we will furnish her, if she should desire—one M'GREGOR LOGAN, who translated the English Opera House Der Freischutz (as humbugging a hodge-podge as ever was seen), and JOHN BARNETT, the soi-disant composer—nice boys, all three—what SHERIDAN, in his Rivals, calls "a puppy triumvirate." LA PORTE, who has arrived, will appear in a few days—he is the image of HARLEY, and a capital Englishman! The Haymarket terminates its season on Wednesday next, on which occasion an address by POOLE is to be spoken by Madame VESTRIS. We hear that MORRIS has netted 10,000*l.*! Who would not then be a manager—at least of the Haymarket Theatre?

SPORTING INTELLIGENCE.

The following Matches have already been made for the Newmarket Craven meeting of next year:—

First Day.—Mr. Payne's Helenus, 5 yrs old, 8st. 9lb., against Lord Warncliffe's Pastime, 4 yrs old, 8st. 2lb. for 200, h. ft.

The Marquis of Exeter's Recruit, 8st. 3lb., against Mr. Greville's Rachael, 8st. for 200, h. ft.

Second Day.—Mr. Payne's Babel, against Mr. Roger's Monarch, 8st. 4lb. each, first three miles of B. C. for 300, h. ft.

Mr. Payne's Bachelor against the Duke of Grafton's Chloris, 8st. 4lb. each, for 100.

At the First Spring Meeting the following Matches will be run:—

First Day.—Mr. Greville's c. by Waterloo, against Mr. Stonehewer's Brother to Problem, 8st. 5lb. each, for 100, h. ft.

Mr. Greville's Rachel against Mr. Rush's Carthago, 8st. 5lb. each, for 5000, h. ft.

On the first day of the July Meeting,

The Duke of Grafton's Paul Jones, 8st. 6lb., against Lord Exeter's Recruit, 8st. 2lb., for 200, h. ft.

At the Houghton Meeting, first day,

Sir J. Shelley's c. Barnardo against Mr. Payne's bl. c. by Smolensko, for 200, h. ft.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES.

Sir—Having observed paragraphs in various newspapers, throwing blame on Sir Francis Burdett, Mr. Hobhouse, Mr. Ellice, and Mr. Ricardo, some of which impute those aspersions to me, you will confer on me a favour, and do an act of justice, if you will assure the public (as I have done those gentlemen), that to blame them, as regards Greek affairs, never entered into my mind. If the engineer has failed to execute his task, he alone, in my opinion, is answerable. As to myself, it appeared to me, at the time, that I could not personally watch over the pregress of the works in hand, owing to the unfortunate Proclamation. I have to regret that I did not then see that proclamation in the light which I now do.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

Marseilles, Oct. 30. (Signed) COCHRANE.

Some expectation has been entertained among the friends of Lord Cochrane, that his Lordship was about to visit London, but by a letter received on Friday from Paris, it appears that he has left that city with M. Orlando, the Greek Deputy, for Marseilles. This change of determination is, it is said, owing to the grant of 11,000l. which Lord Cochrane has obtained from the French and Swiss Greek Committee at Paris, and he has returned to Marseilles with the intention of purchasing a frigate built in that port for the Pacha of Egypt, but which his Highness had not fulfilled his part of the engagement by paying for.—Morning Paper.

Wednesday a Court of Directors was held at the East India House, when the following ships were taken up and thus stationed, viz. Warren Hastings, Captain George Mason; Princess Charlotte of Wales, Capt. Christopher Biden; and Minerva, Capt. George Probyn, Madras and Bengal; Marquis Wellington, Captain ——, and Thomas Grenville, Capt. Charles Shea, Bengal direct.

Another meeting of the freemen of Sudbury took place at a tavern in Whitechapel, when the usual maledictions were denounced against Mr. John Wilks, jun. It was ultimately moved and seconded, that a circular letter issued by Mr. Wilks "was as false as God was true," which was carried unanimously.

Despatches arrived at Calais on Thursday evening, from Lord Grenville, addressed to Mr. Secretary Canning, which were given by his Majesty's Consul at Calais, in charge to Mr. Wyld, his Secretary, who proceeded in an open boat, at 11 o'clock at night, with them, during a gale of wind, and delivered them to the agent of packets at Dover, having landed at that place at five o'clock the next morning, from a pilot boat, through a tremendous surf, which nearly swamped the boat. Mr. Wyld returned the next evening to Calais, via Boulogne, in which port the vessel was obliged to take shelter, the wind being too violent to allow of her attempting to enter Calais harbour.

It appears by the Fourteenth Report of the Commissioners of Inquiry into the state of the Revenue, that there are 23,000,000 of newspapers published every year, and that the duties paid on advertisements on an average amount to 170,000l. annually.

It a man only place himself in the centre of the choir of Westminster Abbey and look up, and how low he must for ever after look down upon modern architects.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

COURT OF KING'S BENCH.

CRIMINAL INFORMATION AGAINST THE AGE.

THE KING v. RICHARDS.

Mr. Scarlett moved for a rule, calling upon the defendant, the proprietor and publisher of THE AGE newspaper, to show cause why a criminal information should not issue against him for a libel upon Mr. Easthope, one of the Members lately returned to Parliament for the borough of St. Alban's. Mr. Easthope acted as agent to Messrs. Hullett and Co., contractors or agents of the Government of Chili for a loan in this country; and his present application was supported by the affidavits of Messrs. Hullet, of himself, and one or two gentlemen of the Stock-Exchange, one of whom was the Chairman of the Committee. Messrs. Hullett and Co. having received information from the agent of the Chilian Government that remittances would be made to pay the dividends tdue on the loan early in October or in September, it was expected hat they would arrive by the 28th of September. On that day the agent called on them, and stated that he had not received any of the duplicates, and could not, therefore, place any in their hands; upon which Mr. Easthope, being sent for, advised that immediate notice should be given of the circumstance, to prevent an improper traffic in the Chilian bonds. Notice was accordingly posted up, and advertisements published, to that effect. He suggested that a written notice should be put up on the Stock Exchange, but no written notice could be put up in that place without the direction of the Committee sitting there, and it was then too far advanced in the day to be able to obtain their sanction before the hour for closing the Stock Exchange. Mr. Easthope, therefore, proceeded to the Stock Exchange himself, and gave direct notice that the dividends would not be paid. He had no transaction there, either personally or through any body else, on his account, for many days; and the last transaction he had had there was the purchase of a considerable number of bonds on his own account. That was on the 16th, and the circumstances he was now detailing took place on the 28th of September. The article of which he here complained appeared in THE AGE on the 1st Oct.; the obnoxious part of which was to the following effect:—"Another instance, of a most glaring character, appeared on Thursday last. Just as the Stock Exchange was about to close, a stock-broker of the name of Easthope, returned at the last election a member for St. Alban's, brought a quantity of Chilian Bonds into the market for sale, after he had received information from Messrs. Hullett that the dividends were not likely to be paid. A much more nefarious transaction cannot be imagined. Such conduct drew on the St. Alban's member the indiguation of the whole fraternity; above the rest, that of a young Jew of the name of Solomon, between whom and Mr. Easthope there was a regular skirmish, which ended in sending a challenge. Mr. Easthope being so knocked about and kicked, has ever since gone by the name of Bomb-proof, and if any one deserved it, he did. We shall be open to every contradiction of this matter. The dignity of the Imperial Parliament will be quite at stake, if this transaction be allowed to pass." Mr. Scarlett added, that he had affidavits to show that the last transaction on the part of Mr. Easthope in the Stock Exchange, was a purchase, and not a sale, of these bonds.

The Court granted a rule nisi.

SINCLAIR v. KEMBLE AND OTHERS.

This was an action brought by Mr. Sinclair, the celebrated singer, against the defendants, the Manager and Proprietors of Covent Garden theatre, to recover a compensation in damages for a breach of contract, in not employing the plaintiff to sing, for fifty nights, during the season 1824-25. At the trial before the Lord Chief Justice and a special Jury, at the sittings here, after last Trinity term, a verdict was found for the plaintiff, with 400l. damages.

Mr. Scarlett now moved for a rule to shew cause why that verdict should not be set aside, and a nonsuit entered, or a new trial had. The only evidence at the trial to prove any contract was a letter from Mr. Charles Kemble, one of the defendants, to the plaintiff, dated in June, 1824, in which an offer of an engagement at 20l. per night was made, and it was stipulated that Mr. Sinclair should be in London before the first week in October, in order that he might study his part in the then new opera of Der Freischutz. Mr. Sinclair did not arrive, however, until the 16th of October, after the new opera had been produced, and the part designed for him had been allotted to another gentleman. The defendants and the plaintiff then reciprocally declared their regret that the plaintiff had not arrived in time to take the part intended for him, and it was agreed that they should give him as much employment as they could. He was employed, however, but nine nights during the season, and then brought the action for the supposed breach of contract. The present motion was made on the ground of a misdirection of the Learned Judge. He stated truly to the jury that the supposed contract made by Mr. Charles Kemble had been put an end to by the plaintiff's not coming to time; but his Lordship went on to leave it for the consideration of the jury, whether a subsequent implied contract was not made to employ Mr. Sinclair for a reasonable number of nights during the season, and whether nine nights were a reasonable number. The Learned Counsel contended that no such question was raised by the pleadings, inasmuch as all the counts in the declaration were framed on the specific contract with Mr. Charles Kemble, which being put an end to by the plaintiff, the verdict was wrong. Rule granted.

THE KING v. LIEUT.-COLONEL ARCHDALL.

Before all the Judges of the Court sit every morning in "full Court," as it is called, it is usual for one of the puisne Judges to preside for the purpose of hearing and disposing of such common motions as require not the consideration of the whole Court. On Wednesday Mr. Justice Bayley sat for this purpose, when Mr. Broderick moved his Lordship for a certiorari, to remove an indictment against the above defendant (charging him with an indecent assault upon a boy) into this Court for trial. The Learned Counsel stated, that, in consequence, an indictment had been preferred against the defendant at the Westminster Sessions, charging him with this offence, and while he was in custody on the charge he was liberated on his own recognizance, by the order of the Lord Chief Justice. Another indictment had been preferred against him for the same offence, at the Middlesex Sessions, and the present motion was to move that indictment into this Court for trial, substantially on the ground that the defendant could not have a fair trial at the Sessions.

Mr. Justice Bayley—What are the facts stated, on which the certiorari is moved for?

Mr. Broderick said that Lieutenant-Colonel Archdall swore a conspiracy was formed against him, and he alleged, among other circumstances to show that was the case, that very soon after the charge was made against him, he received numerous anonymous letters, intimating to him that if an advertisement were inserted in the Morning Herald, stating that "300l. should be ready for A. B." at a certain place which the anonymous letter pointed out, the charge should be stopped. The defendant very properly refused to comply with these solicitations; and as he swore he was by birth, habits, and connexions a gentleman, he wish his trial should take place in this Court, because aggravated and distorted statements had gone forth in the newspapers, and had been circulated in hand-bills, calculated to excite a prejudice in that class of society likely to act as petty jurors at the sessions.

Mr. Justice Bayley upon these grounds granted the certiorari.

KING v. BUTTERWORTH.

This was an action of trespass brought by the plaintiff, who resides in Sergeant's-inn, Fleet-street, against the parish officer of St. Dunstan's-in-the-West, who had seized sundry goods and chattels belonging to the plaintiff for non-payment of poors' rate. The case was tried before the Lord Chief Justice at Guildhall, during the sittings previous to the present term, and a verdict was returned for the plaintiff. The question was, whether the house situated in Sergeant's Inn, Fleet-street, was part and parcel of the parish of St. Dunstan's-in-the-West. The evidence on that point was very contradictory, and it was on this ground that Mr. Serjeant Wilde now moved to obtain a rule to show cause why the verdict should not be set aside, and a new trial granted.

The Lord Chief Justice said, that the evidence had clearly proved that since the reign of Queen Elizabeth the inhabitants of Sergeant's Inn had never been called on to pay rates. Persons who had purchased property in that part had given a much larger sum for it, under the idea that no rates could be demanded. He was decidedly of opinion that this property was extra-parochial, consequently was not subject to pay rates to the parish of St. Dunstan-in-the-West. He was perfectly satisfied with the verdict that had been returned on the trial.

The rest of the Court concurred with his Lordship, and refused to grant a rule to show cause.

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

MANSION-HOUSE.—Oates, the man who was charged with having passed a five pound note belonging to the Leicester Bank, knowing it to be stolen, underwent a final examination. Mr. Gates, who attended as solicitor to Messrs. Paget and Kirby, the Leicester bankers, produced evidence to show the manner in which the robbery was committed. The parcel, with 6,000l. in notes, was put in a portmanteau, which was locked up in the hind boot, as an ordinary parcel. Before the coach got to Leicester, the boot was broken open, and the parcel gone. Evidence was given to prove that the five-pound note produced was one of those stolen, and that the prisoner had uttered it. He gave three different accounts of the mode in which he became possessed of it. The last he gave was, that he had taken it at Romford fair, and could produce a witness who saw him take it. He was remanded, to give an opportunity of bringing the witness forward, but now no witness appeared, and the prisoner was ordered to find bail to appear, and answer for the offence of having the note in his possession, knowing it to be stolen.

MR. J. WILKS, JUN.

On Monday Mr. Wilks was brought before the Lord Mayor for second examination. Mr. Alley, Mr. Bolland, and Mr. Andrews, attended for Mr. Wilks.

At twelve o'clock, the hour appointed for the examination, the Lord Mayor ordered that the names of the witnesses, and other persons who had been required to attend, should be called over, and asked if Mr. Scott and Mr. Mitchell were present?

Mr. Mitchell answered, but Mr. Scott, it was said, was not to be found.

The Lord Mayor—I shall certainly issue warrants against those who do not appear. The effect of keeping back evidence on such an occasion may be extremely injurious. Individuals may be accused of crimes of which they are completely innocent, for the purpose of attaining certain ends. I cannot for a moment excuse such conduct. Let Mr. Scott be called again.

The second call was as fruitless as the first.

Nothing, observed Mr. Wilks, can be a stronger proof of my innocence than the fact of apprising Messrs. Scott and Williams of my having the money by the same post, and having stated that the post-bills were made payable to them. I kept the bills in my possession from the day I received them from Mr. Mitchell until the 9th of November, and then sent them to my banker's by my clerk, and requested to be informed whether it would be irregular to endorse the bills per procuration on behalf of Scott and Williams; and the bankers returned for answer "that it would not." I could have no motive whatever in placing them to my account, for it will appear by my banker's book, that I never drew this money out of their hands until Scott and Williams were entitled to receive it.

The Lord Mayor—What becomes of your assertion on Friday, Mr. Wilks, that you were authorised to endorse?

Mr. Wilks—That comes afterwards, and I shall prove it most satisfactorily.

The Lord Mayor—Have you a letter empowering you to sign for Messrs. Scott and Williams?

Mr. Wilks—My authority to endorse depends upon a series of correspondence.

The Lord Mayor—I have been informed privately, but I think it necessary for the ends of justice to mention it publicly, that you, Mr. Wilks, have satisfied the British Annuity Company, by giving up some valuable deeds that were of importance to them, and that therefore the proceedings upon this charge have been given up; but I will not permit this course to be pursued. It is nothing less than making one law for the rich, another for the poor—one law for the weak, another for the strong. This is, indeed, an extraordinary way of settling accounts.

Mr. Wilks—My Lord, I am not to answer private evidence or statements; I have to do with nothing but public testimony, and I am ready to confront it. With reference to your private information, I shall merely state that it is certainly wrong.

The Lord Mayor—Mr. Wilks, before I issued the warrant against you, I consulted those who were qualified to judge of the merits of the information on which I issued it. They said that I was justified, and I must persevere in probing the case until I have ascertained the facts.

Mr. Wilks—I am sure that you will do what you conceive to be proper in this affair; but, my Lord, you certainly are not justified in cross-examining a person in my situation in the manner in which you have.

Mr. Alley—I am prepared to prove what must establish Mr. Wilks's innocence, independently of the argument of authority to endorse. When he wrote to Messrs. Scott and Williams, he stated in a letter dated the 20th of December, that he would deduct his costs out of the 1,500l. Now, how was Mr. Wilks to deduct the amount of his costs without converting the bills into cash? Here is a direct proof, though not a formal one, that he acted upon authority.

Mr. Wilks—I have here the copy of the letter which I wrote to Messrs. Scott and Williams upon that subject. Where is the ground for supposing that I had any fraudulent intention? Here Mr. Wilks read the letter, from which the following is an extract:—

"I send you back your bills approved, and I send you my bill with your agency marked; and when you answer the points in this letter, and apprise me that the lives have been insured, and the rate of premium, and that our bills have been approved by Captain Fraser, I will then transmit you 1,500l. for the annuity, and the form necessary for insurance, &c. deducting first of all the amount of my proportion of our two bills of costs. [Dated Dec. 20, 1824. Addressed to Scott and Williams.]

(Signed) "JOHN WILKS, Jun."

The Lord Mayor—What is the amount of the bill of costs?

Mr. Alley—I don't know.

The Lord Mayor—My reason for asking is, because if the bill did not exceed 1000l. there was no occasion for converting both into cash.

Mr. Alley—Now, he pays those bills in at his banker's, where the 1,500l. was carefully preserved, and he had a large balance there besides.

Mr. Wilks—I had 2,000l. then.

Mr. Alley—It is the intention to practise imposition that constitutes the offence, and not the mere writing of names.

The Lord Mayor said that it certainly was not pretended that the money was not ultimately paid, but that was no argument that no forgery had been committed. There were many cases in which money was honestly paid back, after it had been got by means as unjustifiable as those alledged against Mr. Wilks. When Mr. Wilks found that the securities were not completed by Mr. Frazer, he ought to have informed the directors of the fact, and paid back to them the 1500l. Mr. Wilks manifested a desire to get the money, because he wrote, stating that a confidential clerk of Messrs. Scott and Co. was going to Scotland, and would take it thither. This statement Mr. Wilks contradicted. The money, notwithstanding all this, instead of going to Scotland, remained in his banker's hands. Now, if Mr. Wilks would produce a letter showing that he had authority to endorse, there would be an end to the case, and he should be discharged with pleasure. The Lord Mayor, after uttering some expressions of condemnation against those who were so reluctant to come forward, said that he should call in the aid of another magistrate, in order to determine whether he should take bail under Mr. Peel's new act, for the appearance of Mr. Wilks.

Mr. Wilks—I assure you, that not one-fourth of what I have to advance in proof of my innocence has been stated. But the whole of the facts shall come out. I court investigation.

The Lord Mayor—If I take bail, I shall demand two sureties in 1,000l. each, and your own in 2000l.

Mr. Alderman Waithman, after conferring with the Lord Mayor, observed, that there were certainly wide distinctions in cases of this nature. Individuals did often rashly and improperly put their names to documents, in order to supply defects; and if this were such a case, then he, for one, would be glad to allow bail. There were, he believed, doubts upon the construction of the facts, and, under all circumstances, he thought bail might be taken.

Mr. Wilks—I thank you, my Lord, and Alderman Waithman, for the kind opinion you have given; and I beg leave to assure you and the public, that when the full circumstances of the case come to be examined, as I hope they will be, it will be seen there is no just ground whatever for the present proceeding.

Mr. Wilks, sen. then came forward, with Mr. Lawford, (Mr. Wilks, jun.'s brother-in-law), to become bail. They each justified bail to the amount of 1,000l.

Mr. Wilks, jun. entered into his own recognizances in the sum of 2,000l. to appear and answer any charge that may be preferred against him.

Mr, Wilks, sen. said, I beg, my Lord, to state, that my son has been engaged in several joint stock companies, and in various concerns, some of which have certainly not met my approbation. With them I have nothing whatever to do; but in a case like the present, I feel it to be a duty which I owe to public justice, and an obligation which I owe to my son, to render him every assistance in my power.

The Lord Mayor—Sir, you have acted very properly. I beg to ask of Dr. Mitchell, whether this proceeding was taken by himself or by the company?

Dr. Mitchell—By the company, my Lord, certainly.

The Lord Mayor—Was Mr. Scott withdrawn at the instance of the company?

Dr. Mitchell—My Lord, there has been no board since this case came before your Lordship; therefore, they cannot have interfered in the manner in which your Lordship is pleased to suppose.

The parties then retired.

HATTON-GARDEN.—As early as ten o'clock on Tuesday morning, Lee, accompanied by Wainwright, both officers to this establishment, went to Cold-bath Fields Prison, where Ambrose, the person charged with the murder of Mary Ann Perry, has been confined since his apprehension, for the purpose of bringing him to the office as privately as possible, before the crowds of persons whom curiosity and anxiety might excite, would be expected to assemble. On being summoned to the front yard, he exclaimed, "Ah, Gentlemen, you are come very early. Well, God bless you, I am glad of that, for I am quite innocent of any intentional crimes, and it is very hard to be hooted at. (Alluding to the treatment he met with on Friday last, when being removed from this office.) On the officers enquiring how he felt himself, he replied that he never felt himself better either in mind or body; that he never intended to commit any injury to the poor woman, though he certainly did wish to get rid of her. When he was informed that it had already been publicly stated that he came into London for the purpose of surrendering himself, he strongly denied the statement, and observed, that although he never in any way concealed himself, still, he never for a moment entertained the slightest idea of voluntarily surrendering himself.

The prisoner being placed at the bar, the depositions of the witnesses taken at the Coroner's Inquest were read over to him, and he was about to be removed from the bar, when a female, named Sarah Mayos, who had not attended at the inquest, entered the office, in pursuance of a summons, and stated that she had been employed to wash the body of the deceased, which was completely covered with bruises, apparently inflicted either by a rope or a stick. On the throat of the deceased were marks similar to the impression of a finger and thumb, as if she had been strangled. Under the head was placed an apron, and a thick piece of flannel, to prevent the blood soaking through the floor. The flannel was completely saturated with blood; there was also much blood on one of the pillows, and one of the sheets which were lying on the top of the bed.

Mr. Jay, the landlord of the public-house where the prisoner lodged, merely corroborated the evidence of Mr. Robertson, a fellow lodger of Ambrose's, which was given on the inquest.

The prisoner being called on for his defence, stated that he was entirely unconscious of the fate of the deceased until he rose the next morning, when he discovered her lying on the floor close to the door.

The prisoner was then fully committed to take his trial on the charge of murder, and the witnesses bound over to prosecute.

MARYLEBONE.—On Friday a respectable female, of advanced age, accompanied by two little girls, came to this office, and requested the advice of the Magistrates, under the following circumstances:—She stated that the children were motherless, and that their father, four or five months ago, went the northern circuit with the Judges, as a writer and reporter, and had not since been heard of. Before he went he left the children under the care of a person at Kentish Town, but as he had not made any remittance for their support, that person declined keeping them any longer, and therefore had brought them to her, who is their grandmother, and left them at her house. The old lady further stated, that she did not believe her son meant to desert the children, for he was too fond of them to admit of that; yet she could not account for his absence or neglect; she then added, that much as she wished to give them a home, she did not possess the means—and here her tears prevented her saying more. The little girls were of interesting appearance, and evinced great sensibility of their destitute condition. The father's name is Richard Hatt, and upon its being mentioned, a gentleman in the office said he knew him well, and had seen him lately in Westmoreland; he represented him as an eccentric character, and he believed him to be still in that part of the country, writing a poetical description of the Lake of Windermere.

Mr. Griffith lamented that he should be poetising abroad, instead of providing for his family at home. He recommended the children to the care of the parish officers of St. Pancras, for the present, and desired that proper inquiry should be made for the purpose of finding the father.

The important process of wheat sowing is nearly completed in the county of Worcestor, and a more favourable season for it, in every respect, is scarcely within the memory of the oldest cultivator of the soil. A considerable breadth of the young plant is already above the ground, and is wearing the most healthy and promising appearance.

MELANCHOLY AND FATAL OCCURRENCE.

[From the Cork Constitution of Tuesday.]

It is with the sincerest regret, that we meet the painful necessity of relating such a casualty as that which engages our attention at the present moment, and interests our feelings—even beyond the calamity itself—to which none can be more sensible. The circumstance to which we allude is simply this. On Sunday morning one of our City Sheriffs, John Wallis, Esq. a gentleman of as humane a nature and as kindly feelings as ever has filled his office, in the discharge of that part of his duty, which provides for the security of the peaceable and the innocent in their beds, while patroling Barrack-street, attended by the peace-officers of the city, arrested a man of the name of James Coghlan. A struggle ensued, which provoked Mr. Wallis to strike the man with a loaded pistol, which he held in his hand—in the act of doing so, the contents of the pistol were accidentally discharged into his head. The unfortunate victim of unpremeditated injury was taken to the North Infirmary, where he terminated his being in the course of twelve hours. A coroner's inquest was held upon his body, and conducted, with becoming rigour, when the following verdict was delivered:—"That the deceased (James Coghlan) came by his death in consequence of a shot from a pistol in the hand of John Wallis, Esq. one of the High Sheriffs of the city of Cork, which accidentally went off while in the act of making a blow at the deceased, while he, the said Sheriff, was in the execution of his duty; but we cannot separate without expressing our opinion, that striking the blow when a loaded pistol was in his hand was indiscreet and imprudent."

It has at length been found expedient that the Post-office steam-packets, with the Irish mails, should proceed direct from the port of Liverpool for Dublin.

An accident occurred on Thursday morning, which might have been attended with the most calamitous results. About half-past eight o'clock the party wall on the south side of the Guards' Club-house in St. James's, owing to the want of sufficient support, occasioned by the pulling down the adjoining houses for Mr. Crockford's new club-house, fell in with a tremendous crash, at the same time that part of the roof fell in. As soon as it was possible to do so with safety, the premises were searched, for the purpose of ascertaining how far the accident had extended with respect to the inmates, when it was found that there were only two or three servants in the house at the time, and they being in the kitchen, fortunately escaped unhurt. Had it happened but half an hour before, the consequences would have been dreadful, as there were about forty men at work, who had just left for their breakfasts. It is also a matter of congratulation that none of the officers of the Guards were in the house at the time.

For some days a new comet has made its appearance in the constellation of Bootes. The unfavourable weather not having yet permitted astronomers to observe its motion, they find it necessary to await the combination of positive observations, previous to speaking of it. It was discovered on the 22d ult. at Florence, by M. Pons; on the 24th, at Paris, by M. Bouvard; and on the 28th, at Marseilles, by M. Gambart. On the evening of the 1st instant, M. Nicollet, being occupied in examining the comet, was able to perceive across some gleams of light, that, since the first days of its appearance, it had augmented sufficiently in size and brightness to become visible to the naked eye. Its nucleus presents a thick nebulosity, accompanied by a tail several degrees in length. Its right ascension augments about a degree a-day, and its Boreal declension diminishes about one degree and a quarter in the same time. The public may easily distinguish it in the north-west region of the sky, when the evenings are fine.

A correspondent of the Kaleidoscope, who dates from Skibbereen, Ireland, October 29, has communicated the following tragic event:—"The wife of a peasant, residing in the neighbourhood of this town, left her home a few mornings since, to visit her father, who resides at some distance from her cottage, on the opposite side of the river. As she did not return at the usual hour, her husband concluded that she purposed remaining all night at her father's, and gave the subject no further thought, but proceeded in company with several other men, at a late hour, to draw the river for salmon. The night was clear moonlight. They arrived at the hole they purposed drawing; the net was cast; the hearts of the fishermen felt joyous as they drew the now weighty net towards the shore. They came to view the capture, and foremost was the husband of the woman above alluded to, when, to their utmost consternation, instead of a large haul of fish, the object presented to the view of the horrified peasant was the body of his wife, who had left her peaceful dwelling that morning never to return alive. Such is the uncertainty of human life! It is conjectured, that in crossing a ford near to her cottage, the unfortunate woman lost her footing, and thus met a watery grave."—Liverpool Mercury.

A lady of high rank, who, during last winter resided in Switzerland, and frequently, even in severely cold weather, visited the celebrated glaciers, became subject to chilblaias, and other painful cutaneous eruptions; the skin assuming, at the same time, an unseemly redness and general course feature, alarmingly subversive of personal beauty. Immediate recourse was had to the most eminent of the faculty, but unavailingly. An infallible specific was, however, happily recommended by a friend, before which disease vanished, and a loveliness returned with renovated powers of fascination. The lady is now preparing to revisit the romantic Cantons, and, wisely surmising that PREVENTION IS BETTER THAN CURE, has provided herself amply against the influence of climate by a supply of her faithful antidote—ROWLAND'S KALYDOR.

Lord Norbury, in his conduct and manner on the judgment seat, is not only influenced by his habitual cheerfulness and courteous disposition, but also perhaps by something like an indifference to public opinion. His court is remarkable for any thing but the decorum with which its business is carried on. His propensity to joke, in season and out of season, operates as a general license to all: and whether it be a civil question or a point of life and death in discussion, repeated shouts of laughter re-echo through the halls, as puns, quibbles, and quotations, are bandied about from the bench to the bar, from the bar to the bench, and from both to the jury and the witnesses; till mirth arises to uproar, and fun degenerates into downright insubordination. Of this his Lordship himself has borne testimony. On pressing a reluctant witness one day to get at his profession, and being at length told that he kept a racket court: "And a very good trade too," replied the judge—"so do I, so do I."—Monthly Mag.

IMPROVED METHOD OF EXPLODING FIRE ARMS.—The ingenious little instantaneous light-machine, in which, by an air-tight piston moving in a cylinder, the air contained therein becomes so much compressed as to give out its caloric in the state of sensible heat or fire, has recently been substituted for flint and steel, or detonating locks, for the purpose of exploding fire-arms, and a patent obtained accordingly: the cylinder is concealed in the stock of the piece, and the piston is moved by a powerful belical spring.—Monthly Mag.

LAMENTABLE ACCIDENT.—On Sunday week, as a number of boys were amusing themselves on board of the watermen's wherries, off Irongate-stairs, near the Tower, three of them, in one of the wherries, fell overboard; one of them fortunately got hold of the gunwhale of an adjacent boat, and clung fast to the side, until he was relieved from his perilous situation. The two other boys, however, sunk; and the ebb tide running very fast at the time, it is supposed they were carried down under the many tiers of shipping lying in the neighbourhood, as every exertion was promptly used in searching for the bodies, by means of the drags, which were employed the greatest part of the day; but, unfortunately, without success. They were about 13 or 14 years of age, and the children of poor parents residing in the vicinity.

CORONERS' INQUESTS.

Wednesday evening, at seven o'clock, an inquest whs held in the Committee-room of Middlesex Hospital, before Thomas Stirling, Esq., Coroner, on the body of Richard Banbury, aged 26, a fine young man, who came by his death under the following melancholy circumstances:—

Mr. John Newman, painter and glazier, of No. 25, Greek-street, Soho-square, being sworn, stated, that a few days ago the deceased called at his shop, and requested him to give him a job. Witness was not in the immediate want of a workman, and at first refused him, but the deceased informing him that he had a wife and three children who were in the greatest distress, and that he had been some time out of work, he took compassion on him, and ordered him to call on him on the following day and he would send him to work. Witness having contracted with the parish of St. Ann, Soho, to paint the church, sent the deceased with his other workmen to perform the task. While at work he would place himself in the most hazardous situations, as if desirous to do more work than the other men, and was frequently cautioned by witness not to place himself in so much danger, but he still continued to do so, and avoided making those preparations which were usual when any difficult job was to be performed. On Monday last, at about half-past eleven o'clock in the forenoon, the deceased was instructed to paint one of the pediments of the church, which was about 60 feet from the pavement, for which purpose one of the most substantial ladders belonging to the parish was procured and placed against the church; but that not being sufficiently long, another shorter ladder was affixed to it by ropes, by which means the deceased was enabled more conveniently to perform his work. Witness, shortly after the deceased got on the ladder, observed him standing with one foot on the step of the ladder and the other extended to a projection in the wall, while he was reaching with the brush to the pediment. His situation was most perilous, and witness, with several other persons, who were excessively alarmed, called to him, for God's sake to get on the ladder until witness brough him a "man-help," generally used by painters to insure their safety. The deceased got on the ladder, and was standing on that part which was fastened by the ropes, until witness arrived within a few yards of him with the man-help, which he was reaching to him, when the ladder snapped in two; the deceased was instantaneously precipitated headforemost from the ladder to the pavement, and the ladder on which witness was standing fell sideways for a considerable distance, until it came in contact with a projection in the wall, and kept stationary until some of the workmen came to his assistance, and released him from his perilous situation. Witness during this period kept tight hold of one of the steps of the ladder, while his arm was jammed between the ladder and the wall. (Here Mr. Newman, whose arm was in a sling, presented it to the view of the Jury, and it appeared to be jammed in a most dreadful manner.)

Mr. Stirling said it was rather strange that one of the parochial ladders should be the cause of the accident.

Mr. Newman attributed the accident to the two having been tied together, and the weight of himself and the deceased upon that part which was tied. It was a ladder generally used to facilitate escape in the event of fire. He did not conceive that there was any blame attached to the parish. He understood that it was the intention of the churchwardens to do every thing in their power for the assistance of the widow and family, and that a sermon was to be preached in support of them.

Mr. Stirling thought that the parish were bound to provide for the family.

The Jury returned a verdict of "Accidental Death."

Another inquest was held at the same time and place, before the same coroner, on the body of James Epelett, aged 30. It appeared in evidence that deceased was employed in the house of Mr. Williams, a fishmonger, residing in Margaret-street, Cavendish-square, and on Monday last he was engaged brewing at the lower part of the house. While thus employed, he was carrying some materials necessary for the process, when on his arrival near a flap-door leading to a cellar of great depth, his foot slipped, and he was precipitated to the bottom, and dreadfully injured, his skull being fractured and one of his legs broken, &c. He was brought to this hospital, where he died of the injuries he receceived.

The Jury returned a verdict of "Accidental Death."

Friday evening a coroner's inquest was held at the African Chief, Wilsted-street, Somers-town, before Thomas Stirling, Esq. on the body of Jacob Webb, a man between 60 and 70 years of age, who destroyed himself by cutting his throat.

The deceased was by trade a bricklayer, and the owner of the house in which he lived. About three weeks since he buried his wife, to whom, it appeared, he was much attached, and her loss had since preyed much upon his mind. About half-past six on Monday morning last, a female lodger heard him knocking in his room, as if for assistance. About a quarter before seven he knocked again, and she then went into his room, and asked what he wanted. He was then on the side of the bed, and did not answer her, but made signs to her to cover up his feet. She did so, and called another female down stairs to see what was the matter with him. Having procured a light, she observed the floor covered with blood, and she imagined that he had burst a blood-vessel. A surgeon was sent for, who came immediately, and it was then discovered that his throat was cut; but he lived till eight o'clock on Wednesday night.

The evidence adduced left no doubt on the minds of the coroner and jury that the deceased had been the author of his own death, and that when he committed the fatal act he was deranged. He had long been in a melancholy, unsettled state of mind, and more particularly since the death of his wife, frequently talked very incoherently, fancying at times that his wife was present in the room with him. His wound was dressed, and the following day he was able to speak, and he then confessed to the surgeon and the nurse who attended him, that he committed the act himself, and was sorry for it, but he did not know what he was about when he did it.

Verdict—"That the deceased cut his own throat, being at the time in a state of temporary mental derangement.

An inquest has been held on the bodies of the two men who lately lost their lives in an affray with the police at Arva fair, which terminated in the following verdict.—"We find that the said James M'Cabe and Edward Donahoe came by their deaths by gun-shot wounds, on the 1st of November inst. fired by a party of police in their own defence, stationed in this town, on the said day. Signed (for self and fellows) James Armstrong." Sheridan, the person who headed the populace in the outrageous proceeding which led to the above-mentioned catastrophe, received three stabs in the back, and a ball grazed him along the back, and lodged behind the ribs. He lies dangerously ill a few miles from the town. Dr. Wiley has just returned from attending him; he seems to think his life in imminent danger. He lately returned from America, whither he fled from justice.

Tuesday an inquisition was taken before Thomas Higgs, Esq., at the Triumphant Chariot, Pembroke-mews, Upper Grosvenor-place, on the body of Michael Macarthy, a workman employed in laying water-pipes in Capel-street, Chelsea. The deceased, it appeared, was edging off a pipe, when the adze slipped, and dreadfully cut his leg below the knee cap. Mr. John Bowling, the house surgeon of St. George's Hospital, stated, that when the deceased was brought there, he had lost a great quantity of blood; the wound had divided a large artery, and with great difficulty it was picked up and made secure. The serious injury received, and an inflammation of the bowels subsequently ensuing, caused his death. Verdict Accidental Death.

It affords us great pleasure to state, that his Royal Highness the Duke of York is daily improving in health.

PRICE of STOCKS up to FOUR O'CLOCK YESTERDAY.

BRITISH.

Bank Stock, 202½	India Stock, 247
Red. 3 per Cent. 81⅞½	India Bonds, 38 40 prem.
3 per Cent. Cons. 82⅛⅜	Exch. Bills, 1000, 21 22 pm.
3½ per Cent. 87⅞ 88⅛	Do. 500, 21 22 pm.
New 4 per Cent. 98⅛⅜	Do. Small, 21 22 pm.
4 per Cent. 1826,	Cons. for Acc. 82⅛⅜½
Long Anns. 19¼ 5-16	Scrip,

Frankfort papers to the 5th inst. arrived yesterday. The King of Bavaria has issued the following humane ordinance .—

"MUNICH, Oct. 30.—A Royal Ordinance has just been published here, of which the following is the preamble :—

"We, Louis, by the grace of God, King of Bavaria, &c. desiring to facilitate to all our subjects the means of improving their intellectual faculties, and their religious and moral sentiments, and to relieve the unfortunate, we have thought fit to establish, in our town of Freysig, an institution for the education and instruction of the blind, and we shall shortly make known the particulars. To found gratuitous places in this establishment, we have assigned to our Cabinet Treasury a sum of 50,000 florins."

We received yesterday the Allgemeine Zeitung to the 5th inst. It gives, from the Oriental Spectator of the 29th September, an article representing the cause of Greece to be in a hopeless state, and accusing the correspondents of the Greek Committee of concealing the truth, in order to protract an unavailing struggle, to the injury of all parties.

An article dated Mentz, October 30, states the vintage to have been more productive than was expected ; but complains of the depressed state of commerce.

The St. Petersburgh Journal to the 25th October also arrived yesterday. It contains no news from the seat of war, but furnishes the following paragraph :—

"ST. PETERSBURGH, OCT. 23.—Trade is still very active here, notwithstanding the advanced season. From the 11th to the 18th of this month inclusive, 53 ships have entered the port of Constadt, of which 24 are in ballast, and, notwithstanding this, the orders are still so considerable, that there is reason to fear they may not at all be executed before the navigation closes.

"In the month of August, 161 vessels arrived in the port of Riga ; sailed 138. The value of goods imported in the same period was 1,213,848 rubles, that of the imports 3,700,926."

The Most Hon. the Marquis of Downshire has been pleased to appoint the Rev. Thomas White, M.A., of University College, Oxford, and Priest-Vicar of Lichfield Cathedral, to be one of his Lordship's Domestic Chaplains.

Mr. William Lee, the High Constable of Westminster, has just published a brief history, in verse, of events which have taken place connected with an application made by him for a remuneration for his general services for the last ten years, and especially from the Members of the two Houses of Parliament. It is really distressing to find that this useful servant of the public cannot obtain the very moderate pittance which he asks.

A suite of rooms are preparing at the King's Palace, St. James's, for the reception of his Majesty.

Nearly all the Cabinet Ministers have arrived in town previous to the commencement of the new Parliament. Lord Melville, Lord Sidmouth, Earl Bathurst, Lord Eldon, Mr. Canning, Mr. Huskisson, and Mr. Robinson, are either at their offices, or within a few miles of town.

The Lady Mayoress was on Wednesday safely delivered of a son, just one hour before her husband resigned the civic chair to his successor. This is the only instance of a birth happening in the family of the chief magistrate since the mayoralty of Sir Rich. Carr Glyn, in the year 1798.

One of those desperate gangs of smugglers that infest the Kent and Sussex coast, tumultuously assembled near the Tide Mills, at Bishopstone, a few miles from Lewes, on the night of Friday se'nnight, where they obstructed a Quarter-master of the Coast Blockade, struck him a violent blow on the head, and otherwise grossly assaulted him, by which he had one of the fingers of his right hand broken.

AN UNLUCKY PIECE OF GOODS.—At Bow-street, Thursday, girl of 17, named Louisa Jones, was committed for stealing a piece of handkerchiefs, from the shop of Mr. Mather, a draper, in New-street, Covent-garden. It is a singular circumstance, that two young men, named Maltby and Jones, were convicted at the last Sessions, and ordered for transportation, for stealing the very same piece of handkerchiefs, it having been restored to the prosecutor upon the trial.

A gentleman, named John Francis Hislop, son of the late Rev. Dr. Hislop, Rector of Marylebone, had been passing some days at one of the principal inns at Barnet, when the landlady pressing him for a settlement of the account, it was discovered that he had no money. He had resources in London, he said, whither the landlord consented to send him in a post chaise, accompanied by another person, who was to bring home the amount of his bill. Just as they were entering Kentish Town, his companion discovered the unfortunate gentleman in the act of cutting his throat. He wrenched the knife from him, but not until he had inflicted a deep wound. He was immediately conveyed to a surgeon's, where the wound was sown up, and is not considered as likely to prove fatal. Previous to the dreadful attempt, he conversed quite sensibly on different topics, particularly on the late murder at Barnet. We understand that he has a wife living, and is a gentleman of considerable property.—Herts Mercury.

Sir Walter Scott has been for several days at Paris. We have seen Sir Walter as an antiquary, a critic, novelist, and poet, and we shall soon see him as the historian of that extraordinary man, who for fifteen years exercised so mighty and terrible an influence upon the destinies of the world. The Hon. Baronet alighted within our walls, at no great distance from the Place Louis XV., the area and environs of which he has so eloquently described in his 'Paul's Letters,' a work, written in 1815, under the influence of the political feeling of the day. At present a calmer spectator, and, from the popularity of his talent, less a stranger among us, Sir Walter Scott will be better able to study our condition after so many storms the progress of Constitutional doctrines under the legitimate Monarchy, and what remains to us of the recollections of the Empire. Sir Walter Scott before putting the last finish to his history of the 'Soldier King,' has come to see once more the monuments of his military glory, those silent witnesses, of which, legitimacy upheld by the Charter, feels no terror ; and which historical impartiality may now interrogate with as much indifference as the chronicles and dusty manuscripts of the reign of Louis the Eleventh, which stand forth with such liveliness and verisimilitude in Quentin Durward. Already have some of his numerous readers been admitted to a near view of the illustrious historic novelist—have admired his modest demeanour, and smiled at the lively sallies that mingle in his conversation. With respect to his person, we have been able to verify the exceeding exactness of the portrait given of it by the author of the historical and literary Travels in Scotland. Sir Walter Scott has already been recognized in one of our theatres, and the representation of Ivanhoe, where, in expressing his satisfaction, as a polished stranger, he regretted that the tourney was not acted on the stage ;—a characteristic reflection on the part of a man who has re-produced in such lively colours the chivalrous games of the feudal ages. Sir Walter Scott must likewise have been surprised at the travestie which our dramatic writers have given of the Jew Isaac. After the performance, the Scotch poet was seen in the saloon of the Odeon, bending with respect before the statue of Corneille, and saluting, with the preference of enthusiasm, that of Moliere, who is well known to be his fovourite author.—Journal des Debats of Wednesday.

MELANCHOLY SHIPWRECK.

The Ranger, a small schooner belonging to Kirkcudbright, M'Lean, sailed from Whitehaven on Tuesday week, at half-past five o'clock. In addition to the crew, there were 10 passengers on board (one of them a female), and the little vessel was also deeply laden with a general cargo. Before the Ranger had stood long on her course, the weather became hazy, and the gale increased to something like a hurricane, accompanied by a heavy rolling sea. About nine o'clock land was descried, and soon after the helmsman discovered that the vessel, having missed the proper tract, had got considerably to the westward of the Ross-head. The wind now blew more furiously than ever ; the rain literally fell in torrents, and the darkness of the night added not a little to the fears of the passengers. With a heavy cargo in so small a bark, to drop at anchor was out of the question ; the only chance of safety seemed to be in making for the river Dee, and after careering before the wind for the space of another half hour, the word was given, "breakers a-head." At this signal, all on board crowded together ; but before they had time to express their fears, the vessel struck against the outermost corner of the rock in Kirkandrew's Bay, known by the name of the Three Brothers. The sea, however, ran so high that she was soon thrown clear of the Three Brothers, and again drifted onwards to a ragged ridge of rocks on the main shore, against which she dashed, rebounded, and dashed again, with a degree of violence that must have sprung her timbers from deck to keel. Hope at this moment had almost fled ; a watery grave appeared to be the inevitable lot of all ; but another dash, and the Ranger was nearer the land than ever ; when the master and more active passengers improving the opportunity thus afforded, clung to the rocks, and clambered on shore as fast as their fears and the pitchy darkness of the night would let them. Their escape, in fact, was most providential ; the storm still raged with unabated fury, and before they had been many moments on shore, their frail bark was dashed to pieces, and entirely disappeared. Two farm houses lay near, and thither such as were saved repaired, with a view of obtaining shelter for the night. In the morning it was discovered that out of the twelve that had sailed from Whitehaven, (master, mate, and ten passengers), three were missing, viz. Wm. Carson, the mate, Mr. M'Gourlay, button-manufacturer, Kirkcudbright, and a person whose name and residence could not be ascertained. After a short search the body of the mate was found among the rocks, but up to Friday no trace of the others had been discovered.—By the wreck of the Ranger, property has been lost to a large amount.—Liverpool Advertiser.

THE ARMY.—The 2d Battalion of the Grenadier Regiment of Guards has received orders to march, to-morrow, from Manchester for London.

SHOCKING CIRCUMSTANCE.—It is communicated to us on the most respectable authority, that on Sunday last, a gentleman residing on one of the Upper Terraces at Cove, hearing a cry apparently proceeding from some person in pain or distress, and which seemed to issue from the space betwen the wall of an old house immediately under him, caused some inquiries to be made, the result of which was, that into this place a family, consisting of a man, woman, and four children, had crept some days before, the two former at the time in a fever ; that there they continued, unsheltered, uncovered, and without food of any kind, until the disease and the total want of nourishment brought on their natural consequences—death ! It was the shrieking of the woman, in the agonies of death, that struck on the gentleman's ear, and when he communicated what he had heard to some of the people in the neighbourhood, none could be got to go near the miserable wretches, for fear of contagion, until the circumstances having come to the ear of a professional gentleman, an apothecary, living in Cove, he ventured to this scene of accumulated horrors, and found the man and wife dead, and the children clinging to their corpses, naked and starving, and, to all appearance, about to share a similar fate. What was done for, or what has since become of them, we have not heard ; whether the dead lie buried, or the living are still in the same place : but we should like to hear something about the terrible scene, to heighten the horrors of which we will not add a line or a word.—Cork Southern Reporter.

TUESDAY'S GAZETTE.

INSOLVENTS.

T. Tucker, John's-mews, Little James-street, Bedford-row, coach-painter.
J. Lewis, High-street, St. Marylebone, licensed victualler.
R. Weaver, Plymouth, linendraper.

BANKRUPTCY SUPERSEDED.

J. C. Blore, Liverpool, confectioner.

BANKRUPTS.

W. Fisher, sen. Cheltenham, carpenter.—W. Shelley, Newcastle-under-Lyme, Staffordshire, tanner.—R. Cox, Nottingham, warehouseman.—J. Lay, Cheltenham-place, Lambeth, stationer.—J. Wood, Lombard-street, scrivener.—J. and J. Lamb, Liverpool, saddlers.—W. Bransby and M. Court, Rochdale, Lancashire, carriers.—J. Moody, Freeschool-street, Horslydown, tin-plate-worker.—R. Williams, Liverpool, merchant.—W. Piper, Hammersmith, barge-builder.—J. Baum, Hackney-wick, victualler.—J. and J. Bladworth, Kenworthy, ironmonger-lane, warehouseman.—T. Buckland, Billiter-street, ship-insurance-broker.—C. M'Donald, Liverpool, surgeon.—T. and R. Homer, Dudley, Worcester, iron-founders.—W. F. Johnson, Bridgewater-street, Somers-town, provision-dealer.—S. Rawlins and M. Smith, Hanley, Staffordshire, tobacconists.—B. Marshall, Nottingham, stone-mason.—T. Cole, Exeter, builder.—E. Herbert, Leamington-Priors, Warwickshire, linendraper.—T. Horsfall, Halifax, drysalter.—R. Gwinnell, Cheltenham, plumber.—W. Scott, Lower Brook-street, Grosvenor-square, victualler.—W. Metcalf, Bristol, tailor.—C. Ellis, Heanor, Derbyshire, cabinet-maker.—R. B. Watson, Leeds, merchant.—P. Syms, Witheridge, Devonshire, shopkeeper.—T. Bonham, Hogston, Buckinghamshire, butcher.—G. Peace, Denby-Dale, Yorkshire, grocer.—J. Cocks, Norwich, tailor.—J. Davis, and T. Ritson, Manchester, machine-makers.

THE BRITISH SPECIFIC, for re-producing and promoting the GROWTH of HAIR.—The principle of its operation is to cool and contract the pores which fire opened by a redundancy of heat, occasioning a relaxation of the roots, and render them incapable of retaining the hair ; to counteract which nothing is better calculated than the British Specific, as, from its invigorating and oleaginous properties, it almost immediately arrests the falling off, and affords such effectual nourishment to the roots, that persons giving it a fair trial may assure themsetves of its speedily restoring it, even where it has become completely bald, however long it may have been so, and, if grey, gradually to restore it to its natural colour. The superiority of this preparation (the invention of a medical man) derives additional recommendation from its being, unlike other compositions for the hair, so extremely clean and agreeable, that its application is a real pleasure, and is only requisite to be generally known to receive the preference of every article in use for similar purposes. To be had only of D. PEDEN, 209, Regent-street, and 15, Burlington Arcade, Piccadilly, in bottles, 6s. each, or cases of four bottles for £1., forward to order on receiving the amount, post paid.

IMPOSTURE UNMASKED.—The progress of Merit, although frequently assailed, is not impeded by Envy and Detraction. The aggression of ambuscade terminates in defeat ; and conscious rectitude ultimately triumphs in the attainment of the grand object—public approbation The test of experience is the guarantee of favour, and has established WARREN's BLACKING in general estimation ; of which there exists not a stronger proof than the tacit acknowledgment of a host of servile imitators, who surreptitiously obtrude on the unwary a spurious preparation as the genuine article, to the great disappointment of the unguarded purchaser, and manifest injury of WARREN, whose character and interest by this iniquitous system are equally subject to detriment. It becomes therefore an indispensable duty to CAUTION THE PUBLIC against the manœuvres of Unprincipled Venders, who having no character to lose, and stimulated by avarice in their nefarious pursuits, aim at the acquisition of money through any medium than that of honour! The original and matchless BLACKING bears on each bottle a short direction, with the signature

ROBERT WARREN

All others are counterfeits ; and in many instances the imposition labels are artfully interlined with a different address, in very small characters, between the more conspicuous ones of "No. 30," and "STRAND." It is earnestly recommended to Shopkeepers and others who are deceived by base fabrications of WARREN's BLACKING, to return the detected trash to the source whence it came, and expose the machinations of rascality to merited obloquy.

WARREN's BLACKING is surpassingly brilliant ;—it excludes damp ; gives pliancy to the leather ; retains its pristine virtue in all climates ; and, combining elegance with comfort, is an article equally of indispensable fashion and utility. Sold by every respectable Vender in Town and Country, in bottles. at 6d. 1d 12d. and 18d. each.

SCHLOSS JOHANNESBERG CABINET WINE.
Mr. KIEFFER, Agent to the Domain Johannesberg, begs to acquaint the Nobility and Gentry, that the Vintages 1818 and 1819, Cabinet Wine, are here in Bond, and duty paid, ready for immediate delivery, and that he continues to receive orders for the celebrated Vintage 1822.

To prevent the possibility of Imposition, since the estate Johannesberg became the property of his Highness Prince Metternich, these Wines have only been delivered in bottles, under the seal of the administration, with the impression of the vintage on the bottom of each cork.

Apply to Mr. Kieffer, 11, Panton-square, Haymarket ; or at Mr. Hermann Fehrmann's office, Old Trinity House, Tower-street, who has the Depot of the Johannesberg.

THE LONDON and WESTMINSTER WINE and SPIRIT COMPANY, No. 16, STRAND, opposite St. Martin's Church, have constantly on Sale—

	Per Dozen.		Per Dozen.
Port, Vintage 1820	27s to 30s	Bucellas	42s to 48s
Ditto, Crusted	36s to 42s	Claret, St. Julien	42s to 48s
Ditto, 5 to 8 years in bottle	48s to 56s	Ditto, Lafitte and Margaux	72s to 96s
Sherry, Pale and Brown	27s to 36s	Sparkling Champagne	72s to 84s
Ditto, Amontillado	42s to 48s	Ditto, and Creaming, of the first quality	90s to 96s
Cape, from	16s to 24s	St. Peray, dry and sparkling	63s to 72s
Madeira, West India	36s to 42s	Chablis	50s to 63s
Ditto, East India	48s to 60s	Hermitage, Red and White	72s to 81s
Teneriffe, Lisbon, Vidonia, and Mountain	30s to 36s	Moselle, Santerne, &c.	50s to 60s

Old Tom, Jamaica Rum, Cognac Brandy, Fern-tosh, &c. per imperial measure at reduced prices.—Bottled Stout, Cider, Perry, Burton and Edinburgh Ales.

☞ All Goods must be paid for on or before delivery.

Letters post paid, to be addressed William Godfree and Co. No. 16, Strand.

SCOTS! of foreign foes the dread,
Irish Lads! to conquest bred,
Cambrians bold! who never fled
The cause of liberty ;
Ye, who guard a matchless dower,
England's glory, England's power,
At whose shout the nations cower,
Britons! List to me.
Ye, who, from the battle-plain,
Or the wild and warring main,
Greet your happy homes again,—
Lords of land and sea!
Ye, whom friendship's smiles surround,
At the board with welcome crown'd,—
Joyous souls! wherever found,—
List awhile to me.
Where'er the gen'rous Wine, array'd,
Lends the social spirit aid,
Let the Opera Colonnade
Your emporium be.
For the treasures of the cask,
Cheapest, purest, case or flask,
Ready cash is all I ask.—
Come, my boys, to me.

Haymarket. CHARLES WRIGHT.

BURGESS' ESSENCE of ANCHOVIES, Warehouse, 107, STRAND, corner of Savoy Steps, London.—JOHN BURGESS and SON, being apprised of the numerous endeavours made by many persons to impose a spurious article for their make, feel it incumbent upon them to request the attention of the public, in purchasing what they conceive to be the ORIGINAL, to observe the Name and Address correspond with the above. The general appearance of the spurious descriptions will deceive the unguarded, and for their detection J. B. and Son submit the following caution :—Some are in appearance at first sight "Burgess' Essence of Anchovies ;" others, "Burgis's," and many more without address.—JOHN BURGESS and SON having been many years honoured with such distinguished approbation, feel every sentiment of respect towards the public, and earnestly solicit them to inspect the labels previous to purchasing what they conceive to be of their make, which they hope will prevent many disappointments.

Burgess' New Sauce for general purposes having given such great satisfaction, continues to be prepared by them, and is recommended as a most useful and convenient sauce : will keep good in all climates.

Warehouse, 107, Strand, corner of the Savoy Steps.—The Original Fish-Sauce Warehouse.

MOGUL, OR REAL CHETNA SAUCE.

C. HODGSON, ORIGINAL INVENTOR AND SOLE PROPRIETOR, is induced to caution his Friends and the Public against several spurious Sauces offered for sale, under the title of "MOGUL, or REAL CHETNA."

C. H. will feel obliged if each purchaser of the above delicious Sauce will please to observe the Label : which should be signed, "C. HODGSON," and the Cork, sealed and impressed, "HODGSON'S MOGUL SAUCE," without which none can be genuine.

C. H. also begs to acquaint those who have not yet made a trial of this much approved Sauce, that the flavour will be found quite different, and far superior to any yet offered, for all kinds of Curries, Steaks, Stews, Chops, Hashes, Game, Grills, Broiled and Wild Fowl, Cold Meat, and for enriching Gravies, &c., and feels assured, that when tasted, it will fully justify what he has above stated. To Merchants and East and West India Captains, it is stongly recommended, being warranted to retain its full flavour in any climate.

To be had at the manufactory, No. 68, Long Lane, Borough, London, at the Piazza Coffee-house, Covent-garden, the Queen's Head Tavern, Holborn, and at any of the principal Oilmen and Grocers in Town and Country.

AT SIMPSON'S MEDICINE WAREHOUSE, No. 28, Henrietta-street, Covent-Garden, London, are sold

The ARABIAN VEGETABLE PILLS, 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. per Box, free from mercury or antimony, inestimable as a Family Medicine for the removal of Indigestion, Bilious and Nervous Complaints, and as a mild Aperient.

The ROYAL ELIXIR of LIFE, in Bottles of 11s. each, strengthens the Stomach, increases the Appetite, dispels Spasms and Gout in the Stomach, and prevents all the inconveniences produced by excess at table.

The ANTISEPTIC BOTANICAL TOOTH-POWDER, 2s. 9d. per Box, cleanses, whitens, and preserves the Teeth, and fastens them, even if loosened by mercury.

These articles are sold (by appointment) at all respectable Medicine Venders, Chemists, and Druggists, throughout the kingdom.

Superior Eau de Cologne and Swiss Eau d'Arquebusade, Mason's Convent Soap, &c. &c.

NEW EDITION, THE TENTH, ENLARGED,

With Observations on the Danger of trusting to Nostrums, as an Internal Remedy for the Cure of Strictures. Illustrated by Cases. Price 3s.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS on STRICTURES of the URETHRA and RECTUM, recommending an improved system for their Treatment and Cure ; illustrating its efficacy by numerous remarkable and highly important cases, in some of which, Strictures of from ten to twenty years duration have been totally removed in a few weeks, and its superiority thereby fully established over every other method hitherto practised. By C. B. COURTENAY, M.D. To which are added, Observations and Practical Comments on Gleet, Seminal Weakness, and the miseries occasioned by Self Abuse, for the cure of which a mode of treatment, the result of long and successful practice, and at once safe, speedy, and effectual, is adopted by the Author.

Printed for the Author, Robert-street, Adelphi ; and published and sold by Jones and Sherwood, Paternoster-row ; Onwhyn, 4, Catherine-street, Strand ; Chapell, Royal Exchange ; Marsh, 145, Oxford-street ; Walker, 90, High Holborn ; Chappell, 94, Pall Mall ; Sutherland, 9, Carlton-street, Edinburgh ; and may be had of all Booksellers.

"We earnestly recommend the cases related by Dr. Courtenay to the perusal of such of our readers as are afflicted with the complaints which the Author has made the subject of these Observations. Several instances are adduced of the recovery of perfect health from states which were considered hopeless by Practitioners of eminent talents, and very extensive experience. We entertain the highest opinion of Dr. Courtenay's professional skill, and congratulate him on his successful and judicious application to these severe and often fatal diseases."—European Magazine.

BIRTH.—On the 5th instant, at Leo, Blackheath, the Lady of the Hon. W. Cust, of a daughter.—On the 10th inst. Mrs. B. Mills, of Great Winchester-street, of a daughter.—On the 9th inst. in Finsbury-square, the wife of George Rougemont, Esq. of a daughter.

MARRIED.—On the 4th inst. the Rev. Francis Whichcote, third son of Sir T. Whichcote, Bart. of Aswarby, Lincoln, to Eliza, only daughter of Robert Bree, M.D. F.R.S. of George-street, Hanover-square.—On the 9th inst. R. Dent, Esq. to Charlotte, widow of the late J. T. Robarts, Esq. of the Hon. United East India Company's service.—On the 4th inst, Mr. J. Robson, only son of J. Robson, Esq. of South-street, Grosvenor-square, to Eliza Harriet, only daughter to S. Stoddart, Esq. late of South Audley-street, Grosvenor-square.—On the 9th inst. Mr. Gabriel Couta, of St. James's-place, St. James's-street, to Ann, only daughter of the late Joseph Curtis. Esq. of Charles-street, Hatton-garden.

DIED.—On the 31st of August last, at Elmwood, in the Island of Jamaica, Doctor Panton, aged 30.—At Edinburgh, Sir Stephen Sharp, of Russell-place, Fitzroy-square, late his Britannic Majesty's Consul-General at St. Petersburgh.—At his house, Blackheath, J. Kempson, Esq.—At Geneva, the Hon. and Rev. R. Leslie Melville.—At Great Marlow, Bucks, W. Wales, Esq. in the 75th year of his age.—On Sunday last, Sir R. Hardinge, Bart, aged 71.—At the Manse of Rothiemay, Scotland, on the 21st of October, the Rev. Dr. J. Simmie, in the 63d year of his age.—On the 5th inst. Eliza, wife of W. B. Angell, Esq. of Benfield-cottage, Bracknall, Berks.—On the 7th inst. Sophia, relict of the late J. Stephens, Esq. of Clapham, aged 84.—On the 29th ult. aged 83, Elizabeth, widow of T. Parry, Esq. of Llydlade, near Aberystwith.—On the 7th inst, Mary, wife of J. Clements, Esq. of Finsbury-square.

London : Printed and Published by R. D. RICHARDS, at 343, Strand, corner of Catherine-street.

THE AGE.

"THE VERY AGE AND BODY OF THE TIME."

VOL. II. No. 80. SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 19, 1826. Price 7d.

THEATRE ROYAL, DRURY LANE.—On Monday next, Cymbeline, with Der Freischutz.—Tuesday, the Dueana, with mphitryon.—Wednesday, The School for Scandal. Lady Teazle, Miss Ellen ree.—Thursday, A favourite Opera.

THEATRE ROYAL, ENGLISH OPERA-HOUSE.

MR. MATHEWS will be AT HOME To-morrow Evening, Nov. 20, with his TRIP to AMERICA.
Doors open at half-past Seven, begin at Eight.—Mr. Mathews will perform n Thursday and Saturday.

ADELPHI THEATRE, Strand.—On Monday, and during the Week, will be performed an entirely new splendid Comic arietta, called The Barber and his Brothers. The Barber, Mr Wrench. fter which, a new comic Burletta, in one Act, called A Card!!! 23, John-street, delphi. To conclude with To Fry Shots.
Boxes, 4s. Pit, 2s. Gallery, 1s. Doors open at 6, commence ½ before 7.

DIORAMA, REGENT'S PARK.—The two Views now exhibiting, are The Interior of Rosslyn Chapel, painted by ons. Daguere, and a View of the City of Rouen, taken from Mount St. Catherine's, painted by Mons. Bouton, with various effects of light and shade, producing the most extraordinary illusion to the spectators.
N. B. Fine weather is not essential for seeing the present Views, as the ppearance of sunshine is produced with equal effect on the most cloudy day. he Dimension of each picture is 70 feet by 50—Open daily from 10 till 4 o'clock.

DRURY-LANE, COVENT-GARDEN, ADELPHI.
Private Boxes at the Theatres, per Season or per Night,
In the choicest situations, both for hearing and for sight;
Inviolable Sanctums—Terms, the lowest ever made,
Enquire of CHARLES WRIGHT,—via, Opera Colonnade.
N. B. Champagne Imperial, the Cheapest in the Trade.

To follow the TIGER,

FOR VAN DIEMEN'S LAND and NEW SOUTH WALES, the beautiful, new first class brig, LION, ALEXANDER KENN, ate of the William Shaud), Commander. Burthen 275 Tons. Lying in the ondon Dock. Has excellent Accommodations for Passengers. For Freight or assage apply to Buckles, Bagster, and Buchanan, 33, Mark Lane.

BARBARY WALL-FLOWER SNUFF, to be had only of the Importer, GEORGE EDLIN, Importer of Foreign Snuffs nd Segars, No. 6, Aldgate, corner of Saracen's Head Inn, and of his Agent, r. J. Nohil, 81, Lower Grosvenor-street, Bond-street.

GENUINE EAU DE COLOGNE.—Just received direct from Messrs. R. E. and M. Farina, of Cologne, a fresh supply of his celebrated article, of the finest quality, and to be had of J. C. Hose, late innard, 309, High Holborn, two doors from Chancery-lane.

REMOVAL.—Mr. CLARK, DENTIST, begs leave to acquaint his Friends, that he has REMOVED from Grosvenor-street, 35, Brutou-street, Berkeley-square.

MR. G. WAITE, Member of the Royal College of Surgeons, author of the "Surgeon Dentist's Manual," and a "Critical nquiry into Facts connected with the Teeth," will commence a Course of ECTURES on the TEETH, on Friday, 1st of December at ¼ past 7 o'clock, m. For further particulars apply to Mr. Waite's residence, No. 2, Old Burngton-street.

CHOCOLATE of the finest Quality, 3s. per lb.—COCOA-NUTS, the finest Grenada, 2s. per lb.—The Public are respectfully informed they may now purchase the above-mentioned Articles, warranted the finest quality, at MARSHALL and Co.'s Tea and Coffee Warehouse, o. 12, Southampton-street, Strand. Also, Turkey Coffee, warranted of the est Quality, at 3s. per lb.

TURKEY CARPETS.—C. HINDLEY, having received upwards of Three Hundred real Turkey Carpets, some of hich are of very large dimensions, begs to remind the Nobility and Public, he selling them at nearly half the usual charge, and any size of the most illiant colours and quality may be had, warranted free from damage, at the rpet Warehouse, 32, Berners-street, Oxford-street, where all applications ll be duly answered.—Some slightly damaged very cheap.

PIANOFORTES.—W. WALTER, (from Mr. Tomkison's) begs to recommend to those in want of a very superior Instrunt, to inspect his stock of Grand, Cabinet, Cottage, and Square Pianos. hich are warranted to be of the best description, at unusually low prices, and here the most decided satisfaction is not given, will be exchanged at the anufactory, 118, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury.

BUY A BROOM QUADRILLES" for 1827, New Figures by an eminent Professor. Containing Horn's admired Air "Buy Broom," "Horn of the Chace," and "Evening Sun," "All the Town is Cherry ipe," and the elegant Quadrille "Etrick and Teviotdale," with the favourite Adelaide Waltz" by T. Cooke, arranged for the Pianoforte by G.W. Maddison. Published (only) by Williams, 2, Strand, and sold by every music-seller in e kingdom, price 3s.
Ladies desiring this celebrated set of Quadrilles, to avoid false copies, should particular in sending for the set with Horn's "Buy a Broom," of which a ird edition of the Song is just published.

THE FLUTE.—Mr. NICHOLSON begs to intimate to Amateurs, that the APPENDIX to his PRECEPTIVE LESSONS for e FLUTE has just been re-printed, and may now be had at his residence, o. 12, Caroline-street, Bedford-square; of Messrs. Clementi and Co. Cheapside; and of Mr. Lindsay, No. 35, High Holborn, price One Guinea.
"That there has seldom appeared a work of more intrinsic excellence, not ly our own judgment allows, but the universal admission of flute-players oionstrates. * No analysis of the Appendix appears to be requisite. contains, in fact, fresh and beautiful exemplifications of the author's prinples, applied to practice: and we may safely adopt and confirm his own words, assuring amateurs of the instrument, that 'they will not merely be attended th pleasure, but be found highly conducive to improvement.'"—Quarterly usical Review, No. 29.

ROSSINI'S LAST NEW OPERA.—Just published by Willis and Co. 55, St. James-street (opposite Jermyn-street), ndon, and 7, Westmoreland-street, Dublin.
The Overture, Songs, Duetts, Trios, and Chorusses, with English and ench words of "Rossini's New Opera." "The Siege of Corinth," which now performing at the Academie Royale," with distinguished applause. Willis and Co. beg to acquaint the public that the Opera of "The Siege Corinth," and that of Maometto 2nds (also by Rossini) are two distinct rks, and that the "Siege of Corinth" cannot be published by any other use in this country than that of J. Willis and Co. whose exclusive prorty it is.
A few of the pieces in this Opera are selected by the Composer from his era Maometto, but with considerable alterations and additions, and which n only be published by Willis and Co.
 In the Press, Labarre's Fantasia, and Variations for the Harp, on the vourite Greek March in Rossini's new Opera "The Siege of Corinth;" also, barre and de Beriot's Fantasia for the Harp and Violin, on the celebrated orus sung during the deposition of the Greek Flag in the above highly popular era.

THE BROOM GIRL'S SONG.—A great assortment of Guitars by the most approved Makers, for sale or on hire ORI & LAVENU, 28, New Bond-street.
Gentle Ladies fare ye well, arranged as a Song, Duet, or Trio, set to one of ir national Melodies, sung by them in the streets of London, the poetry by m, Balls, price 2s.
Buona Sera Mio Signore, from Rossini's Opera of Il Barbiere di Seviglia, ranged for the Pianoforte by Augs. Meves, price 3s.
The Beauties of Winter's Opera of the Oracle, arranged for the Pianoforte; th flute and violoncello accompaniments ad lib. by Pio Cianchettini, price 4s.
The White Lady Quadrilles, taken from Boildieu's Opera, La Dame Blanche, anged for the Pianoforte, by M. Dunvis, price 3s.
Weber's two Grand Overtures, the Jubilee, and Ruler of the Spirits, arged as Quintetts by Masi, price 12s.

e Braes of Ballandyne	Miss Paton.	Pio Cianchettini
nny Brave Scotland	Ditto.	R. Gow
where's the harm of a little kiss	Mad. Vestris.	J. Watson
Maiden Gardez vous	Ditto.	Ditto
ue Bonnets are over the borders	Mr. Braham	Cianchettini
ung Mary	Mr. Phillips	Dr. Arne.

NEW COMIC SONGS—Published by T. HOLLOWAY, No. 5, Hanway-street, Oxford-street.

	Composers.	Singers.
"All the Blue Bonnets"	Somebody	Any body.
"Phrenology"	do.	do.
"Buy a Brush"	do.	do.
"Apple Fritters"	Mr. Fry.	Everybody.
"Oh 'Tis Love, 8th Edition"	Somebody	Nobody.
"The Hussars	do.	The Tenth.

Sold also by H. FALKNER, 3, Old Bond-street.
☞ The Public are cautioned against numerous imitations of these Classical Compositions, which are never out of print.

NEW MUSIC.—HARP AND PIANO-FORTE.

MEYER'S "MEDEA in CORINTO," with Flute and Violoncello (ad lib.) by N. C. Bochsa, in Books..... 10 6
——— Overture to ditto, ditto, ditto 6 0
Overture to "Caliph of Bagdad" ditto, ditto..... 5 0
Airs from "Il Crociato in Egitto," by W. H. Steil, in two Books (each) 7 6
——— Bishop's "Aladdin," by N. C. Bochsa..... 7 0

PIANO FORTE.

Boieldieu's "La Dame Blanche," and as Duets, in Books, by J. F. Burrowe's .....(each) 4 0
Rossini's "Semiramide" ditto, ditto.....(each) 4 0
Meyer's "Medea in Corinto," by C. Dumon, in two Books.....(each) 4 0
Bishop's "Buy a Broom," Rondo, by T. A. Rawlings 2 6
——— "In my Bower a Lady Weeps," ditto, by G. Kiallmark.... 2 6

VOCAL.

"Buy a Broom!" sung by Miss Love, composed by H. R. Bishop 2 0
 The Public are respectfully cautioned that the original "Buy a Broom," is the one composed by H. R. Bishop.
"The Bonnie Lassie," composed by Mrs. Miles 2 0
"No longer the Song of the Lark," composed by J. Barnett 1 6
"Jane, the Mountain's Pride," ditto 1 6
"The King! God bless Him!" sung and composed by Mr. Braham.. 2 0

GOULDING and D'ALMAINE, 20, Soho-square.
Cabinet, Cottage, and Square Pianos-fortes for Sale or Hire.

Just Published,

THE Music in the admired popular Comic Opera, the Two Houses of Grenada, now performing at the Theatre-Royal, Drury-Lane, composed by J. Augustine Wade, Esq.
Where is the spring time of youth and of pleasure?—sung by Mrs. Geesin.
Ask not my Love—Bravura—ditto, ditto.
Love was once a little boy. "Second Edition," sung by Miss Graddon.
Oh, ne'er with such bliss—ditto, ditto.
Oh, young maiden hearts beware—ditto, ditto.
If love's dream be o'er—sung by Mr. Braham.
Oh, do you remember the first time I met you—ditto, ditto.
Up, comrades, up—ditto, ditto.
Away, light vows of woman's love—sung by Mr. Horn.
For love and beauty's sake—ditto, ditto.
Love has its own sweet pleasures—Duet—sung by Mrs. Geesin and Miss Graddon.
I've wandered in dreams to the moonlight's home—Duet—sung by Mrs. Geesin and Mr. Braham.
Serenades are pleasant things—Comic duet—sung by Miss Cubitt and Mr Harley.
In what new home does love now dwell—Echo duet—sung by Mr. Horn and Miss Graddon.
Fair moon, on tow'r and tree, and stream—Duet—sung by Mrs. Geesin and Mr. Braham.
With love and thee—Duet—sung by Mrs. Geesin and Mr. Braham.
To be had of F. T. LATOUR, Musicseller to his Majesty, 50, New Bond-street.

MADAME VESTRIS'S NEW SONGS.

Just Published, by MAYHEW and Co., 17, Bond-street, London,

THE Bavarian Girl's Song, "BUY A BROOM," with an original and finely executed Portrait of Madame Vestris (in Character) by Gauci, arranged expressly for her, by Alexander Lee.—Price 2s.

New Songs.	Singers.	Composers.
Love's Labour lost	Mad. Vestris,	Alex. Lee
Smiles and Tears	Ditto,	Ditto
England the Home of the World	Mr. Braham,	J. Barnett
Fancy dipp'd her Pen in Dew	Miss Stephens,	J. Whittaker
Light Guitar (4th edition)	Mad. Vestris,	J. Barnett
A Voice whispered softly, Dear Mary	Miss Love,	Geo. Perry
Yes, I will leave the festive Scene, in answer to the Light Guitar	Miss Paton,	J. Barnett
"Not a Drum was heard," the celebrated Ode on the Death of Sir John Moore	Mr. Sapio,	Ditto
Love's Delightful Hour	Mr. Pearman,	J. Emdin
The Queen of Bonnie Lasses	Mr. Braham,	J. Hart
The Joys of Liberty and Wine	Mr. Bedford,	Ditto
Paul Pry, "Hope I don't intrude," comic, with the original Portrait of Mr. Liston	Mr. Liston	Pigwiggin
The General Election, comic, written by Charles Dibdin the younger, with an illustration by Crnikshank	Mr. Mathews,	J. Barnett
Maiden, heedful be, The Token Flowers	Mad. Vestris,	Ditto
The Moorish Maiden	Mrs. Ashe,	J. Emdin
You ask a song, you bid me sing	Mr. Broadhurst,	G. Kiallmark
I left the Bowl in search of Love	Mr. Phillips,	Mr. Phillips.

NEW MUSIC.—Just published at the ROYAL HARMONIC INSTITUTION, Argyll Rooms, 246, Regent-street, the Songs, Duets, &c. in The ORACLE, composed by WINTER, and newly arranged by W. HAWES.

	s.	d.
"Overture"	2	6
"The rosy dawn hath driven," Chorus.	5	0
"When battles conch is sounding," sung by Mr. Atkins	2	0
"The trumpet first is sounded," sung by Mr. Thorn	2	0
"We Maidens mark me," sung by Miss Goward,	1	6
"All hail to the God of our Fathers," Chorus	2	0
"Now by love and peace invited." Sestett and Chorus	3	6
"Oh when thine eye is throwing," Duet, Miss Paton and Sapio	2	6
"All powerful Sun," sung by Mr. Phillips	2	0
"There was a time ere sorrow," sung by Miss Paton	1	6
"Between my hopes and fears suspended," Duet, by Miss Paton and Phillips	2	6
"When will peace relieve my breast?" sung by Miss Hamilton	1	6
"How the plaguing varlet teases," Duet, by Miss Goward and Thorn	2	6
"We hail thee Lord of Light," Finale, 1st Act	10	0
"Tho' we all can feel thy sorrow," Quartett and Chorus	3	6
"In what sad hour," Trio	3	0
"Oh heavens! the thought is frightful," Duet.	2	6
"Hast never mark'd the flower," Song, Miss Boden	1	6
"The Maid who'd wish to slumber," Quartett	2	6
"The Gloomy terrors of the grave," Scena, Mr. Sapio	2	6
"Farewell, yet not for ever," Quartett	4	0
"The evening is descending," Finale	10	0

The Overture to "OBERON," arranged for a full Orchestra, by C. M. Weber, price 10s.
A New TREATISE on THOROUGH BASS, or the art of playing from a figured Bass, with examples, &c. &c. by Dr. Crotch.
Burrows's Selection of Airs from Weber's Opera of Oberon, arranged for the Piano Forte, with Fluto adlib, in four books, each 4s.
I'VE BEEN ROAMING—Arranged by T. A. Rawlings, as a Rondo for the Pianoforte.
BOCHSA's Select Airs from the Oracle, for the Harp, and Pianoforte, with Flute and Violin accompaniments, 10s. 6d.; also tho Overture to the above, arranged as above, price 5s.
DEATH FETCH.—The music in this admired and popular Opera, composed by C. E. Horn.
I'VE BEEN ROAMING.—Cavatina, sung by Madame Vestris, by C. E. Horn, price 2s.
OBERON.—The music in this popular Romantic and Fairy Opera, composed by the late Carl Maria Von Weber.
 The Proprietors of the ROYAL HARMONIC INSTITUTION beg most respectfully to acquaint the Public, that the only correct copies of the Opera now performing at the English Opera House, called "THE ORACLE," are published by them, and that all other copies are spurious and an Invasion of their rights.
N.B. The whole of the Music in the New Opera of PEVERIL OF THE PEAK, by C. E. Horn, now performing with such enthusiastic applause at the Theatre Royal Covent Garden, is now published, and may be had separate.

Nearly ready, 3 vols. post 8vo.

ALMACK'S. A Novel.
"Nothing extenuate, nor set down aught in malice."
Printing for SAUNDERS and OTLEY, Public Library, Conduit-street.

Just Published, in 3 vols. post 8vo. price 27s.

RECOLLECTIONS of a PEDESTRIAN. By the Author of "The Journal of an Exile."
"The light and lively sketches which fill these volumes, are evidently written by one who has not walked from Dan to Beersheba only to find all barren, but who has certainly made use both of his powers of amusement and information, in his descriptions and animated narratives.—LITERARY GAZETTE.
Printed for SAUNDERS and OTLEY, Public Library, Conduit-street.

Just published, price 2s. 6d,

SOME ILLUSTRATIONS of Mr. M'CULLOCH'S PRINCIPLES of POLITICAL ECONOMY.
By MORDECAI MULLION, Private Secretary to Christopher North.
O, thou hast damnable iteration.
SHAKSPEARE'S HENRY IV.
Printed for WILLIAM BLACKWOOD, Edinburgh; and T. CADELL, Strand, London.

Just published, in post 8vo. price 10s. 6d.

THE LAST of the LAIRDS, or the LIFE and OPINIONS of MALACHI MAILINGS, Esq. of Auldbiggings.
"What's the Laird doing, Jock?"
"Doing! what should he be doing, but sitting on his ain louping-on stane, and glowring frae him?"—Sage Sayings of Jock the Laird's Man.
By the Author of "Annals of the Parish," "The Entail," &c.
Printed for WILLIAM BLACKWOOD, Edinburgh; and T. CADELL, Strand, London; of whom may be had, by the same Author,
1. The AYRSHIRE LEGATEES; or the PRINGLE FAMILY. Second Edition, to which is added, The Gathering of the West. 12mo. 7s.
2. ANNALS of the PARISH. Second Edition. 12mo. 8s.
3. Sir ANDREW WYLIE, of that Ilk. 3 vols. 12mo. Second Edition, £1 1s.
4. The PROVOST. Second Edition. 12mo. 7s.
5. The STEAM-BOAT. 12mo. 7s.
6. The ENTAIL; or, the LAIRDS of GRIPPY. 3 vols. 12mo. £1 1s.

Just published, in one vol. post 8vo. price 8s. 6d. the suppressed work of a persecuted French Protestant, entitled ROMAN TABLETS. Containing Facts, Anecdotes, and Observations, on the Manners, Customs, Ceremonies, and Government of Rome at the present day. By M. de Santo Domingo. Translated from the original MS.

This work was suppressed in France, at the solicitation of the Pope's Nuncio and the Jesuits, and the Author fined and imprisoned. To which is added, (never before published) the Author's Defence before the Cour Royale at Paris, in solemn hearing.
Published by T. Flint, 28, Burlington Arcade, Piccadilly.

In 8vo. price 16s. the Second Volume of

GODWIN'S HISTORY of the COMMONWEALTH of ENGLAND.
"This second volume is occupied with the momentous history of the three years, from the ruin of the royal cause in the fatal field of Naseby, to the trial and execution of the King. In the whole range and compass of our annals, there is no epoch more deeply interesting, more pregnant with great events, and altogether more worthy of repeated study and close investigation, than these three years."—Monthly Review.
Printed for Henry Colburn, 8, New Burlington-street (removed from Conduit-street.)

In 2 vols. 8vo. with Portrait, &c. price 28s.

THE LIFE and CORRESPONDENCE of MAJOR CARTWRIGHT. Edited by his Niece, F. D. Cartwright.
"This is, upon the whole, an entertaining and rather a curious piece of biography. We have a regular view of the share taken at different periods by Mr. Pitt and Mr. Fox—by all the successive leaders, in short, of the Ministry and Opposition, between the close of the American and the climax of the French Revolution—in advancing the cause of Parliamentary Reform. Thus, also, there is introduced and interwoven in the narrative a mass of letters from Fox and Burke, the Duke of Portland and Lord Sherburne, the late eccentric Earl Stanhope, Mr. Whitbread, Sir Philip Francis, Horne Tooke, Granville Sharpe, Dr. Parr, Mr. Jefferson, John Quincy Adams, &c. &c."—Monthly Review.
Printed for HENRY COLBURN, 8, New Burlington-street.

Just published by HENRY COLBURN, 8, New Burlington-street, in 3 vols. post 8vo. price 31s. 6d,

A SECOND SERIES of TALES by the O'HARA FAMILY; comprising The Nowlans, and Peter of the Castle.
2. The TOR HILL. By the Author of "Brambletye House." 3 vols. post 8vo. £1 11s. 6d.
"Oh! what was love made for, if 'tis not the same
Thro' joy and thro' torments, thro' glory and shame?
I know not, I ask not, if guilt's in that heart;
I but know that I love thee, whatever thou art! THOMAS MOORE.
3. RECOLLECTIONS of the LIFE of JOHN O'KEEFFE (the Veteran Comic Dramatist.) Written by himself. And comprising numerous very curious and original Anecdotes of distinguished persons, in England and Ireland, from the year 1755 to the present time. In 2 vols. 8vo. with a Portrait, 28s.
4. THE YOUNG RIFLEMAN'S COMRADE, a Narrative of his Military Adventures, Imprisonment, and Shipwreck. Edited by Goethe; and printed uniformly with "The Adventures of a Young Rifleman;" in 1 vol. post 8vo. 9s. 6d.
And in a few days will be published,
5. MEMOIRS of the LIFE of MRS. SIDDONS. By James Boaden, Esq., interspersed with Anecdotes of Authors and Actors, and intended as a Companion to the Author's Life of her brother, Mr. Kemble. Printed uniformly, in 2 vols. 8vo. with a fine Portrait, engraved by Turner, from a Picture, by Sir Thomas Lawrence. Price 28s.
6. TALES of a VOYAGER to the Arctic Ocean. 3 vols. post 8vo.

In 3 vols. 8vo. with Portraits, price 36s.

THE LIVES of the Right Honourable FRANCIS NORTH, BARON GUILFORD, Lord Keeper of the Great Seal, under King Charles II. and King James II.; the Hon. Sir DUDLEY NORTH, Commissioner of the Treasury to King Charles II.; and the Hon. and Rev. Dr. JOHN NORTH, Master of Trinity College, Cambridge, and Clerk of the Closet to King Charles II. By the Hon. Roger North; with Notes and Illustrations, Historical and Biographical.
"Independently of the interest which these Lives possess as works of pure biography, they derive a very considerable importance from their historical character. The light which they throw upon a period described by Mr. Fox as 'one of the most singular and important of our history,' and the disclosures which they present of the Court intrigues of that day, so difficult to be understood, even with all the illustrations which the researches of later times have produced, are perhaps greater than those to be derived from any other Memoirs relating to the same period, with the exception of Burnet, and the lately published Stuart MSS. The writer, the Hon. Roger North, enjoyed the most ample means of informing himself accurately upon all the topics of the day, not only from the station in society which he occupied himself, but from his intimate connexion with the Lord Keeper Guilford."—EDITOR'S PREFACE.
Printed for HENRY COLBURN, 8, New Burlington-street.

Just published, price 9s. and may be had of all Booksellers,

MARSHALL'S PLEDGE of FRIENDSHIP for the Year 1827; a greatly enlarged and splendid Volume of Moral Essays, Scientific Information, Interesting Tales, and Original and Selected Poetry; designed as a Christmas Present and New-year's Gift. The encomiums bestowed last year on the first publication of the "PLEDGE of FRIENDSHIP," with a most extensive sale, have induced the publisher to use every exertion to increase the merits of, and secure patronage to, this Second Volume. To effect this, he has engaged gentlemen of distinguished abilities to superintend every department; and the contributions in the various branches of Literature, from writers of well-known talent, including the productions of Mrs. Hemans, Miss Landon, Henrietta Julia, Miss Mitford, James Montgomery, Esq. Rev. Mr. Polwhele, Rev. R. Hall, A. M. H., Wordsworth, Rogers, Campbell, Moore, A.A., Watts, Wiffen, Sir Aubrey de Vere Hunt, John Clare, James Hogg, Rev. H. Millman, Dr. Styles, C. H. Townsend, Rev. D. M'Nicholl, and others of equal talent, form an incontestible proof of the excellency of the volume. The embellishments comprise fifteen splendid efforts of art, from the designs of Stothard, R.A., Wright, Shephard, and Corbould, including an exquisite Frontispiece of "The Holy Family," from a fine picture by Murillo; and an embossed Inscription Plate. The Engravings by Heath, Edwards, Lacey, and Ensom.
London: Published by W. Marshall, No. 1, Holborn-bars; who has also just published a splendid Series of Twenty different Ladies' and Gentlemen's Pocket Books and Almanacks. Marshall's new Pocket Books are only 1s. 6d. the gilt-edge edition 2s.; No. 35, and Vol. 3, of Marshall's Views are ready.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS, Nov. 14.

This being the day on which Parliament was summoned to meet, a few of their Lordships assembled at two o'clock. Among them we noticed the Earl of Liverpool, the Earl of Westmorland, the Earl of Harrowby, Lord Bexley, and the Bishop of Chichester. None of their Lordships were in their Parliamentary robes.

A few minutes after two o'clock, the LORD CHANCELLOR took his seat on the woolsack. His Lordship then proceeded to inform their Lordships, that this being the day on which the Parliament had been summoned to meet, his Majesty had directed a writ to be issued, under the Great Seal, appointing him and other Noble Lords to be his Majesty's Commissioners to open and hold the same Parliament. Was it their Lordships' pleasure to retire and robe, that the commission might be read?

The question was put, and answered in the affirmative. Some of their Lordships immediately retired; and shortly afterwards, having robed, the Lord Chancellor. the Earl of Westmorland, the Earl of Harrowby, the Earl of Liverpool, and Lord Bexley, took their seats as his Majesty's Commissioners. The Duke of Wellington came in almost immediately afterwards in his robes; and Lord Bexley retiring to a side bench, the Duke of Wellington took his seat as one of his Majesty's Commissioners.

The LORD CHANCELLOR then ordered the House of Commons to be summoned to their Lordships' bar.

The Deputy Usher of the Black Rod then summoned the Commons, who in a short time, preceded by the senior Clerk of the House, attended at their Lordships' bar. The members of the City of London, who are Aldermen, appeared in their civic gowns.

The LORD CHANCELLOR informed the Commons, that a commission under the Great Seal had been issued for holding the Parliament, which the Clerk should then read.

The Clerk accordingly read the commission, appointing a great number of Peers, or any five of them, to open and hold the Parliament.

The LORD CHANCELLOR then said: My Lords and Gentlemen. we have it in command from his Majesty to inform you, that as soon as a sufficient number of members are sworn, his Majesty will declare to you the causes which have induced him to call this Parliament together. As it is necessary that a Speaker should be chosen for the House of Commons, it is his Majesty's pleasure, that the members of the House of Commons should retire to their place of sitting, and there proceed to choose a fit and proper person to serve as Speaker, and having chosen him, to present him in person. to-morrow, at two o'clock, at the bar of this House, to receive his Majesty's royal approbation.

The Commons then retired from their Lordships' bar. The Lord Chancellor by himself took the customary oaths. Strangers were ordered to withdraw, and their Lordships heard prayers.

On the prayers being ended, strangers were admitted, and the following Peers took the customary oaths, which were administered to two or three at a time:—His Royal Highness the Duke of Sussex. the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Duke of Wellington, the Marquis of Camden; Earls Westmorland, Tankerville, Harrowby, Shaftsbury, Lauderdale, Liverpool, Talbot, and Morley; Lords Ardea, Bexley, Melville, Exmouth, Carrington, Pomfret, Torrington, Prudhoe, St. Helens, Walsingham, Dynevor, and Clarendon; Bishops of London, Salisbury, and Chichester.

Sir Charles Long was introduced by Lord Arden and Lord Bexley to take the oaths and his seat in Parliament, under the title of Baron Farnborough, of Bromley-hill Park, Kent. His Lordship was preceded by the Deputy Usher of the Black Rod and a Herald. The letter patent, creating him a Baron of the United Kingdom. and the writ summoning him to Parliament, were both read. His Lordship then took the customary oaths and his seat; after which he was formally introduced to the Lord Chancellor. and then retired.

Mr. Duncombe was then introduced by the same two Noble Lords; and after the same ceremonies, took the oaths and his seat as Baron Feversham, of Dudley Park, in the county of York.

No other business was done, and at four o'clock their Lordships adjourned.

There has been no alteration in the interior of their Lordships' House since the close of last session, further than that the scarlet coverings of the benches and the draperies of the doors have been renewed. The halls and passages leading to the House have all been painted.

WEDNESDAY, Nov. 15.

Their Lordships met at two o'clock; soon after which the Commissioners. the Lord Chancellor, the Duke of Wellington, the Earls of Liverpool, Shaftesbury, and Harrowby, took their seats, fully robed, when the Chancellor directed the Usher of the Black Rod to inform the House of Commons that the Lords Commissioners were prepared to receive the Speaker elect. In a few minutes, the Usher of the Black Rod returned to the Bar, accompanied by Mr. Manners Sutton, who was supported by Mr. Sturges Bourne and Mr. Portman, and attended by several Members from the Lower House.

The SPEAKER elect then addressed the Lords Commissioners, informing them that the Commons' House of Parliament had been pleased to elect him as their Speaker, acknowledging his unfitness for the high office, and expressing his confidence, that should his Majesty not ratify their choice, his faithful Commons would have no difficulty in finding a more fit person to represent them.

The LORD CHANCELLOR then informed Mr. Sutton, that the Commissioners had it in command from his Majesty to express his satisfaction at the competency of the gentleman before him to discharge the arduous duties of his office, and that his Majesty was pleased to confirm the choice of his faithful Commons.

The re-chosen Speaker then claimed, as usual, for the Members of the House of Commons the immemorial privileges of freedom from arrest, freedom of debate, and access to the Royal Person, humbly craving that if any error should arise, it might be attributed to him, and him alone, and not to the House.

The LORD CHANCELLOR, in reply, intimated that his Majesty was pleased to grant the foregoing requests, and to confirm them to the House of Commons in as ample a manner as any of his predecessors on the throne.

The Speaker then retired, accompanied hy the Commons, to the Lower House, where the swearing-in of new Members continued for some time.

The Duke of Montrose, Lords Stowell and Ellenborough, and several other Peers, were in their places during the ceremony of the introduction of the Speaker of the House of Commons.

It is said that Parliament will not adjourn for the Christmas holidays before the 21st of December.

THURSDAY, Nov. 16.

Their Lordships met at two o'clock. Charles Richard Sumner, late Dean of St. Paul's, took the oaths and his seat as Bishop of Llandaff. He was introduced by the Bishops of Chester and London. Several Peers took the oaths, and their Lordships adjourned at four o'clock.

FRIDAY, Nov, 17.

The Marquisses of Exeter, Queensberry, and Thomond, the Earls of Cornwallis and Verulam, and a few other Peers, having taken the oaths, the House adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, Nov. 14.

ELECTION OF A SPEAKER.

At twelve o'clock, according to the usage of the first day of the meeting of a new Parliament, the Lord Steward of his Majesty's Household took his seat in the long gallery, for the purpose of administering the oaths to the Members on whom the first parliamentary duty devolves—that of electing a Speaker of the House of Commons. The Lord Steward having administered the oaths to the Members present, and having executed a commission empowering the Members specified therein to administer the oaths to others, retired from the House. Before two o'clock upwards of 100 Members had taken the oaths and their seats in the House of Commons. Among them the four representatives of the City of London were conspicuously distinguished by the gorgeousness of their costume, and by the local precedence which, according to ancient parliamentary usage, they are on this occasion entitled to take. Mr. Alderman Wood, Mr. Alderman Waithman, and Mr. Alderman Thompson, were arrayed in their scarlet gowns; Mr. Ward also wore a scarlet gown, which differed, however, from the robes of his colleagues, inasmuch as it had no decorations of fur. The four Members entered the House together, and took their seats at the upper end of the Treasury Bench, on the right of the Speaker's chair. Below them sat Mr. Secretary Canning, Mr. Secretary Peel, Mr. Huskisson, and Mr. Manners Sutton, Speaker of the House of Commons in the last three parliaments. At ten minutes past two o'clock the Deputy Usher of the Black Rod summoned the House to the House of Peers, to hear his Majesty's commission read. Several Members proceeded to the House of Peers for that purpose, and on their return,

Mr. S. BOURNE rose, and said, that it now became the duty of the House to proceed to the discharge of a most important duty, namely, the election of a Member who might, in the ensuing parliament, fill one of the most honourable, at the same time one of the most arduous offices, that could be conferred upon an individual in this country—that of Speaker of the House of Commons. Happily, the House had not, upon the present occasion, to encounter the difficulty of selecting from their body an untried Member, who might adequately discharge the duties of that high and arduous office. They possessed a Member whom they had already elected to fill the office of Speaker in three successive parliaments, and the experience of three successive parliaments had abundantly confirmed the wisdom of their choice. (Hear.) In order to estimate the value, and to appreciate the advantages of possessing such a Member, it was necessary only to reflect on the importance and on the difficulty of the functions which the Speaker of that House was called upon to discharge. It was not talents, however great, nor acquirements, however extensive, which might be derived from the best general education, that could qualify a person for the discharge of the duties of that high office. It required an accurate acquaintance with the details of parliamentary law, a minute knowledge of the laws and usages of parliament, and of the general maxims and rules by which the proceedings of that House were governed. which could be acquired only by patient and laborious investigation, and possessed only by those who had made it the peculiar object of their researches. The task of directing the deliberations of that House, and of expressing, on particular occasions, opinions which might give effect and consistency to the form of their proceedings, required, he need not say, no ordinary share of judgment and discrimination. In all these respects, the House required not to be reminded with what distinguished ability the high office of Speaker had been filled by his Right Hon. Friend. (Hear, hear.) Besides these more ostensible duties of the office, it was often necessary to repress the extravagancies of debate, and to allay the heats which occasionally arose amidst the ardour and vehemence of public discussion. It was necessary, also, on many occasions, to give advice, assistance, and information, to Members of the House, in matters connected with its forms and proceedings; and he need not remind them of the readiness and the ability with which such advice and information had been uniformly afforded by his Right Hon. Friend. There were other subordinate qualifications, and other personal recommendations, which no man possessed in a more eminent degree than the Right Hon. Gentleman; among these, he could not but advert with gratification to the uniform courtesy of his manners, and to his dignified hospitality. (Hear, hear.) Nor were those personal qualifications, which enabled his Right Hon. Friend to support with such indefatigable zeal the labours of his office, of light moment, in estimating his claims to the honourable distinction which it conferred. Let it be recollected, that upon the unwearied personal exertions of the Speaker of the House of Commons depended the uninterrupted discharge of the most important public duties, and that the whole business of the state, however urgent, must be suspended, rather than his place should be supplied by an assistant. He could not adduce a stronger instance to show the value of his Right Hon. Friend's services, or the importance of those personal qualifications which had enabled him to discharge the duties of his office with such unremitted assiduity and zeal. He need not remind the House how anxiously his Right Hon. Friend had at all times maintained their rights and privileges—how scrupulously he had enforced the terms and regulations of that House—on which those rights and privileges, and with them the right and privileges of the people, most essentially depended. Under such circumstances, he doubted that the motion he should now make would be unanimously adopted; he doubted not, that when his Right Hon. Friend should be again placed in the chair he would discharge its duties with the same zeal and ability he had ever displayed, and that the House would give to his authority an uniform and effectual support. The recorded opinion of three successive parliaments had rendered it superfluous to bear individual testimony to the distinguished merits of his Right Hon. Friend, and he should, therefore, without trespassing further on the time of the House, move, "That the Right Hon. Charles Manners Sutton take the Chair of that House as Speaker."

Mr. PORTMAN, in rising to second the motion of the Right Hon. Gentleman opposite, was sensible that the feeling of the House was so entirely with the Right Hon. Gent. who had just been proposed to fill the office of Speaker, that it was unnecessary for him to occupy much of the attention of the House, or to add any thing to the eulogium which had been so justly pronounced by the Right Hon. mover. He was aware indeed, that it had been the usage both for the mover and seconder, on these occasions, to make some observations on the nature and important duties of the office. It would ill become him, however, to address any observations of that kind to members who had long sat in that House; and members who had now, for the first time, taken their seats in parliament, must, as English gentlemen, be so well acquainted with the arduous nature of the Speaker's duties, and with the qualifications requisite for its efficient discharge, that it would be equally unnecessary to address any observations on the subject to that portion of the House. He might, perhaps, be allowed to say, that it was an office which required not only great talents—not only strict integrity—not only the most perfect impartiality in the person called to discharge its functions, but that the House further expected to find in that person a temper not to be ruffled, a judgment not to be shaken, and a resolution, to maintain to the best of his abilities, the rights and privileges of the Commons of England, and to preserve order and dignity in their proceedings. In an assemblage such as that which he now addressed, in which so much brilliant talent and splendid ability was to be found on all sides, it might, in any common time, or under any ordinary circumstances, be difficult to point out any one Member more qualified than another to fill the chair; and, under such circumstances, he (Mr. Portman) should he the last man in the world who would presume to press his opinion upon the House on so important an occasion. He was now, however, able to congratulate the House on a selection which met with their unanimous occurrence; for the finger of experience pointed out to them the Right Hon. Gent., who had for many successive years filled the office, and who had shown himself possessed of integrity, of impartiality, and of temper, of judgment to discern what was right, and of resolution to enforce his decisions. He felt that it would be presumptuous in him to occupy any longer the time of the House, and that he ought rather to apologize for having detained them so long from the gratification of adopting, as he was sure they would adopt with one voice of acclamation, the proposition of the Right Hon. Gent. opposite, "that the Right Hon. Charles Manners Sutton take the Chair of that House."

Mr. MANNERS SUTTON rose and said, that he felt his inability to express, as he ought, the thanks which he owed to his Right Hon. Friend who proposed, and to his Hon. Friend, the member for Dorsetshire (Mr. Portman), who seconded the motion; still less could he hope to be able to express the obligation and the gratitude which he owed to that House, for the cordial manner in which they had received it. To be elevated to that chair, had been the first object of his ambition, and as long as his health and strength continued, it would continue to be the object of his ambition. He could assure the House, with the strictest truth, that it had been the greatest object of all his endeavours, while in that chair, to justify their choice by faithfully discharging his duties to them and to the public. The reception which the motion of his Right Honourable Friend had met with from the House, and the testimonies of their satisfaction—as far as his abilities could produce satisfaction—at the result of his exertions, were the best and proudest rewards which any services he might have performed could receive. His Right Hon. Friend, and his Hon. Friend, the member for Dorsetshire (Mr. Portman), had both remarked upon the difficulty and importance of the duties attached to the office, and both had given him credit, in the warmth of friendship, for personal qualifications which he was conscious he did not possess. He relied not upon his own strength, but upon the cordial support of that house; and as he might hope to carry with him the same good opinion and cordial co-operation—as he might look forward to a continuance of the same favour and indulgence which had been so abundantly extended to him during three parliaments, he submitted himself, without hesitation, most respectfully to their judgment and decision. (Hear, hear.)

The motion having been carried amidst the cheers of the House,

The SPEAKER took the Chair, and said, I beg most respectfully to express my acknowledgments to the House for this renewal of their countenance. They shall find me diligent, zealous, and faithful in the discharge of the duties which have devolved upon me. I have not the arrogance to presume, that unassisted, I am equal to the task, but I implore of the House to correct me when I am wrong, and to support me when I am right; and I pledge myself to make every exertion my powers can command to merit the renewal of that sanction and protection which for three parliaments I have had the good fortune to obtain.

Mr. WYNN, in rising to move the adjournment of the House, could not forbear expressing his congratulations, both to his Right Hon. Friend who had just taken the chair, and to the House. He congratulated the Right Hon. Gent. on having received the highest reward which his services could obtain in the unanimous approbation of that House, and he congratulated the House on the choice they had made, since the arduous and laborious situation to which his Right Hon. Friend had been elevated, was filled by a gentleman whose impartiality had never been questioned, even in the most stormy sessions, and whose patience, temper, and courtesy, had been equally experienced and approved by all. This was a subject on which he could dilate with great pleasure to himself, but the topics suggested by it had been so ably touched upon by the mover and seconder, that he felt it unnecessary to occupy the time of house by the expression of feeling in which he was sure every member of that House participated.

Sir JOSEPH YORKE congratulated the House on the selection they had made, and would only express his hope, that every man who took office in future, might enter upon it with as much integrity as the Right Honourable Gent. in the chair.—Adjourned.

THURSDAY, Nov. 16.

At two o'clock the Speaker took the Chair, and the ceremony of swearing-in Members was resumed, and lasted until half-past four o'clock, when the House adjourned.

FRIDAY, Nov. 17.

The Speaker took the chair at two o'clock, and the House resumed the ceremony of swearing in Members, which lasted until four o'clock, when an adjournment took place till to-morrow.

THE NEW PARLIAMENT.

As several proceedings usual on the opening of a new Parliament may not be generally understood, the following account, taken from "Hatsell's Precedents," may not be uninteresting:—

"Before any Member of the House of Commons can take his seat, he must, by the 5th of Elizabeth, and subsequent Acts, take the onths of supremacy, allegiance, and abjuration, before the Lord Steward of the King's Household, or a deputy appointed by him for that purpose. They must afterwards take the same oaths at the table of the House; so that every Member is doubly sworn to his allegiance and his abjuration of the Pope before he can take his seat or give his vote. The Members of the House of Peers are sworn only at their own table. On the meeting of the new Parliament, the Lord Steward, or his Deputy, attends in a room convenient for the Members of the House of Commons, to administer the oaths; the taking of which is so essential, that to enter the House without going through the ceremony, even though the neglect may be an inadvertence, subjects the Member to the loss of his seat for that Parliament. It is mentioned in the Parliamentary History, that a Sir John Lecch, about the year 1620, forfeited his place by committing this inadvertence. He entered the House, and took his seat, without thinking of the Lord Steward or his Deputies. When the duty of swearing occurred to him, he went out of his place, and requested them to administer the oaths. He was asked if he had sat in the House? He replied in the affirmative. He was then asked, had he taken the oaths in part, or none at all? He answered, that he had taken no oath. The Lord Steward's deputies, upon this, refused to proceed without acquainting the House with the fact, and taking its commands. A debate arose on the subject, and a resolution was adopted, that Sir John 'having sat in the House unsworn, must be, according to Act of Parliament, accounted as a man not elected or returned.' He was then called in to the bar, and being asked if he had committed the disqualifying error mentioned, he confessed that he had just sat 'for a quarter of an hour' in the House without thinking of the oaths. He was therefore disabled from being a Member, and a new writ was issued for another election. When a greater or smaller number of Members are sworn before the Lord Steward at the opening of the Session, after a general election, they enter St. Stephen's Chapel, where they again take the oaths before the Clerk at the table. As yet the chair is vacant, and the destined Speaker joins the other Members in the ceremony. The King cannot appoint a Speaker, nor can the Commons elect one without the King's command. His Majesty, therefore, in person, or Commissioners acting in his name, orders the Commons to be called to receive permission to form their House, by appointing their President. When elected, he is conducted to the Chair by the two Members who have moved and seconded his nomination. The mace is then placed on the table, and the House may be considered as constituted, subject only to the King's approval of the person whom it has chosen; for as his permission was necessary to sanction the election, so his confirmation is necessary to give validity to the choice. It seldom happens that any disapprobation is expressed or confirmation refused. One instance only is on record, within the last three centuries, of the King's refusing to sanction the choice of a Speaker, and that was in 1678—a precedent not likely to be followed. It is rather singular that Speakers of the House of Commons, like new-made Bishops with their novi episcopari, must express reluctance to undertake the office which they are so anxious to obtain.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

The French papers state that at the termination of the first sitting of the Cortes, and after the Princess Regent had concluded her address to the united assembly, by ordering the members of the two chambers to repair to their respective halls of deliberation for the dispatch of business, the President of the Peers approached the throne, and presented to her Royal Highness an open missal, on which she took the prescribed oath to the Constitution with a loud voice, in the hearing of all the assembly, who stood up during the ceremony. The news from the disturbed districts of Portugal seems to be highly satisfactory. Count Alva, in his dispatches dated from Tavira, the 26th ult. states that he had entered that city on the 24th, that the chiefs of the insurrection had been arrested, and would be delivered up to the rigour of the laws. The Governor of Villa-Real had fled into Spain, after spiking the cannon of that fortress. The Minister of War, who headed the expedition against the insurgents in the Algarves, writes to inform the Government that the Portuguese refugees who fled to Ayamonte had been ordered by the Spanish authorities to Ecija, in Andalusia.

The first sitting of the Portuguese Chamber of Peers took place on the morning of the 1st instant. The President nominated as Secretaries the Marquis of Tancos and Count Mesquitella. Count Arcos demanded if the Marquis of Chaves (the insurgent) was to be considered a Peer of the Realm? It seemed to be the impression of the Chamber that he could not be so recognized; but no resolution was adopted on the subject. The members of the Chamber then took the oaths prescribed by the Constitutional charter. In the Lower Chamber Count Saint-Payo presided, as being the oldest member. On the 2d inst. the assembly was to proceed to the election of a permanent President. Lisbon seemed to enjoy the most undisturbed tranquillity,

The news from the neighbouring country of the Peninsula is of a different description. The King of Spain, instead of encouraging his subjects in the exercise of free institutions, and calling round him the higher and the wiser portion of the nation to aid him in governing his people, is occupied only with the most unworthy pursuits, and the most absurd superstitions. On the 29th ult. a procession took place of the miraculous images of St. Simon and St. Jude, and his Majesty rendered the ceremony as brilliant as possible, by joining in it with all his family. Meantime, popular insurrections are taking place at Barcelona and Tarragona, and an Algerine squadron is ravaging the coast of Grenada, capturing every Spanish vessel that puts to sea, and interrupting all intercourse between one of the Mediterranean ports of Spain and another. To crown Ferdinand's calamities, the Trappist, who made such a stand for absolute power, and plundered so bravely in the army of the Faith, is dead. He had thrown aside, on the King's restoration, the musket and military fury with which he attacked the Constitutionalists, and retired to his convent, where he renewed his attacks upon himself. On the 9th ult. he expired, we are told, with the most edifying piety, after surprising proofs of rigorous mortification.

Accounts from Constantinople come down to the 17th ult. At that time nothing new had occurred. The Capitan Pacha had arrived in that capital.

In the fire at Lyons, to which we formerly alluded, though much property was destroyed, no lives were lost.

The Journal des Debats of Tuesday has a long and able article on the freedom of the press, in which it expresses its apprehensions of the new projects which ministers intend to present to the Chambers at their approaching session.

The Slave Laws.—Monday a private meeting of the proprietors of estates in the Island of Demerara, and of the merchants trading with that portion of the British West India colonies, was held at the City of London Tavern, for the purpose of adopting such measures as might be thought necessary, in order to protect their property from the effects of the manumission clause in the slave laws. The meeting was attended by about 25 gentlemen of great respectability, and a series of resolutions was proposed and adopted, recommending that a petition should be presented to his Majesty in Council, stating the great injury that would be done to their property were the manumission clause put into full effect. It appears that the authorities at Demerara have, after considerable discussion, come to the resolution, not to act in accordance with the wishes of his Majesty's Government, as far as regards the manumission of slaves, and the meeting of the planters resident in London was called by circular, for the purpose of backing the authorities at Demerara in their determination. We understand that a petition is in preparation, and will be submitted for the signature of all those who are interested in this important question. The general body of planters, not only of Demarara, but also of the other West India islands, are, it is said, strongly opposed to any coercive measures; and the proprietors of estates in Demerara having as large, if not larger stake than others at issue, think it prudent to forward a petition to his Majesty's Government, laying before Ministers their particular case.

Slave Trade.—The Sierra Leone Gazette of the 9th of September, on the authority of a correspondent, mentions a most atrocious act of barbarity on the part of a French Slave-Captain, named Giblin. This fellow had carried off from the Gallinas, about six weeks before, 250 slaves, which he intended to introduce, surreptitiously into Guadaloupe. He succeeded in landing the whole, except 65, when, having observed a French Government cutter coming towards his vessel, he threw these 65 miserable beings overboard, in order to avoid a discovery of the traffic he had been carrying on. The Governor of Guadaloupe, it is added, gave orders to seize the murderer, when the crime he had perpetrated was discovered by the dead bodies that were drifted ashore, but he had sailed before the order could be executed. The same paper contains an account of a gallant attack of a boat belonging to the Maidstone, on a slaver, under Brazilian colours, which was captured, after a smart action of three hours.

The Deputations from Lancashire and Glasgow had an interview with the Lords of the Treasury on Wednesday, on the subject of the repeal of the Excise duties on printed cottons, the result of which was, an expression of regret on the part of their Lordships, that however desirable the measure might be, the present state of revenue did not admit of their granting the relief sought for.

Youth in Age.—A most respectable lady, residing in the country, has long passed her zenith of life, unaccompanied hitherto by the usual concomitants of decline; her health is firm, her spirits buoyant, her person pleasing, and so slightly impaired by Time, that the ravaging hand of the universal visitor is by no means in strongly palpable recognition. Neither does she show "The snowy wreaths of age, the monuments of care," for her head is adorned by Nature with glossy auburn ringlets, which, combined with expressive fine features, and fascinating vivacity of conversation, give to this very interesting lady the semblance of youth in age. The following metrical epistle, the effusion of her pen, shows, however, that she has a great reliance on the long-experienced virtues, of a celebrated specific for the preservation of her tresses :—

> How long Father Time may his ravages spare
> I know not; but yet I a fine head of hair
> Retain, and shall still, as I fondly presage,
> Secure from decay, through the winter of age.
>
> I owe not this gift to the forbearing hand
> Of Time, but specific, both potent and bland,
> My tresses that guards from tyrannical sway,
> And turns into auburn when verging on grey!
> Then pray, Messieurs Rowland, attack still to foil,
> A dozen now send of your Macassar Oil.

INCIDENTS ABRIDGED.

Sir Walter Scott landed at Dover on Friday se'nnight, from France, and is now in London.—Longman and Co. have, it is said, given Sir Walter Scott 11,000l. for his "Life of Bonaparte."—Ferdinand, King of Spain, continues seriously indisposed: he is both lethargic and gouty.—The Princess Regent of Portugal, in consequence of the absence of the Portuguese troops from Lisbon, has at her own request a body-guard at her palace of 160 British mariners from our vessels in the Tagus.—By a treaty with England, Brazil takes all responsibility of the debt due by Portugal to this country.—The Emperor of Russia has given 150,000 roubles towards erecting a Protestant school at Petersburgh.—The Pacha of Egypt has despatched 50 ships, part transports, part men of war, on a third expedition to the Morea.—Lord Cochrane has given 12,000l. for a small frigate at Marseilles.—It is again asserted that the European Powers are resolved to compel Turkey to recognise the independence of Greece.—The American Commodore Porter is appointed Commander-in-Chief of the united Mexican and Colombian navies.—A new comet has been discovered by Professor Pons, but visible only through a good glass.—The Duke of Devonshire has for some time paid between 800l. and 900l. weekly wages for workmen at Chatsworth, now undergoing improvements and additions.—The trustees of Mr. G. B. Whittaker, the bookseller, paid a first dividend of 5s. in the pound on Wednesday.—Mr. Galloway, the engineer for the Greek steam-boats, is stated in a Brussels Paper to have been condemned in the payment of damages, by the Tribunal of Commerce at Amsterdam, for failing, through alleged incapacity, in a contract for the construction of some steam-engines. He has appealed to the Tribunal at the Hague.—The colossal lion, cast in commemoration of the great battle of Waterloo, was placed on its pedestal at the scene of action the 30th ult.—The German vintage has been exceedingly good this year. Old wine is so much depressed thereby that the holders consider the abundance a calamity rather than a benefit.—The frequenters of fairs should be aware of London pickpockets, who now regularly attend them: at Blandford they were very successful in their depredations.—A fine dish of green peas was gathered last week at Titchfield, Hants.—The first Hertford ball for the season was held on Friday week at the Shire Hall, under the direction of the County Members, when the company was very numerous and highly respectable.—A town hall has been projected for Ware, to contain an assembly and card rooms. The ground for the building was given by Mr. Byde, of Ware Park.—At Ilford Sessions, on Saturday se'nnight, substitutes for the militia were freely offered at from 10s. to 40s. Five years since the demand was brisk at 10l. and upwards.—The Suffolk Shipwreck Association have been the means of preserving 47 lives since its formation; two additional life-boats were placed on Orford Beach and Sizewell Gap.—A prosperous herring season is anticipated on our South-Eastern coast. One Hastings boat brought to that port on the 5th inst. no less than 12,000.—From a register kept since 1797, November is proved to be the dampest month of the whole year.

It will be in the recollection of our readers that proceedings were some time ago taken in the Court of Chancery by Sir Roger Gresley, against his mother, Lady Gresley. These proceedings have recently been totally abandoned; Sir Roger Gresley being perfectly satisfied that no ground whatever existed for the prosecution of the matter. We are informed that it is Lady Gresley's intention to indict the various parties who have made affidavits against her for perjury, and to include many in an indictment for a conspiracy.

The Royal Speech to both Houses of Parliament will be delivered, it is said, on Tuesday. The Address in the House of Commons will be moved by the Hon. Mr. Liddell, Member for Northumberland, and seconded by the Honourable G. Wm. Member for Maldon. In the Lords, the Address will be moved by Lord Cornwallis, but it is not yet determined, we understand, what Peer will second it.

New Parliament.—The number of new Members in the new Parliament who have not as yet sat in the Honourable House will be 169: For English counties, 12; ditto boroughs, 118; Scotch counties, 9; ditto burghs, 3; Irish counties, 16; ditto boroughs, 11:

The Duke of Devonshire, on Tuesday last, received a communication from the Commissioners of the Custom-house, informing him that they had reason to suspect that trunks not belonging to his Grace, or his suite, but containing silks, had been placed by some of his servants among his luggage. In consequence of this communication, his Grace instituted a strict inquiry on the subject, and discovered that his foreign courier had contrived to place amongst the luggage some packages, containing silks and other articles, and his Grace immediately made the communication to the Commissioners of the Customs, with a request that the trunks, so improperly placed with his luggage, might be examined and detained.

Mr. Wellesley Long Pole.—(From a Correspondent).—A paragraph has appeared in several of the newspapers, stating that the 6,000l. damages awarded against the above-named gentleman in the late action tried in the Court of Common Pleas, had been paid on the very night of the day upon which the verdict was given; such, however, we know not to have been the fact, because about three o'clock in the afternoon of the following Friday, just as Mr. Wellesley Loug Pole had mounted his horse to take an afternoon's ride, and was proceeding from his own house in Hall-place, St. John's Wood, followed by his groom, two of those very vigilant personages called Sheriff's officers approached him, and respectfully touching their hats, intimated to him, that they were desirous of the pleasure of his company for a short time, at the request of Captain Bligh, who wished to settle with him a matter of 7,000l. damages and costs. Mr. Wellesley immediately accepted the invitation, and alighting from the horse gave the animal in charge to his groom to return home with it, while he, Mr. Wellesley, himself apparently in the best possible humour, and laughing heartily at the adventure, walked with the Sheriff's officers to the nearest coach-stand, when all three got into a "Jarvy," and drove to the office of Mr. Wellesley's solicitor in the City, where the necessary security was given for the payment of the demand, and before expiration of two hours, Mr. Wellesley was back again at his house in Hall-place. Mrs. Bligh might have had a full view of this interesting proceeding from her drawing-room window, as she occupies an elegant house, No. 10, St. John's Wood-road, not above 300 yards from where Mr. Wellesley resides. This lady sports daily a beautiful equipage with the arms and livery of Mr. Wellesley, and with the exception of her coachman, who does not live in the house, all the servants, male and female, are foreigners.—Times.

A bear, attached to one of the caravans at Blandford fair, last week, caught a sheep while passing near, and hugged the poor animal to death.

A fire, which for a time threatened the most destructive consequences, broke out in the extensive premises of Mr. Cubit, the builder, in Gray's-inn-lane-road. The sudden burst of flame for a time illuminated the horizon to a considerable distance; but the workmen being on the spot, the most effectual methods were resorted to, and its alarming appearance was in a great measure conquered; but the flames continued their ravages in the interior, and were not subdued until considerable damage was done, which, however, was confined to the loft in which it commenced, and consisted principally of tools. The engines arrived as speedily as could be expected; but their assistance was but little wanted, as the exertions of the numerous workmen in that establishment had been the means of preventing, what is very probable would have otherwise been the result, the destruction of the whole of that extensive range of workshops.

STEAM-BOAT ACCIDENT.

We noticed in our last the melancholy accident which occurred to the Graham steam-packet off Grimsby, near Hull, on the 7th instant. The following particulars have since been received:—The sufferers are, a Mr. John Blow, John Patten, and Richard Genners (fruiterer), blown away, and never afterwards seen; John Cundill was taken out of the water, quite dead; William Mellins, a sailor, was blown from the deck of the Graham to the deck of the United Kingdom, and died immediately; a child, name unknown, was much scalded, and is since dead; J. Torr, Esq., and Miss Chambers, were blown up into the air, but, falling into the water, they were soon taken up, and were not much injured; Captain John Atkinson, of the Providence Good Intent, was blown overboard, much cut and bruised, and when taken up was nearly exhausted. Ten or twelve others were dreadfully scalded, and several more received slight injuries.

An inquest was held on Thursday se'nnight on the bodies of Cundill and Mellins, when the mate, the foremast-man, the assistant engineer, the master, steward, and a passenger were severally examined. From the evidence of the assistant engineer it appeared that he never considered the boiler safe; that he repeatedly warned the owners of the danger; and that accidents of a similar description had occurred more than once in the same vessel since he had been appointed. The other witnesses could only speak of the accident as it happened.

After sitting the greatest part of two days, the Jury returned a verdict of "Manslaughter" against Jacob Urwin, the engineer, and Richard Clay, jun., the acting agent and part owner.

A correspondent says, that to prevent the probability of an accident of this description, Messrs. Bolton and Watt, the Butterley Company, and some others, who make steam-packet engines, use tubes to keep the boilers supplied with water, and at the same time use a copper tube about 14 feet long (open at both ends,) from three to four inches in diameter, which is immersed from three to four feet in the water, whilst the upper end is open to the air; and as the water rises in the tube to a height corresponding with the pressure in the boiler (as mercury rises in a barometer), the water will be projected from the top of the tube, and at the same time that it relieves the boiler from its load, and prevents accident, it gives timely notice to every person on board that the safety-valve has been fastened down or overloaded. This method is said to be simple, cheap, and at all times certain.

The Opera House.—We have been present at several rehearsals of the forthcoming Opera, the Vestale, during the last week. The music is very beautiful, as, indeed, it ought to be, having gained its composer the utmost celebrity on the Continent. The house will positively open on Saturday next. Puzzi is at Paris, but returns in the course of the week; he is very active, and worthy his situation.

Mr. Day, through whose exertions and zeal for the Fine Arts, some of the noblest pictures which adorn our infant national establishment, and private collections have been introduced to this country, is just returned from Rome, where he has been so fortunate as to conclude a purchase with the Prince of Peace for part of his celebrated collection. This grand acquisition will, on its arrival, be added to Mr. Day's well known Gallery in Piccadilly.

A letter has been received from Messrs. Howland and Co., of New York, the house which had the agency for building the Greek frigates, stating that they are preparing for publication an explanation and answer to the charges against them in relation to that affair, which will be transmitted by the next packet.

At an adjourned public meeting in Cork, on Friday, the Mayor in the Chair, petitions were presented by ten unemployed broadcloth and worsted weavers, praying for funds to emigrate to England in search of employment. A resolution was passed to send over 39 of them, and, on landing in Liverpool, to be provided with 10s. each.—Belfast Chronicle.

A plan is now in progress by the London Fire-offices, to communicate to one another the names of such persons as are concerned in producing fraudulent fires and claims, which have increased of late to an alarming extent. The late Lord Mayor had before him the names of a gang of Jews, of the lowest class, who had had not less than a dozen fires, and made as many heavy claims on the fire-offices during the last two years.

Severe shocks of an earthquake were felt on the 15th ult. at Messina, in Sicily, and on the opposite coast of Calabria.

Some of the scientific journals have lately published an account of an instrument, just invented by a French surgeon, to operate for the stone, and it has been found eminently successful in several instances. By the former method the extraction of the stone is attended with such danger and pain, that death ensues in two cases out of three; but with the new instrument the patient suffers very little, and there is scarcely any danger. Instead of extracting the stone by main force, which, of course, causes the most excruciating agony, with very little effort the new instrument breaks it into pieces, and the fragments are soon taken away with forceps. The operation at present is comparatively simple, and improvements will doubtless be made when the instrument has been oftener used. An operation was performed a few mornings ago, at the Hotel Dieu, upon a man upwards of 60 years of age, and in ten minutes the patient was perfectly relieved.

Perhaps the longest period of widowhood on record is that of Lady M. Hay, relict of Robert, third Earl of Roxburgh, who was drowned in the Gloucester frigate, coming down to Scotland with the Duke of York, in 1682. This lady died in the year 1753, after having survived her husband, without any second nuptials, no less than 71 years. She was 25 years of age at the time of the Earl's death, and lived to the advanced age of 96. Had she lived two years more she would have seen her great grandson, John, the celebrated bibliomanist, in possession of the title, being the fourth in succession from her husband.

Affair of Honour.—In consequence of a misunderstanding arising out of the proceedings at the Monaghan election, a message was sent by Humphry Thompson Jackson, Esq. to Col. Westenra; accordingly these gentlemen met at the Blue Bell, on the Naas road, this morning, the former attended by Captain Hamilton, the latter by Captain Lewis, when, after an exchange of shots, by which Mr. Jackson was slightly wounded, the affair terminated. Dublin Evening Post.

The "Tales of a Voyager," announced for publication, are reported to be written by an "experienced hand," though the author is determined not to avow himself. We think, however, that when his work becomes known, he will have not a little difficulty in maintaining his incognito. The stories we understand are not all nautical, though a ship is the place of their narration. They embrace a great variety of subjects, and are said to be written with singular vigour.

Method of Preventing Bacon from getting Rusty.—When your bacon has been salted about a fortnight, put it into a box of the size of the pieces of bacon, covering the bottom of the box with hay; wrap up each piece of bacon in hay, and between every piece put a layer of hay. This will preserve bacon from rusting, and keep it for twelve months as good as it was on the first day of salting. Of course the box must be kept shut to prevent rats or other vermin from getting into it.

Parish Relief.—A poor wretched-looking woman complained to the Lord Mayor on Wednesday, that the parish-officers of Bishopsgate refused her relief, though she was out of work, with four children, two of them sick and helpless. The overseer said, the complainant had not asked, but demanded relief as a right, and in so insolent a manner, that he thought proper to reject the application; to which his Lordship replied, "I beg distinctly to be understood by parish officers, and all persons, when I say that the poor are not bound to beg for relief; they have as much right to it, as any of us have to the property which we may enjoy."

TUESDAY'S GAZETTE.

INSOLVENTS.

C. I. Wayland, St. Paul's, Gloucestershire, brickmaker.
S. Hopkins, Wootten-under-Edge, Gloucestershire, clothier.
S. Halls, Stowmarket, Suffolk, plumber.
John Mellor, Micklehurst, Cheshire, dealer in wood.
William Allen, Richmond, Yorkshire, linen-draper.

BANKRUPTCIES SUPERSEDED.

James Hill, Manchester, provision-dealer.
Theophilus Clifford, Great Marlow, Buckinghamshire, stone-mason.

BANKRUPTS.

W. Hudley, Chowbent, Lancashire, roller-maker.—G. Burrell, Wakefield, Yorkshire, cloth-merchant.—R. Boardman, Bolton-le-Moors, Lancashire, money-scrivener.—R. A. Pullen, junior, Leeds, stuff-manufacturer.—W. and W. Coates, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, wine-merchants.—T. Nunn, London, merchant.—R. Ford, Sutton, Surrey, dealer.—P. Neale, Norwich, coach-maker.—W. Toghill, Chalford, Gloucestershire, clothier.—G. Noah, Pall-mall, tailor.—N. Drewett, Emsworth, Hampshire, mariner.—J. Walter, Bristol, stationer.—J. Murray and S. Brisbane, Manchester, joiners.—C. Stones, Manchester, cotton-spinner.—C. J. Smith, Great Preston, Yorkshire, dealer.—J. Marks, Bristol, tailor.—Elizabeth and J. F. Ledger, Wakefield, Yorkshire, wool-staplers.—J. Bradley, Leeds, linen-draper.—J. Hendy, Blakeny, Gloucestershire, shopkeeper.—E. Hollinworth, Stayley, Cheshire, woollen-manufacturer.—S. Wallis, Chew-Stoke, Somersetshire, dealer.—R. Clarence, Clare, Suffolk, chymist.—J. T. Gritton, Tipton, Staffordshire, iron-master.—R. Lawrence and W. A. Brown, Whitecross-street, Cripplegate, ale-brewers.

FRIDAY'S GAZETTE.

DECCAN PRIZE MONEY.

Grant to the Army which served under the Command of Lieutenant-General Sir Thomas Hisiop, Bart, G.C.B. in the War against the Pindarrees and certain of the Mahratta States, in the Years 1817 and 1818.

Notice is hereby given, that on Saturday, the 25th day of November instant, a distribution will commence at this office, of such of the actual captures made by the above army, as will be particularly detailed in the Gazette of Tuesday next.

ARCHIBALD CAMPBELL.
C. G. Y. ARBUTHNOT.

Deccan Prize-office, No. 8, Regent-street, Nov. 17.

INSOLVENTS.

J. COOPER, Leeds, woolstapler.
R. DALLY, Chichester, ironmonger.
S. MARKS, Cardiff, jeweller.
E. F. ORSON, Sunbury, patent-screw manufacturer.
W. LOCK, Edward-street, Dorset-square, builder.

BANKRUPTCIES SUPERSEDED.

J. B. and R. LUNT, Liverpool, soap-boilers.
J. EDMONSON, Keighley, Yorkshire, worsted-manufacturer.
J. POWELL, Wellington-place, Waterloo-road, draper.

BANKRUPTS.

G. T. FISHER, Half-Moon-street, St. George, Hanover-square, coal-merchant.——S. S. CHRISP, Peterborough, ironmonger.——J. WOOD, Wooldale, Yorkshire, merchant.——C. ALLISTON, Oxford-street, and Holywell-street, Shoreditch, meat-salesman, and R. SMITH, Mansfield-street, Kentish-town, grocer.——T. TUCKER and T. GEARY, John's-mews, Little James-street, Bedford-row, coach-painters.——D. MACPHERSON, Chandos-street, Covent-garden, victualler.——J. DURANT, Maidstone, tailor.——G. CROASDILL, Canterbury, maltster.——J. NICHOLSON, Rochdale, bookseller.——J. EDWARDS, Halifax, dealer.——B. BUNN and W. ALLEN, Worcester, flax-dressers.——J. TAYLOR, Golcar, Yorkshire, clothier.——T. SHELLEY, Lewes, coach-maker.——E. and T. ALLISON, Leeds, mercers.——J. BEARE, Westminster, general-merchant.——D. DE PASS, King's Lynn, Norfolk, draper.——H. NICHOLSON, Chiswell-street, bill-broker.——D. ORUM, Sutton, Surrey, lime-burner.——T. GRIFFITHS, Bolton-le-Moors, Lancashire, banker.——T. MITCHELL, Leicester, wool-stapler.——T. CRESWELL, Cross-lane, London, fish-factor.——M. RAPHALL, London-street, Fenchurch-street, and Hermes-street, Pentonville, merchant.——B. ALLEN, Great Queen-street, Lincoln's Inn, coach-plater.——P. KELLY, Finsbury-square, bookseller.——C. MANN, Battersea, victualler.——J. W. and H. WHINFIELD, Millwall, Poplar, engineers.——J. and J. A. BROWN, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, house-carpenters.——E. and J. MITCHELL, High-street, Southwark, woollen-drapers.——A. POPE, Chapel-street, Stockwell, victualler.——G. CRAFTS, Wycomb-Marsh, Buckinghamshire, paper-maker.

PRICE of STOCKS up to FOUR O'CLOCK YESTERDAY.

BRITISH.

Bank Stock,	India Stock,
Red. 3 per Cent. 83¼ 3⅝⅜	India Bonds, 40 42 prem.
3 per Cent. Cons. 84 3⅞ 4¼½⅜¼	Exch. Bills, 1000, 22 23 pm.
3½ per Cent. Red. 89¼½¼	Do. 500, 22 23 pm.
New 4 per Cent. 99⅛⅝	Do. Small, 22 24 pm.
4 per Cent. 1826, 97⅝¾ 8	Cons. for Acc. 84 3⅞ 4¼½⅜⅝⅜¼
Long Anns. 19⅝ 11-16	Scrip,

FOREIGN.

Brazilian Bds. 67	Mexican, 1825, 68¾ 8 ½⅜⅝ 7⅞
Chilian Bds. 40	Do. for Acc. 68⅝ ¾ 8 ⅝½ ⅜ 8
Col. Bds. 1824, 43¼ 2⅝ 3 2½ 2	Peruvian Bds. for Acc. 36
Do. Acc. 29th Nov. 43¼ 3 2¾ 3½ 2¼ 2	Portuguese Bds. 80¾ 1
	Do. for Acc. 80¾ 1 2
Danish Bds. 62½ 3¾½	Prussian Bds. 1822, 97
Do. for Acc. 62¾ 3⅞ ⅜	Russian Bds. 88
Greek Bonds, 1825, 18½ 19½ 18¾ 19¼ 19¾ 20	Spanish Bds. 12⅝½ 13 ⅜
	Do for Acc. 12⅝ 13 ½¾
Do. for Acc. 19¾ 18¾ 19¼¾ 20	Do. Bds. 1823, 8 9
Mexican Bds. 58¼	Do. for Acc. 9 ¼

NOTICES TO CORRESPONDENTS.

We are in receipt of a letter from the RIGHT HONOURABLE LADY ——, which we take this first opportunity of acknowledging. The domestic occurrence, to which that Lady alludes, was only slightly mentioned to us a few days since, without going into the particulars now narrated by her; and we hesitate not to assure her, that, from the circumstance of her having addressed us, under the impression of confidence, the contents of her epistle are a secret with us for ever. We may apprise HER LADYSHIP, that it is not, after all, to instances such as these we would direct public attention—it is only wherein we may effect some public good, that we ever cross the threshold of private life. A friend of ours was at the party, in June last, and subsequently met ———, by which our fair Correspondent will know the extent of our information—but we repeat, that we are hereafter silent as the grave.

L. L. D. we are compelled to treat with the same ceremony as our other Correspondents, whose favours we must claim another week's indulgence for answering, owing to the great press of public matter.

We shall next week give a CORRECT statement of the late affair at Richmond.

THE AGE.

LONDON, NOVEMBER 19.

The IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT assembled for the first time, since the Election which embodied it, on Tuesday, and the proceedings attendant thereon will be found in another column—but any discussion upon them we shall reserve for "the hereafter," our present business being rather with men, than measures.

We have all along delivered our sentiments, in the strongest terms imaginable, on the constitution of the new Senate, and it is not therefore unnatural, that we should adhere to the doctrines we have previously laid down, with equal tenacity, and more force, if possible, than we have hitherto expressed. At the time when the certainty of an approaching election became apparent, the dreadful influenza of gambling and speculation, with which the country has been visited, had not then reached its height, nor any of the exposures, which have since taken place, made the slightest appearance. The perpetrators of these delusive schemes were therefore lying in comparative comfort; and in the first place, viewing, with a watchful eye, the distinction and security enjoyed by many established Senators, who had entered into their plans, and also anticipating an equal elevation, and, far beyond that, a full indemnity, through Parliamentary privilege, against any legal scrutiny, their next grand step (after the money they had amassed by this bubbling traffic) was to procure, either by purchase or pecuniary influence, the distinguished appellation of M.P. We will, for the hundredth time very nearly, ask any reader of his country's history, any chronologer of her annals, any lover of her high renown, if, through all the æras of difficulty and doubt in which she has been so deeply involved, or in all the moments of unrivalled glory and splendour in which she has been so mixed up, he can call to mind a single instance, when the dignity of her Senate has been so insulted, as it now is, by the admission of such ragamuffinry within its hallowed walls, as are many who now sit in it. The pomp of its olden days, when the oratory of its existing Members bore noble rivalry to the splendour of Rome and Athens, is passed away like a dream; and although the isolated genius of MR. CANNING and MR. PEEL still lingers round the scene, its opportunities for display are confined to the narrow limits of correcting established vulgarity, in some, and the ignorance of novitiates, in others.

We introduced the necessity, in December last, when the commercial character of Great Britain was at its crisis, of issuing a scire facias against the several Members of Parliament, as was the case in the celebrated South Sea instance, whose names appeared at all mixed up in the mania which lately visited the people. It was not done in the expiring days of the last Session—let us see what the renovated energy of the new one will effect. There is no kind of lenity that can possibly be extended to persons so implicated—for the numberless dupes who have become involved in such practices, have been, for the most part, dazzled by the apparent splendour of those high-sounding names, under whose patronage the whole has been brought about.

In too many cases, lately, repeated instances of which we could, and shall hereafter, mention, the admission to the rank of a BRITISH SENATOR has been sought after, solely as a matter of business, with no more intention, or idea, of fulfilling the important duties, which are necessarily attached to such a situation, than of aiming at the Popedom of Rome—tradesmen, and more extensive mercantile people, have entered the ancient halls of St. Stephen, there to barter their worldly substance, as they would on the Royal, or Stock Exchange; and the tombs, wherein the genius of our departed and immortal countrymen now lies buried, may literally be said to be converted into a public wholesale and retail receptacle. It cannot be supposed, for a moment, that such circumstance will not draw down upon us the full-charged contempt of every rival State, however strong in bonds of amity we may now be with them; and consequently, where we hitherto have created respect, we have a difficulty now even to command it. As far as the exertions of an individual Journal can go, we will never abandon this subject, until a reformation, so "devoutly to be wished for," be in some respect effected—regardless, whether we stand alone in such a measure, or if, by espousing its prerogatives, we even incur the resentment of the Senate itself. England must be arrived at a fine pass indeed, when her sons can submit to be legislated by a class of upstarts, in whom combined, there is not a tithe part of the abilities of any one man, now passed away, to the influence of whose mind they have had before to submit—by men, unable to comprehend any one grand principle of the CONSTITUTION, they have taken upon themselves to represent, and divested, for the most part, of those dictates of common reason, which can ever capacitate them for so doing. The best way to reduce such proceedings, if they are to be inflicted, to a proper level, is to let some such men, as either of the WILKS'S, setting about establishing (as will be found humourously expressed in a song, in our this day's publication) a JOINT STOCK PARLIAMENT COMPANY, and after that, set the Nation itself up to auction at once!

We may have appeared, to many readers, somewhat too prolix, in our discussion of this, to our faculties, vital subject, but to those who have at heart the solid interests of their country, we feel that we shall only appear to be advocating a cause, on the consistency of which reposes that country's safety.

The only joke we have heard, on the dinner given at Guildhall last week by Alderman BROWN (the present Lord Mayor) is this: Sir WILLIAM CURTIS, who appeared extremely chagrined the whole evening, was addressed by a person near him, who observed (referring to the dinner), "I think we have been regularly 'done,' Sir WILLIAM,"—to which the Baronet replied, "Yes, Sir, we have; and, what they commonly call, 'done BROWN.'"

A Meeting of the ROMAN CATHOLICS of Fermanagh, took place on the 4th instant, in the Catholic Chapel of Enniskillen. Among a list of other noodle orators, was Mr. Counsellor KERNAN, the following extract from whose speech is worthy of record, as being a specimen of greater rubbish, than was ever before engendered in the brains of any man, excepting COBBETT, whom the Barrister designates "the ablest political writer in Europe!!!"

"Before I proceed to make any observations on the Resolutions now read, permit me to congratulate you and my Catholic Countrymen, here assembled, on the unanimity which at present subsists between us, on the question of our Emancipation. Much has lately been said on the subject of our population, and whether the Catholics, in numerical strength, amount either to six, or to seven millions, is a fact that admits of some doubt; but, Sir, our indignant feelings on the subject of our wrongs, and our united determination never to cease our constitutional exertions until those wrongs shall be redressed, is a fact quite certain. The unanimous voice of the Catholics of Ireland, as expressed in every county, in every parish, in every townland, demonstrates the truth of the assertion. In this happy union of public opinion, a measure which, even in a free country, is difficult of attainment, and which, thank God, neither corruption nor intrigue can now put down, coupled with the knowledge our Forty-Shilling Freeholders have recently acquired of their political importance, will, I trust, convince the British Government of the necessity, as well as justice, of conceding our rights.—The question whether five or seven millions of loyal subjects shall continue in a state of degradation in their native land, or shall, by a total repeal of the Penal Laws, be restored to the birth-right of a British Citizen, cannot, under the present circumstances, be much longer deferred. Let the Catholics persevere in their loyalty and attachment to their King and Constitution, and their emancipation will be accomplished at no distant period. That we are not equally loyal with every other subject in the State, no man but a fool or an incendiary asserts. We cheerfully render our services to the State; without any distinction, we are permitted to fight the enemies of our Country; the muster roll of the King's Army and Navy does not contain a separate column for Catholics, and another for Protestants. Here, at least, we are not distinguished by being placed on the back of the Book, nor are we, in the field of battle, ordered to the rear of the Line. We are permitted to pay our equal portion of the taxes that support that Government—to pay the tithes that support the Clergy of the Established Church—to bear our share in the burden of what is called (by the ablest of political writers—Cobbett) the Dead Weight; but, Sir, we are not permitted to enjoy an equal participation in the privileges of that Constitution, which was framed by our Catholic ancestors. What an anomaly in Legislation is this? In what, either free or despotic, nation in the world is its parallel to be found? Certainly not in France, or Italy, or Germany, or Russia, or even in Algiers. What answer could Mr. Canning have given to the French Minister when in Paris, had he thus addressed him (Mr. Canning):—"The Constitution of England is undoubtedly the admiration of the world; but on what principle of justice or good policy, not warranted by the Constitution, is it that your Government keeps seven millions of loyal subjects in a state of slavery?" Sir, I know not what reply our Minister could give, but I would briefly answer thus—because, Sir, one hundred and thirty-six years ago, in the glorious and immortal year 1690, the Irish Catholics fought, and died, in the service of their then legitimate Sovereign, James II. This was the "head and front of their offending." All other reasons for excluding the Catholics from the pale of the Constitution have been one hundred times refuted by the ablest Statesmen that ever sat within the walls of the Parliament House. Sir, while on this topic, in justificaton of our ancestors, allow me to put an analogous case.—Suppose, when our beloved Sovereign, George the Fourth, was graciously pleased to visit his Irish subjects, the Parliament of England in 1821 had passed a Resolution, that he, the King, had thereby abdicated the throne of these realms, and that the same Parliament usurping the Executive Power, had ordered the Commander-in-Chief to march one hundred thousand British troops to Ireland, against their lawful Sovereign, to whom they had sworn allegiance. Sir, had such an event taken place, every Catholic in Ireland able to carry arms, would have rallied round the standard of their good King, and would have fought the battle of Kingstown for George the Fourth (supposing that to have been the scene of action), with more success, but not less enthusiasm and valour than their ancestors did, at the battle of the Boyne, in 1690, for their unfortunate Sovereign, James the Second. I hope I shall not offend the cowardly alarmists of the day, by asserting, on the authority of an old soldier, that the battle of Kingstown would have been very different indeed in its results, from that fought on the river Boyne. Since that period, military tactics are much simplified, and I assert, Sir, without the fear of contradiction, that out of the 100,000 British troops, backed by 100,000 of the conditional allegiance Wreckers, and commanded by the Rev. Incendiary General, Sir Harcourt Lees, not 100 rank and file of the Knight's forces, would have survived the engagement. I fancy I see poor Sir Harcourt, himself lying among the slain, with two old Orange women, bewailing his loss, and lamenting that his Reverence did not run away faster than the ball that overtook him and pierced him in the spine.—Alas! poor Sir Harcourt——

"Olim Troja fuit—fuit ille!!!"

Sir, the argument I draw from this, is, that it would be an extradinary instance of Legislation, if in 136 years to come, our descendants should be deprived of their rights, and punished by the enactment of a Code of vindictive Penal laws, for the fidelity and attachment of their ancestors to our excellent King, George the Fourth."

BALL HUGHES was talking with a gentleman, the other day, in St. James's-street, when NINNY ROBINS, the Auctioneer, passed by them. "Pray," said his friend to BALL, "what makes ROBINS look so glumpy?" To which the Oatlands wag replied, "Oh, bless you, it's his usual more-bid affection."

It is expected that HIS MAJESTY will open the Session in person on Tuesday next.

Of the probable contents of the Address it seems unnecessary to speak. Such is the confidence reposed by the country in general, in the integrity and wisdom of the present Ministry, that every one, whose opinion is of the slightest value, is satisfied that such measures will be recommended as will tend to relieve the manufacturers, without unduly pressing upon the agriculturists, and that although peace be maintained, it will not be at the expence of the country's glory, or of its mercantile interests.

An equal confidence may be said to prevail with respect to the proceedings of the House of Commons on all momentous questions. The Corn Laws will doubtless be discussed. In all probability they will be repealed, and an adequate protecting duty on foreign grain substituted in lieu of them. Mr. BROUGHAM may agitate the Roman Catholic claims; if so, overwhelming petitions from all parts of the country, and the division of the House itself, should the Romanists venture to try their strength, will clearly show that the chicanery practised by the Popish priests at the late election has had its due effect—that it has roused many a slumberer, and given increased vigilance to those who were previously on their guard. Again Mr. PEEL will proceed with the good work which he has so admirably commenced, the simplifying of our Criminal Laws. And, lastly, notwithstanding the hammering monotony of Mr. FOWELL BUXTON, the West India proprietor, will not be altogether robbed of his rightful possessions, in order to gratify the discarded STEPHEN, the lucre-loving MACAULAY, and the designing hypocritical sectarians, who seek to deprive England of her colonies, in addition to undermining all true piety and religion, by endeavouring to make inroads on our revered Established Church.

Thus, then, we have no fear as to the decisions which will be given on great public questions; but the House of Commons has other duties to perform. The Private Bills brought before its Committees frequently affect property in a most serious degree, and the public, therefore, inquire with anxiety for the names and characters of the Members who are likely to compose those Committees. The question is natural, and the inquiry is most just. Mr. BROGDEN may tremble at it, and WILKS, EASTHOPE, and Co., may hope in vain, by their pigmy mutterings, to stifle it.

Thank GOD! we are not under the domination of the Priesthood, a portion of which has laboured to again unfurl and render triumphant the banners of the atrocious INQUISITION; nor are we yet a prey to Atheistical Democrats, who are only loud in the mere praise of liberty, to enable them to tyrannize at home with the greater security. The Press is free! and some portion of it, at least, will proceed vigorously in the honest work which it has so effectually commenced. To whom, we would ask, is the public indebted for the exposure which has been made of the villanous trickery practised by the promoters of the numberless JOINT STOCK COMPANIES that have started into existence, and passed away as rapidly as the shadows of Banquo's issue? Why, to the Press! Not, indeed, to that portion of it which disgraces its high calling, but to the few Journals who have stood boldly forward, and endangered their own personal liberty, rather than bend to baseness, and sell their honesty for the patronage of the unprincipled, or for a share of the produce of their monstrous impositions.

FITZROY STANHOPE, meeting Lord HARBOROUGH driving a swell drag the other day, observed, that he looked like a COACHMAN, and drove like a GENTLEMAN!

PARLIAMENT MEN.

A NEW SONG.

AIR.—Paddy O'Carrol.

Last Tuesday the day was
The Nation, they say, was
In dreadful alarm, for its honour and fame;
When, to the GREAT MEETING,
Those, who had a seat in,
With all proper greeting,
To Westminster came!
Yet, look at the talent
So freely by all lent,
At least by the new ones who mustered up then;
And, put them together,
I really doubt whether
We've e'er had, before, such fine PARLIAMENT MEN!

The famed list comprises,
Near all sorts and sizes,
—From Temple Bar, down to the Bar of the House—
Where your young West-End joker,
Your pert City broker,
And radical croaker,
Together carouse!
First, came to the scraper,
The old linen-draper,
Who, for a good place, had been waiting since ten;
For there's none, whose sole pleasure's
To take such good measures,
As WAITHMAN, among all these PARLIAMENT MEN!

By way of example,
He brought down a sample
Of goods, for all which "ready money" he pays;
With BOB then don't quarrel,
For though he's no laurel,
We're satisfied, for he'll
Have plenty of baize!
He first bore his mind in,
"Best red tape," for binding
Whatever long deeds they might happen to pen;
Some serge, too, at twenty-
Pence, stuff too in plenty,
To stuff down the throats of these PARLIAMENT MEN!

The next, in rotation,
To brighten the nation,
Came up from St. Alban's a regular swell,
But what they, who least hope,
Can from such a beast hope
As little JACK EASTHOPE,
I really can't tell!

Once butter he dealt in,
And then took to melting
Mould candles at Tewkesbury, and, would ye ken
On what scent he now bent is,
—It just "cent. per cent." is,
At which he'll lend cash to these PARLIAMENT MEN!

Then comes to his duty,
That Methodist beauty,
Who, well as his father, for honesty's known;
Whom, of M.P. despite in,
They've just been indicting,
For others' names writing,
As well as his own!
Once seated if WILKS is,
All whom he then bilks, is
A point we're not likely to hear of again:
For he'll "privilege" talk of,
And soon after walk off,
To make "Joint Stock Company" PARLIAMENT MEN!

Fat GYE then comes tripping him,
All up from Chippenham,
Vowing what good he will do for their sake;
In many parts shining—
A dealer both wine in
And tea, which from TWYNING
No better you'll take.
Moreover, he'll give you
Such hams, while you live, you,
Except at Vauxhall, cannot meet with, and when He's a little more settled,
And little less nettled,
He'll offer to print for the PARLIAMENT MEN!

Then comes, to make them stir,
Old ROWLAND from Leom'ster,
Whom out from all towns else they've managed to kick;
And swearing TOM BISH is Unfit, he just wishes
"The loaves and the fishes"
To get by a trick!
The next gaiter'd fellow,
With cloak and umbrella,
(By side of whom STEPHENSON looks like a wren!)
Is Twiss of the thick-head,
Who's thought the most wicked,
In all love affairs, of these PARLIAMENT MEN!

O'NEIL, who from Hull is,
And, HUME-like, whose skull is Employed, at present, in helping the Greek;
And Alderman WOOD, too,
Who'd do so much good to
The world, if he would to
The point ever speak!
There more are of talent,
Which will be by all lent,
And would, if it had been required, e'en then;
So, put them together,
I really doubt whether
We've e'er had, before, such fine PARLIAMENT MEN!

THEATRICALS.

The NEW THEATRE ROYAL, in Westminster, opened for the season on Tuesday last, with several additions to the established company, which has been performing there for several years past, but, with one or two exceptions, a viler set of fellows were never turned out from the provinces. As it may be a matter of curiosity hereafter, to recur to what took place, on such an important occasion, as the opening of a National Theatre is generally considered, we shall place on record the performances of the past week. The first night was pretty fully attended, but from the noise which occasionally pervaded the house, we, who sat in the gallery, could not distinctly hear the whole of the performances. The opening play was,

A NEW WAY TO PAY OLD DEBTS.

Sir Giles Overreach.....Mr. EASTHOPE.
Justice Greedy .....Mr. GYE.
Marrall .....Mr. HUME.
Well-do .....Mr. J. WILKS, Jun.
Furnace .....Mr. SCARLETT.
(the other characters by the rest of the company.)

After which, a German Sketch, from the "ANTIGALLICAN."

Rogero .....Mr. EASTHOPE.

With the Song of
"Had I a heart for falsehood framed."

Matilda Potingen.....Mrs. CHATTERTON.

The whole concluded with the farce of

TOO LATE FOR DINNER.

Nicholas Twill (a haberdasher) by Ald. WAITHMAN.

Mrs. CHATTERTON does not belong to the regular company, but, as happened in the case of one or two others, was permitted to play on the occasion, in order to do every possible justice to the entertainments. It is impossible to go into any lengthened detail of the exertions on this occasion, but the reader who is acquainted with the different characters, and the representatives into whose hands they fell, will be quite able to judge of the effect produced. The second evening's performance commenced with the BEGGAR'S OPERA.

Capt. Macheath.....Sir R. WILSON.
Filch.....Mr. J. WILKS, Jun.
Jemmy Twitcher .....Mr. BROUGHAM.
Nimming Ned .....Mr. E. ELLICE.*
Slippery Sam.....Mr. S. WHITBREAD
Waiter .....Mr. GYE.

After which the laughable Farce of the VILLAGE LAWYER.

Sheepface .....Mr. H. TWISS.
(In which he introduced the new Song of LOVE and LAW:)

They say that LAW one day went out,
To plight young LOVE his vow,
But having something of a doubt
That she would it allow,
Too ra, loo ra, &c. &c.

To LOVE's mamma he broke the ice,
Her child's regards to win,
And she, not being over nice,
Directly let him in.
Too ra, loo ra, &c. &c.

Once in, LAW could no reason see
His offerings to recall,
Preferring in old LOVE to be,
Than in no love at all!
Too ra, loo ra, &c. &c.

Scout .....Mr. WILKS, Senior.*

The evening's entertainments terminated with the CRITIC.

Puff.....Mr. BISH.
Dangle .....Sir H. COOKE.

Although, as on the preceding evening, many new performers made their appearance, it is almost unnecessary to observe, that not the slightest effect worthy of notice, was produced. We will give the third night's entertainments, which is all that our limits will admit of. They consisted of detached scenes from the following pieces:

WHO WANTS A GUINEA.

Solomon Gundy .....Mr. Alderman WOOD.
Carry-dot.....Mr. HUME.
Jonathan Oldskirt.....Mr. BYNG.
Hogmore.....Alderman WAITHMAN.

MARRIED AND SINGLE.

Beau Shatterley.....Mr. R. STEPHENSON.
Scamper.....Mr. B. WALROND.
Ferrett (an attorney) .....Mr. J. WILKS, Jun.
Mr. Cramwell .....Mr. GYE.

Footman and Servant, in attendance out-side, Messrs. PETER MOORE and E. ELLICE,*

ROLAND FOR AN OLIVER.

Hon. A. Highflyer .....Mr. T. DUNCOMBE.
Game-KEEPER .....Sir H. COOKE.

BEAUX STRATAGEM.

Boniface.....Mr. SCARLETT.
Scrub.....Mr. H. TWISS.
Gibbett.....Mr. J. WILKS, Jun.

TRIBULATION.

Sir George Faddle ..... Sir. G. WARRENDER.

(The refreshments provided by Mr. GYE, Purveyor to Vauxhal-Gardens and Sadler's Wells Theatre.)

RAISING THE WIND.

Plainway ..... Mr. CALVERT.
Fainwou'd ..... Mr. R. STEPHENSON.
Jeremy Didler ..... Mr. EASTHOPE.

N.B. Printer to the Theatre, Mr. GYE!!!

Of the occurrences of the other theatres, we have only to remark, that the new farce, yclept A Trip to Wales, produced at Drury-lane, is, if possible, worse than the author's Trip to Exmouth, produced some years since at this theatre. We dare say Mr. PARRY is a clever musician, but as to a farce writer—pooh, he might just as well set up for a farce actor—it is quite absurd—every season brings us an Uncle Gabriel, or some such nonsense, from this musical Taffy, and not one of them literally bearable: but a new comer-in, like Mr. PRICE, with all his talent and spirit, must expect to be humbugged a little by the old hangers-on of the property he leases.

We perceive, by the Dublin Papers, that ST. PATRICK is creating a nightly disturbance in Mr. HARRIS's theatre, because the said patentee has rejected the services of the old by-gone actor, MONTAGUE TALBOT. We are perfectly well aware that PADDY cannot exist without some excitement of this kind, but his carrying his notions so far as this, is a little too much of the Pat-RIOT. Some of the papers, with reference to Mrs. EDWIN, abuse poor HARRIS for engaging such old people—others, insist on Mr. TALBOT (old enough to be Mrs. EDWIN's father, nearly) being engaged.—What is the patentee to do?—Why, have as little to do, as possible, with such a set of savages.

---

* These performers were included in the cast, having offered their services, but did not appear, owing to their services having been rejected.—Two are from the theatre, Coventry, and WILKS, senior, from the Boston Theatre.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Irish Election Petitions.—Petitions from the following counties against the Returns made of Members to serve in the present Parliament are lodged, or in progress, and will be presented:—

Westmeath.—Mr. Smith, the late Member, against the return of Mr. Tuite.

Waterford.—There are two petitions from this county, upon separate grounds, and distinct from each other; one from Lord George Beresford, the late Member, against the return of Mr. Villiers Stuart; the other from the freeholders generally, against the same return.

Dublin.—From Mr. Hamilton, against the return of Colonel White.

Monaghan.—From Colonel Leslie, against the return of Mr. Westenra.

Cavan.—From Messrs. Coote and Southwell, against the return of Messrs. Maxwell and Saunderson.

The Recorder's Report of the prisoners under sentence of death will be made on Wednesday next.

The Retail Brewers of this city are about to petition the Legislature to extend the time allowed for the sale of beer, which is now limited to nine o'clock in the evening.—Worcester Journal.

The number of suicides was greater in Paris in 1825 than in the preceding year; they amount to 393, 25 more than in 1824. Suicides are of more frequent occurrence there in spring than at any other period of the year; and in autumn the number is, comparatively, inconsiderable. Among those who have committed self-destruction, there are 218 unmarried, and 178 married persons.

The Queen of Portugal, Maria da Gloria, is little more than seven years of age, being born in spring, 1819; her betrothed uncle-husband, Don Miguel, is just 25, being born the end of October, 1802.

The prices of corn in Sweden had fallen since the ordonnance for free importation was issued, and the landholders were afraid that the importation would prove prejudicial to their interests.

A fountain, in the form of a magnificent temple, is to be erected in the centre of the site on which Carlton Palace now stands. The Architect of Royalty states, that this temple and fountain will, when complete, exceed in beauty and effect any similar edifice now existing in either Paris or Rome; and even the Colossal Elephant, designed at the command of Napoleon Buonaparte, but which was never finished.

Great exertions are making for carrying into effect the provisions of the Act for constructing Wet Docks and Warehouses in St. Katharine's. Upwards of one-half of the site has been already purchased, and the coffee-dam, and other works connected with the entrance Lock, excavation for the Basin, &c. are in a very forward state.

It is said that the Emperor of Brazil will not listen to any recommendation, refusing to evacuate the Eastern Province without the payment of an enormous sum.

On Tuesday last an eagle was shot by a man of the name of Osborn, of North Somercoates, near the sea, the length of which from the tip of each wing, was seven feet and a half, from the beak to the tail, three feet, and weighed nine pounds.

The unfortunate scripholders in the Cornwall and Devon Mining Society are destined to undergo much more inconvenience than they expected. On Monday some of them were served with copies of writs, obliging them to pay up the recent call of 5l. per share.

The silk manufacturers at Lyons recently held a meeting, at which it was resolved, that a fund should be formed for lending to the workmen money upon effects, without interest, as at the Monte de Piete the interest is at the rate of 16 per cent. per annum.

The state of the ground allotted for the present hackney-coach stand near the King's-mews is quite deplorable. Here the poor horses stand fetlock deep in mud, in the midst of modern improvements.

The Speaker's situation at the time of his election the other day was rather singular: first, in being proposed by the gentleman (Mr. Sturges Bourne), who in the event of his secession would probably have been his successor; and secondly, on being congratulated, as is usual, on taking the chair, by the very person (Mr. Wynn), the great object of whose life it has been to fill the high office himself.

Henry Thurtell (brother of the notorious John Thurtell) was brought up on Tuesday, at the Insolvent Debtors' Court, to be heard on his petition.—Previous to his arrest, he was Master at Arms of the Warren Hastings East Indiaman, and was now brought up from the Marshalsea prison. He was unopposed, and nothing particular transpired on his examination, except some interest he had in the affairs of his late brother. The appearance of this man was that of a good-natured hardy sailor, with the most open and candid manner. He was declared entitled to the benefit of the Act, and ordered to be discharged forthwith.

Extraordinary Burglary.—Information was on Wednesday lodged at the Marylebone Police Office of a very daring burglary, effected under very particular circumstances, at the house of Miss Pattle, a lady of fortune, residing at No. 34, Montagu-street, Montagu-square. On the morning of that day, between five and six o'clock, the watchmen aroused them, and search being made, every thing in the parlours and kitchen were in confusion, and it was discovered that a valuable service of plate, worth 200 guineas, had been stolen. A chalk-mark or line was drawn across the outward door on the outside parallel with a large iron bar with which the door was fastened on the inside, and also similar lines were drawn where the bolt fastenings were. Nothing has as yet been elicited by the police.

No less than 26,533 slaves were embarked in Brazilian vessels on the African coast, between the 1st of July, 1825, and 1st of July, 826; of whom 1,540 are stated to have died on their passage to Rio de Janeiro.

A fence has been completed in front of the screen of Carlton Palace, preparatory to its demolition; and the workmen have begun to uproot the trees in the gardens, for the purpose of beginning the new square about to be erected in that quarter, which will include the ground that Warwick-house has so long occupied.

Paris morning papers of Wednesday, together with the Etoile dated Thursday, have arrived, but their contents are uninteresting. There are accounts from St. Petersburgh, but even in that capital there was also a total absence of news, although the war against the Persians had excited great attention, and its progress was watched with deep interest. The only notice taken of that contest is a brief statement that the Fourth Bulletin of the Army of Georgia had not been received. Some seemed disposed to infer from the delay that the bulletin might have been received, but that its nature was not so favourable as to insure its speedy publication.

The town of Folkestone during the past week presented a busy scene of activity, as is usually the case when the fishermen enjoy a good herring season. Vast quantities of herrings have been caught; a great portion of which being brought into the town, has afforded employment to many who would otherwise have been destitute of work. Saturday se'nnight proved a successful one for the boats in the herring fishery, belonging to Margate, as a great quantity were caught; the Liberty lugger alone having upwards of three lasts; should the weather prove favourable, there is reason to expect a tolerable season, as there are great shows for fish. Sprats also have begun to make their appearance, one boat having got nearly eight bushels.—Kent Herald.

Trade still continues without amendment in this vicinity. The spinners of a mill in Calton have found it prudent to resume work at the reduced rates; and part of the spinners of another mill that had struck work are expected to return to-day on the same terms.

The loss sustained by the turn-outs on this occasion would have covered for months the small deduction made in the prices. Owing to the severe distress prevalent, the demand for coals is less than was ever experienced at this season of the year. The proprietors of some mines have this week reduced the rate of digging coals 3d. a cart. Yesterday being new Martinmas Wednesday, a number of servants, almost exclusively women, appeared at the end of the old bridge, in expectation of being hired. Wednesday next is the great day for hiring country servants. Most of the women who appeared yesterday were poor girls, chiefly from the West and North Highlands, who had been forced from their homes by the distress of the times, and obliged to seek subsistence in the low countries.—Glasgow Chronicle.

Lord Mayor's Fool.—A poor fellow, apparently half an idiot, and who has often applied for relief, again called at the Mansion House on Thursday for the same purpose, when he was reminded that he had been often there before.—Applicant: "Why, I had nothing to do, and so I was recommended to apply to the new Lord Mayor to appoint me to the office of Lord Mayor's fool." (A loud laugh.)—The Lord Mayor (in a laugh); "My friend, no doubt you were well advised; but the office is not vacant at present."—"I was afraid so, because some others told me that your Lordship meant to perform the duties of Lord Mayor's fool yourself."—Here there was a tumultuous burst of laughter, in which the Lord Mayor most heartily joined; and eventually the applicant for the office of Lord Mayor's fool was ordered to have some money given him, and not to apply again for twelve months to come.

By the new Metropolitan Turnpike Act, powers are vested in the Commissioners, in addition to those already noticed, to assess a rate in some degree, according to their own discretion, on houses, shops, and gardens, situated within 200 yards of a road; and if the landlord does not pay it, a lodger's goods may be seized—the proceeds to merge in the general fund for repairing all the roads in Middlesex.

Last evening a cow, apparently enraged, ran up Fleet-street, and pursued a gentleman into the shop of Mr. Leftwich, a pastry-cook. Several ladies who were in the shop at the time were exceedingly terrified, and the gentleman leaped over the counter to avoid being gored. Tarts, jellies, puffs, &c. were strewed about in great profusion; and the animal, after keeping possession for some time, quietly left the shop. The gentleman was about to follow, when he was stopped by Mr. Leftwich, and asked for payment of the damage which had been done in consequence of the visit of himself and his pursuer, the cow. The gentleman insisted that he was not liable, and was making off, when Mr. Leftwich took hold of his coat-skirt; but he escaped from his grasp, and left Mr. L. to put up with the loss.

Extract from an American paper, dated September 30, 1826:—"Died, on Sunday, deeply regretted by all who knew her, the lady of Lieutenant Boldero, Royal Engineers, after a severe and painful illness, which she bore with that patience and fortitude which true Christian piety could alone inspire."

An atrocious murder was perpetrated on Sunday evening last, within eight miles of Cork, on the old Bandon-road. Two labouring men, belonging to the neighbourhoods of Skibbereen and Bantry, were proceeding to their respective homes, after having assisted in digging the potatoes in some of the lower counties, when one unfortunately hinted to the other that he had saved, as the produce of his labour, a small sum of money, supposed to be about twenty shillings. Both walked on, till having arrived at a lonesome part, near the bottom of Killady Hill, when the man to whom the communication was made, stepped behind, and with a blow of a spade, nearly severed the head from the body of his companion. The treacherous wretch was then about to rifle his pockets, when, hearing footsteps approach, he ran off. Two travellers coming up, and seeing the body, gave the alarm to some country people, and all joining, after a pursuit of an hour, they secured the murderer, who acknowledged that he was prompted to the barbarous deed for the sake of the money. He is committed. The body of the poor murdered man lies for a coroner's inquest in a cabin near the spot.

Cambridge, Nov. 17.—Destructive Fire.—Notwithstanding the recent destructive fire at Over, we regret to state that another conflagration has occurred in the same village. Saturday night, about nine o'clock, flames were discovered issuing from a barn in the occupation of Mr. Edward Hilton, which communicated to the adjoining buildings, as well as the dwelling-house, and in a short time the whole of the premises were entirely destroyed. The flames likewise extended to a barn and outbuilding belonging to Mr. Brown, which also fell a prey to the devouring element. The Willingham engine, and several engines from the town, speedily reached the village, and fortunately prevented further damage. The fire was unquestionably occasioned by an incendiary, for whose apprehension the Norwich Union and Suffolk Offices (in the latter of which the property has been insured) promptly offered a reward of 200*l.* and the Lord Lieutenant offered an additional reward of 20*l.* for the discovery of the malicious incendiary.

University of Glasgow.—The election of the Lord Rector, yesterday, was alike creditable to the students, and honourable to our illustrious townsman, Thomas Campbell, Esq., the poet. Never was there such a contested election within the walls of our ancient university! Never was genius so eminently successful against power, wealth, interest, influence, and political party! The poet of freedom was elected by the unanimous voice of the four nations! The Natio Glottiana may well be proud of this election—it does honour to native merit—it reflects honour on the city and University of Glasgow—and it will be a universal triumph to the friends of freedom throughout the country. The interest and the wishes of the professors were all in favour of Sir Thomas Brisbane, a man eminent for science and intelligence; and great exertions were made by his partizans. The whole influence of the Tory party unconnected with the professors, was enlisted in favour of Mr. Canning, and strenuous efforts were exerted in his behalf. The true feelings of independence and liberty, however, excited in the minds of the Glasgow students by the sweet strains of their native poet, and by the recollection of his gigantic undertaking, the foundation of a London university, in conjunction with the late Lord Rector, Mr. Brougham, have carried the day against a host of opponents.—Glasgow Chronicle.

Last week, the Regulator, Gloucester and Cheltenham day coach, on its return to town, at Ealing, was robbed of several parcels by some fellows who had picked the lock and opened the boot behind the coach. Being discovered by the guard in the act of taking away the parcels, he jumped down and secured one of the gang, and gave him into the custody of a patrol, although in doing so he was much beaten by the fellow's associates. All the property taken from the coach, excepting a trunk belonging to Mr. Platt, the Counsel, has been recovered. Others of the gang have since been apprehended. On Wednesday evening, when the same coach was returning to town, another attempt was made to rob the boot by a single man, which the guard prevented by belabouring him on the head and face with a large bludgeon.

Discovery of Mr. Bradley's lost Sovereigns.—John Hill late a book-keeper in the employ of Mr. Briggs, proprietor of the George Inn, Leicester, and John Mastin, a porter in the same establishment, were fully committed to Leicester Gaol on Wednesday, it being satisfactorily proved to the Magistrates that they had abstracted the parcel containing 200 sovereigns, forwarded from Lad-lane to Messrs. Bradley and Co., by the Defiance coach. Mastin took the parcel from the coach, and carried it into the coach-office, where Hill was then employed; and since their examination they have confessed the fact, stating that they divided the sovereigns equally.

We understand that Champaigne Wright has instituted legal proceedings against a cotemporary print for a libel on his wine. The trial is expected to come on this Term.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

COURT OF CHANCERY, Thursday, Nov. 16.

The Lord Chancellor was attended by the Lords Chief Justices of the Courts of King's Bench and Common Pleas.

CORONER FOR STAFFORD.

Mr. Agar was heard on this matter, in deciding which the Chancellor had also required the assistance of the Chief Justices. The petition prayed that the Court would declare the election of Mr. Dent, whom the Sheriff had returned as duly appointed Coroner for Stafford, should be declared void. There were two points upon which the prayer of the petition was founded. The first was, that Mr. Dent was not possessed of such a qualification in property as was required by the Act of Parliament, which declared that no person should be eligible to the office of coroner, unless he had land within the county for which he was chosen, sufficient to satisfy all manner of persons. The second point was, that the election had not taken place within the period limited for that purpose, by the statute regulating such elections.

The Lord Chancellor requested the counsel to confine himself to the latter point.

Mr. Agar went on to say, that by the Act of the 58th Geo. III., the sheriffs were required to proceed to the election of coroner at the county court next after the receipt of the writ directed to him for that purpose, unless such county court should happen to fall within six days after receipt of the writ. In this case, the Sheriff received the writ on the 1st of April, and the next county court was appointed for the 13th of the same month, on which day he ought to have proceeded to the election. The Sheriff, however, neglected to do so, and adjourned the court to the 27th, and on that day the election was held. The counsel contended at great length, that this was in violation of the Act of Parliament, and that as the provisions of that Act were imperative, the election was therefore void.

Mr. Wheatley, for the coroner, argued that there had been no material deviation from the enactments of the statute. The Sheriff had complied with the provisions, so far as was necessary; for at the county court, held on the 13th of April, he had read the writ, and so had proceeded in the election, which was completed on the 27th of the same month, pursuant to an adjournment. The Sheriff had clearly a right to adjourn the court, and he acted not only according to the meaning, but within the letter of the Act.

Mr. Lovatt, for the Sheriff, argued on the same side.

Mr. Agar having replied,

The Lord Chancellor then requested the Chief Justices to give their opinions on the point which had been argued.

Sir W. D. Best then said, that having been called upon, he declared it to be his decided opinion that the election was void. The directions of the act of Parliament were explicit, and it was quite clear that the Sheriff ought to have proceeded with the election on the 13th. It appeared that this had not been done, and consequently that the proceedings which had been taken, being unauthorized by the Act of Parliament, were wholly void.

Sir C. Abbett expressed his opinion to the same effect.

The Lord Chancellor said that he concurred entirely in the opinion which had been expressed by the learned Judges that the election must be declared void, and this had been his strong impression from the first. As this was a question of great importance in the election of coroners, he had thought it right to give as great authority to its decision as he could borrow from the opinions which he had the honour to receive. The election, must therefore, be declared void, and a new writ issued for the election of a coroner.

COURT OF KING'S BENCH.

LORD GLENGALL AND "THE AGE."

Mr. Scarlett, on behalf of the Earl of Glengall, moved for a rule, calling on the plaintiff, Richard Downing Richards (who appeared, from the affidavits at the Stamp-office, to be the sole proprietor of The Age Sunday newspaper) to show cause why a criminal information should not be filed against him, for having published, in his paper of the 29th of October last, a libel on the Earl of Glengall. His Lordship, by his affidavit, denied the matters charged in the libel; and it therefore only remained for him (Mr. Searlett) to read the libel, which commenced as follows:

"It will probably have appeared somewhat extraordinary to many people, that, hitherto, no reference has been made by us to a circumstance which has, in several instances, been introduced in other journals. We allude to the Court of Inquiry which has been stated to have been held by the Officers of the Horse Guards (Blue), to ascertain the truth of a report which has affixed the authorship of this Journal on the Lord William Lennox, commanding a troop of that distinguished regiment. We have hitherto treated the matter with the same perfect contempt which we have always evinced towards the individual on whose account (or rather through the influence of whose report) this investigation was originally instigated—we mean the Earl of Glengall. With respect to this last-mentioned nobleman we feel compelled to enter into a trifling detail, which, however it may displease his Lordship, is, at this moment, something to the point. Our own assertions respecting Lord William Lennox have been published, and they will, of course, be fully borne out at the adjourned inquiry, which takes place the ensuing week. Dismissing, therefore, that part of the argument, let us come more directly to the other bearing of the subject. For some considerable time past, the Earl of Glengall, who has manifested an open hostility against The Age, from its commencement to the present moment, has been in league with a very obscure journal, in whose pages every week has appeared the very acme of low-life abuse against the principles of this journal."

My Lords, the Earl of Glengall swears he has no connection whatever with the journal alluded to.

"And in the course of its puny attacks upon us, have been mixed up some of the most abusive specimens of blackguardism on record against several noblemen and gentlemen of distinction. To the whole of these, Lord Glengall has been not only privy, but has acted in their circulation as a prominent auxiliary. To all these parties, then, who have been so maligned, is this Lord amenable; and if any of them feel disposed to follow his Lordship's example, and institute any kind of inquiry, we pledge ourselves to stand forward, and give ample testimony of what we have asserted. Many months since, when a private inquiry respecting this imputation on Lord William Lennox was held at a residence of a mutual friend of the parties at variance, at which Lord Glengall was present, the mention of any such assemblage was positively forbid. Yet, the following Sunday, an account of the same appeared in his Lordship's paper, contrary to all understanding, all etiquette, and all honour. But it is no matter of surprise that Lord Glengall could not be true to his friends—he cannot be so to himself—for, an offer having been made to him this last week to attend this Adjourned Court of Inquiry, and his Lordship having intimated his intention to be present, with the wish that the persons who were at the above-named private meeting should also be at this, he has shewn this correspondence to every one he meets, and from one of his particular friends we, yesterday morning, heard the whole of it. We have little doubt at this moment of writing but that some notice of this will be given in his Lordship's paper of this day; and if it should, it will operate as additional conclusive evidence. Both in London and Southampton, at the office of the Herald paper in that town, Lord Glengall has been in continual converse with a rascally sweep"—

My Lord Glengall swears positively that he has no connection with any sweep of any kind—

"Who is now getting a few shillings a week for scraping together the falsehoods of the town for this expiring periodical, and will continue to do so until he is kicked from its service, as he has been from that of every other Journal he ever stole into the secrets of."

My Lord Glengall swears, as I before said, that he has no connection with any sweep whatever. He acknowledges that he did instruct a Mr. Molloy Wesmacott to find out, if possible, who was the author of these scurrilous articles upon his Lordship contained in THE AGE, and that was the only connexion he had with Mr. Molloy Westmacott.

"Does this dirty Lord"—

That alludes to Lord Glengall, as your Lordship will presently see by the context:—

"Does this dirty Lord imagine that a man who is acknowledged to be the greatest liar in England, would be, for a moment, listened to among a set of distinguished military gentlemen, even if he had any thing to advance, or that, in the next place, the scrutiny which he had been instrumental in drawing upon another, will not be visited upon himself. As far as Lord William Lennox is concerned, it is to us a matter of perfect indifference whether he be tried, condemned, or even executed. With all Glengall's tact, we should presume that Lord William Lennox is about his equal—and, weighed together, we cannot imagine that there is a grain of difference between them, either in genius, courage, or general attainments. Whatever may be permitted to be known of this inquiry, we shall, of course, submit to the public; and if we don't, my Lord Glengall will circulate it in the few copies he has prevailed upon people to take of his paper; and that once done, we shall direct a more general attention to the presumptuous conduct of this blinking puppy, who, not satisfied with traducing every woman's character in whose presence he may once have had the happiness to be, maligns his best friends in a public paper, and when the tables are turned on his Lordship, by the persons of whom he has no knowledge, and who only sit in judgment on his public deportment, he has the unparalelled assurance to bully one person, beg another's pardon, fight a third, and wind up by making the whole affair the subject of a regimental court of inquiry."

The Chief Justice—You have read quite enough, Mr. Scarlett Take a rule to show cause.

Rule granted.

FRIDAY, Nov. 17.

BUCKINGHAM v. BANKES, ESQ.

This was an action of libel, tried at the adjourned sittings in London, before the present term, when a verdict was found for the plaintiff.

Mr Park now moved, on the part of the defendant, for a rule, calling on the plaintiff to show cause why the Master should not be allowed to tax the defendant's costs of keeping two foreign witnesses in London, from the 22d of February to the day of trial in October last. It appeared that the plaintiff had originally set down the cause for trial, but afterwards withdrew the record and paid the defendant the costs of the day, including the costs of two witnesses from abroad, whom the defendant had caused to be subpœnaed, and kept in London to give evidence on the trial.—Subsequently the defendant, fearing that a further postponement on the part of the plaintiff would take place, entered the cause for trial by proviso. An application was afterwards made by the plaintiff, to put off the trial by proviso, which was granted on certain terms. The plaintiff then obtained a Judge's summons, for a commission to examine witnesses abroad, which was resisted on the part of the defendant, on the ground that the terms imposed by the Court, on the application for the postponement, had not been complied with. An order was made by Mr. Justice Littledale, directing that a commission should issue on the plaintiff's depositing a sufficient sum of money to pay the costs of the defendant's two foreign witnesses, from the 22d of February to the time of granting of the order. In Trinity term, 1826, the plaintiff again applied to postpone the trial, which was then entered to be tried by proviso, and an order was made on the terms of his paying certain costs to the defendant. The Master, on being applied to to tax the costs of both parties, had entertained some doubts on the construction of the order of Mr. Justice Littledale, and the last rule of Court, as to the costs to be allowed to the defendant, and therefore the present application was made.

The Lord Chief Justice—You may take a rule to show cause.

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

MANSION-HOUSE.—A young woman of respectable appearance and good address, drove up here in a hackney-coach, on Monday last, before the public business commenced, and requested to be allowed to make a communication of great importance to the Lord Mayor.

Fogg, the marshalman, who happened to be in attendance, was struck with the appearance of the lady, who was dressed in white muslin, very low, as the milliners call it, had a pearl necklace round her neck, white satin shoes, and a large plume of feathers fastened to her head by a gold band. The driver of the hackney-coach was decorated with white favours, and several persons gathered about the gates of the Mansion-house, attracted by so extraordinary an exhibition. The Marshalman believed that his applicant was insane, until he was informed that she expected to be united to a gentleman who had paid his addresses to her for some time. He immediately introduced her to Mr. Hobler, without, however mentioning that gentleman's name to her.

Mr. Hobler, judging from her address, that the lady was a French woman, addressed her in that language, and he was not undeceived until she had concluded her story, which was as follows:—

About two years ago she became acquainted with a gentleman of respectable connexions. He resided in a house in which she used to give lessons to a young lady in music and French, and was extremely attentive to her. The sincerity of his intentions she, however, doubted; but he persevered in soliciting her hand in marriage so obstinately, and for so long a time, that her friends thought it imprudent, as well as cruel in her, for he appeared to be a good match for a woman who was not altogether independent, to persist in her refusal. She therefore listened to his proposals, and they associated together as persons destined for one another. On the day before the Lord Mayor's feast, he told her that he would procure a card for her, and introduce her to his Lordship, with whom he was on terms of great intimacy, as his intended. He, however, afterwards said, that he had failed in his attempt to obtain the card, but that he was himself to dine with his Lordship, and he would make arrangements for the ceremony, which should be performed in his Lordship's presence. On the day following that of the civic entertainment, he was punctual in his appointment with her, and he then assured her that he had spoken to the Chief Magistrate at the dinner, and that the marriage should take place at the Mansion-house on Monday, between ten and eleven o'clock. Convinced that this communication was a candid one, she consented to accompany her lover to the house of his friend, the Lord Mayor, at the time stated. She, however, soon after the appointment, received a message from him, and requesting that she would appear there in wedding garments, suitable to her condition, and that she should not bring any money with her. "I have," said she, "obeyed him in all those particulars; but I have waited in vain for him, and I fear that his object, after all, was nothing but to hold me up to ridicule. I have, therefore, taken the liberty to speak to your Lordship on the subject."

When Mr. Hobler told the poor girl that he was no more than the Lord Mayor's clerk, she was greatly embarrassed, but her confusion did not continue long, for he very feelingly mentioned his regret that she had been imposed upon. It was, he said, well for her that she had not thrown herself away upon so heartless a scoundrel, who deserved for his scandalous conduct upon the occasion, to be whipped at the cart's tail. He then introduced the poor young woman to the Lord Mayor in his Lordship's private parlour, and mentioned the leading particulars of the above account to his Lordship, who, in the strongest manner, expressed his indignation at the cruel trick that had been played off upon the ill-treated girl, and lamented that it was not in his power to interfere. He added, that he would most strongly advise her to go home, and not to throw away a thought upon so heartless and contemptible a fellow.

The lady, who was deeply impressed with the compassionate treatment she received from the Lord Mayor, said, she certainly would act as she had been so paternally advised, but she departed from his Lordship's presence evidently much wounded in her feelings at the base conduct of the fellow who had taken such pains to make her unhappy.

We could not procure the name of the man. Mr. Hobler learned from the lady that she had been in France from her infancy, but that she had been born in England. Her long stay in France may account for her belief that her marriage would take place before a magistrate, and it is obvious from the direction which she received from the paltry fellow who had deceived her, not to put any money in her pocket, that it was his intention to involve her in a dispute with some brute of a hackney-coachman.

HATTON-GARDEN.—On Friday a gentlemanly-looking man, named Parry, was brought before Mr. Rogers, the sitting magistrate, under the following charge:—

Mr. Gunnell, of 6, Claremont-place, stated, that on Thursday evening last he had a party of friends at his house, and amongst others were Mr. Parry's wife and sister. About 12 o'clock Mr. Parry knocked at the door, and inquired if Mrs. Parry was there. On being informed that she was, he walked up stairs, dashed into the drawing-room, more like an insane than a rational man, and conducted himself in so violent and ungentlemanly a manner, that Mr. Gunnell had to insist upon his quitting the house; this Mr. Parry absolutely refused to do, and struck Mr. Gunnell several times, and this was the assault complained of.

Mr. Rogers asked if Mr. Parry had been invited to the party?

Mr. Gunnell said, he believed not, as the invitations were given by Mrs. Gunnell.

Mr. Parry was now asked what could induce him to act after such a manner?

He replied, evidently much affected, that he hoped the Magistrate would allow him to explain the cause:—The fact was, he said, that an individual with whom he had formerly been on terms of intimacy, but whom be had latterly been obliged to forbid his house, in consequence of his pointed attention to Mrs. Parry, now resided in the house of Mr. Gunnell, and he had had made it a request of Mrs. Parry not to visit there. On Thursday afternoon he had business from home, which he expected would detain him late, and previous to his going out, Mrs. Parry signified her intention to take tea at her sister's, to which he had no objection. However, on his return home, between eleven and twelve o'clock, he learned that Mrs. Parry had not gone to her sister's, but had been spending the evening at Mr. Gunnell's, where the individual he alluded to was an inmate.—He regretted to say, that in a moment of great irritation, he went to the house, and insisted on Mrs. Parry leaving it, and accompanying him home, which she positively refused to do, and in which refusal she was sanctioned by most of the individuals composing the party. Mr. Gunnell then insisted upon his leaving the house, which he admitted he refused to do without being accompanied by his wife, and upon which Mr. Gunnell attempted to force him out. In the scuffle which ensued, the assault complained of, if any occurred, took place.

Mr. Rogers said, that under the peculiar circumstances of the case he should dismiss it, but that he would advise Mr. Parry not to go to the house again. He would also advise Mr. Gunnell to adopt a different line of conduct, and not sanction in any way the visits of Mrs. Parry, when he could not but see the consequences to which it might lead.

The parties then left the office.

A young man, named George Piggott, was remanded on Wednesday last from Queen-square Police Office for further examination, charged with embezzling upwards of 400l. from his employers, Messrs. Lyall and Son, of the Swan Brewery, Chelsea.

NATIVE FOREIGNERS.—Mrs. Sanger, the helpmate of a person of that name now under confinement at Plymouth, on suspicion of stealing two children, which he had been exhibiting in that town as two genuine Esquimaux, "neat as imported" by Captain Parry—eating raw flesh, drinking oil, and displaying in their gestures and actions a degree of savage ferocity altogether unnatural—applied on Thursday at Lambeth-street Police-office in order that her husband might be liberated from custody, as she could satisfy the Magistrate that the children were not stolen. She had hired them from a man named Thomas, then living in Slater's-court, Rosemary-lane, had stained their faces, "a genuine brown," and dressed them up in furs to represent foreigners—a practice by no means uncommon with "show-folks." She assured the Magistrate that the children had always been well fed, and treated with the greatest kindness, and their voracity for raw flesh came "naturally." In one instance, it appeared, that the little cannibles had actually devoured a rabbit alive! Mrs. Sanger's statement as to the "hiring and service" being corroborated by a respectable witness, the Magistrate said, if she could get an affidavit properly drawn up, stating all the circumstances which she had detailed, he would take it, when Mrs. Sanger made her exit to have it prepared.

CORONERS' INQUESTS.

THREE CHILDREN KILLED.—A distressing accident occurred on Saturday se'nnight, about two miles from Romsey. Two children of the name of Kelscy, and another named Bowles, the eldest about ten years of age, went to a sand-pit, for the purpose of filling their bags from an excavation in the pit, when the top foundered in, and killed all three. They were not discovered for upwards of two hours, when their parents, being alarmed at their not coming home, went in search of them, and found them quite dead. A coroner's inquest was held on Tuesday, when the Jury returned a verdict of—Accidental Death.

An inquisition was taken on Tuesday at Romsey, on the body of Aaron Thompson, a labourer in the employment of the Rev. Samuel Heathcote, of Penn Farm, in the New Forest, who was run over by a four-wheeled loaded waggon he was driving, his leg having accidentally been caught by the wheel, which passed over his thigh, and so dreadfully shattered the bone that amputation was deemed necessary. He did not survive the operation more than ten minutes. The Jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death; and immediateiy subscribed two guineas for the relief of the distressed widow and eight children, which has since been increased to 30l.

An inquest was held at the sign of the Red Lion, at Westbourne-green, Middlesex, on Tuesday, before Thomas Stirling, Esq., Coroner, on the body of Ann Owen, who was discovered in the Paddington Canal on Friday evening, by a man named Wellsted, who was passing over the bridge there. He heard the woman plunge into the water, and called for assistance: a young man named Messinger, who was passing near the spot, came up, and immediately got into the water with his clothes on, and after several attempts, succeeded in getting her out. The men immediately carried her to the Red Lion; she was apparently lifeless, but every attention being afforded her, she so far recovered as to be able to speak, and complain of being cold. Mr. Girdwood, of Devonshire-place, Edgeware-road, surgeon, was sent for, and he attended her, and by skilful treatment the first effects of the drowning were overcome, and he left her for the night. Next morning, finding her much better, he questioned her as to her late and present condition, and the unhappy creature give him the following account of herself:—She said, that she had been married, and that her husband and children were dead. That she had come out of Kent to London in great distress; and having lately been refused assistance by her friends, the poverty and wretchedness of her situation had driven her to prostitution, and in a state of despair she got drunk, and came to the resolution of destroying herself, and had cast herself into the canal for that purpose.

Mr. Grinwood found that she had been taking a great quantity of mercury, and that her lungs were dreadfully diseased; the means he took to restore her to health failed, and she died the next day.

The several witnesses having deposed to the above facts, and the Jury having viewed the body of the deseased, received the opinion of the surgeon, that she died of inflammation of the lungs, and they returned their verdict accordingly.

Monday evening an inquisition was taken at the Light Horseman, in Orange-court, near Leicester-square, on the body of a male infant, found drowned in the basin in the Green Park.

It appeared from the evidence of a boy named Mittingly, that on Sunday afternoon, about two o'clock, he was walking by the side of the basin, when he perceived something in the water resembling an image; he pulled it out, when it proved to be a male child, and wrapped in brown paper. The nose of the infant began to bleed, and it seemed to have been recently thrown in. The evidence of Mr. Gosnell, the surgeon, went to prove that he had no doubt the infant was born alive; it had a wound on the head and another over the eye; he had every reason to believe that the child's death was caused by the wounds and contusions on its head.

The Jury, after some consultation, returned a verdict of "Wilful Murder against some person or persons unknown."

EXTENSIVE FORGERIES.

On Monday last a young man of the name of Fresh, and of very respectable appearance and connexions, was examined before Thomas Charles and John Bradley, Esqrs., the Bailiffs of the borough of Cardiff, on a charge of having forged the names of Messrs. R. I. and A. Hill, ironmasters, at that place, to a bill for 410l. 8s. 6d. It appears that this young man had supplied the ironmongers at Cardiff and Newport with several cargoes of ore from Whitehaven, and having received large sums in payment, it is supposed that the knowledge he acquired of the signature of these gentlemen induced him to make the attempt for which he is now imprisoned. On Monday, the 6th instant, he took the bill in question to the banking establishment of Messrs. Guest, Lewis, and Co., at Cardiff, and the signature was so well imitated, that the junior clerk, the only one then present, did not hesitate to discount it. In the course of the evening the cashier observing something suspicious about the bill, determined upon showing it to the parties whose names it bore, and upon being shown to those gentlemen, they immediately pronounced it a forgery. A pursuit was then commenced, and on Wednesday evening the prisoner was apprehended at the Dowlass-inn, near Merthyr. On being taken, he begged to know if it was impossible to compromise; said he would give up all the money he had received for the bill, if his escape was permitted; that ambition and good-nature had been his ruin; and that if the charge was pressed, he was a dead man. At his very earnest solicitation, the cashier, accompanied by another clerk of Messrs. Guest, Lewis, and Co., crossed the country with him to Swansea, and upon his arrival there he requested that the object of their visit should not be mentioned to the gentlemen he had sent for (a Mr. Jones, a respectable solicitor of that place). When he came, the prisoner told him he had overdrawn his banking account at Cardiff, and was then under arrest for it, and requested he would immediately let him have what remained of the money* he had sent him on Monday. Mr. Jones told him it had been applied in the way he had directed—part of it had been sent to pay the workmen at a colliery at Lougher, and the remainder, a bill for 200l., had been paid into the banking-house of Messrs. Walters and Co. as a cover for a bill purporting to be drawn at Birmingham, which they had discounted for him, and which they afterwards doubted the genuineness of. The prisoner was then brought on to Cardiff, and on the Friday and Saturday his mind was so agitated, that the painful examination was spared him till the Monday morning, at which time the charge was regularly entered into, and the most corroborating proofs adduced of his having been the actual forger. During the investigation, it came out that this was not the only instance in which he had made use of the names of those gentlemen. On the day following the one on which he had discounted the bill at Cardiff, he got another for 548l. 10s. 6d. cashed at Merthyr; and it is very generally supposed, that bills of the same sort, altogether amounting to about 3,000l. are in circulation. Since his apprehension, a bill dated Birmingham, purporting to be drawn by Samuel Walker and Co. for 300l. has been declared a forgery by that firm. The facts being clearly proved, the magistrates immediately committed him to the county gaol till next Monday, on which day further charges will be brought forward.

* It may be necessary here to state, that on receiving the money at the Bank at Cardiff, he immediately forwarded it to Swansea, which accounts for his desire to go there.

MYSTERIOUS CIRCUMSTANCE, AND SUPPOSED MURDER.—Between eight and nine o'clock Thursday morning a day patrol named Aldred, perceived tracks of footsteps of blood near the pump in the Chequer-yard, Dowgate. He followed them down a narrow paved court leading to Thames-street, then down a passage leading to Allhallows-wharf. The mark of a right foot going towards the river, over which blood must have flowed plentifully, was clearly seen down the steps, and at the bottom of a large unloaded barge close to the wharf, in a corner at the aft part, he saw a great quantity of blood, at least two or three pounds, as well as on a tarpaulin and two oars, which lay at the bottom. He examined the cabins carefully, but there was no one on board, though it was evident, from the quantity of blood, that the wounded person had remained there some time. The most active inquiry produced no information, though it appears that a watchman noticed the tracks of blood as early as nine o'clock the night before, but took no trouble about the matter. As the barge did not arrive till six o'clock in the evening, this mysterious and apparently fatal occurrence, must have taken place between that period and nine o'clock. The only evidence yet obtained is that of a person who says, at one o'clock the preceding morning, he heard the cry of murder, attended by screams, near the passage leading to Allhallows wharf, but was afraid to go out.

CONFESSION OF A MURDER.—A man named Thorpe, one of a very extensive gang of depredators, recently sentenced to transportation at Salford, for felony, has made the following disclosure. He states, that himself and another man named Hinton were returning about twelve months ago from a public house at Bedford, where they had been stealing a pig, which they had in their possession, when they met a poor man named Benjamin Partington, on a bridge in Bedford, over the Duke's canal, and being afraid lest he would inform of them, they strangled him, and then threw him into the canal, where he was found. Accident was considered at that time to be the cause before the Jury at the inquest. Hilton has made his escape out of Astley, and no clue has yet been obtained of him. Thorpe declares that it has lain so heavy on his mind since he committed the murder, that he has had no comfort since.

The dress of the male peasantry in Sweden has always great uniformity; because the inhabitants of the same district always wear suits of one colour; and being restricted to the use of only three colours, blue, grey, and black, there is not the smallest diversity in their appearance. In some of the provinces where they all wear black clothes, their appearance is sombre in the extreme.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

COURT OF KING'S BENCH, YESTERDAY.

Mr. Scarlett obtained a rule against the proprietor of The John Bull newspaper, for a libel on Mr. C. H. Hartshorn, of St. John's College, Cambridge. The Learned Counsel stated, that the name of Mr. Hartshorn had been coupled with that of a gentleman named Heber at the Baths of Lucca, in a manner which could not be misunderstood. A letter had been forwarded to Mr. Heber, by a gentleman, informing him of the gross insinuations which appeared in that paper, and requesting his immediate return to England, to refute the calumny. This Mr. H. was not enabled, from some cause, to do; which drew from the John Bull the following sarcasms:—"Mr. Heber, the late Member for Oxford University, will not return to England this season;"—adding, "Mr. Heber's complaint, for which he remains on the continent, is stated to be occasioned by an over addiction to Hartshorn."

BLIGH v. BLIGH.—In the Consistory Court, on Saturday, a divorce was sought by the husband of Mrs. Bligh, for adultery committed by her with William Loug Tilney Wellesley. An objection was offered on the ground that the letters of Mr. Wellesley could not be admitted as evidence of the adulterous intercourse, their not having been distinctly proved to have been in the possession of the lady. Sir C. Robinson admitted the libel, observing there was sufficient proof of the adultery, independent of the objection. The specification was as satisfactory as it well could be—for the parties had been living together without the least reserve, and Mrs. B. had shaped the course of her travels invariably to meet her paramour. The letters were certainly most indelicate, but that could not be a ground for their being rejected as evidence.

We received yesterday the Allgemeine Zeitung to the 12th inst. It contains an article, dated Saxony, Oct. 28, which states that the question respecting the territory of Saxe Gotha and Altenburg, between the three Houses of Coburg, Meinengen, and Hildburghausen, is not yet decided; but adds, "there is every reason to believe that the Princes interested, all equally distinguished by their love of justice and moderation, will readily co-operate in putting an end to a difference, the continuation of which can produce no advantage, but rather loss and animosity.. A recent private letter holds out the most agreeable hopes of such a result."

According to the Oriental Spectator, not the best authority in the world, states, the Marquis Paluzzi, an Austrian Admiral, has paid Naxos a visit, and compelled the Authorities there to beg pardon for the insult offered, in April last, to the Imperial flag, on pain of seeing their town destroyed. This was refused by some of the inhabitants. Hostilities were in consequence commenced, by troops previously landed from the Austrian squadron, and the reparation demanded was at length made. The Austrian flag was re-hoisted—the Austrian Vice-Consul, who was formerly reported to have been murdered, was conducted to his house in form, and the Imperial troops re-embarked on the 30th August.

The unexpected arrival in Portugal of Lord Beresford, in an English Frigate, has already operated powerfully upon the minds of the people: his reception, when he landed, was most enthusiastic, and will no doubt tend greatly to the satisfaction of all the inhabitants, and again establish confidence in the brave troops who have so frequently distinguished themselves in the glorious battles fought under the Duke of Wellington, and his Lordship's banners.

An investigation having been instituted into the affair of contraband packages, placed among Mr. Secretary Canning's baggage on his return from France, it has been ascertained that the packages were placed on board at Boulogne, not without the concurrence of one of the suite of the Right Hon. Gentleman. Though without any address on the outside, one of them, on being opened, was found to contain a direction to a waiter at the Ship Tavern, at Dover. The servant and the waiter have been dismissed from their respective situations.—Courier.

A letter has been received at Plymouth from an officer of his Majesty's ship Aurora, Captain Austen, giving an account of the capture of a Spanish slave schooner, under Dutch colours, attended with most horrible circumstances. It appears that two officers, with a boat's crew, were sent on board the vessel to examine her papers. The captain represented her as a Dutch schooner, laden with sugar, and after searching a considerable time, nothing to the contrary was discovered. Something, however, having occurred to raise their suspicion, one of the officers descended into the hold, and, after some search, accidentally perceived the leg of a black man under a curtain, and, on pulling the curtain aside, more than 220 slaves were found in a dreadful state of starvation! They had been at sea, from the coast of Guinea, 47 days; and 60, out of 300 and odd, had died on the passage, together with three others the day after the capture. Only one day's provision was left in the schooner; and, on throwing a yam amongst them, they fought for it like hungry dogs!

MADRID, OCT. 31.—The famous monk of La Trappe, known under the name of the Trappist, a Guerilla Chief, who, during the campaign of 1823, commanded in Catalonia and Castile a corps of 1,000 or 1,500 men, died in his convent on the 9th of this month, whither he returned in 1824. Brother Anthony, which was the name of the Trappist, died in the most edifying manner. On the 8th current, in spite of the violence of his malady, he rose from his bed, and was carried to church, supported by two of his brethren; he there received the sacraments with pious fervour, and returning to his cell, and being laid upon his wooden bed (for the Trappists sleep only upon planks), he disposed himself for death. On the morning of the 9th, while they were about to place him upon a cross of ashes, according to the form in which the Trappists are laid, when dying he raised himself up, although he had then lost the use of speech, and was almost insensible, in a last effort to throw himself upon the cross, which had been traced for that purpose. About an hour and a half after making this effort, he expired.

ATROCIOUS INFANTICIDE.—A Bath paper states, that a frightful case of infanticide has just been perpetrated at the village of Bassilig, near Newport (Wales) by the aged father and mother of an infatuated daughter, victim of debauchery, who, about a fortnight since, after all her family had for some time past concealed her real state, under the presumption of dropsy, was delivered of a child at the cottage of her parents, and who, in concert with this wretched young mother, immediately, and with horrid barbarity, destroyed the child by various lacerations of the throat—keeping its mangled remains three days in the house, tied up in a bundle, till an opportunity occurred of passing it out of the window to the miserable paramour of the girl, a young married man with two children of his own, and who was employed as an under keeper on the contiguous estate of a gentleman of rank and property at Tredegar. This man was to have buried his dreadful burden; but, palsied with horror, and oppressed, as he afterwards averred, with an indecision which deprived him of all energy, he delayed the wretched task, and deposited the bundle in the carrion cart, among the provisions there collected for the dogs, under a shed near the kennel! An unusual motive happening to take one of the upper bailiffs into this shed on the ensuing morning, he was struck by the singularity of a coloured cotton appearing among the carrion, and horrified when a further search disclosed its contents. His inquiry respecting it of this man, produced such immediate and equivocating agitation, as led to the apprehension of all the wretched parties, and their committal, after a Coroner's verdict of "Wilful Murder" had been pronounced, to Monmouth gaol, for trial at the next Assizes: a surgeon having declared, after opening the little victim's body, and immersing the lungs in water, that it was born alive—the wounds in its throat sufficiently indicating the atrocious mode of its death.

THE PANTHERMANTICAN.—An Apparatus for Cookery in all its varieties; Brewing, Steaming, Washing, Hot Tepid and Vapour Baths, Hot Closets, Airing-rooms, Drying Clothes, Steaming Food for Cattle, Distillery Waters, Warming Clothes, Presses, and giving a constant supply of hot water, with every safe, economical, and comfortable accommodation that can be afforded by the transmission of heat in any direction required. These several purposes are effected by one small fire, without smoke, and with perfect cleanliness. The Panthermantican is daily exhibited in full operation at the Manufacturers and Patentees, Paynter and Hawke, 283, Strand, opposite Norfolk-street.

WORM and CONDITION BALLS for HORSES. They will effectually destroy every species of Worm to which Horses are subject, without requiring any alteration in Food or intermission of Labour. If these Balls be given two or three times a year, they supersede the use of other Medicines, as they not only improve the health and vigour of the Animal, but also purify the blood and materially add to the glossy appearance of the coat. The Proprietor, who is known as having himself kept a numerous Stud, has used them for Thirty Years with the most satisfactory results. They only require a trial to prove their efficacy. References can be given.—Sold in Packets at 9s. containing Nine Balls, with Directions for Use, by Courtney, Regent Circus, Oxford-street; Sanger, 150, Oxford-street; Smith, 29, Haymarket; Prout, 226, Strand; Rogers and Co. 93, Cheapside; Butler, corner of St. Paul's Church-yard; and Wilmott, 83, St. Margaret's Hill, Borough.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH.—MR. WM. BEACALL, and Mr. ROSE, Surgeon Dentists, 13, Newman-street, Oxford-street having with unremitting diligence long made the Science of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, where mechanical contrivance is requisite, their peculiar study, continues to supply the loss of Teeth, with Natural or Artificial, in a superior manner, without the least pain, from a single Tooth to a complete Set, at little more than one-half the usual charges. Teeth cleaned if ever so discoloured, and rendered white and beautiful, without pain or injury to the enamel. Extracting, Stopping, and every operation on the Teeth and Gums.—Attends at home from Ten till Four.

THE IMPROVED SILK HAT ON BEAVER.—For Cash only.
They are made to suit the natural form of the Head.
The Colour is permanent. For durability, shape, and quality, they are unrivalled..... } 15s.
HUGH FRANKS & Co.
Patentees of Improved Waterproof Hats,
Corner of Queen Street 70, CHEAPSIDE.

BEAVER-HATS at 17s. to 21s.; the latter of which are better worth the price than any ever offered to the Public, possessing lightness and durability, a short rich nap, warranted water-proof, and to keep their shape and colour in any climate. These are advantages commonly held out by the trade generally, few of which are found to exist on trial: the reason is obvious; one-half of the persons in the Hatting Business have never served their apprenticeship to it, consequently they know little or nothing about the manufacturing of a Hat. The above Hats are made upon the best principles, by workmen experienced in the trade, and do, in reality, possess what is necessary to constitute a good wearing Hat.

Silk Hats from 10s. to 15s. Perring Patent double-edged ditto, in a variety of shapes, wearing, at least twice as long as those made in the usual way, 17s. Gentlemen's Travelling and Forage Caps of every description, from 5s. to 10s. 6d. Ladies' and Children's Hats, Youths' and Boys' Hats, Fur-cloth, and Seal Caps, in the most extensive variety, at prices that cannot fail to meet the wishes of the ready-money purchaser, at PERRING'S, 113, Strand, observe, two doors west of the Adelphi Theatre.

THE LONDON and WESTMINSTER WINE and SPIRIT COMPANY, No. 16, STRAND, opposite St. Martin's Church, have constantly on Sale—

	Per Dozen.		Per Dozen
Port, Vintage 1820	27s to 30s	Bacellas	42s to 48s
Ditto, Crusted	36s to 42s	Claret, St. Julien	42s to 48s
Ditto, 5 to 8 years in bottle	48s to 56s	Ditto, Lafitte and Margaux	72s to 96s
Sherry, Pale and Brown	27s to 36s	Sparkling Champagne	72s to 84s
Ditto, Amontillado	42s to 48s	Ditto, and Creaming, of the first quality	90s to 96s
Cape, from	16s to 21s	St. Peray, dry and sparkling	63s to 72s
Madeira, West India	36s to 42s	Chablis	50s to 63s
Ditto, East India	48s to 60s	Hermitage, Red and White	72s to 84s
Teneriffe, Lisbon, Vidonia, and Mountain	30s to 36s	Moselle, Santerne, &c.	50s to 60s

Old Tom, Jamaica Rum, Cognac Brandy, Fern-tosh, &c. per imperial measure at reduced prices.—Bottled Stout, Cider, Perry, Burton and Edinburgh Ales.

☞ All Goods must be paid for on or before delivery.

Letters post paid, to be addressed William Godfree and Co. No. 16, Strand.

AT SIMPSON'S MEDICINE WAREHOUSE, No. 28, Henrietta-street, Covent-Garden, London, are sold
The ARABIAN VEGETABLE PILLS, 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. per Box, free from mercury or antimony, inestimable as a Family Medicine for the removal of Indigestion, Bilious and Nervous Complaints, and as a mild Aperient.
The ROYAL ELIXIR of LIFE, in Bottles of 11s. each, strengthens the Stomach, increases the Appetite, dispels Spasms and Gout in the Stomach, and prevents all the inconveniences produced by excess at table.
The ANTISEPTIC BOTANICAL TOOTH-POWDER, 2s. 9d. per Box, cleanses, whitens, and preserves the Teeth, and fastens them, even if loosened by mercury.
These articles are sold (by appointment) at all respectable Medicine Venders, Chemists, and Druggists, throughout the kingdom.
Superior Eau de Cologne and Swiss Eau d'Arquebusade, Mason's Convent Soap, &c. &c.

BURGESS' ESSENCE of ANCHOVIES, Warehouse, 107, STRAND, corner of Savoy Steps, London.—JOHN BURGESS and SON, being apprised of the numerous endeavours made by many persons to impose a spurious article for their make, feel it incumbent upon them to request the attention of the public, in purchasing what they conceive to be the ORIGINAL, to observe the Name and Address correspond with the above. The general appearance of the spurious descriptions will deceive the unguarded, and for their detection J. B. and Son submit the following caution:—Some are in appearance at first sight "Burgess' Essence of Anchovies;" others, "Burgis's," and many more without address.—JOHN BURGESS and SON having been many years honoured with such distinguished approbation, feel every sentiment of respect towards the public, and earnestly solicit them to inspect the labels previous to purchasing what they conceive to be of their make, which they hope will prevent many disappointments.
Burgess' New Sauce for general purposes having given such great satisfaction, continues to be prepared by them, and is recommended as a most useful and convenient sauce; will keep good in all climates.
Warehouse, 107, Strand, corner of the Savoy Steps.—The Original Fish-sauce Warehouse.

MOGUL, OR REAL CHETNA SAUCE.

C. HODGSON, ORIGINAL INVENTOR AND SOLE PROPRIETOR, is induced to caution his Friends and the Public against several spurious Sauces offered for sale, under the title of "MOGUL, or REAL CHETNA."
C. H. will feel obliged if each purchaser of the above delicious Sauce will please to observe the Label; which should be signed, "C. HODGSON," and the Cork, sealed, and impressed, "HODGSON'S MOGUL SAUCE," without which none can be genuine.
C. H. also begs to acquaint those who have not yet made a trial of this much approved Sauce, that the flavour will be found quite different, and far superior to any yet offered, for all kinds of Curries, Steaks, Stews, Chops, Hashes, Game, Grills, Broiled and Will Fowl, Cold Meat, and for enriching Gravies, &c., and feels assured, that when tasted, it will fully justify what he has above stated. To Merchants and East and West India Captains, it is stongly recommended, being warranted to retain its full flavour in any climate.
To be had at the manufactory, No. 68, Long Lane, Borough, London, at the Piazza Coffee-house, Covent-garden, the Queen's Head Tavern, Holborn, and at any of the principal Oilmen and Grocers in Town and Country.

A PLEASING APPEARANCE—The Grand Characteristic of Mrs. VINCENT'S CELEBRATED LOTION is—that it is no repellant, but gently and kindly opens the Pores of the Skin, extracting and dulcifying the Morbid Virus lurking in it. The most tender Lady or Child may at all times make use of it with the greatest safety. It removes every kind of Coarseness, Eruption, and unpleasant Appearance, and renders the Skin clear smooth, and transparent. Nothing has ever yet been found to compare to its effects and excellence; but its unexampled reputation having excited various Imitations, it is particularly recommended to ask for Mrs. Vincent's Gowland's Lotion, and see M. E. Vincent on the label of the genuine.—The following is a letter from Lady Catherine Lennox to Mrs. Vincent, the Proprietor:—
"Lady Catherine Lennox has the pleasure of stating that, by the use of two quart bottles of Mrs. Vincent's Gowland's Lotion, she is perfectly cured of a violent eruption upon her face and arms. She was recommended by her Physician to make use of the Lotion, which has exceeded her most sanguine expectations. Mrs. V. is at liberty to make use of her Name, as having experienced its healing virtues; and Lady Lennox will also recommend it as much as possible within the sphere of her acquaintance."
Sold, by appointment of Mrs. Vincent, at Bacon's, 150, Oxford-street; Butler's, 4, Cheapside; Newbery and Edwards's, St. Paul's; Sutton's, Bow Church Yard; Barclay's, Fleet Market; and by all the most respectable Perfumers and Dealers in Genuine Medicines in every Town in Europe, in Quarts, 8s. 6d.; Pints, 5s. 6d.; Half-pints, 2s. 9d.— To prevent Counterfeits, see M. E. VINCENT on the label of the genuine.

SCOTS! of foreign foes the dread,
Irish Lads! to conquest bred,
Cambrians bold! who never fled
The cause of liberty;
Ye, who guard a matchless dower,
England's glory, England's power,
At whose shout the nations cower,
Britons! List to me.
Ye, who, from the battle-plain,
Or the wild and warring main,
Greet your happy homes again,—
Lords of land and sea!
Ye, whom friendship's smiles surround,
At the board with welcome crown'd,—
Joyous souls! wherever found,—
List a while to me.
Where'er the gen'rous Wine, array'd,
Lends the social spirit aid,
Let the Opera Colonnade
Your emporium be.
For the treasures of the cask,
Cheapest, purest, ease or flask,
Ready cash is all I ask,—
Come, my boys, to me.
Haymarket. CHARLES WRIGHT.

THE BRITISH SPECIFIC, for re-producing and promoting the GROWTH of HAIR.—The principle of its operation is to cool and contract the pores which fire opened by a redundancy of heat, occasioning a relaxation of the roots, and render them incapable of retaining the hair; to counteract which nothing is better calculated than the British Specific, as, from its invigorating and oleaginous properties, it almost immediately arrests the falling off, and affords such effectual nourishment to the roots, that persons giving it a fair trial may assure themselves of its speedily restoring it, even where it has become completely bald, however long it may have been so, and, if grey, gradually to restore it to its natural colour. The superiority of this preparation (the invention of a medical man) derives additional recommendation from its being, unlike other compositions for the hair, so extremely clean and agreeable, that its application is a real pleasure, and is only requisite to be generally known to receive the preference of every article in use for similar purposes. To be had only of D. PEDEN, 209, Regent-street, and 15, Burlington Arcade, Piccadilly, in bottles, 6s. each, or cases of four bottles for 11., forward to order on receiving the amount, post paid.

IMPOSTURE UNMASKED.—The progress of Merit, although frequently assailed, is not impeded by Envy and Detraction. The aggression of ambuscade terminates in defeat; and conscious rectitude ultimately triumphs in the attainment of the grand object—public approbation. The test of experience is the guarantee of favour, and has established WARREN'S BLACKING in general estimation; of which there exists not a stronger proof than the tacit acknowledgment of a host of servile imitators, who surreptitiously obtrude on the unwary a spurious preparation as the genuine article, to the great disappointment of the unguarded purchaser, and manifest injury of WARREN, whose character and interest by this iniquitous system are equally subject to detriment. It becomes therefore an indispensable duty to CAUTION THE PUBLIC against the manœuvres of Unprincipled Venders, who having no character to lose, and stimulated by avarice in their nefarious pursuits, aim at the acquisition of money through any medium than that of honour! The original and matchless BLACKING bears on each bottle a short direction, with the signature
ROBERT WARREN
All others are counterfeits; and in many instances the imposition labels are artfully interlined with a different address, in very small characters, between the more conspicuous ones of "No. 30," and "STRAND." It is earnestly recommended to Shopkeepers and others who are deceived by base fabrications of WARREN'S BLACKING, to return the detected trash to the source whence it came, and expose the machinations of rascality to merited obloquy.
WARREN'S BLACKING is surpassingly brilliant;—it excludes damp; gives pliancy to the leather; retains its pristine virtue in all climates; and, combining elegance with comfort, is an article equally of indispensable fashion and utility. Sold by every respectable Vender in Town and Country, in bottles, at 6d. 1s 12d. and 18d. each.

NEW EDITION, THE TENTH, ENLARGED,
With Observations on the Danger of trusting to Nostrums, as an Internal Remedy for the Cure of Strictures. Illustrated by Cases. Price 3s.
PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS on STRICTURES of the URETHRA and RECTUM, recommending an improved system for their Treatment and Cure; illustrating its efficacy by numerous remarkable and highly important cases, in some of which, Strictures of from ten to twenty years duration have been totally removed in a few weeks, and its superiority thereby fully established over every other method hitherto practised. By C. B. COURTENAY, M.D. To which are added, Observations and Practical Comments on Gleet, Seminal Weakness, and the miseries occasioned by Self Abuse, for the cure of which a mode of treatment, the result of long and successful practice, and at once safe, speedy, and effectual, is adopted by the Author.
Printed for the Author, Robert-street, Adelphi; and published and sold by Jones and Sherwood, Paternoster-row; Onwhyn, 4, Catherine-street, Strand; Chapell, Royal Exchange; Marsh, 145, Oxford-street; Walker, 90, High Holborn; Chappell, 94, Pall Mall; Sutherland, 9, Carlton-street, Edinburgh; and may be had of all Booksellers.
"We earnestly recommend the cases related by Dr. Courtenay to the perusal of such of our readers as are afflicted with the complaints which the Author has made the subject of these Observations. Several instances are adduced of the recovery of perfect health from states which were considered hopeless by Practitioners of eminent talents, and very extensive experience. We entertain the highest opinion of Dr. Courtenay's professional skill, and congratulate him on his successful and judicious application to these severe and often fatal diseases."—European Magazine.

TO FAMILIES TRAVELLING, PROMENADING, and ENJOYING AQUATIC EXCURSIONS, &c. &c. are respectfully recommended the following Genuine Articles, which at this season of the Year are indispensable for the preservation of personal attraction;—
ROWLAND'S KALYDOR FOR THE COMPLEXION.
An inestimable, mild, and innocent production, powerfully efficacious in thoroughly exterminating Eruptions, Tan, Pimples, Freckles, Redness, and all Cutaneous Imperfections; producing a delicate White Skin, and a Juvenile Bloom to the Complexion; preserving it from the Heat of Summer.—In Travelling, Promenading, or enjoying Aquatic Excursions, it immediately allays the smarting irritability of the Skin, diffusing a Pleasing Coolness truly comfortable and refreshing; affords soothing relief to Ladies nursing their offspring; warranted perfectly innoxious for the most delicate Lady or Infant.
To Gentlemen after Shaving, it allays the irritating and smarting pain, and renders the Skin smooth and pleasant. Price 4s. 6d. and 8s. 6d. per bottle, duty included.
To Preserve the Human Hair, during Travelling, Bathing, and Violent Exercise, and to retain it in healthy vigour to the latest period of Life, is particularly recommended
ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL,
The first production of the age, and the Original and Genuine.
A Vegetable Production, possessing salubrious and wonderful nutritive properties, which prevents the Hair falling off, occasioned by excessive perspiration; is pre eminently successful in nourishing the Hair; preventing its falling off or turning grey, &c. and has the unequalled property of giving a most fascinating and delectable appearance to the Hair.—Price 3s. 6d.—7s.—10s. 6d. and 21s. per bottle. The distinguished sanction it has received from Royal and Illustrious Personages, in addition to the flattering testimonials transmitted of its efficacy, places this declaration above suspicion.
CAUTION.—In consequence of the high popularity of the above articles, Flagrant Impostors have made false statements, and counterfeited each; Copying Bills, Labels, and Bottles, which renders it indispensably necessary on purchasing, to ask for "ROWLAND'S," strictly observing that each Bottle of Rowland's Genuine Articles are enclosed in a Wrapper, Signed on the Label, in Red,
A. ROWLAND AND SON, 20, HATTON GARDEN.
Sold by appointment, by Mr. Hendrie, Perfumer, Titchborne-street; Mr Smith, Messrs. Gattie and Peirce, 57, Mr. Deleroix, 158, D. Rigge, 35, New Bond-street; Bayley and Blew, Cockspur-street; Berry and Lloyd, Greek-street; Mr. Sanger, 150, Oxford-street; Mr. Low, 330, Prout, 226, Strand; Butler, Chemist, 4, Cheapside; Barclay and Sons, 95, Fleet Market; Mr. Rigge, 65, Cheapside; Mr. Sutton, Bow Church-yard; Mr. Edwards, 66, and Messrs. Newberry, St. Paul's Church-yard; Mr. Burgess, Holborn-hill; Mr. Kennaby, Bartholomew-close; Messrs. Evans, Long-lane; Messrs. Dunn and Co. Hatton-Garden; and all respectable Medicine Venders, &c.

BIRTHS.—At Roehampton, the Right Hon. Lady Gifford, of a son.—On the 15th instant, at his house in James-street, Buckingham-gate, the Lady of Captain William Henry Smyth, R.N., of a daughter.—On the 16th inst. Mrs. Fitzwilliam of a daughter.

MARRIED.—At St. George's, Hanover-square, Lieut.-Col. James Tod, of the Hon. East India Company's service, to Julia Clutterbuck, of New Bridge-street.—At Great Yeldham, Essex, Capt. Dickens, 95th regiment, to Emily Charlotte Brackenbury.

DIED.—On the 7th September last, at Government-house, Dominica, aged 13, Wm. F. S. Nicolay, eldest son of his Excellency Major General Nicolay, Governor of that Colony.—At the same place, on the 1st of October last, Lieut. John Ker, of the Corps of Royal Engineers, aged 31.—At Newmarket, Mrs. Sarah Isaacson, daughter of J. Chitty, Esq. of the Middle Temple.—At Petersham, Surrey, Margaret, wife of the Rev. Dr. Sampson.—John Trotter, Esq. in his 69th year.—In Kensington-square, Colonel Harnage, in his 83th year.—At Friary, in Newark-upon-Trent, aged 73, the Rev. Wm. Rastall, A.M., Rector of Thorpe, Nottinghamshire.—On the 9th instant, aged 62, Mr. A. Adey, of Rawreth, Essex,—At Woodford-bridge, Mrs. Mary Moxon, widow of John Moxon, Esq.—At Hildersham Hall, Essex, aged 71, J. C. Middleton, Esq.—At Hickling, Nottinghamshire, Mrs. Jordan, relict of the late Rev. J. T. Jordan, many years Rector of that parish.

London: Printed by R. D. RICHARDS, No. 1, Blake-court, Catherine-street, and Published by him, at No. 343, Strand.

THE AGE.

" THE VERY AGE AND BODY OF THE TIME."

VOL. II. No. 81. SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 26, 1826. Price 7d.

THEATRE ROYAL, DRURY LANE.—On Monday next, the Tragedy of Douglas, with (7th time) Amphitryon; or, the Two Sosias: and (118th time) Der Freischutz.—Tuesday, The School for Scandal, and The White Lady.—Wednesday, The Castle of Andalusia, with The Knights of the Cross.—Thursday, John Buzby, with (51st time) The Drama of Faustus.—Friday, A favourite Comedy.—Saturday, will be revived, the popular Opera of Malvina, in which Miss Stephens will make her first appearance this season, as Malvina, and Mr. Braham, for the first time, as Oscar, after which will be presented, a new Farce called, White Lies; or, The Major and the Minor.

THEATRE ROYAL, ENGLISH OPERA-HOUSE.

MR. MATHEWS will be AT HOME To-morrow Evening, Nov. 27, with his TRIP to AMERICA.
On Thursday Mr. Mathews will give his TRIP to PARIS.

ADELPHI THEATRE, Strand.—On Monday, and during the Week, will be presented an entirely new Burletta, called Luke the Labourer! After which, a new comic Burletta, in one Act, called 23, John-street, Adelphi. After which, Zulima and Zamourine! To conclude with To Fry Shots.—Doors open at 6, commence ½ before 7.

ARGYLL ROOMS.—Mr. P. H. D'EGVILLE has the honour to inform the Nobility and Gentry, that his Academy has commenced for the Season.—Further particulars to be had of Mr. D'Egville, at his residence No. 4, Percy-street, Bedford-square, and at the Music Saloon, at the above Rooms.

KING'S THEATRE, Tuesday, December 5th.
ANNUNCIATION.

Bond-street men! of order high,
Brummel who in taste outvie,
Flow'r of western chivalry!
Seek the Masquerade.

Templers! quit your ancient nooks,
Leave your undigested books,
To report fair maiden's looks,
At the Masquerade!

Ladies bright! from bow'r and hall,
Ye, who hold all hearts in thrall,
List to love and pleasure's call,
Seek the Masquerade!

Mirth and wit, in happiest vein,
'Mid the flow of proud Champagne,
There, our master-spirits, reign:
Join the Masquerade!

The Wines (of the first quality) to be supplied by Mr. CHARLES WRIGHT, of the Opera Colonnade. Tickets may be had, and Boxes engaged for the occasion, as heretofore, of Mr. Ebers, 27, Old Bond-street.

DIORAMA, REGENT'S PARK.—The two Views now exhibiting, are The Interior of Rosslyn Chapel, painted by Mons. Daguere, and a View of the City of Rouen, taken from Mount St. Catherine's, painted by Mons. Bouton, with various effects of light and shade, producing the most extraordinary illusion to the spectators.

N.B. Fine weather is not essential for seeing the present Views, as the appearance of sunshine is produced with equal effect on the most cloudy day. The Dimension of each picture is 70 feet by 50—Open daily from 10 till 4 o'clock.

THEATRES ROYAL DRURY LANE and COVENT-GARDEN.—Private Boxes left by the night in the very best situations, at SAMS'S, opposite St. James's Palace.—A Free Admission for the Season to Covent Garden £5 15s. and Drury-lane.

DRURY-LANE, COVENT-GARDEN, ADELPHI.
Private Boxes at the Theatres, per Season or per Night,
In the choicest situations, both for hearing and for sight;
Inviolable Sanctums—Terms, the lowest ever made,
Enquire of CHARLES WRIGHT,—via, Opera Colonnade.
N. B. Champagne Imperial, the Cheapest in the Trade.

Has room for Measurement Goods only.

FOR CALCUTTA, the fine, new, first class Ship, St. LEONARD, JOHN RUTHERFORD, Commander. Burthen 352 Tons. Lying in the West India Export Dock. Has good accommodations for Passengers. For Freight or Passage apply to Messrs. Hunter and Co. 59, Old Broad-street; or to Buckles, Bagster, and Buchanan, 33, Mark-lane.

BARBARY WALL-FLOWER SNUFF, to be had only of the Importer, GEORGE EDLIN, Importer of Foreign Snuffs and Segars, No. 6, Aldgate, corner of Saracen's Head Inn, and of his Agent, Mr. J. Nohil, 81, Lower Grosvenor-street, Bond-street.

GENUINE EAU DE COLOGNE.—Just received direct from Messrs. R. E. and M. Farina, of Cologne, a fresh supply of this celebrated article, of the finest quality, and to be had of J. C. Hose, late Kinnard, 309, High Holborn, two doors from Chancery-lane.

REMOVAL.—Mr. CLARK, DENTIST, begs leave to acquaint his Friends, that he has REMOVED from Grosvenor-street, to 35, Bruton-street, Berkeley-square.

A CHOICE of 390 Satin, Turc, Tobine, Lavantine, and Gros de Naple CLOAKS, trimmed and lined with various descriptions of Fur, at CARDEN and CO. 118, Oxford-street. Also 14,000 yards of rich Gros de Naples, Duceapes, &c. from 2s. 4d to 3s. 2d. per yard.

CHOCOLATE of the finest Quality, 3s. per lb.—COCOA-NUTS, the finest Grenada, 2s. per lb.—The Public are respectfully informed they may now purchase the above-mentioned Articles, warranted of the finest quality, at MARSHALL and Co.'s Tea and Coffee Warehouse, No. 12, Southampton-street, Strand. Also, Turkey Coffee, warranted of the finest Quality, at 3s. per lb.

THE IMPROVED SILK HAT ON BEAVER.—
For Cash only.
They are made to suit the natural form of the Head.
The Colour is permanent. For durability, shape, and quality, they are unrivalled..... } 15s.
HUGH FRANKS & Co.
Patentees of Improved Waterproof Hats,
Corner of Queen Street 70, CHEAPSIDE.

BEAVER HATS, of superior Qualities at One Pound, a good wearing one, ditto, for 17s. Waterproof.
Good SILK HATS from 10s. to 15s, Patent Double-edged ditto, 17s.
Gentlemen's Travelling and Forage CAPS, all sorts, from 5s. to 10s. 6d.
The whole of the above, on trial, will speak for themselves.
Ladies', Girls', and Boys' HATS and CAPS in great variety, at PERRING'S, Observer 1 413, Strand, two doors west of the Adelphi Theatre.

WORM and CONDITION BALLS for HORSES. They will effectually destroy every species of Worm to which Horses are subject, without requiring any alteration in Food or intermission of Labour. If these Balls be given two or three times a year, they supersede the use of other Medicines, as they not only improve the health and vigour of the Animal, but also purify the blood and materially add to the glossy appearance of the coat. The Proprietor, who is known as having himself kept a numerous Stud, has used them for Thirty Years with the most satisfactory results. They only require a trial to prove their efficacy. References can be given.—Sold in Packets at 9s, containing Nine Balls, with Directions for Use, by Courtney, Regent Circus, Oxford-street; Sanger, 150, Oxford-street; Smith, 29, Haymarket; Pront, 226, Strand; Rogers and Co. 93, Cheapside; Butler, corner of St. Paul's Church-yard; and Wilmott, 83, St. Margaret's Hill, Borough.

BRADBERRY'S PATENT SPECTACLES, upon unerring principles, to preserve the sight to extreme old age. It is necessary to caution the public against the use of improper Spectacles, as their effects prove injurious, instead of beneficial to the eye. The unremitted and anxious study Mr. BRADBERRY has paid to his glasses for upwards of 30 years, has called forth the most distinguished approbation of their merit from the medical profession, and from many thousands of persons of the highest rank and respectability.—To be had only at 28, Holles-street, the first door out of Oxford-street, next to the large Fruiterer's at the corner, facing Hanover-square, and at no other place in the United Kingdom.—Orders from the country immediately attended to. Removed from 332, Oxford-street.

"LA VESTALE."—On Monday, December 4, will be published, the Songs, Duets, Trios, &c. &c. in SPONTINI'S "LA VESTALE," with the Poetry by Signor Pistrucci, as sung at the King's Theatre; and the Nobility and Gentry, subscribers to the Opera, are respectfully acquainted that this is the only correct edition of the Opera.
GOULDING and D'ALMAINE, 20, Soho-square.

PIANOFORTES.—W. WALTER, (from Mr. Tomkison's) begs to recommend to those in want of a very superior Instrument, to inspect his stock of Grand, Cabinet, Cottage, and Square Pianos, which are warranted to be of the best description, at unusually low prices, and where the most decided satisfaction is not given, will be exchanged at the Manufactory, 118, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury.

"BUY A BROOM QUADRILLES" for 1827, New Figures by an eminent Professor. Containing Horn's admired Air "Buy a Broom," "Horn of the Chace," and "Evening Sun," "All the Town is Cherry Ripe," and the elegant Quadrille "Etrick and Teviotdale," with the favourite "Adelaide Waltz" by T. Cooke, arranged for the Pianoforte by G.W. Maddison.
Published (only) by Williams, 2, Strand, and sold by every music-seller in the kingdom, price 3s.
Ladies desiring this celebrated set of Quadrilles, to avoid false copies, should be particular in sending for the set, with Horn's "Buy a Broom," of which a third edition of the Song is just published.

ROSSINI'S LAST NEW OPERA.—Just published by Willis and Co. 55, St. James-street (opposite Jermyn-street), London, and 7, Westmoreland-street, Dublin.
The Overture, Songs, Duets, Trios, and Chorusses, with English and French words of "Rossini's New Opera." "The Siege of Corinth," which is now performing at the 'Academie Royale," with distinguished applause.
Willis and Co. beg to acquaint the public that the Opera of "The Siege of Corinth," and that of Maometto 2nds (also by Rossini) are two distinct works, and that the "Siege of Corinth" cannot be published by any other house in this country than that of J. Willis and Co. whose exclusive property it is.
A few of the pieces in this Opera are selected by the Composer from his Opera Maometto, but with considerable alterations and additions, and which can only be published by Willis and Co.
 In the Press, Labarre's Fantasia, and Variations for the Harp, on the favourite Greek March in Rossini's new Opera "The Siege of Corinth;" also, Labarre and de Beriot's Fantasia for the Harp and Violin, on the celebrated Chorus sung during the deposition of the Greek Flag in the above highly popular Opera.

THE BROOM GIRL'S SONG.—A great assortment of Guitars by the most approved Makers, for sale or on hire MORI & LAVENU, 28, New Bond-street.
Gentle Ladies fare ye well, arranged as a Song, Duet, or Trio, set to one of their national Melodies, sung by them in the streets of London, the poetry by Wm. Balls, price 2s.
Buona Sera Mio Signore, from Rossini's Opera of Il Barbiere di Seviglia, arranged for the Pianoforte by Augs. Meves, price 3s.
The Beauties of Winter's Opera of the Oracle, arranged for the Pianoforte; with flute and violoncello accompaniments ad lib. by Pio Cianchettini, price 4s.
The White Lady Quadrilles, taken from Boildieu's Opera, La Dame Blanche, arranged for the Pianoforte, by M. Duuvis, price 3s.
Weber's two Grand Overtures, the Jubilee, and Ruler of the Spirits, arranged as Quintetts by Masi, price 12s.

The Braes of Ballandyne	Miss Paton.	Pio Cianchettini
Bonny Brave Scotland	Ditto.	R. Gow
O where's the harm of a little kiss	Mad. Vestris.	J. Watson
Ah Maiden Gardez vous	Ditto.	Ditto
Blue Bonnets are over the borders	Mr. Braham	Cianchettini
Young Mary	Mr. Phillips	Dr. Arne.

NEW MUSIC.—HARP AND PIANO-FORTE.
MEYER'S "MEDEA in CORINTO," with Flute and Violoncello (ad lib.) by N. C. Bochsa, in Books..... 10 6
——— Overture to ditto, ditto, ditto..... 6 0
Overture to "Caliph of Bagdad" ditto, ditto..... 5 0
Airs from "Il Crociato in Egitto," by W. H. Steil, in two Books (each) 7 6
——— Bishop's "Aladdin," by N. C. Bochsa..... 7 0
PIANO FORTE.
Boieldieu's "La Dame Blanche," and as Duets, in Books, by J. F. Burrowe's.....(each) 4 0
Rossini's "Semiramide" ditto, ditto.....(each) 4 0
Meyer's "Medea in Corinto," by C. Dumon, in two Books.....(each) 4 0
Bishop's "Buy a Broom," Rondo, by T. A. Rawlings..... 2 6
——— "In my Bower a Lady Weeps," ditto, by G. Kiallmark.... 2 6
VOCAL.
"Buy a Broom!" sung by Miss Love, composed by H. R. Bishop.... 2 0
 The Public are respectfully cautioned that the original "Buy a Broom," is the one composed by H. R. Bishop.
"The Bonnie Lassie," composed by Mrs. Miles..... 2 0
"No longer the Song of the Lark," composed by J. Barnett..... 1 6
"Jane, the Mountain's Pride," ditto..... 1 6
"The King! God bless Him!" sung and composed by Mr. Braham.. 2 0
GOULDING and D'ALMAINE, 20, Soho-square.
Cabinet, Cottage, and Square Piano-fortes for Sale or Hire.

Just Published,
THE OVERTURE, arranged for Pianoforte, by F. Latour, 2s. 6d.
The Music in the admired popular Comic Opera, the Two Horses of Grenada, now performing at the Theatre-Royal, Drury-Lane, composed by J. Augustine Wade, Esq.
Where is the spring time of youth and of pleasure?—sung by Mrs. Geesin.
Ask not my Love—Bravura—ditto, ditto.
Love was once a little boy. "Second Edition," sung by Miss Graddon.
Oh, ne'er with such bliss—ditto, ditto.
Oh, young maiden hearts beware—ditto, ditto.
If love's dream he o'er—sung by Mr. Braham.
Oh, do you remember the first time I met you—ditto, ditto.
Up, comrades, up—ditto, ditto.
Away, light vows of woman's love—sung by Mr. Horn.
For love and beauty's sake—ditto, ditto.
Love has its own sweet pleasures—Duet—sung by Mrs. Geesin and Miss Graddon.
I've wandered in dreams to the moonlight's home—Duet—sung by Mrs. Geesin and Mr. Braham.
Serenades are pleasant things—Comic duet—sung by Miss Cubitt and Mr Harley.
In what new home does love now dwell—Echo duet—sung by Mr. Horn and Miss Graddon.
Fair moon, on tow'r and tree, and stream—Duet—sung by Mrs. Geesin and Mr. Braham.
With love and thee—Duet—sung by Mrs. Geesin and Mr. Braham.
To be had of F. T. LATOUR, Musicseller to his Majesty, 50, New Bond-street.

MADAME VESTRIS'S NEW SONGS.
Just Published, by MAYHEW and Co., 17, Bond-street, London,
THE Bavarian Girl's Song, "BUY A BROOM," with an original and finely executed Portrait of Madame Vestris (in Character) by Gauci, arranged expressly for her, by Alexander Lee.—Price 2s.

New Songs.	Singers.	Composers.
Love's Labour Lost	Mad. Vestris,	Alex. Lee
Smiles and Tears	Ditto,	Ditto
England the Home of the World	Mr. Braham,	J. Barnett
Fancy dipp'd her Pen in Dew	Miss Stephens,	J. Whittaker
Light Guitar (4th edition)	Mad. Vestris,	J. Barnett
A Voice whispered softly, Dear Mary	Miss Love,	Geo. Perry
Yes, I will leave the festive Scene, in answer to the Light Guitar	Miss Paton,	J. Barnett
"Not a Drum was heard," the celebrated Ode on the Death of Sir John Moore	Mr. Sapio,	Ditto
Love's Delightful Hour	Mr. Pearman,	J. Emdin
The Queen of Bonnie Lasses	Mr. Braham,	J. Hart
The Joys of Liberty and Wine	Mr. Bedford,	Ditto
Paul Pry, "Hope I don't intrude," comic, with the original Portrait of Mr. Liston	Mr. Liston	Pigwiggin
The General Election, comic, written by Charles Dibdin the younger, with an illustration by Cruikshank	Mr. Mathews,	J. Barnett
Maiden, heedful be, The Token Flowers	Mad. Vestris,	Ditto
The Moorish Maiden	Mrs. Ashe,	J. Emdin
You ask a song, you bid me sing	Mr. Broadhurst,	G. Kiallmark
I left the Bowl in search of Love	Mr. Phillips,	Mr. Phillips.

THE WIDOW of an Officer is anxious to receive a LADY to BOARD and LODGE with her. The Terms will be moderate as she will be expected to furnish her own Bedroom. The distance is three miles from the Bridges on the Surrey side. The most respectable references will be given and required. Letters with real name and address directed to Mrs. Fenton, West Smithfield, London.

On Monday, in 3 vols. post 8vo.
ALMACK'S. A Novel.
"Nothing extenuate, nor set down aught in malice."
Printing for SAUNDERS and OTLEY, Public Library, Conduit-street.

Just Published, price 1s. 6d.
HUMBUG!!! a Poem, exposing the political and fashionable bubbles of the day, by WILLIAM ELLIOTT.
"There are many living characters who have their share of obloquy, and others, who receive the meed of praise from the author of Humbug. We confess ourselves astonished at the ability displayed by Mr. Elliott in this poem. For true thought, happy ridicule, and stern contempt and exposure, Humbug is properly and highly distinguished."—LITERARY CHRONICLE.
Also, by the same Author, price 5s.
The NUN, published for the Author, by ROWE and WALLER, 49, Fleet-street.

NEW PUBLICATIONS,
Printed for HENRY COLBURN, 8, New Burlington-street.
A SECOND SERIES of TALES by the O'HARA FAMILY; comprising The Nowlans, and Peter of the Castle, in 3 vols. post 8vo. price 31s. 6d.
2. TALES of a VOYAGER. Stories told at Sea during a Voyage recently made to the Arctic Ocean. Interspersed with curious anecdotes, and a Narrative of the various Adventures and Perils of the Voyage. In 3 vols. post 8vo. 28s. 6d.
3. The TOR HILL. By the Author of "Brambletye House." 3 vols. post 8vo. £1 11s. 6d.
And in a few days, embellished with plates,
4. PERSONAL NARRATIVE of a JOURNEY from INDIA to ENGLAND by Bussorah, Bagdad, the Ruins of Babylon, Curdistan, the Court of Persia, the western Shore of the Caspian Sea, Astrakhan, Nishney Novogorod, Moscow and St. Petersburgh, in the year 1824. By Captain the Hon. GEO. KEPPEL.
5. TRUCKLEBOROUGH HALL. A Novel.

Diego—Mungo, can you be honest!
Mungo—Vat you give me, Massa?
In 3 vols. post 8vo. 28s. 6d.

NEW MUSIC.—Just published at the ROYAL HARMONIC INSTITUTION, Argyll Rooms, 246, Regent-street, the Songs, Duets, &c. in The ORACLE, composed by WINTER, and newly arranged by W. HAWES.

	s.	d.
"Overture"	2	6
"The rosy dawn hath driven," Chorus.	5	0
"When battles conch is sounding," sung by Mr. Atkins	2	0
"The trumpet first is sounded," sung by Mr. Thorn	2	0
"We Maidens mark me," sung by Miss Goward,	1	6
"All hail to the God of our Fathers," Chorus	2	0
"Now by love and peace invited," Sestett and Chorus	3	6
"Oh when thine eye is throwing," Duet, Miss Paton and Sapio	2	6
"All powerful Sun," sung by Mr. Phillips	2	0
"There was a time ere sorrow," sung by Miss Paton	1	6
"Between my hopes and fears suspended," Duet, by Miss Paton and Phillips	2	6
"When will peace relieve my breast?" sung by Miss Hamilton	1	6
"How the plaguing varlet teases," Duet, by Miss Goward and Thorn	2	6
"We hail thee Lord of Light," Finale, 1st Act	10	0
"Tho' we all can feel thy sorrow," Quartett and Chorus	3	6
"In what sad hour," Trio	3	0
"Oh heavens! the thought is frightful," Duet.	2	6
"Hast never mark'd the flower," Song, Miss Boden	1	6
"The Maid who'd wish to slumber," Quartett	2	6
"The Gloomy terrors of the grave," Scena, Mr. Sapio	2	6
"Farewell, yet not for ever," Quartett	4	0
"The evening is descending," Finale	10	0

The Overture to "OBERON," arranged for a full Orchestra, by C. M. Weber, price 10s.
A New TREATISE on THOROUGH BASS, or the art of playing from a figured Bass, with examples, &c. &c. by Dr. Crotch.
Burrows's Selection of Airs from Weber's Opera of Oberon, arranged for the Piano Forte, with Flute ad lib, in four books, each 4s.
I'VE BEEN ROAMING—Arranged by T. A. Rawlings, as a Rondo for the Pianoforte.
BOCHSA'S Select Airs from the Oracle, for the Harp, and Pianoforte, with Flute and Violin accompaniments, 10s. 6d.; also the Overture to the above, arranged as above, price 5s.
DEATH FETCH.—The music in this admired and popular Opera, composed by C. E. Horn.
I'VE BEEN ROAMING.—Cavatina, sung by Madame Vestris, by C. E. Horn, price 2s.
OBERON.—The music in this popular Romantic and Fairy Opera, composed by the late Carl Maria Von Weber.
 The Proprietors of the ROYAL HARMONIC INSTITUTION beg most respectfully to acquaint the Public, that the only correct copies of the Opera now performing at the English Opera House, called "THE ORACLE," are published by them, and that all other copies are spurious and an Invasion of their rights.
N.B. The whole of the Music in the New Opera of PEVERIL OF THE PEAK, by C. E. Horn, now performing with such enthusiastic applause at the Theatre Royal Covent Garden, is now published, and may be had separate.

SCOTS! of foreign foes the dread,
Irish Lads! to conquest bred,
Cambrians bold! who never fled
The cause of liberty;

Ye, who guard a matchless dower,
England's glory, England's power,
At whose shout the nations cower,
Britons! List to me.

Ye, who, from the battle-plain,
Or the wild and warring main,
Greet your happy homes again,—
Lords of land and sea!

Ye, whom friendship's smiles surround,
At the board with welcome crown'd,—
Joyous souls! wherever found.—
List a while to me.

Where'er the gen'rous Wine, array'd,
Lends the social spirit aid,
Let the Opera Colonnade
Your emporium be.

For the treasures of the cask,
Cheapest, purest, ease or flask,
Ready cash is all I ask,—
Come, my boys, to me.

Haymarket. CHARLES WRIGHT.

THE LONDON and WESTMINSTER WINE and SPIRIT COMPANY, No. 16, STRAND, opposite St. Martin's Church, have constantly on Sale—

	Per Dozen.		Per Dozen.
Port, Vintage 1820	27s to 30s	Bucellas	42s to 48s
Ditto, Crusted	36s to 42s	Claret, St. Julien	42s to 48s
Ditto, 5 to 8 years in bottle	48s to 56s	Ditto, Lafitte and Margaux	72s to 96s
Sherry, Pale and Brown	27s to 36s	Sparkling Champagne	72s to 84s
Ditto, Amontillado	42s to 48s	Ditto, and Creaming, of the first quality	90s to 96s
Cape, from	16s to 24s	St. Peray, dry and sparkling	63s to 72s
Madeira, West India	36s to 42s	Chablis	50s to 63s
Ditto, East India	48s to 60s	Hermitage, Red and White	72s to 84s
Teneriffe, Lisbon, Vidonia, and Mountain	30s to 36s	Moselle, Santerne, &c.	50s to 60s

Old Tom, Jamaica Rum, Cognac Brandy, Fern-tosh, &c. per imperial measure at reduced prices.—Bottled Stout, Cider, Perry, Barton and Edinburgh Ales.
☞ All Goods must be paid for on or before delivery.
Letters post paid, to be addressed William Godfree and Co. No. 16, Strand.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

THE KING'S VISIT TO PARLIAMENT.

At an early hour on Tuesday morning, Parliament-street, and all the avenues leading to the House of Lords, were filled with persons anxious to obtain a view of his Majesty, or at least of the procession in which he was to be so important a personage. On no former occasion do we recollect greater anxiety having been manifested. In the House of Lords itself, the portion appropriated for the use of the public was crowded to excess, and the heat was very oppressive; considering that up to a late hour none of the tickets of admission were issued, such a crowd could hardly have been expected. The preparations for the reception of his Majesty were not commenced until Monday night, and at a late hour on Tuesday morning they were still incomplete. The delay in commencing them seems to have been occasioned by the uncertainty as to whether the King, from the state of his health, would, or would not, open the Parliament in person. At a few minutes before two o'clock, the firing of the guns announced the arrival of the King at the House of Lords, and at about five minutes before two his Majesty took his seat upon the Throne. The cheering from the outside, when his Majesty alighted from his carriage, was quite enthusiastic. The reception which he experienced must be very gratifying to his feelings—certainly if any thing had been wanting to prove that the popularity of his Majesty had in no degree abated, it would be found in the welcome which he obtained from the numerous, and, generally speaking, respectable crowd assembled to witness his visit to Parliament.

The King being seated, and the buz which his entrance had occasioned having subsided, his Majesty commenced his speech.

[For which see our fourth page.]

During and previous to the delivery of the Speech, great efforts were made by persons below the bar to obtain a full view of his Majesty, in order to judge from his looks of the state of his health. He looked paler and thinner than he was a few months ago; but, making due allowance for the colours of his robes, which would have the natural effect of giving an appearance of paleness to his countenance, it may perhaps be fairly said, that he neither looks better nor worse than he did on his last visit to Parliament.

On leaving the House, his Majesty was again welcomed with enthusiastic shouts, and with the strongest demonstrations of respect from the persons immediately near the Royal carriage. His Majesty acknowledged them with his usual urbanity.

The greatest order was maintained both on the visit and return of his Majesty.

Amendments were moved in both Houses; that in the House of Peers by Lord King, and that in the House of Commons by Mr. J. Hume.

It had been very industriously circulated, that Ministers did not intend originating any measure on the subject of the Corn Laws. This has been met by an unequivocal declaration on the part of Lord Liverpool and Mr. Canning, that, shortly after the Christmas recess, they will submit their opinions to the House as to the ultimate arrangement of the Corn Laws, and propose such measures with regard to the Corn Laws, as, in their opinion, will be beneficial to the country, and conciliatory towards all the great interests involved in the determination of the question.

The pledge, thus publicly given, will, we know, be faithfully redeemed at the proper time; and, till that period shall arrive, we hope the question will not be unnecessarily discussed.

Mr. Brougham, as usual, indulged in a most dismal picture of the state of the country, and threw out some mysterious hints on the subject of certain extravagant votes shortly to be called for. What he alluded to he did not think it necessary to specify; but, from part of his argument, it would seem, that his plan for providing employment for the poor, would be at once to suspend all public works now in progress. Unfinished churches, and palaces without roofs, he supposes, would be deemed by persons of taste like himself, the finest ornaments which could be furnished, under existing circumstances, to the capital of the British empire. There may be many, for aught we know, of his way of thinking; but the overseers of the parishes, to whom his notable scheme for relieving distress would send hundreds of industrious artisans with their wives and families for bread, cannot be of the number.

Mr. Canning replied to the Honourable and Learned Gentleman by declaring that he was not aware of the extravagant grants which the Honourable Gentleman anticipated were about to be submitted to Parliament. He could not see that by arresting public works now in progress, and throwing a multitude of persons engaged on them out of bread, would materially diminish the evil now but too generally felt—want of employment. He, however, admitted, in its fullest extent, the importance of economy, not that economy which, by saving a few thousands this year, will occasion the loss of millions in the next; but an economy founded on that wise policy, which, assuming "prevention to be better than cure," ensures the continuance of peace, by letting it be seen, wherever it may be necessary, such a hint should be conveyed, that we are not unprepared for war. He shewed, that by acting on this principle, we had contributed to save Portugal from aggression on the part of Spain; and, while on this subject, he gave a frank explanation of the nature of our engagements with the former country. These bind us to defend Portugal in the event of her territory being entered by any invading army, but do not require us to interfere between any parties among the Portuguese themselves who may struggle for ascendancy. Into the details of those estimates which will shortly come before the House, Mr. Canning declared himself willing to enter, point by point, anxious that every expense may be saved, which is not inseparable from the high and commanding station which we now hold among nations, and which the interests, not less than the dignity, of the country, make it imperative to Ministers to maintain.

HOUSE OF LORDS, Wednesday, Nov. 22.

The Duke of Dorset, the Marquis of Conyngham, and Lords Redesdale, Lake, and Clinton, were sworn.

There being no business before the House, their Lordships adjourned at four o'clock.

THURSDAY, Nov. 23.

This day, at 12 o'clock, the House, represented by the Lord Chancellor, the mover and seconder of the Address, and other Noble Lords, proceeded to present the Address voted on Tuesday to his Majesty. The House previously adjourned till the following day.

FRIDAY, Nov. 24.

ANTI-ROMAN CATHOLIC PETITIONS.

The LORD CHANCELLOR said he held a petition signed by the inhabitants of Wootten, in the county of Kent. They prayed the Lords in their wisdom would adopt measures to support the Church and the Protestant Constitution, so happily established at the Reformation. "I tender this petition," said the Lord Chancellor, "It is respectful to the House. I make no speech on the subject. I think it is strictly consistent with Parliamentary usage to present petitions without speeches. Without a speech, it is known to be the petition of the individuals who sign it, and not the petition of the individual who presents it."

The petition was read, and laid on the table.

Lord KING presented a petition from a parish in Devon against the Roman Catholic claims. The Noble Lord observed on the occasion, that he was surprised it had not been put into the hands of a Right Rev. Prelate then present, or the Noble and Learned Lord. He generally presented petitions in favour of the Catholics. The Rev. Gentleman who had signed the petition was a great Controvertist, no douht, and it appeared he had been hard run for signatures. Twenty-seven persons had been applied to for signatures, and it was remarkable that no less than thirteen out of that number could not write.

The Bishop of EXETER said, the House might suppose, from the observations of the Noble Lord, that the petition had proceeded from the Reverend Gentleman alluded to, but the fact was, it came from the parish. They made application to the gentleman, who was the minister of the parish, to draw up their petition, and all he did was to put it in terms respectful to the House. With respect to the signatures, the Right Reverend Prelate said he did not feel that contempt for the unlettered labouring classes which the Noble Lord seemed to express. He thought their crosses entitled to respect in a petition supporting their civil and religious rights. The Rev. Gentleman, he could assure their Lordships, was not a great Controvertist; he was not a disputant, but a most respectable person.

The petition was then read, and laid on the table.

Lord KING then said he had many petitions from Manchester, and other parts of the kingdom, on the subject of the Corn Laws, but as he did not see any but opposers of those laws, he could not then read the petitions.

The House then adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, Wednesday, Nov. 22.

Several Petitions on private bills were presented and read.

Mr. Alderman WOOD moved for a return of the number of acres of land in Great Britain which had been occupied in the culture of hops between July, 1825, and July, 1826; also for returns of the duty paid on hops, of the quantities of hops exported from Great Britain to Ireland, of the number of retail brewers and licensed victuallers, of the quantities of beer brewed on which duty had been paid, and for other returns relative to the sale of beer within the same period.—Ordered.

Lord FOLKESTONE presented a petition from the inhabitants of Bristol, praying for the abolition of tithes in the district in which they resided, and also for the abolition of tithes generally.

Sir JOHN BRYDGES presented a petition from Wotton, in Kent, praying that no further concessions might be made to the Roman Catholics.

Sir THOMAS LETHBRIDGE presented a petition from the inhabitants of Abdey, Burderop, and Ilminster, in the county of Somerset, praying that the House would not permit any alteration in the existing corn laws, without the fullest investigation into all the circumstances connected with them. He had, he said, in his possession many petitions on this subject, but from what had been said last night by the Right Hon. Secretary of State for Foreign affairs, who had intimated the intention of his Majesty's Government to bring the subject before the House shortly after the adjournment, he should, for the present, withhold them. For the same reason, and as the Right Hon. Gentleman had said that he would not be drawn into any discussion at present, he would forbear from making any of the observations which forced themselves upon his mind at this moment. He did not ask the members of his Majesty's Government to state what was their intention on any part of it; but feeling, as he did, the importance of the subject, he could not help insisting upon the necessity (although he believed that his Majesty's Ministers were as much convinced of that necessity as he was himself) of obtaining all the information that could be come at respecting the operation of the corn laws as they at present existed. If any inconvenience had been experienced, which, however, he very much doubted, because the laws which existed had not been put into execution, it could only be satisfactorily ascertained by means of the inquiry to which he now alluded.

Lord ALTHORP thought it was too much for Ministers to call a Parliament in November, and to tell them that they had a plan to propose, but which they did not intend to bring forward until February. He was aware that it might be inconvenient to them to disclose that plan at present; but, however inconvenient it might be, their duty left them no alternative but to do so. It was disagreeable to him, and he had no doubt it was equally so to many other Honourable Members, to be in town at this season; but, being here, he should think he failed in his duty if he neglected to press upon the Government the necessity of their speedily expressing their opinion on the subject of the Corn Laws.

The petition was then brought up and read, and ordered to be printed.

Lord ALTHORP rose, in pursuance of a motion which he last night submitted to the House, to renew the resolutions passed on the 26th of May last, relating to bribery and corruption in returning Members to serve in Parliament. The Noble Lord said that it might be necessary for him, before he moved the resolutions referred to, to explain to the House, for the information of those new Members who were not in Parliament when those resolutions were adopted, the nature of the measure which he meant to submit to their notice. The opponents of those resolutions had conceded to their supporters the necessity of examining into every case where gross corruption had been proved to have prevailed, and they even went so far as to declare that where a case of gross and scandalous corruption had been proved against any particular borough, they would be prepared to disfranchise such borough.—(Hear, hear.) Yet, notwithstanding such a declaration, it was quite notorious that many boroughs wherein gross and open corruption was practised, were, not as yet, disfranchised. Hence the necessity for the introduction of those resolutions which were proposed at the close of the last Session of Parliament, and which he (Lord Althorp) had now the honour to call upon this House to sanction by its vote. Very few cases of corruption, comparatively speaking, had been brought before the House, although every one seemed to agree in the necessity of putting a stop to a system which was admitted on all hands to be a very great grievance. Cases of individual corruption were so general, that proofs were difficult to be brought forward to establish particular facts. From the arrangements of the House, and the present law relating to bribery and corruption, the facilities to prosecute inquiry were not sufficiently open, owing to the expense attending on such inquiries, and other considerations, which combined to produce that effect. The chief object, therefore, of those resolutions was to point out a proper tribunal, where petitions complaining of acts of bribery and corruption in the return of members to serve in Parliament should be fully examined. There were no new powers proposed by those resolutions; it was only sought to point out a mode by which old powers should be acted on. It was perfectly competent to him as a member of that House, to present a petition against a particular case of bribery and corruption, but he wished the House to adopt some mode by which that petition should undergo impartial examination. He believed that the adoption of the resolutions of last session had produced a beneficial effect during the late elections, and he felt perfectly convinced that if those resolutions were adopted by the present Parliament, many peculiar cases of corruption that most required reform would be brought to light, and considerable good would thereby be effected. (Hear, hear.) Certainly, if the measure should be rejected by those whom he had now the honour to address, after having been agreed to last Session, he should say it would be a most extraordinary thing, and he could not bring himself to believe that such could be the fact. The Noble Lord then sat down amid the applause of his friends, having first read the following resolutions:—

"That whenever a petition shall be presented to this house, after the expiration of the time allowed for presenting petitions against the validity of the return of any member of this house, by any person or persons affirming that at any time, within 18 calendar months previous to presenting the said petition, general bribery and corruption has been practised, for the purpose of procuring the election or return of any member or members to serve in Parliament for any borough, cinque port, or place, and it shall appear to this House that such petitions contain allegations sufficiently specific to require further investigation, this House will appoint a day and hour for taking the said petition into consideration, so that the space of 20 days shall intervene between the day on which the said petition shall have been presented and the day appointed by this House for taking the same into consideration; and notice of such day and hour shall be inserted, by order of the Speaker, in one of the two next London Gazettes, and shall also be sent by him to the returning officer of the borough, cinque port, or place, to which such petition shall relate; and a true copy of such notice shall by such returning officer be affixed to the door of the town-hall or parish-church nearest to the place where the election of members to serve in Parliament for such borough, cinque-port, or place, has been usually held.

"That at the hour appointed by the House for taking such petition into consideration, this House will proceed to appoint a select committee to inquire into the truth of the matters contained in the said petition, and report the result of their inquiry to this House; and such select committee shall consist of 13 members, to be chosen by lot, according to the directions, provisions, rules, and regulations, and subject to the exemptions for choosing 49 members by lot, contained in the various acts to regulate the trials of controverted elections or returns of members to serve in Parliament, so far as they are applicable thereto, and of two other members to be appointed by this House, out of the members then present in this House; and the 13 members so chosen by lot, together with the two members to be so appointed by this House, shall be a select committee, and shall inquire into and try the matter of such petition, and shall report their opinion thereof, together with the evidence given before them, to this House.

"That this House will not appoint such select committee so long as any trial is pending before a select committee of this House to try the validity of the return, or so long as a day is named in the orders of this House for appointing a select committee to try the validity of the return, for the borough, cinque-port, or place, to which the petition refers."

On the first resolution being put by the Speaker,

Mr. C. W. WYNN rose and said, that he certainly did not mean to differ on general principles from the Noble Lord who had just sat down, although he should feel it his duty to object to the mode which he proposed to carry his resolutions into effect. By the first resolution it was proposed, that at any time, within 18 calendar months, (hear, hear,) any person was at liberty, without incurring the slightest expense, and without risking the least responsibility (hear, hear,) to advance charges of bribery and corruption that perhaps were totally unfounded and unjust, while the members against whom they were directed must defend themselves at their own expense. (Hear, hear.) Now he would ask, was that just or reasonable? Was it fair that the accusing party should be relieved from all expense attending proceedings, and from all the consequences of the responsibility which he himself incurred, while the accused was thrown on his defence, which he must conduct at his own expense? These were amongst the principal objections to the resolutions of the Noble Lord that occurred to him (Mr. Wynn) at that moment. If the resolutions passed, he would certainly object to that part of them which took from the petitioner any responsibility which his own acts might draw upon him, and he should also object to the expenses incurred in the prosecution of petitions being paid by the public. For himself and his right hon. colleagues he begged to say, that His Majesty's ministers had no other feeling in the present discussion than that the House should act according to its wisdom and discretion.

Mr. BATLEY, the member for Beverley, said that he quite agreed with what had fallen from the Right Hon. Gent. who last addressed the House, and he conceived that the statute law afforded a sufficient provision against bribery and corruption in Parliament, without having recourse to the resolutions proposed by the Noble Lord.

Colonel DAVIES regretted that the Right Hon. Gent. (Mr. Wynn) had placed himself in opposition to the motion, because it showed what would be the fate of it; but if ever there was a time when it became the House to endeavour to infuse a spirit into the representation, it was the present.

Mr. Secretary PEEL observed, that the House was called upon to affirm or to reject resolutions which went to create a new offence, and a new mode of trial. The end might be a very proper one; but it would be infinitely better that this new jurisdiction should be sanctioned by a bill, rather than by a resolution of the House of Commons. (Hear.) Such a mode of proceeding would admit of consideration and discussion in the different stages, whereby errors might be corrected, and improvements introduced. But the House were called upon to-night by the Noble Lord to adopt at once resolutions upon a subject of infinite importance. Did not the Noble Lord think it a serious matter that a committee of the House should be empowered to administer an oath? (Hear.) Was it not a serious matter that a common informer might keep in his pocket for seventeen months and twenty-eight days, a petition affecting the interests of individuals and of corporate bodies? (hear, hear)—that at the end of seventeen months he might, if he pleased, prefer his charge against a corporation or an individual to the House, without expense to himself, and without one word being inserted in the resolutions as to a penalty in case of vexatious or malicious charges? (Hear, hear.) He must, therefore, oppose not the principle, but the expediency, of the resolutions. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. SCALLETT doubted whether the resolutions of the Noble Lord would meet all the objects he had in view, and felt that there was some weight in the arguments urged on the other side of the House; though the Right Hon. Gentleman (Mr. Peel) had taken rather a partial view of the question. He felt that there was some force in the objections urged against the resolutions; but, if his Noble Friend would withdraw them (hear, hear), they might be modified so as to meet with general concurrence. (Hear, hear.) But if he persisted in pressing them, he (Mr. Scarlett) would feel some difficulty in opposing them, not because he entirely approved of them, but because he considered them as a step towards a very desirable object. (Hear, hear.) (Cries of "Withdraw, withdraw.")

Mr. PALLMER (Member for Surrey) could not but express his gratitude to the Noble Lord with whom these resolutions originated last Session, as well as to the Noble Lord who now brought them forward. He rejoiced to see the aristocracy of the country stepping forth to advocate the rights and privileges of the people; but much as he felt indebted to the Noble Lords, his humble opinion was, that the real, effective, and complete removal of the obstructions which impeded the free exercise of the elective franchise, could only be effected by the interference of a wise and liberal administration; and he hoped to see the day when, instead of objections being brought forward, as on the present occasion, to such measures, his Majesty's Ministers would take into consideration the inconveniences that do obstruct the exercise of the elective franchise, and give to such a measure the weight that an administration alone could give. Whilst employed on measures giving freedom to conscience and to commerce, it was not beneath them to give freedom to the constitution. The Hon. Member sat down amidst loud cheers.

Lord ALTHORP observed, that as it seemed to be the general wish of the House that the resolutions, in their present state, should be withdrawn, he would, with the consent of the House, withdraw them.

The motion was then, by leave, withdrawn.

ELECTION OF DR. SOUTHEY.

The SPEAKER informed the House, that he had received a letter from Dr. R. Southey, one of the members returned to serve in the present Parliament, which he would read to the House.

"Sir,—I take the earliest opportunity of informing you, that while absent on the continent I have been without my knowledge elected to serve in Parliament for the borough of Downton. It now becomes my duty to say that I am not qualified to take a seat there, inasmuch as I am not possessed of the estate required by the statute of the 9th of Queen Anne.

(Signed) "R. SOUTHEY."

[The course pursued with regard to this letter was rendered inaudible, by a number of Members leaving the House at the same time. An order, however, is thought to have been given to record it in the Journals.]

REPORT OF THE ADDRESS.

Mr. Liddell, Mr. Win, and two other Members, appeared at the bar with the report of the address. It was brought up and read a first and second time.

On the question that it be agreed to,

Mr. WESTERN rose for the purpose of submitting an amendment by way of addition. This he felt necessary, not that he was hostile to any part of the address, but that he might fill up an omission on a question most important to the country. The address adverted to the distressed situation of the manufacturing districts, but it omitted to state in any manner the condition of the agriculturists, which he must say, though not as depressed as the manufacturers, were still labouring under severe pressure, arising from the burdens to which they were subject.

"Your Majesty's faithful Commons feel it their duty to represent to your Majesty, and at the same time to express their deep regret, that the agricultural classes, though not suffering in the degree they did a few years ago, particularly in the year 1822, are yet in a state of severe pressure, from the heavy burdens to which they are exposed. They will endeavour to trace the causes which have led to the dreadful alternations of prosperity and prosperity and adversity which all the industrious classes have experienced since the termination of the war in the year 1815, and they trust they shall discover the means of restoring the agriculture, commerce, and manufactures of the country to the same condition of progressive improvement in which they were steadily advancing antecedent to that period."

Mr. LEYCESTER rose to second the amendment. He could not but regret that the subject of the corn laws had not formed a part of the speech, the more particularly on account of the strange delusion and fallacious hope which filled the public mind on that subject.

Sir J. SEBRIGHT opposed the amendment, not because he was indifferent to the interests of the landlords, but because he was convinced that the introduction of the subject at the present moment was extremely ill-timed.

Mr. WESTERN said that he would not take the sense of the House on the addition, but he would allow it to be put, as he was anxious to have it placed on record.

The question was then put, and the addition was negatived; after which, the original address was put and carried. It was then ordered that the address be presented to His Majesty by the whole House, and that such members as were of the Privy Council do wait on His Majesty to know when His Majesty may be graciously pleased to receive it.

Mr. HUSKISSON presented copies of the order of Council of the 1st of September, 1826, for the admission of certain species of foreign grain into the ports of the United Kingdom. He then gave notice, that he would on Friday next move that the House do resolve itself into a committee of the whole House to consider of the same.

The House then adjourned at half-past Seven o'Clock.

THURSDAY, Nov. 23.

The House met at half-past two o'clock; soon after which, the Speaker, accompanied by a considerable number of members, proceeded to present to His Majesty the Address in answer to his gracious Speech from the throne. The House then adjourned until Friday.

FRIDAY, Nov. 24.

ADDRESS TO HIS MAJESTY.

The SPEAKER took the Chair a quarter before four o'clock, and immediately proceeded to inform the House, that the House had presented to his Majesty the Address agreed to by that House, to which his Majesty had been pleased to return the following most gracious answer:—

"Gentlemen of the House of Commons, I thank you for this loyal and dutiful Address, and rely with the utmost confidence upon your affectionate support in my endeavours to uphold the honour and interest of this country, to cultivate the blessings of peace abroad, and to promote the happiness of all classes of my people."

On the motion of Mr. Huskisson, the House resoved itself into a Committee on the Orders in Council for the admission of foreign grain.

Mr. HUSKISSON said it became his duty, on the part of his Majesty's Government, to explain the causes which induced Government to act without the authority of law, by advising his Majesty to issue the order in Council, dated the 1st Sept. for the admission of foreign corn, and to claim from Parliament an indemnity for their conduct on that occasion. At the time the order in Council was issued, there never was a harvest in which the crop of barley, oats, beans, and peas was more deficient. The prices, instead of falling at the approach of the new crops, was rising in every market in the kingdom. On the 17th of July, the average price of oats was 24s. 11d., and on the 4th of August it was 27s. 2d., giving an average exceeding the importation price. Government waited till the 1st of September, when the return for oats was above 30s., and on the 7th of September it was 30s. 7d.; and in some parts of the country, where oatmeal forms the food of the people, the price was above 40s. From this great advance, and the scarcity of food for cattle, and still more from the accounts of Lancashire and Ireland, which spoke almost in terms of despair of the potato crop, it did appear indispensably necessary that the ports should be opened for the admission of the greatest possible quantity of oats, and beans, and peas. Had he waited till the law would open the ports on the 15th of November, we should have exposed the country to a most alarming rise of prices in the food of the people. The Ministers that, in such a state of things, could hesitate between the breaking a law and the wants of the people, would have been unworthy of the confidence of Parliament or the country. Ministers, in breaking the law, endeavoured to preserve its spirit; they had, therefore, advised that the parties importing corn under the order in Council, should enter into engagements to pay the duties therein mentioned, or any other duties Parliament should impose; and this would be necessary to be provided for by the Act now to be passed. There might be some difference of opinion on the amount of those duties. But the case was one which called on us to give every encouragement to importation, the oat crop being not more than half an average crop. It was evident that the price would have gone on increasing, and that on the 15th of November the average would be above thirty shillings, at which the importing parties would be enabled to take them out of bond at the duty of 4d.; if, therefore, the duty had been placed above 2s. very little oats would have been brought into the market; even at that duty a considerable quantity had been bonded, in the expectation of being taken out in November at the nominal duty of fourpence; and he hoped Parliament would continue the low duty till the 15th day of February, which he was confident would not cause an importation more than was necessary for the wants of the people. (Hear, hear!) The Hon. Gentleman moved his first resolutions, to indemnify those who advised the issuing the Order in Council, dated the 1st September, for the admission of foreign grain; and a second resolution, that the same rate of duties should be continued till the 15th of February next.

Sir E. KNATCHBULL said, he thought a case had been made out fully sufficient to justify the act of his Majesty's Government, for which he thought the whole country were indebted to them; and he hoped the ready acquiescence of the agricultural interests in the measure would vindicate them from the unkind imputation of seeking their own private interests at the expence of those of the other classes of the people. Whatever they might feel for themselves, they must know and feel that every thing must give way to the necessity of providing food for the people; and when the great question came before the House, he hoped their conduct would prove that they did not seek their own interests in opposition to those of the rest of the community. He thought the Government were wise, in abstaining from the discussion of that question till it was regularly brought before the House, and he thought the country gentlemen would act prudently in following their example.

WOOLRIDGE WHITMORE said, he should not violate the rule of prudence pointed out by Government, and recommended by the Hon. Baronet, by discussing the general question; but he would call on the house to consider what that law must be which it was admitted to be wise and necessary to violate three times in three years, and to ask them whether such a law should be allowed to disgrace the Statute Book. (Hear.) The conduct of Government was certainly forced on them by the circumstances in which they were placed, and were fully entitled to indemnification for what they had done.

Colonel WOOD was willing to forbear discussion on the great corn question, if it was forborne by all others; but if the country Gentlemen were deprived of the means of defending themselves, he thought that they should not be held up as the oppressors of the people of this country.

Mr. WARBURTON hoped all discussion on the general question would be delayed till the subject was brought regularly before the House; but in the mean time he hoped the House of Commons would not be used as the place for insulting the landed Gentlemen of England. All must approve of the conduct of Ministers in opening the ports.

Colonel TORRENS said, there could be but one opinion on the necessity of the conduct of Ministers. In reply to the observations of the Hon. Gentleman who spoke last, he must say, that he had heard it said that manufacturers were endeavouring to become Lords and Gentlemen, by pulling down the Lords and Gentlemen who were in possession of the soil of the country. He was confident that all the interests of the State were bound up together, and none could long continue to prosper at the expence of the others. Such an attempt would be the last act of desperate strength pulling down the pillars of the temple to its own destruction.

Mr. Wodehouse, Mr. Western, and Mr. Calcraft, expressed their concurrence in the necessity for issuing the Order in Council, and would forbear discussing the general question till it was brought before the House after the Christmas recess.

Mr. Alderman WAITHMAN thought it was the duty of every Member of Parliament to consider himself the representative of the whole country, and with this feeling he should come to the discussion of the Corn Question. He was glad to see the perfect unanimity that prevailed in approving the conduct of Ministers in opening the ports.

Mr. HUME said the whole country wished to have the Corn question decided immediately, and unless Ministers had some reason for the postponement, he thought they should not delay the consideration of the question. Much had been said of the agricultural interest and the manufacturing interest, but not one word of the interest of the people; that was the interest he wished to see considered.

The Resolutions being put from the Chair, were agreed to.—The House resumed.

Sir George Clerk brought up the Report, which was ordered to be taken into consideration on Monday next.

Mr. CANNING moved that the House should resolve itself into a Committee of Supply.

Mr. BROGDEN said, he wished to address a few words on the peculiar situation in which he was placed. He was made the victim of unfounded calumnies, propagated by anonymous calumniators. By those who had investigated his conduct, he had been not only acquitted, but applauded. He offered himself for the strictest examination, and was confident that the result must satisfy every honourable mind that the charges made against him were wholly unfounded. Till that examination took place, however, he could not reconcile it to his own feelings, nor to the respect he owed the House, to undertake the honourable duties they had so often called him to fulfil.

Mr. CANNING said there could be but one feeling in the House on the delicacy of feeling, and propriety of conduct of the Hon. Gentleman. All must regret that there should be any cause to deprive them of the services of the Hon. Gentleman, and he thought the Hon. Alderman, who had expressed his intention of bringing forward a charge against the Hon. Gentleman, should not delay affording him the opportunity of vindication; and when he should be freed from all moral taint, he was confident the House would feel great pleasure in restoring him to the situation which he had so long filled to their perfect satisfaction. In the mean time, he should propose a gentleman to the situation who would feel more satisfaction in resigning it to his predecessor, than in his own appointment. The Right Hon. Gent. moved, that Sir Alexander Grant do take the Chair.

Mr. Alderman WAITHMAN said he was placed in a most painful situation. He was not the Hon. Gentleman's accuser. He had no personal feeling against him. He had seen more of the bubble speculations of the City than many others, and had watched them more narrowly. During the year he was Chief Magistrate of London, applications were made to him to allow his name to be used in bubble schemes of every description, and had he consented, be might have put thousands in his pocket. He thought it suspicious for any Member of the House to have his name connected with so many of them as the Hon. Member's had been; and, had it been the Speaker's, he should have opposed his election. He should bring the subject before the House, and hoped it would be fully investigated.

The Motion was then agreed to.

The House resolved itself into a Committee, and

Sir A. GRANT took the Chair, and said, the Right Hon. Secretary had done him justice in saying that he should feel more pleasure in resigning the Chair to his predecessor than even in the honour of being appointed to fill it.

The House resumed, and adjourned at eight o'clock to Monday.

NEW WRITS FOR ELECTIONS.—Within 15 days after the first sitting of Parliament, the time legally required, new writs will be issued by the Speaker for the following places:—The University of Cambridge, in the room of Sir John Copley, appointed Master of the Rolls; for Harwich, in the room of N. Tindal, Esq., appointed Solicitor-General; for Bandon, in the room of Lord Duncannon, elected for another place, Kilkenny county; for Cork city, in the room of the late member, C. H. Hutchinson, Esq., deceased.

Mrs. Liddell, the wife of the mover of the Address, Mrs. Wilmot Horton, Lady Georgiana Bathurst, and other ladies, were in the roof over the House of Commons, to listen to the debates on Tuesday night.

The House of Commons has resolved, for the regulation of its private business during the present session of Parliament, that it will not receive any petition for a private bill after Friday, the 23d of February, 1827; that no first reading of a private bill shall take place after the 1st of March; and that it will not receive any report of committees on such private bills after the 14th of May, 1827.

The new Satirical Novel, to be called "Truckleborough Hall," is said to be a sort of political "Tremaine." The vacillations, conversions, &c. of a Parliament "Man of Refinement," will no doubt afford to an able novelist, abundant opportunities for the display of his talents.—Morning Chronicle.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

GREECE.

Sir Frederick Adam, Lord High Commissioner of the Ionian Islands, arrived at Geneva the beginning of this month on his way to Milan. While at Geneva he declared, that the number of Greek women and children who sought refuge in the Islands was so great that it became impossible to provide for their wants, unless the British Parliament voted a subsidy for that purpose. A Roman Journal contains some interesting intelligence from Greece. It states that the National Assembly continues its sittings. It also asserts that Ibrahim Pacha was shut up in Tripolizza, and was so distrustful of the Ottoman Government, that he had refused an interview with the Captain Pacha to consult on the plan of a new campaign. The advantages stated to have been obtained by Colonel Fabvier and Karaiskaki, and the raising of the siege of Athens, are said to be confirmed, and the Egyptian troops, who garrison Modon and Navarino, are represented to be nearly starving for want of provisions. If these accounts are correct, the Greek cause is by no means as bad as the Oriental Spectator insinuates. The state of Constantinople is such as to occupy the whole attention of the Sultan and his Ministers, which is a favourable circumstance for the Greeks, whose affairs are improving.

The contents of the French Papers to the 22d instant are very unimportant. The only article of interest among them is a communication from the Governor of Old Castile to the Regent of Royal Audiences in Spain, in which a complaint is made, in the name of the King, that he had been represented as having recognized the Constitutional Government of Lisbon. He repels this charge with great indignation, and proclaims himself pure of the offence, declaring, in the most explicit terms, "that he has not recognized the said Constitutional Government, and that it is with surprise he had learned the official announcement of a recognition which had never taken place, and was, consequently, false." His Catholic Majesty does not say positively that he will not recognize the Portuguese Charter; but it is evident that he will use every means of intrigue and chicanery to delay that recognition, in the hope that something may arise meantime to obviate the necessity of taking a step so mortifying and contrary to his feelings.

Advices to the 29th of July were received yesterday from Valparaiso. They announce the meeting of the Congress of Chile, which had declared itself in favour of a federal system of Government, in consequence of which General Freire had resigned his functions as Supreme Director. A Constitution was to be framed, and an Executive Chief nominated as President of the Republic The finances of Chile are said to be in a state of great exhaustion The Chilian squadron, which was purchased for the service of Buenos Ayres, was at Valparaiso, waiting only for a fair wind to proceed to destination. Bullion was very scarce at Valparaiso, in consequence of the number of bills returned from England.

THE KING'S COURT.

On Thursday his Majesty held a Court at St. James's Palace, which was very numerously attended. At one o'clock the Lord Chancellor, in his state robes, together with Earl Cornwallis and Lord Colville, mover and seconder of the Address in the House of Peers; Viscount Melville, the Earl of Liverpool, Earl of Harrowby, Earl of Westmorland, Earl Shaftesbury, &c., were introduced to his Majesty, who was dressed in a Field Marshal's uniform, on the new throne in the drawing room. The Duke of Clarence, in his full naval uniform, stood on the right of the King on the throne.

The new Spanish Minister delivered his credentials as Ambassador from the King of Spain. The Sheriffs of London and Middlesex were introduced to present a petition from the City of London, praying for an improvement of the Tower stairs, which the King was graciously pleased to direct Mr. Secretary Peel to refer to his Attorney and Solicitor-Generals. The Duke of Devonshire was presented to his Majesty on his return from his special mission o the Court of Petersburgh; Prince Lieven, to deliver the insignia of the Order of the Garter worn by the late Emperor Alexander; Sir Charles Stuart, on his return from his embassy to the Emperor of the Brazils; the Earl of Winchilsea, to deliver the insignia of the Order of the Garter worn by the late Earl, his uncle; Viscount Strangford, upon his return from St. Petersburgh; and Earl Clanwilliam, upon his return from his embassy to the King of Prussia. His Majesty then held a Council, for the purpose of receiving the Recorder of London's report of the convicts capitally convicted at the Old Bailey at the September Sessions, when the whole of them were reported to the King in Council, with the exception of one, whose case is referred to the report of the October Sessions. After the Council, his Majesty gave audiences to the Lord Chancellor, the Earl of Liverpool, Mr. Canning, and Mr. Peel.

We understand that a most important change is about to take place in the mode of supplying provisions for the navy, and that, instead of making contracts, as heretofore, with individuals, for that purpose, the whole business is in future to be undertaken by the Government itself, i. e. by the Commissioners of the Navy Board. There is good reason to infer, notwithstanding the above, that the making up of salted beef will be discontinued at Deptford, as it is considered it may be had cheaper and better in Ireland.—Limerick Chronicle.

By the arrivals here from India this week, we do not hear of the payment of the second instalment of the Burmese war tribute money; nor had any more of the troops arrived at either of the Presidencies, from Rangoon. The King of Ava holds himself in high tone before his subjects, assuring them, with perfect complaisance, that out of his elemency he has suffered the war to be stopped, and has allowed the strangers to depart; and knowing them to be exceedingly poor, he has graciously given them a few lacs of rupees, to prevent them from doing further acts of rapacity and violence.—Hampshire Telegraph.

A WIFE SELLING HER HUSBAND'S BODY.—The neighbourhood of Gulston-street, Brick-lane, has been for some days past in a state of extreme ferment and excitation, by the surreptitious removal of the remains of Mr. Pusford, a tobacconist, and old inhabitant of that spot, and a report, which was but too well founded, that the widow had disposed of it to some surgeons for dissection. Her house was immediately beset, the windows broken, and no doubt the threats of the indignant multitude would have been carried into effect, but for the interference of the police, when the heartless wretch was taken under their protection, and carried to Lambeth-street Office, where the circumstances underwent investigation on Thursday last. She stated, that her husband died on Monday, and two Gentlemen called requesting permission to open the body, which she refused till she had consulted her son; they came again in the evening, when she still refused; that they sent for some gin, and shortly after their departure she was informed that a coach had driven from her door, after a large parcel had been put into it from her house, and she then suspected that the corpse had been removed; she called one of the lodgers, and on examining the coffin, she found her fears verified, and that the body was stolen. She persisted in her innocence; but one of the officers assured the Magistrates that it was impossible to have moved the body without her knowledge, and his opinion was confirmed by the difference in Mrs. Pusford's story, and that of an old woman in the house, her confidante, which left no doubt in the minds of all who heard the statement of the body having been disposed of with the knowledge of the wife. The Magistrate, however, having no jurisdiction discharged her; and on leaving the office, she was saluted with the yells of thousands, from whose violence it required the united strength of the establishment to protect her. She was subsequently removed in a carriage.

TUESDAY'S GAZETTE.

LORD CHAMBERLAIN'S OFFICE, Nov. 21.—Notice is hereby given, that his Majesty will hold a Levee at St. James's Palace, on Monday next, the 27th inst. at two o'clock.

INSOLVENTS.

J. STOKES, Peckham printer.
R. ROWE, St. Thomas the Apostle, Devonshire, grocer.

BANKRUPTCY SUPERSEDED.

J. EVELEIGH, Manchester, hat-lining cutter.

BANKRUPTS.

W. GWATKIN, Chepstow, carpenter.——G. HAWES and J. B. MOORE, Bridge House-place, Southwark, hardwaremen.——J. DRAKE, Havell-street, Camberwell, merchant.——J. WHITE, Newport Market, vintner.——J. S. BLAND, Charlotte-street, Rathbone-place, haberdasher.——T. CROSS, Southampton-street, Covent-garden, coach-master.——R. STRACHAN, Lime-street, ship-broker.——R. WEAVER, Plymouth, linen-draper.——R. RAGG, Liverpool, lace-manufacturer.——H. SMITH, Bristol, scrivener.——WILLIAM WOOD, Salford, Lancashire, innkeeper.——S. SHAW, Newcastle-under-Lyme, maltster.——J. MATTHEWS, Bristol, collar-maker.——G. SHEPHERD, J. PANTRY, and W. MASSEY, Barnesley, Yorkshire, linen-manufacturers.——J. EVELEIGH, Manchester, merchant.——G. KERRIDGE, Beccles, Suffolk, grocer.——J. DENTITH, Liverpool, silversmith.——ISAAC THOMPSON, Bliston, Staffordshire, japanner.——J. COOKE, Northumberland-place, Commercial-road, furnishing ironmonger.——R. DAWES, Abingdon, carpet-manufacturer.——R. WRIGHT, Howland-street, St. Pancras, apothecary.——J. MACKENZIE and J. MURHIE, Oxford, tea-dealers.——T. CROSSLEY, Aldermanbury, trimming-manufacturer.——H. PITT, Cuckfield, Sussex, victualler.——R. TREVETT, Finsbury-place South, boot-maker.——J. NATHANSON and M. W. DRUDINGER, Mansell-street, Goodman's-fields, wholesale toy-merchants.——J. R. M'BURNIE, Coleman-street buildings, merchant.

FRIDAY'S GAZETTE.

INSOLVENTS.

W. BAILEY, Belper, Derbyshire, haberdasher,
J. L. SHEPHERD, and H. FRICKER, Southampton, linen-draper.

BANKRUPTCIES SUPERSEDED.

T. HOPKINSON, Ashton-under-Line, Lancashire, oil-merchant.
N. FRENCH, jun. Cardiff, Glamorgan, linen-draper.
J. and H. BARTER, Poole, timber-merchants.

BANKRUPTS.

R. GOOCH, Southampton, merchant——J. T. WATSON, White Horse-street, Stepney, master-mariner——R. GARBETT, Wellington, Salop, builder——T. JONES, Shrewsbury, victualler——G. L. DEAN, Peel Place, Kensington, boot and shoe-maker——J. BILLINGE, Philip and Jacob, Gloucestershire, dealer——S. MUNDY, jun. Bradford, Wiltshire, fuller——J. ROGERS, Shrewsbury, grocer——G. M. EVELYN, Skinner-street, Snowhill, hat-manufacturer——J. ROBERTSON, Tottenham, surgeon——J. GRIFFIN, and J. M. ADAMS, Strand, goldsmiths——J. ROSS, Wyrardsbury Mills, Wyrardsbury, Bucks, flock-manufacturer——L. BLANCHENAY, Pall Mall, wine-merchant——J. COATES, Long-lane, Bermondsey, Surrey, fellmonger——J. HILL, Paternoster-row, printer——T. TILL, Minster, Isle of Sheppy, Kent, farmer——R. FERNS, Mellor, Derbyshire, J. LANGFORD, Manchester, and J. HADFIELD, Rowerth, Derbyshire, merchants——F. CROSS, jun. Birtsmerton, Worcestershire, coppice wood-dealer——J. MOSS, Tothill-street, Westminster, shoemaker——R. HILL, High-street, Southwark, stationer——H. S. POTTER, Bridge-street, Southwark, cabinet-maker——S. HOPKINS, Wootten-under-Edge, Gloucestershire, clothier——W. CLARK, Paternoster-row, bookseller——J. MARTIN, sen., Bath, carrier——A. W. LARMUTH, Exmouth-street, Spa-fields, linen-draper——J. DILLON, Hereford, brazier.——W. ROEBUCK, Huddersfield, cloth-dresser——A. RUSSELL, March, Isle of Ely, grocer——J. MUSGRAVE, Bramley, Yorkshire, cloth-manufacturer——G. HOOPER, Eldon-street, Finsbury, builder——C. COPE, Birmingham, wine-merchant——J. SIBSON, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, draper.

THE AGE.

LONDON, NOVEMBER 26.

His Most Gracious MAJESTY, who arrived in town on Monday last, and, thank God, in the best possible health, opened the Session of Parliament in person, the ceremony attendant on which was received by the assembled populace with every degree of high enthusiasm.—We subjoin the speech, on the contents of which, it would be affectation not to congratulate the nation generally. Leaving the speech to answer for itself, in a much more forcible and impressive manner, than any illustration of ours could do, we may be permitted to revert to the SPEAKER; and it is with unfeigned delight we record, that for years past we have not seen the KING in a more apparent enjoyment of health, than he is at present. The circumstances under which his MAJESTY has recently, in repeated instances, endeared himself to his subjects, are never by them to be forgotten; and even in the transit of common events, the MONARCH would be entitled to, as he would receive the established homage of his people: but, when thereunto are added, the idolatry and gratitude of THOUSANDS OF FAMISHED, AND HALF-EXPIRING SUBJECTS, relieved by the ROYAL BOUNTY, the feeling leaps from respect into enthusiasm, and becomes at once universal—it is useless further to expatiate thereon. The following is a transcript of the ROYAL SPEECH:—

"MY LORDS AND GENTLEMEN,

"I have called you together at this time, for the special purpose of communicating to you the measure which I judged it necessary to take in the month of September, for the admission into the Ports of the United Kingdom of certain sorts of Foreign Grain not then admissible by Law.

"I have directed a Copy of the Order in Council, issued on that occasion, to be laid before you, and I confidently trust that you will see sufficient reason for giving your sanction to the provisions of that Order, and for carrying them into effect.

"I have great satisfaction in being able to inform you that the hopes entertained at the close of the last Session of Parliament respecting the termination of the war in the Burmese territories have been fulfilled, and that a peace has been concluded in that quarter highly honourable to the British arms and the Councils of the British Government in India.

"I continue to receive from all Foreign Powers assurances of their earnest desire to cultivate the relations of peace and friendly understanding with me.

"I am exerting myself with unremitting anxiety, either singly, or in conjunction with my Allies, as well to arrest the progress of existing hostilities, as to prevent the interruption of peace in different parts of the world.

"GENTLEMEN OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS,

"I have directed the Estimates of the ensuing year to be prepared, and they will in due time be laid before you.

"I will take care that they shall be formed with as much attention to economy as the exigencies of the Public service will permit.

"The distress which has pervaded the Commercial and Manufacturing Classes of my Subjects during the last twelve months, has affected some important Branches of the Revenue; but I have the satisfaction of informing you, that there has been no such diminution in the internal consumption of the Country, as to excite any apprehensions that the great sources of our wealth and prosperity have been impaired.

"MY LORDS AND GENTLEMEN,

"I have deeply sympathised with the sufferings which have been for some time past so severely felt in the Manufacturing Districts of the Country.

"I have contemplated with satisfaction, the exemplary patience with which those sufferings have been generally borne.

"The depression under which the Trade and Manufactures of the Country have been labouring, has abated more slowly than I [illegible] myself warranted in anticipating; but I retain a firm [illegible] that the time is not far distant, when, under the blessing of Divine Providence, the Commerce and Industry of the United Kingdom will have resumed their wonted activity."

To describe the effect produced by the delivery of this SPEECH, and by the personal appearance of the SPEAKER, in some of the buttermen, brokers, butchers, and other traders, (comprising the New Parliament,) who were present on the occasion, would require the pencil of HOGARTH, and the pen of GYFFORD.

In the House of Commons, on Friday, Mr. HUSKISSON brought forward two resolutions. One to indemnify Ministers for issuing the Order in Council of the 1st of September last, and a second to the effect that the same rate of duties should be continued until the 15th of next February. The Right Hon. Member made out an incontrovertible case; for if Ministers had not advised the measure, they would have incurred a heavy responsibility, when, from the state of the harvest, and its failure, particularly in barley and oats, it was necessary to obtain a speedy supply from abroad. Mr. HUSKISSON, in the course of his speech, observed, that at present there was not a half crop of oats in the country. In the course of the discussion, the necessity of the measure adopted to procure a supply was admitted on all sides; but every Member who spoke carefully abstained from giving any opinion on the Corn Laws.

It will be evident, by a perusal of this interesting debate, that his MAJESTY'S Ministers, in framing the order in Council, did not lose sight of the interests of the cultivators of the soil. It was stated, by the Right Honourable Gentleman, that "the advisers of the Crown, on this occasion, had departed as little as possible from the spirit of the existing Corn Laws: they required the parties importing to pay certain duties—that is, the Order in Council imposed upon the importers the necessity of entering into an engagement to pay a specified duty, provided that duty should be sanctioned by Parliament; and, in pursuance thereof, bonds had been entered into; therefore, the Act necessary to be passed on the present occasion, should not merely indemnify the parties who incurred this responsibility, but should, if Parliament took the view of the subject which he did, give power to the Crown to recover those duties."

The law for the admission of Canada corn, on payment of 5s. per quarter duty on wheat, which is now in force, deserves particular attention; for in consequence of this law, corn can now be imported from the United States. Corn from nearly all that part of America which can furnish a supply to this country can be brought into Canada, by the Erie canal and the lakes, and exported to this country as Canada wheat; or, if the Custom-house officers here or in Canada be willing and able to make a distinction between the growth of Canada and that of the United States—the population of Canada can eat American flour, and export their own wheat. The fact of the possibility and facility of exporting United States' wheat through Canada, appears in the evidence taken before the Emigration Committee; and if indeed any confirmation be needed by those who look at the geography of North America, the testimony on the subject is less open to suspicion, because it is given incidentally, and for no purpose connected with the Corn Laws. Indeed, from a variety of causes, the quantity of corn and flour which has been ever imported into this country from the United States has been inconsiderable, and is not likely to be increased now that other markets are opened, especially for flour, in Mexico and South America.

The statement of Ministers having met the universal praise of the House—for even HUME and WAITHMAN were laudatory—the resolutions proposed by Mr. CANNING were carried unanimously, and were ordered to be reported to-morrow.

PROGRESS OF THE REFORMATION.

We submit the following important article from the Dublin Evening Mail of Wednesday week, the contents of which, at this present moment of duplicity, and politico-religious controversy, on the particular object to which it refers, will be read with considerable satisfaction:—

"Eight more Roman Catholics abjured the errors of Popery in the parish church of Cavan, on Sunday last. All those (amounting now to sixty-nine in number) who have conformed to the Established Church within the last six weeks in the county of Cavan, are, without a single exception, persons of decent, orderly, and sober habits; easy in their circumstances, and of the most respectable and irreproachable characters. The revolution wrought in their minds, and the consequent abandonment of those errors in which they had been educated, was the result of pure and unbiassed conviction, unswayed by undue influence, and unaided by motives of interest. The conduct of the Priests at the late elections, and the anathemas they denounced against all those who dared to adhere to their landlords in the contest, led these people to reflect whether such proceedings suited the character of Spiritual Pastors, or the infuriate zeal of political partizans. Reflection induced a consideration into the nature of those powers claimed by the Priests, and the source from whence they were derived. A perusal of the Sacred Volume, which is the admitted source of all religion, suggested itself to the minds of these people. They read, and found no warrantry therein for that which they were falsely led to believe. The consequence was obvious—they became Protestants. There is not one of those persons who will not be now able to represent to his relatives, friends, and neighbours, the delusion in which they have been all kept, and the most salutary consequences to religion and society must be the result."—Dublin Evening Mail.

CONTINUANCE OF THE REFORMATION.

But the "good work" is not altogether complete, as will be seen by the following extract from a later paper, viz. the Dublin Evening Mail of last Monday, the most satisfactory testimony that can possibly be adduced, of the influence of good example:

"Yesterday (Sunday) after an Ordination held in the Parish Church of Cavan, twenty persons abjured the errors of Popery, and conformed to the Established Church. A most admirable and appropriate Sermon, bearing upon both the ceremonies which had taken place, was preached by the Rev. Mr. Collins. An Evening Cotemporary states, that within the last few days ten persons recanted in the town of Kells!!!"

"The Earl of Glengall has been appointed to the Colonelcy of the Tipperary Militia, vacant by the decease of the late Right Hon. Colonel Bagwell."—Daily Papers.

Every person remembers the old nursery riddle, and solution, "Why is a basket of apples like the army?—Because every core has a kernel!" We presume it must be on the strength of this early association, that DICKY GLENGALL has become A MAN OF WAR!

The Irish "Fourteen Days'" Parliament is continuing the grand course of its debates, without intermission, and, above all, without suffering its dignity to be intruded upon by any of those trifling political skirmishes to which all such national "conventicles" are subject. It is impossible to adduce any thing, in an anti-Catholic shape, more distressing and fatal to the cause which it would presume to advocate, than this assemblage of Hibernia noratory, in which is concentered all the violence, and, naturally, all the weakness, of party. Respecting a late particular feature of their movements, we beg leave to call the especial attention of our readers to the subjoined document, wherein they will see the object avowedly held in view by these partisans of combined religion and politics. At this moment, when the eyes of all followers of this wild faction are directed to whatever steps they may pursue for the furtherance, through Parliamentary process, of their wild schemes, it is not, in any respect, inappropriate to call public attention to whatever display may, in itself, speak more than all the lengthened controversy into which we might enter. Ecce signum:—

"The meeting of this day was not attended by more than a dozen of persons, exclusive of the members of the press, in consequence, as we were given to understand, of an opposition to the demand of one pound for admittance.

"The Hon. Gonville French was called to the Chair.

"Mr. O'Gorman read the proceeding of the first day.

"Mr. Lawless gave notice, that on the next day he would propose that the charge for admission be only one shilling each day. He did this on the principle that no bar should be placed between that room and public opinion. He knew many individuals who did not attend this day, because they objected to the principle of paying a pound for admission.

"Mr. O'Connell would decidedly oppose the motion of Mr. Lawless. He had heard out of this room, objections made to the payment of a pound, by individuals whose names he did not see to the list of Catholic Rent, nor to any other fund. He lamented the exhibition this day, as a fatal symptom of their degraded state. Were there not 5,000 Catholics in Dublin, who could pay a pound to defray the expences of the Association? Their annual expenses amounted to 1,500l. and yet he (Mr. O'Connell) cannot be three weeks out of town, but he hears of an attack upon the old Catholic Rent. They could not continue their sittings if the old rent were dispersed, unless, indeed, private individuals would defray the expenses of their proceedings. He had himself done so for three years, and during that time he only received 72l. in subscriptions from other individuals. But if he could only get a few gentlemen to attend here, the public business shall be done. It was a maxim of Suwarrow's to fight with whatever complement of soldiers came up. Mr. O'Connell then brought forward the draft of the general petition. There were two leading facts regarding the present condition of the Catholics of Ireland, which it was not necessary to state in this petition. First, they had no share in framing the laws by which they were governed. It was the principle of freedom that every man should share in making the laws under which he lived. Yet that was denied to the Catholics of Ireland. Secondly, they have no share in administering the laws. The Chancellor, Judges, Masters in Chancery, &c. must be all Protestants. There was another office of singular importance, from which they were excluded. The Judges have only to declare the laws, but the juries have to decide on the matters of fact which generally form the subject of litigation. No Catholic can be the officer who selects those juries. He arraigned the system which declared that a sheriff must be a Protestant. After stating the grievances which the Catholics suffer in being excluded from all corporations and other offices, and from sitting in Parliament, Mr. O'Connell read the draft of the petition. It was laid on the table, and ordered to be reported next day.

"Mr. Lawless thought they were under great obligations to Mr. O'Connell for this excellent petition. He was sorry that it did not contain a protest against the Wings. With respect to juries, he conceived they should petition to have Mr. Peel's law on the selection of juries extended to Ireland.

"Mr. Forde said, in their petition it would be absurd to call for the repeal of acts which did not exist.

Mr. O'Connell was favourable to having a petition for the extension of Mr. Peel's Jury Bill to Ireland. Though they differed from Mr. Peel on other matters, they would be ready to give him every credit for this admirable law. It had only one fault—it did not extend the principle of selection by ballot to special Juries. This was still left to the selection of officers. This Bill was not extended to Ireland, because the Law Officers of the Crown had not time to prepare the parochial machinery for it in this country. A gentleman had been the other day appointed Advising Counsel to the Crown—he meant Mr. Greene, son of the Recorder. It was the best appointment he (Mr. O'Connell) ever heard of. Oh! si sic omnia. This gentleman was extremely well fitted to prepare the parochial machinery necessary for the introduction of Mr. Peel's Bill into this country.

"The Rev. Mr. Barry strongly deprecated any attempt to introduce the discussion of the Wings again, after they had been long since disposed of.

"The Resolution for referring the petition to a Committee to report the next day, was then put and carried.

Mr. O'Connell remarked on the arts which had been practised by that basest of all base things, the London Press, to deceive them. It had put forth a statement that Parliament would only sit for a few days; this was to prevent their urging an immediate discussion of their claims. It now appeared that Parliament would sit until Christmas. He hoped they would be able to have the general petition presented in the course of a fortnight. He understood that Sir F. Burdett was expected in London this week.

O'CONNELL is one of those unfortunate malcontents, never to be disposed of—old enough to be protected against repeated insult, but impudent enough to come under its continual lash—violent enough to call down unceasing resentment, and cowardly enough never to answer the resentment he calls down. There is a circumstance connected with O'CONNELL highly deserving stanees, we have particular pleasure in referring. Some years sinee, O'Connell, from some offensive language he had used, was "called out" by the person on whom he had reflected, and in declining to appear, Mr. O'Connell pleaded that he had A WIFE. Shortly after this, Mr. Lidwell, a Gentleman of the county of Tipperary, happened to be similarly circumstanced, and pleaded that he had A DAUGHTER—and again, shortly after this, O'Connell and Lidwell got into a belligerent controversy, which ended in "no fight," as usual with the parties. On these points, the present Lord Chief Justice of Ireland wrote the following epigram, which we have no hesitation in pronouncing to be of the highest order of that species of wit, that ever came under our surveillance:—

The heroes of Erin, objecting to slaughter,
Improve on the Hebrew command:
For one "honours his" wife, and the other his daughter,
"That their days may be LONG in the land!"

COURT OF ENQUIRY ON THE LORD WILLIAM LENNOX.

The following items, connected with this subject, have gone, during the last week, the established round of the Press:—

"It is well known that a Court of Inquiry has been for some-time past sitting in this distinguished Regiment, in order to decide on the truth or falsehood of an imputation made upon Lord William Lennox, a Captain in the corps, of having been the author of a series of offensive personalities against the Earl of Glengall, which have appeared in The Age Sunday Paper. A second subject of the investigation appears to have been, whether the Noble Officer in question did at any time, while on duty with his regiment, submit his conduct to be canvassed by any person or set of persons whatever—a circumstance which, we presume, would involve a point of military etiquette. The Court, which is understood to have been originally convened at the instance of Lord William himself, (who, as will be seen, manifested throughout the business the strongest desire that the whole of his conduct connected with the transaction should be fully investigated,) sat more than once. The Noble Earl alluded to, aeeeded to a request made him to attend and give his testimony before it, as did also several other Gentlemen connected more or less with the proceedings, and after the fullest and most patient investigation, the Court returned their written opinion to their Colonel, the Duke of Wellington, who has since expressed his full concurrence in, and satisfaction at, the conclusion to which it has come—a conclusion, we are glad to find, as completely exculpatory of the honour of the Noble Lord whose conduct was the subject of investigation, as the manner in which the whole inquiry has been conducted, and its result, must have been gratifying to his feelings. Military etiquette will of course prevent the official promulgation of the proceedings of a Court of Inquiry of this description: but the substance of them we are enabled to lay before the public, and the correctness of the account may be depended on. Its report is to the following effect: that 'the Court having duly considered the statement of Lord William Lennox, and the evidence given by the Earl of Glengall and other gentlemen, present at meetings held in London on the subject, are of opinion that there is no ground whatever for the report which has been in circulation, and that it appears to the Court that Lord William Lennox has throughout acted with judgment and candour, that he has always shown every inclination to have his conduct thoroughly examined, and that he has afforded every facility to the investigation.—On weighing further all the evidence and circumstances of the case, the Court are finally of opinion, that Lord William's statement has not been contradicted, and that no reason whatever exists for supposing that his Lordship either ever has written for, or been at all connected with The Age Newspaper.

"With respect to the question of Lord William Lennox having submitted his conduct to be scrutinized by certain gentlemen, at the time he was engaged in doing military duty with his regiment in London, the Court are of opinion that certain meetings, which did take place, were not considered by Lord William Lennox to be held for the purpose of any investigation, but in order to promote an explanation of a misunderstanding which existed between the Earl of Glengall and himself; but that Lord William would willingly at all times have submitted to, and was earnestly desirous to promote, any inquiry, by any means, which his regiment might think proper to institute, in order to rescue his character from a charge so prejudicial to his honour as an officer and a gentleman.

"The Report of the Court of Inquiry, of which we have thus given the tenor, is understood to have been presented early in the week to the Duke of Wellington, who had since signified his formal approbation of its contents; and the result has been for some days privately, but pretty generally, circulated at the west end of the town, where it has given universal satisfaction."

It is but natural to suppose that we should enter upon a subject so nearly affecting ourselves, particularly now the proceedings, with which it has been wrought up, have finally terminated; and we do so accordingly. We should presume that this circumstance is quite without a precedent in all the annals of time, military or civil, and is therefore entitled to more consideration than the reader would at first be disposed to bestow upon it. It will be remembered, that the very first moment the rumour became prevalent, which subsequently settled so permanently on the Lord William Lennox, we stepped forward, out of a feeling of common courtesy to a gentleman of his Lordship's rank in society, and, in the most unequivocal terms, contradicted the assertion, which either the spleen, the curiosity, or the ignorance, of a few individuals, had so ridiculously made—we did this as a matter of justice to the nobleman in question; and then, as a matter of satisfaction, on our own part, to find that the impertinent scrutiny of a few hirelings had failed in its attempt to penetrate beyond the prescribed limits of any such literary establishment.

Let us now then examine the pretensions of the present enquiry, and the grounds on which it has proceeded. From an intimacy, which is understood to have subsisted for some considerable time, between Lord William Lennox and a gentleman, who has been also falsely accused of writing for this journal, it became, many months ago, a current report in the clubs, and other general rendezvous of our metropolitan fashionables, that Lord William contributed the information respecting HIGH LIFE, which has appeared with so much accuracy in our columns at various periods. A more absurd conclusion could not be drawn, in any point of view. By this process of argument, (supposing the gentleman referred to were connected with us) any person knowing the established editor of any paper, might, with equal propriety, be held answerable for whatever matter appeared in that journal—a conclusion, we need hardly say, which every civilized mortal would heartily scout—if, then, such an impression, under such a supposition, be so received, how must it be received, when we repeat, what we have before asserted, more than once, that this gentleman of his Lordship's acquaintance, has no more to do with our paper than we have with the command of his Lordship's regiment. But, examine still further the manner in which this persecution has been carried on towards his Lordship—a private meeting took place more than once, we believe, and at one of such self-elected conventions, this Nobleman was asked, by a quorum of Lord Glengall's personal friends, to submit to a common French Police Trap!! to prove to them whether he really was in communication with the party, after every possible opportunity had been, by him, afforded to them, through the very means which themselves had selected, as a grand foundation of accusation. Lord William Lennox objected, we have heard, to lend himself to such design, on the very proper ground that his friend, who was to represent him in the transaction (one of His Majesty's Household) was not present—a remonstrance which, we hear, the Court of Enquiry has considered perfectly correct; and it has gone even further, by stating, that if his Lordship has lent himself to any such mean proceeding, he would have compromised the character of a British Officer!—leaving his Lordship to decide how far he would have compromised the character of a British Nobleman. From this stage of the proceedings, an abridged and imperfect account of which obtained a partial notice in some of the daily journals, we come to the grand climacteric, the Court of Enquiry, which, owing to these rumours, the Duke of Wellington ordered to be held in Windsor Barracks, amongst the officers of the Royal Horse Guards Blue.

It may be a question of some nicety, to ask, on what grounds this said Court of Enquiry was convened? Supposing William Lennox to have been guilty, does his guilt involve any question respecting regimental character? Has he been absent from any fulfilment of regimental duty, either on the 10th, the 24th, or any intervening period? Is there any one point, connected with the conduct of an officer in such rank, that can be condemned? Even if he was guilty of what has been alleged against him, we unanswerably say, HE HAS NOT! If his Lordship had possessed ability sufficient ("God help the mark!") to aid the circulation of any periodical work, and his particular inclination "lay that way bent," we cannot see by what process of military argument he can be called to account for so doing, any more than other officers of his regiment can be, for those amatory and different sundry worldly pursuits, in which, WE COULD TELL THEM, the best part of their life is past. An absurder notion never yet got possession of men's faculties, and this is perhaps the only instance in which we have ever felt disposed to call in question the high military discipline of "England's great Captain," who has no doubt been inveigled into the business, by some of the lickspits, who ever surround great men.

Thus much, then, for that side of the question, which may be said to involve the particular subject of animadversion; and, having placed the matter in this light, with a conscientious and respectful feeling towards a man of such rank, more particularly as we have been the cause of all the evil which has thus visited him, we may be permitted to revert, for one moment, to the individual himself. Without vaunting, in any particular manner, of ourselves, we nevertheless do not hesitate to say, that Lord William Lennox, from all we know, or have ever heard of him, has not one solitary pretension to that claim of authorship, to which the writers of this paper have been permitted to arrive; and in the cases of those fashionable movements which this young Lord is said to have reported, we can tell him and his accusers beside, that in five instances out of ten, he has not even been present, and, moreover, if he had been, was not on a sufficient footing, even to know the points that we have recorded.

We have thought it a duty to deliver these sentiments solely from a feeling of pure justice; but if we were to examine the subject in another point of view, we should exclaim against the laughable impression of an uneducated raw youth, merely from that entrée in society, which his high family connections must have given him, being supposed capable of furnishing, or even knowing those subjects, in which we have so repeatedly had to dilate. Among the self-important waglings of a troop of horse, such a nobleman may pass muster—beyond that, with all the feelings of rendering justice, which we have herein manifested, the idea is contemptible. Of the persons who have been instrumental in bringing about this fine touch of military humbug, we shall say no more, than that Lord Glengall was the principal evidence con.: and when we refer to the decision of this notable tribunal, we are bound to congratulate his Lordship on the "usual" truth of his testimony. Throughout the whole of this affair, we cannot fancy a man, more to be condoled with, than the Lord William Lennox—he becomes, pro momento, exiled from some part of the society in which he was born to move—he then gets into a duel, and finally a regimental Court of Enquiry—if he had been a common criminal, he could not have been much more scurvily treated.

But the result of this investigation is now before the public, and the decision it has came to, is AS SOLEMNLY TRUE, "as proofs of holy writ:" we rejoice in it, as far as this oppressed young man is concerned, but we doubly rejoice in it, as conveying to those bloated puppies who would interfere with our prerogatives, and have been repeatedly attempting to undermine our property, that we are as far beyond the reach of their scrutiny, as they are beneath the condescension of our contempt.

THEATRICALS.

We should imagine that our Gallic neighbours will easily distinguish, in the reception which La Porte has experienced, the wide difference between the incivility of Parisian discernment and the hospitality of Englishmen. Some years since, when a set of players (bad enough, God knows,) presumed to exhibit their lovely and sublime features in the French capital, they were, willy-nilly, completely kicked out, vi et armis—but John Bull, who is decidedly the most accommodating and good-tempered fellow in existence, and one who swallows more than most men, who have even as large a mouth, has naturally seen no just cause why "he and France" should be at issue on this point, and La Porte is therefore triumphant. We think him deservedly so; for a man possessed of much more really comic talent, we have seldom seen on the stage. The condemnation which has been passed on Amphytrion (the organ of La Porte's applause) is not altogether to be wondered at, particularly when we find that the piece was deprived (why, remains to be explained,) of all its musical attraction, by means of which the situations were rendered precarious instead of certain, and the effect consequently negative. That fault, however, once committed, the manager must rely on his performer, and not his performance; and we have therefore a full persuasion, that La Porte, otherwise employed, will bring a great deal of money to Price's treasury.

The mimes have been busy, of late, in every direction—for in America we find that the tragic mountebank, Mr. Kean, has enrolled himself under the banners of some miserable "niggers" he happened to fall in with, and is now called Adani Conidet!!—there is no end to the man's tomfooleries—and for this savage distinction, he appears to have paid about 5*s.* 6*d.*—then England, Jones has has been coquetting with the managers of both theatres, and, from asking the Coventgarden proprietors 20*l.* per week, when he had 15*l.* before, he has prevailed on them to give Wrench 18*l.* for three years—they, through a fear that Jones would get to Drury-lane, and yet not liking to give the terms he asked, have tacked 3*l.* per week more to their salary list on Wrench, vice Jones, and the latter is likely to be out of a situation, unless he takes the reduced terms that Mr. Price will, of course, now offer him—"Serve him right!!!" Then, the closing of the Haymarket theatre has dispersed Mr. Vining, Miss A. Jones, and Mrs. Waylett to Dublin, where we find, by the subjoined extract from the Dublin Evening Mail of Wednesday, that the latter has made a very considerable sensation:—

"The drama, to use a mercantile phrase, is 'looking up.' The 'indignant Public' (save the mark) and the ill-used Patentee have not only entered into preliminary articles for the ratification of perpetual peace, but the measure itself has been actually effected, no body knows how, and God forbid we should ask why? So it is, and we rejoice at it. A most excellent permanent Company is in progress of collection—every day adds to its strength by some new arrival; and the houses every night bear testimony to the exertions, as well as discrimination of Mr. Harris.

"Amongst the strangers announced, and for whose appearance the greatest anxiety was excited, was that of Mrs. Waylett. And in justice to her personal charms as a woman, her fascinations as an actress, her evident knowledge of the stage, and of the effect which is capable of being produced, we regret that she did not select some character for her debut capable of giving greater scope to those powers which she evidently possesses, than that of Phœbe in Paul Pry. Mrs. Waylett's figure is small, but is a model of symmetry. Her manners are easy, graceful, and ladylike; her acting is arch and piquant, with a sufficient portion of naive to render it natural and ingenuous, and withal, an observance of that due attention to modesty which is essential to good acting. Her voice—we mean her singing voice—is not of very great compass; but it is clear, distinct, and flexible; and although her notes do not astonish the ear, her tones possess a much more exquisite quality—they reach the heart. We do not on the whole recollect a more decidedly successful "first appearance" in Dublin, nor have we seen an actress more likely to become a great and permanent favourite with the public, than Mrs. Waylett. Between the play and farce she sung 'Buy a Broom,' dressed in the costume of a Bavarian girl. Her appearance and manner of giving the little song (which by the way poss sses no merit whatever of itself) called forth not only loud plaudits, but an unanimous encore; and we very much fear from the sounds of 'Buy a Broom' that assailed our ears on our departure from the theatre, that the air will become 'popular,' and we shall have to encounter the same miseries which the whistling of the Der Freyschutz chorus has often inflicted on our auricular.

"Last evening the entertainments were the comedy of Wild Oats, and the afterpiece of Clari. In the latter, Mrs. Waylett sustained the part of the heroine; and gave the exquisite melody of 'Home, sweet Home,' with a degree of pathos and feeling which reminded us strongly of her charming predecessor, Miss Tree."

Then Mr. Neville, at the Sheffield theatre, has blown off his right hand, and the Lord Farnborough is talked of, as a successor to the Duke of Montrose, as Lord Chamberlain—we wish them both success.

It has been asserted that his Majesty will visit the theatres during his present stay in town—we hope he may, if it be only to convince the King, auricularly, how deeply he is twined round the hearts of his people.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Gazette of Tuesday night contained a renewal of the Order in Council, prohibiting the exportation of arms, and ammunition, and naval stores.

There was a numerous public meeting at Manchester on Wednesday, to establish a Society for the preservation of Ancient Public Foot-paths. The Society was established.

Saturday se'nnight Captain Parry commissioned the Hecla, at Deptford, the fitting out of which commences directly, for the voyage to Spitzbergen. Lieutenants Ross, Foster, and Crozier, are appointed to her, and Mr. Halse, as purser; the former proceeds with Captain Parry in command of one of the boats over the ice, in the drawing of which Shetland ponies are to be employed, which will be taken on board at the Orkneys.

Major Hook.—This singular character died on Monday se'nnight, at his house, Ham-street, Ham-common. He was a major in the East India Company's service, and had attained his 75th year. His residence was a marked spot by its gloomy and neglected appearance. By the will of a relation, he was entitled to an annuity "whilst his wife was above ground." To fulfil the tenor of this important document, after her death he caused her to be placed in a chamber, her body to be preserved, and a glass case to be put over it. In this situation it has remained upwards of 30 years. It is said that he never permitted any person to enter the room but himself. Major Hook's habits were well-known in the neighbourhood, and he was considered to be a man of large property.—Worcester Herald.

The Etoile, a few days ago, in the course of a long article in favour of the political and civil institutions of France, gave what it appeared to consider a triumphant statement of the superiority of the French over the English police. The account of recent street robberies in Paris, from the Constitutionnel, does not go far to support the assertions of the French Treasury Journal.

On Monday last the brig Tuskett, of Greenock, burden about 300 tons, James Brown master, sailed from the Samphire Island, laden with corn and butter, for Liverpool. On the night of that day, or early on the morning of Tuesday, the brig, cargo, and all hands, eleven in number, were totally lost on that dangerous iron-bound coast, between Brandon Head and Smerwick Bay, at a place called Conshavodig, a short distance to the southward of the entrance of Brandon Bay.

Thursday afternoon, about four o'clock, a fire broke out in the shell-fish warehouse of Mr. Evans, No. 3, Cornhill. For some time the flames burst so furiously from the chimney, that the lottery offices of Bish and Pidding, on either side, had very little chance of escape. The parish engines arrived, but, by the exertions of Mr. Evans and his friends, the fire was effectually subdued without their assistance.

As the Lord Chief Justice was quitting the Bench on Thursday, at one o'clock to enter his private room, his foot slipped, and he sustained a violent shock on his knee. His Lordship expressed a sense of pain, and the officers ran to his assistance. He was supported to his room, and a medical gentleman, who happened to be in Court, went to ascertain the extent of the accident. Mr. Justice Bayley, some time after, said it might be satisfactory to the Gentlemen of the Bar to hear that the Lord Chief Justice had only received a slight hurt on his knees. His Lordship, however, was, in consequence of the accident, prevented from attending the King's Court.

Died lately, at Barham, aged 93, John Jennings: he was postman from Ipswich to Needham and Stowmarket 52 years; and then for the 13 following years he was postman to Barham and Coddenham: for the last 17 years he had not pursued his occupation. For 52 years, he walked 168 miles every week, making a total of above 440,000 miles, or seventeen times the circuit of the globe.

Custom-House.—On Tuesday morning, about ten o'clock, the workmen employed in repairing the Custom-House were engaged in raising a block of stone, intended as a part of the coping at the top of the edifice facing the river, weighing between three and four tons, seven feet in length, five feet in breadth, and one foot seven inches in depth, by means of double and treble blocks and fall. One of the mason's labourers, named John M'Donald, was directed to ascend with it, to prevent the ropes from getting entangled, and had nearly reached the top of the building, when unfortunately the fall or rope, from long use, suddenly broke from the immense weight, and it fell to the ground, burying itself nearly one-third in the earth. The poor fellow, who had hold of a rope, was for a moment suspended, but loosing his hold, he fell a depth of nearly 100 feet, and in his descent struck against several parts of the scaffolding, and when taken up he was lifeless. The left side of the body was completely stoved in, having fallen upon a stone, and being otherwise dreadfully mutilated.

The tower, and building adjoining it, now being erected by Mr. Beckford on Lansdown, the commencement of which we noticed a few weeks since, has already attained great forwardness. The tower from the foundation is nearly 70 feet high; but is, in consequence of the setting in of the frosts, now covered over with a temporary roof, and no further progress will be made until the spring. A considerable number of hands are still occupied on the other part of the building, and we have every reason to believe that the whole of that will be completed forthwith.—Bath Journal.

The neighbourhood of South-street, in Durham, has been thrown into a state of alarm through the mysterious disappearance of a woman of the name of Mrs. Blow, since about six o'clock on the night of Saturday se'nnight. She had been observed to be in a state of despondency, through some unknown cause, for some time; and, in consequence, an old woman, a relation, was appointed to watch over her, but she succeeded at the time above-mentioned to escape from the house, and an uncommon shriek being heard soon after, apparently from the water-side, near the Abbey-mill, the neighbours were generally induced to believe that the unfortunate woman had drowned herself. A search was, therefore, commenced, and a handkerchief, which was identified to be hers, was found, though at the opposite side of the water to that where she was supposed to have thrown herself in, but up to Sunday night her body had not been found. She is about 50 years of age, and possessed of independent property.

On Sunday evening last, between six and seven o'clock, a fire broke out in the Dove, Yarmouth trader, lying close alongside Mr. Mashiter's premises, Iron-gate Wharf, St. Catherine's. The flames, which first appeared in the fore-part of the vessel, soon gained such an alarming ascendancy, that its destruction, and likewise the extensive premises of Mr. Mashiter, seemed inevitable to every one present. At this most critical period the London Assurance Floating Engine fortunately arrived, and by the active exertions of the firemen on board, it was speedily brought into play, and a tremendous body of water was thrown upon the devouring element, which ultimately had the effect of subduing it. The cargo and vessel were considerably damaged, but had not the floating engine arrived at the moment it did, the flames would certainly have communicated to Mr. Mashiter's wharf, which is chiefly composed of wood, and consequently must have been consumed. We regret that there are not more floating engines kept on the river to protect the vessels lying below London-bridge.

On Monday a meeting of the artisans of Sheffield was held on the subject of the corn-laws, when resolutions and a petition against them were agreed to. One of the speakers, Mr. Sheldon, in illustration of his argument that the corn-laws in this country are operating in favour of foreign manufacturers, by enabling them to produce goods at a cheaper rate, and also exciting a spirit of rivalry, exhibited, as a specimen of continental ingenuity, two or three pairs of fine scissors, of French manufacture, which he declared no Sheffield workmen need be ashamed of, and that the men who made these would soon be able to help themselves by manufacturing other articles.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

COURT OF CHANCERY.

MR. WELLESLEY AND HIS CHILDREN.

The Court was crowded at an early hour on Tuesday, in the expectation that judgment would be given in this case. Mr. Wellesley took his seat among the Counsel within the bar. The father of Mrs. Bligh also stood among the crowd. Mr. Shadwell, without any prefatory observations, proceeded to read a great mass of fresh affidavits, detailing a number of circumstances confirmatory of former affidavits, and contradictory of many circumstances stated in those of Mr. Wellesley. During the reading of the affidavits, Mr. Wellesley repeatedly attempted to address his Lordship, begging to be allowed to answer the charge upon the spot, in public Court.

The Lord Chancellor—You may swear what you please, Mr. Wellesley, but you must do it out of Court, and without any intercourse with me on the subject. I will give you an opportunity of answering any thing that you please, and that most fully; but I will not have any thing stated but by affidavit.

The father of Mrs. Bligh also addressed his Lordship, and said his unfortunate daughter was grossly calumniated: charges were made against her, to which she had no opportunity to reply.

The Lord Chancellor—Yes, she shall have every opportunity of making a reply. Affidavit shall be met by affidavit.

Monday next was fixed by Mr. Hart for the putting in of counter-affidavits, to which his Lordship assented.

COURT OF KING'S BENCH, Monday.

CRIMINAL INFORMATION.—THE AGE.

Mr. Brougham applied for a rule to show cause why a criminal information should not be filed against Richard Downing Richards, registered proprietor of The Age, for having published a libel on Lord Bingham, the eldest son of the Earl of Lucan, and Lieutenant-Colonel of the 17th Regiment of Lancers. Application had been made for this rule in the last term, but the Court declined granting it, unless an affidavit were produced, averring that the publication complained of imputed cowardice to Lord Bingham. He (Mr. Brougham) now produced the affidavit of his Lordship, stating that the publication was a gross and false libel throughout, and contained an imputation of cowardice against him.

Mr. Brougham then read the libel, which was in verse, and alluded to Lord Bingham having been bound over in the sum of 6 000l. to keep the peace towards a gentleman in Ireland, with whom he had had some difference. It concluded with the following lines:—

"If the Judges when they called for the bonds,
"Had known Lucan's next heir was not to fighting prone,
"Their Lordships no doubt would have let him alone."

The affidavit stated, that Lord Bingham was the eldest son of the Earl of Lucan, and had served ten years in the army, and that if he should submit to such imputations with impunity, he should incur the contempt of his brother officers.—Rule granted.

THE KING V. SHACKELL.

The defendant in this case, who had been convicted of having published a libel in the John Bull newspaper, on Lord Arundel, was this day brought up for judgment; he declined advancing any thing in mitigation of punishment.

Mr. Scarlett, for the prosecution, produced the affidavit of Lord Arundel, denying all the matter contained in the libel. He was not instructed to press hard on the individual now brought up, who, perhaps, was no further guilty than that he had made himself instrumental to the publicity of the libel. He could not, however, omit to state, that the defendant at first represented having received the information from highly respectable authority. At a subsequent time he stated, that he had it from a correspondent of apparent respectability; and a third time, from an anonymous correspondent. It was evident that he had lent himself to the malice of some writer who gains his livelihood by trafficking in calumny.

Mr. Brougham was on the same side, but declined saying any thing in aggravation of punishment.

Mr. Justice Bayley, in delivering the judgment of the Court, observed, that the libel of which the prisoner was convicted, imputed to Lord Arundel improper and unjustifiable conduct and harsh feelings towards an old man, who had lived in the capacity of a servant for a long time in the family. It imputed to the Noble Lord, that when this old man had been on the bed of sickness, he was solicited by him to become a convert to his Lordship's religious persuasion; and on declining to do so, he was discharged and thrown out on the world at that period of life when he was unable to do any thing for himself, and ought to have support on account of his past services. No person who had heard such an insinuation could believe it, respecting any man, however humble his condition in life might be, without thinking lower of him than before; yet this charge was made against a peer of the realm. When asked by the prosecutor's attorney for the authority of the information, the prisoner published a second qualification, different from the first, by stating that he had it from a correspondent of apparent respectability, and that it would be unjust to punish him for publishing it. When again urged to give up the name of that correspondent, it came out that he was an anonymous correspondent. The conductors of newspapers should consider the impression that such charges are capable of making on the feelings of honourable minds, and if the prisoner had any feelings himself, he ought to know the impropriety of giving publicity to such a charge on the faith of an anonymous correspondent, to accompany it with the assertion, that it came from respectable authority. The Court taking all circumstances into consideration, do adjudge that he pay to the King a fine of 150l. and be imprisoned until the same be paid.

THURSDAY.

THE KING V. WM. BLENNERHASSET FAIRMAN.

The Common-Sergeant stated, that in behalf of Lord William Lennox, a Captain in the Royal Horse Guards, he had to move their Lordships for a criminal information against the defendant, who, by the usual affidavits at the Stamp-office, appeared to be the proprietor and editor of a Sunday newspaper, styled the Palladium. Lord Wm. Lennox stated in his affidavit, that for a long time past he had been assailed in the defendant's newspaper by paragraphs imputing to him that he was the author of scurrilous attacks upon Lord Glengall, which had appeared in The Age Sunday newspaper. The Palladium, containing these paragraphs, had been sent to officers of his regiment. In consequence of these reports, a Court of Inquiry had been held on his conduct, the result of which was Lord William Lennox's honourable acquittal. Notwithstanding this, however, in the Palladium of Sunday last, a ridiculous song was published, entitled the "Downfall of the Age," dedicated, without permission, to Lord William Lennox; and in what was termed the second edition of that paper, in the leading article, the following report of the military inquiry appeared:—

"The Court of Inquiry, we are assured, have acquitted Lord Wm. Lennox; and the hero of Waterloo, it is confidently stated, has signified his approval of their opinion. At this we are not surprised; and, for the honour of a noble race, we are rejoiced at the result. The opinion of the Court was read, we understand, at a subscription-house in St. James's-street, last night. Colonels Hill, Hanmer, and Bouverie were the members. In our next number, the full particulars of the investigation shall be laid before our readers. For the present, we must refer them to a short paragraph in another part of this day's impression, not having room for more upon this subject. Lord William will publish, in all probability, his own statement of the circumstances."

The following is another of the paragraphs alluded to:—

"Court of Inquiry, Royal House-Guards (Blue), on Lord W. P. Lennox.—The Court have finished their proceedings, and have given his Lordship a qualified acquittal; but from there being no authentic statement published which his Lordship might have claimed, we do not see that the bare fact of not proving him guilty can remove the slighest stigma from his Lordship's character, more especially when we inform our readers, that the officers of the Blues, to their praise be it spoken, have intimated to his Lordship their request that he will leave a corps which has hitherto been unsullied, and have for the last month placed his Lordship in 'Coventry.' Colonel Hill, brother of the gallant Lord Hill, has also been compelled to drop the acquaintance of an officer who has given an indelible stain to a corps hitherto unspotted. His Lordship has, through private family interest, obtained six months' leave of absence, in the hope that in time the storm may blow over."

His Lordship denied, in his affidavit, the facts stated in this paragraph, and stated that he is on terms of intimacy with Col. Hill and his brother officers, and that he never inserted, or caused to be inserted, in The Age, any paragraph reflecting on the character of any person whatsoever, and that he never had any connexion with that paper.—Rule granted.

JUDGMENT AGAINST SMUGGLERS.

Thursday Wm. Snow, W. Herrington, and W. Hone, were brought up for judgment, having pleaded guilty to an indictment chargiug them with attempting to bribe Thomas Small, a seaman of the Hyperion, to allow them to land contraband spirits at Little Hampton. The prisoners had since put in affidavits, imputing to Small, that he first endeavoured to seduce them to offer him a bribe, and that he was a worthless and degraded person in the estimation of his officers, and wholly unworthy to be believed on his oath. In answer to this the affidavit of Lieutenant George Drew, R. N., was put in, stating that throughout the whole affair Small had acted by his orders; and several testimonials of Small's good conduct during a service of 20 years, having been read, the Court, after commenting on the nature of this offence, and the aggravation offered by endeavouring to implicate an innocent man, pronouced the judgment of the Court, that Wm. Hone and Wm. Snow should be imprisoned in Horsham gaol for the period of 18 months, and Wm. Herrington for 15 months; and at the expiration of the terms of their imprisonment, they should each of them enter into his own recognizance in the sum of 40l. with two sureties of 20l each, to answer for their good behaviour for three years.

JUDGMENT.

PERJURY.—THE KING V. CALLANHAN.

On this defendant being brought into Court,

Mr. Justice Bayley thus addressed him:—"Cornelius Callanhan, you are brought up to receive the sentence of the Court, after having been found guilty of the awful crime of wilful perjury."

Defendant—My Lord, will your Lordship allow me to speak a few words before you proceed to pass your judgment upon me? I make this request, not with a view to insult the dignity of this Honourable Court, but rather, if possible, to exculpate myself from the dreadful crime with which I am charged.

Mr. Justice Bayley—You may proceed.

Defendant—Your Lordship will then allow me to hand over certain affidavits for the perusal of the Court. I believe these Affidavits will decide my fate, and I am sure your Lordship would rather be made certain of my innocence than proceed to pass sentence upon me. I beg humbly to state to your Lordship, that this very day completes ten months of imprisonment, which has been inflicted upon me, by an arbitrary prosecution. I have also suffered from arrest, and much from bodily illness.

Mr. Justice Bayley—If you have affidavits, all these matters should be set forth in them. I have already said that the Court will listen to them.

Defendant—I think, my Lord, I can convince you, that your mind has been wrongfully impressed by my enemies. I was brought up to this Court for Judgment before, but the solicitors, Messrs. Broderick and Co., were at that time in the country, and through some technical irregularity in my affidavits, they were not read, and consequently judgment was suspended.

Mr. Scarlett—I beg to state to your Lordship, that these affidavits were of such a nature, that precluded the possibility of their being admitted by this Court. Matters totally irrelevant to the present case were blended with other matter, which went to imply ground for the granting a new trial; therefore being aware of their inadmissibility, we advised the prisoner to suppress them.

Mr. Justice Bayley (to the defendant)—"All the complaints you now wish to urge upon the attention of the Court, were referred to in these documents, I suppose?"

Mr. Scarlett—"I beg to apologise to your Lordship for this interruption of the Court. I have not made these remarks as Counsel for the defendant, and therefore hope they may not have a tendency to prejudice his case."

Defendant—Will your Lordship allow me to proceed with my affidavits? And the Court may suppress those parts of them, which, in their wisdom, they may deem inadmissible.

Mr. Justice Bayley—No, I certainly cannot do that. This is tatally in opposition to the established rules of the Court; but as it appears your affidavits contain irregularities, and you have the advice of Counsel, you may be remanded until Monday next, to allow you an opportunity of amending them. On Monday morning sentence will be passed on you.

The prisoner was accordingly removed from the Court.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS, Westminsten, Nov. 23.

The Lord Chief Justice sat for a short time this morning at Guildhall, and disposed of several undefended causes, when he proceeded to Westminster, and joined the other Judges sitting in Banco.

In the case of Lieutenant William Blennerhassett Fairman, sole proprietor of the Palladium newspaper, Mr. Sergeant Wilde moved to charge him in execution upon a judgment which had been entered upon against him.

Mr. Sergeant Vaughan showed cause against the commitment of Mr. Fairman, upon an affidavit which stated that he (Mr. Fairman) was prepared with a good defence, and that judgment had gone against him in consequence of the negligence of an attorney, named Ragg, who had informed him that the action was become supersedable, upon which Mr. Fairman advanced him 10l. for the purpose of superseding the action. This Ragg had altogether neglected to do, and refused to attend in Court without a special order from the Judges.

The Court decided that Mr. Sergeant Vaughan should take a rule to show cause why the proceedings should not be laid open, and why Ragg should not appear to answer the allegations which had been made against him.

COURT OF CONDELEGATES, Friday.

Dr. Lee, one of their Lordships, moved the the Commission to order, in the case of Sir Wastell Brisco, Bart. v. Lady Brisco, the production of the various bills of costs in the Consistory Court of London, and Arches Court of Canterbury, incurred in this protracted suit from its commencement about twelve years ago.

Dr. Lee required that these should be produced and forwarded to the High Commission, to sit on this matter at Sergeant's Inn, Lord Chief Justice Best, and two others of the Judges, presiding, assisted by about six of the Advocates of the College of Arches.

The motion was agreed to by their Lordships; and the Registrar was directed to issue the necessary orders.

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

MANSION HOUSE.—Samuel Morrey, an officer of the Customs, was brought before the Lord Mayor, on a charge of having committed an outrageous assault on Monsieur Moreau, a French silk mercer.

Mr. Butler (the late managing clerk of Mr. Harmer) conducted the case as clerk to Mr. Hobler, jun. It was one which, for the sake of the personal protection of those foreign tradesmen who came to London for the purposes of trade, demanded peculiar protection. Some time since, when the introduction of foreign goods was encouraged by the favourable opinion expressed towards them by Government, Mr. Moreau brought over a quantity, which were seized by the defendant. Some treaty was entered into respecting them with him, but it was ultimately broken, and the Board itself petitioned. Through the liberal interference of the Hon. Mr. Villiers, one of the Commissioners, the suit in the Exchequer was mitigated to a fine of 100l. The defendant appeared to be much disappointed at the application to a higher quarter, and still more at the non-payment by Moreau of a bill of costs which was charged against him, but which he did not consider himself called upon to pay. The defendant, consequently finding Messrs. Cross and Sewell, of Great Newport-street, Soho, haberdashers, as Mr. Moreau's bail, he went thither, and seized a quantity of silk goods as foreign, which were afterwards proved to be British, and were ordered to be returned. Pursuing the same system, he followed the complainant a few days since in Cheapside, declaring that he was determined to see where his new warehouse was, and, in fact, stuck to him till he got there, in the Old Jewry. The defendant was forcing himself in, when the complainant refused to let him in until he produced a warrant. The defendant avowed that he had no warrant, but he lifted up his stick, and levelled a blow at the head of the complainant, who was holding the door against his admission, and obliged him to fly. The defendant then went in, rummaged over the drawers, scattered the goods about, and finding nothing he could safely take, left the premises. Was this conduct to be tolerated?

These facts were substantially proved in evidence.

The officer's defence was, that the complainant had invited him in.—"My Lord," said the defendant, "He's a spite against me, because he knows I hunts him up."

The Lord Mayor ordered the defendant to find bail to answer for the assault.

GUILDHALL.—An important discussion arose at this office on Tuesday, upon the right of overseers to interfere when the father and mother of an illegitimate child or children, are living together and supporting their offspring, without requiring any parochial aid.

In the case before the magistrates, Sir John Perring and Sir P. Laurie, one Mary Puddington, a middle-aged widow, was brought up last week, to make oath as to the father of a natural child she had borne, so that an order of affiliation might be made upon him; but as the said father had supported her kindly during and ever since her confinement, she refused to be sworn, denying the right of the overseer to trouble himself about her or her child, so long as she avoided asking relief from him. Upon this refusal, the churchwarden of St. Bartholomew the Great prayed her commitment as a lewd woman: and to justify this, it was not necessary to shew that she was lewd in the common acceptation of the word, that she had bestowed her favours upon more than one individual, or borne more than one natural child, for the 50th of Geo. III. cap. 51, enacts that where a woman shall have any bastard child, "which may be chargeable to the parish," any two justices may send her to the house of correction, and there set her on work for not exceeding twelve months, nor less than six weeks; and, by another statute, magistrates are left to exercise their discretion as to the manner and extent of punishment; the 18th of Elizabeth, cap. 3, directing in such cases, "that the two next justices shall take order therein as well for the punishment of the mother and reputed father, as for the relief of the porish," without prescribing the mode of punishment; and this act is held to extend to other illegitimate children than those actually chargeable to any parish. (See 4 Maule and Selwyn, 559.)

Mary Puddington was committed for twelve months; but a few hours' imprisonment induced her to repent of her obstinacy, and she was brought up again, having signified her readiness to swear all that was required. The oath was administered, but Mr. Payne, the clerk, observing that this was an unusual case, the child never having been really chargeable to the parish, but that so long as it continued not to be burdensome, the operation of the order of affiliation would be suspended,

Sir John Perring said he had been a magistrate a great number of years, and had never been called on to do such an act as this. He never would sign his name to such a conditional order as this. It was allowed that the parish had not been damnified, and it might not be damnified. Then, why should the churchwarden have the power over a man which the order gave him? Ought he to be in possession of it?

Mr. Payne said the magistrates had certainly a right to make the order.

Sir Peter Laurie thought the parish-officers might fairly ask for this order, because they were afraid the man would escape if they waited till the mother applied for relief.

Sir John—But she may never apply, for relief, and the parish officers, having the order for the payment of some three or four shillings a week, will not prevent the man from escaping. It is time enough to stir when he does run.

The order was then withdrawn unsigned, and Mr. Payne suggested that the question might be more deliberately discussed by applying to the sessions itself to make the order, which it possessed the power of doing.

A release had been promised to Mary, to induce her to take the required oath; but when she now applied to be dismissed, the beadle told her, as the order had not been made, his bargain with her was void. The magistrates finding their power to release her before the expiration of six weeks doubtful, although disposed to discharge her at once, ordered her to be remanded until the opinion of the City Solicitor should be taken. The churchwarden signified he should not oppose her liberation.

BOW-STREET.—SMUGGLING AND MURDER.—On Thursday four men, named Richard Higgins, Paul Pearce, John Bailey, and Edward Bantry, were brought before Sir R. Birnie, charged with having been concerned in the murder of William Morgan, quartermaster of the Preventive Service, on Dover-beach, on the night of the 30th of July. They were also charged with several offences against the Revenue Laws, independently of the murder in question.

It will be recollected that about a month ago eight men were committed from this office on the same charges, principally upon the testimony of an accomplice named Horne. The approver had given in the names of others as being concerned, and upon his information Smith, a principal officer, went into Kent on Monday se'nnight, and apprehended the four men above named, with the assistance of the Preventive Service men.

Previous to the examination being gone into, Bantry humbly begged to be admitted an evidence for the Crown; and, after much consideration, his request was complied with.

The case of the murder of Morgan was first gone into, and Higgins and Pearce were sworn to, as being present with arms upon that occasion. Horne, the accomplice, gave precisely the same evidence as upon the former occasion. Bantry gave evidence in corroboration, and the testimony of each tallied almost exactly. The Preventive Service men who were present on the occasion repeated their former statements.

A charge applying to all the three prisoners was next gone into, namely, for assembling with arms at Hythe on the night of the 4th of August, to assist in the running of contraband goods. The approvers swore to the three prisoners as being present on that night, when a cargo of tubs of spirits was run, and fire arms were used.

The prisoners were fully committed for trial at the next Maidstone Assizes.

QUEEN-SQUARE—Two countrymen were examined on Wednesday charged with stealing seven sheep. One of the prisoners was met by the patrol, at two o'clock in the morning, coming from Barnes Common. He said they got the sheep at Windsor, and that they belonged to a Mr. Mills, Vauxhall-bridge.—Mr. Mills denied that he knew any thing about them.—The prisoner, first met with the sheep, said, he had left his brother, who had been driving the sheep with him, at the Castle, in Brentford. One of the prisoners afterwards confessed they had found the sheep near Brentford-bridge, on the road-side. They were remanded, and ordered to be kept apart until some one came forward to own the property.

EXTRAORDINARY CASE.

(From the Brighton Gazette.)

The case of Thomas Davey was called on, and Miss Mary Anne Hartwell was sworn, but being so much agitated as to be unable to give her evidence, Mr. Colbatch took her deposition out of Court. She was afterwards led in, and placed in a chair. The prisoner on seeing her burst into tears, and was obliged to lean on a person at his side for support. Mr. Colbath then proceeded to read the deposition of Miss Hartwell, which ran thus:—She had been on terms of intimacy with the prisoner about six months, who had paid his addresses to her, and it was agreed that the wedding should take place on Tuesday last. Miss Hartwell, however, changing her mind, and wishing it to be put off, but still to be on a friendly footing with the prisoner, sent a letter to Cosham, where he resided, to that effect. The prisoner immediately came to Brighton, and insisted upon being married on Tuesday, as previously arranged, but she still refused. On that day he came to her father's house, and asked her to go up stairs, desiring to speak with her, but she said she could not till her mother, who was below, came up. Seeing his countenance look wild and ghastly, she became alarmed, and called to the manservant, who was going out with some beer, to secure the prisoner; and in endeavouring to get from him to go down stairs, a pistol, which the prisoner had, went off. Being asked if the prisoner said that he would shoot her, she replied, "No, not to her knowledge." The prisoner at this moment became violently agitated, and said, in a voice scarcely audible, "It was pointed to myself, not to her."

James Coates being sworn, stated that on Tuesday morning between nine and ten o'clock, he was at the Thurlow Arms, where he saw the prisoner in a parlour; he shewed witness a pair of pistols, for which he said he had given two guineas, and he was going upon the hills to try them for a friend for whom he had purchased them. Witness cut the lead off to make some bullets, and the prisoner gave the pot-boy some halfpence to procure some powder; he then loaded both pistols, and went away. The prisoner appeared agitated.

John Crosweller, a waiter in the employ of Mr. Hartwell, stated, that on Tuesday morning he was going out with some beer; he was on the steps, when Miss Hartwell told him to call her mother. Witness thought they were playing, but in a moment after she called out, "For God's sake, John, take him away." He immediately seized the prisoner, and in the scuffle the pistol went off.

The prisoner was asked if he wished to put any questions to the witnesses, but he said nothing, and appeared to be on his guard not to say any thing to commit himself. Being asked if his father and mother were living, he said he had a mother who resided at Cosham; and two or three persons stepped forward, who said they knew the family, and that they were always considered respectable.

During the examination the prisoner appeared scarcely able to stand. His eyes rolled wildly, and his countenance exhibited various changes, more particularly while Miss Hartwell was present.

The Magistrates said that, under all the circumstances, they should content themselves with binding over the prisoner to keep the peace for two years towards Mary Ann Hartwell, himself in 200l. and two sureties in 150l. each, and to give 48 hours' notice of bail.

Before Miss Hartwell left the Court, Sir David Scott observed that it was his opinion that, out of kindness to the prisoner, she had not told the whole truth.

Prisoner.—No, she has not told you enough of the truth.

The Court was crowded to excess during the examination.

We understand that the cause which induced Miss Hartwell to break off the match with Davey, the above young man, on the charge of attempting to shoot her, was the influence which a notorious quack doctor of this town had unfortunately acquired over her. This man, who is well known by the title which he assumes of "Dr. Hallett," went, we understand, to Miss Hartwell, and assured her, that if she married her lover before Christmas, she would be wretched to the end of her life. The infatuated girl listened, and was induced to put off the wedding as already stated. On this followed the attempt, as it was then represented, although it has been now in a great measure explained away, to shoot her. Davey was taken to the Thurlow Arms, where Hallett sought and found him. Hallett proceeded, as it is stated to us, to exhort Davey, when he went before the magistrates, not to be induced to give bail, but to go to prison, assuring him that he would be liberated at Christmas, when he would marry the girl and lead a happy life. It appears by the result, that he failed to acquire over the mind of the man the same influence which he had obtained over the girl's.—Brighton Gazette.

The sum of 500,000l. was lodged on Thursday last at the banking-house of Messrs. Coutts and Co., to be applied to the payment of the claims on the Deccan prize money, which commenced yesterday.

We are sorry to hear that the Marquis of Hastings has had an accident, which has occasioned serious alarm to his family. It appears, however, by the latest accounts, that danger was over, and that his Lordship was gradually recovering from the effects of the accident, although he was still confined to his couch.—Evening Paper.

At the last meeting of the trustees of the turnpike-road leading from Warminster and Frome to Bath, a Committee was appointed to prepare a petition to Parliament for a reduction of the present enormous expences in procuring local Turnpike Acts. Upwards of 450l. were paid to one of the clerks of the House of Commons upon passing the last Act for the roads of this Trust, exclusive of the solicitor's bill and other expences. It is hoped that the Trustees of other roads will give their aid in enforcing the reform of so gross an abuse, and adopt similar petitions.

DEATH BY SUFFOCATION.—An inquest was held at Rotherhithe on the bodies of Ruben and Susan Smith. Ruben was cook on board the Mangle free trader, then lying in Lavender Dock, and his wife was on board that ship with him. At nine o'clock on Saturday night, the wife was seen in bed in the cabin, and her husband eating his supper. At that time there was a hanging stove in the cabin, and a quantity of charcoal burning in the stove. On the Sunday morning the boatswain called to the deceased, and not receiving an answer, he imagined Smith and his wife were gone on shore, the cabin door being locked. Nothing more was heard of them until the Monday morning, when a man on board got into the cabin through the window, and found the woman in bed and the man lying on his side, both dead. It was the opinion of the witnesses and the Jury, that suffocation was the cause of their death, and a verdict was returned accordingly.

STANNARY AND BRITISH MINING COMPANY.

A meeting of the Shareholders of the above Company was held in Batson's, on Friday, Mr. Robertson in the Chair. There were only fourteen gentlemen in the room. Mr. Robertson said, although in point of numbers the meeting was small, it represented a large majority of the Shareholders of the Company. He, of himself, and by proxy, held 600 shares, and altogether in the room, there were the representatives of 1,200 out of a total of about 1,600 shares sold. He added, that the case in the Vice-Chancellor's Court had been dismissed, solely on account of an informality. The bill against the Directors was filed by five persons, as trustees for the rest, and the Vice-Chancellor held that they could not file a bill as trustees, but that in any bill to be filed every party to it could represent no one but himself. It was the opinion of the Attorney-General, and of Mr. Knight, whom the trustees had consulted, that if this informality was removed, not only was there an almost positive certainty of the bill's passing, but, on the merits of the question, there was a probability of success.

A Shareholder asked the state of the funds subscribed for carrying on the suit?

Chairman—There are none—in point of fact, less than none—for the half-crowns a share subscribed by the proprietors are not only expended, but our Solicitor has an account of 80*l.* against us not yet paid.

A long conversation ensued, in which the principal speakers were Mr. W. Clarke, the Chairman, and Mr. Knight, the Solicitor of the Shareholders. It was at length unanimously agreed to go on with the suit, by filing an amended bill, as advised by Counsel; and to defray the expenses of this proceeding, another half-crown per share was entered into.

In the course of the day, it was distinctly stated that there was no distinction in respect of the validity of their claims on the Directors between the original shareholders and the scripholders.

The Duke of Wellington, and the Duke of Beaufort, Lord Jersey, Lord Cole, Lord Bingham, Lord W. Lennox, Lord Weymouth, Lord Belfast, Lord Alvanley, and Lord Mount Charles; Baron Hachfield, Baron Frieland, Marquis Palmella, and the Hon. Lincoln Stanhope; Countess of Stanhope, Countess of Jersy, Hon. Mrs. Lamb, and several other families of distinction, visited the Adelphi Theatre during the week.

Lord Cochrane, we understand, has left Marseilles for Leghorn. We have also reason to believe that his Lordship, though distressed and irritated by the delays in the construction and equipment of the steam boats, and all the fraudulent proceedings of individuals in this country with respect to the Greek loans, is still far from despairing of the Greek cause, or thinking that he cannot effectually serve it.—Times.

THE CORN LAWS.—A Requisition to the High Sheriff is now in progress of signature, for calling a Meeting of the Landed Proprietors and others of the County Tipperary, for the purpose of petitioning both Houses of Parliament against any alteration in the Corn Laws.—Dublin Patriot.

His Majesty's stag-hounds meet to-morrow at Farnham Common, and on Friday at Langley Broom, at half-past ten o'clock each day.

It is rumoured that some improvement is in contemplation in the Police establishment, by increasing the number of the night patrole particularly, in consequence of the increase and audacity of housebreakers and thieves of every description. It is astonishing that some plan cannot be devised for the discovery of common receivers of stolen goods, who abound in every part of the metropolis, several of whom exhibit signals at their doors, well known to the thieves, that they will purchase stolen property.

On Friday week, Mrs. Medcalf, wife of Mr. Townley Medcalf, who lives in Gerard-street, with her child, about 16 months old, called at his mother's, in Upper Dawson-street, and he called there in the evening. After remaining some time the child having fallen asleep upon his knee, he took it up stairs, the servant carrying the candle, and with her assistance put it comfortably into a folding bed, leaving its head uncovered. Some time afterwards, the servant, a girl of fifteen, having occasion to make room for some additional company (it being a public-house), went into the room where the child lay, and forgetting the child, turned up the bed, and left the company in the room. Shortly afterwards, Mrs. Medcalf inquired where the child was, went up stairs, and to her inexpressible grief and agony, found the bed turned up, and the little innocent smothered."—Liverpool paper.

Captain Chaworth, of the 10th Royal Hussars, we regret to learn, has met with an accident, which had nearly been attended with a fatal result. On the morning of Friday week, Captain Chaworth went at an early hour to his father's estate at Annesley, in this county, intending to enjoy the diversion of shooting. Upon enquiring for the gamekeeper, he found that that person was absent; he, however, took his gun and proceeded to the woods, and, being unaccompanied by any one who could point out to him where the spring-guns were set, he unfortunately trod upon one of the wires; the shot from the gun struck him in the thigh, but the wound, we are happy to learn, is of a slight nature.—Nottingham Herald.

SUDDEN DEATH.—On Wednesday last, an inquest was held at the Half Moon Tavern, Croydon, Surrey, before Richard Carter Esq. Coroner, and a respectable Jury of Gentlemen, on view of the body of Thomas Mackinder, Esq. 56 years of age, who died suddenly on the Sunday evening preceding. It appeared in evidence, that the deceased dined at his usual hour on Sunday in perfect health, and left his house shortly after to visit his sister, who was at that time ill in the neighbourhood. On his return home, about eight in the evening, one of the servants let him in, and he went into the parlour, where Mrs. Mackinder was sitting, and in less than five minutes after the servant heard something fall in the parlour, and Mrs. Mackinder screaming at the same instant. The servant ran into the parlour, and found the deceased gentleman lying dead on the floor. Verdict—"Died by the Visitation of God."

THE RECORDER'S REPORT.—On Thursday the Recorder made his report to the King in Council of the prisoners in Newgate, who received judgment of death at the September Old Bailey Sessions, viz.:—

John Shales, 34, and John Williams, 26, for returning from transportation; James Field, 21, William Johnson alias Hawkes, 19, Joseph Frost, 19, and Samuel Merrett, 21, for horse-stealing; James Spencer, 20, George Morgan, 22, and Charles Haycraft, 16, for burglary; John Luckhurst, 19, William Johnson, 17, George Mullens, 15, William Arthur, 16, John William Wilson, 24, Thomas Walker, 32, William Johnson, 20, Elizabeth Allender, 30, Ann Allender, 50, Thomas Powell, 21, Samuel Percival, 21, and Edward Elliott, 33, for housebreaking; Benjamin Robinson, 23, William Thomas, 34, John Hayes, 25, Samuel Mappen, 53, Caroline Fitzallen, 23, Mary Hastings, 42, Caroline Hopper, 30, Charles Currie, 19, John Williams, 14, Thomas Slark, 15, Joseph Cane, 14, Daniel Lynch, 18, and William James, 17, for stealing in a dwelling house to the value of 40s. and upwards; William Waters, 17, William Andrews, 17, John King, 50, Catherine Parmenter, 18, Sarah Jarvis, 19, James Boyce, 25, Robert King, 21, John Robinson, 19, George Nicholls, 24, James Goulby, 18, and John Pleydell, 15, for highway robbery. His Majesty was graciously pleased to order that all the above-named prisoners should be respited during his Royal pleasure, excepting John Hayes, J. Boyce, R. King, J. Robinson, G. Nicholls, and James Goulby (part of the Bethnal Green gang), upon whom the law is left to take its course, and they are appointed for execution on Wednesday next, the 29th inst. The case of George Houghton (also one of the gang) is deferred, in order to be reported with the case of James Bishop, who was convicted in the last October Sessions.

PRICE OF STOCKS UP TO FOUR O'CLOCK YESTERDAY.

BRITISH.

Bank Stock, 202¾	India Stock,
Red. 3 per Cent. 82⅝¾⅞½	India Bonds, 38 36 prem.
3 per Cent. Cons. 83¼½⅜⅝	Exch. Bills, 1000, 20 18 pm.
3½ per Cent. Red. 88⅜½	Do. 500, 20 19 pm.
New 4 per Cent. 98¼ 7¾ 8¼	Do. Small, 19 23 pm.
4 per Cent. 1826, 96¾ 7¼	Cons. for Acc. 83¼½⅜¾½
Long Anns. 19⅝¼ 7-16	Scrip,

COURT OF KING'S BENCH.—(YESTERDAY.)

The Lord Chief Justice being still confined to his house by the injury he received on Thursday last, Mr. Justice Bayley this morning sat at Nisi Prius, and disposed of several undefended causes.

THE KING V. WM. H. ELLIS.

The prisoner, who had been convicted at the last Assizes for the County of Deven, of stealing from the till of the shop in which he was employed, the sum of 6s. the property of his employer, was this day brought up to receive the judgment of the Court. A motion had been made on a former day in arrest of judgment, by Mr. Chitty, who was heard on Friday in support of his motion, and Mr. Praed was heard on the same side yesterday. Mr. C. F. Williams and Mr. Colridge having shortly addressed the Court in reply,

Mr. Justice Bayley, in pronouncing the judgment of the Court, said: W. H. Ellis, you have been convicted on an indictment, charging you with stealing from Susan Newman, widow, the sum of six shillings. On a review of the evidence, there is no doubt you were properly convicted. You had been in the service of the husband during his life; you had acquired the good opinion of the widow and her friends, and were in a situation where you might have continued to obtain honestly a remuneration for your services. It was your duty, from the situation in which you were placed, and from gratitude, to have taken care of her property. It is impossible for people in trade, although there is no extravagance on their own part, to provide for their families, and avoid pecuniary difficulties, when they have about them a person in your situation preying on their vitals. Your case is of a very aggravated description, a case of which an example should be held out. The Court cannot but feel that this offence may be practised to a very considerable extent in every shop in the kingdom, and on a satisfactory conviction, like the present, they are bound to pass such a sentence as will deter such practices for the future. It has been stated on your behalf that you have been fourteen months in confinement, and that in consequence thereof you have received the recommendation of the jury to the merciful consideration of the Court. The Court were always disposed to attend to such recommendations, and you have received the benefit of it. The sentence of the Court is, that you be transported for the term of seven years to such place as his Majesty, by the advice of his Privy Council, may be pleased to direct, and that in the mean time you be committed to his Majesty's gaol of Newgate.

THE KING ON THE PROSECUTION OF MADAME VESTRIS V. DUNCOMBE.

Mr. Scarlett moved for a rule to shew cause why a criminal information should not be granted against John Duncombe, pamphlet-seller, of Queen-street, Holborn, for a false and scandalous libel on Madame Vestris, the celebrated actress—Mr. Scarlett read the affidavit of the lady, which, after enumerating the libels complained of, positively contradicted the statements put forth in the pamphlet published by the defendant, purporting to be a "Life of Madame Vestris."

The Court immediately granted a rule.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.—(YESTERDAY.)

SWENY V. SHARP.

In this case the defendant (a schoolmaster) took the benefit of the Insolvent Act, subsequently to which he applied to the plaintiff (a tailor) to let him have a suit of clothes, to enable him to appear with decency in his profession; if he would do so, he would give him a cognovit for the payment of the original debt and costs; this arrangement was entored into, and eventually a judgment obtained against the defendant.

Mr. Sergeant Wilde obtained a rule to set aside this judgment, on the ground that it was giving a preference to one creditor to the disadvantage of the other creditors named in the schedule of the insolvent, and contrary to a clause in the Insolvent Debtors' Act.

Mr. Sergeant Vaughan shewed cause against the rule.

The Court held that it was a new agreement entered into, by which he was bound, and was not a case within the clause in the act stated, which prohibited any judgment upon an action pending or instituted for any debt contracted before the discharge, but this was a subsequent right created. As it was a new question under a recent act of Parliament, the rule must be discharged without costs.

A King's Messenger was sent on Friday evening from the office of the Secretary of State for Colonial Affairs, with dispatches from Earl Bathurst to Sir F. Adam, the Lord High Commissioner of the Ionian Islands, at Milan.

The King of Saxony has bestowed a pension of 2,000 francs on the widow of the late Carl Maria Von Weber. A benefit is also to be given next week ht the Theatre Odeon, in Paris, the profits of which are to be appropriated to her use. The piece selected for the occasion is a revival of one of the distinguished composer's earlest comporitions, Robin des Bois.

It will be in the recollection of our readers, that Mr. Cuthbert, of Broadstairs, Thanet, became one of the bail, in the sum of 1,500l., for the appearance of Mr. Wakefield, to take his trial for the abduction of Miss Turner. Mr. Wakefield absconded; and on Monday the Bodar of Dover Castle (sheriff's officer) took possession of the property of Mr. Cuthbert, at Broadstairs, to pay the forfeited recognizances of that gentleman.—Kent Herald.

The departure of a king's messenger for the United States of America (a circumstance quite unusual, as the services of these officers are generally confined to Europe), is said to have been occasioned by a misunderstanding with the American Government, on a subject to which we not long ago drew public attention, viz. The claim set up by the Americans, and particularly by the State of Maine, to a tract of land always heretofore considered as a part of our province of New Brunswick, and inhabited by people who have always acknowledged the British Sovereignty, and been actually enrolled in the New Brunswick Militia. This territory, only important to the Americans as a means of aggression, is important to us as a means of defence, and to preserve a winter communication with Canada. In what state the negociation concerning it now is we are not able to say; but importance seems to be attached to it by the Government, and certainly, as far as the eventual preservation of Canada is concerned, is of great consequence.—Globe.

A fine girl, the daughter of an innkeeper at Marlborough, in the early part of last weeek, went to a druggist's shop, and asked for some arsenic for the purpose of poisoning rats, in a situation where a trap could not be placed. Being well known at the shop, the quantity she asked for (two ounces) was given to her, labelled "poison." She then went home, and swallowed the whole of it in a glass of gin and water; immediately acknowledged what she had done, and thanking God that she had had the resolution. In less than an hour from the time she swallowed the poison, she was a corpse. An inquest was held on the body on the following morning. The verdict of the Jury was—"That she poisoned herself while under the influence of temporary derangement." It is rumoured that she had formed an intimacy with a young man, of which her father disapproved; and this preying on her mind, led to the rash act.

DESTRUCTIVE EARTHQUAKE.

Accounts from St. Jago de Cuba state, that the most awful earthquake experienced for fifty years took place on the 18th of September, between three and four o'clock A.M. by which one half of the town was destroyed. There were two shocks, the second more severe than the first; the duration of each about one minute. The shock began by a noise resembling the rumbling of heavy-loaded waggons dragged over a paved archway, and finished with a tremendous explosion, like the simultaneous discharge of an immense number of cannon. Men, women, and children left their beds and fled to the cathedral, amidst the most heart-breaking cries and shrieks, crossing themselves, and craving protection of the priests, who are stated to have been most active on the occasion, blessing the waters of the baths, into which the naked and distracted inhabitants plunged themselves, and remained for hours immersed to the neck. The clergy have claimed the honour of preserving the whole island from destruction by the efficacy of their prayers.—This earthquake was felt at Kingston, Jamaica, on the same day and hour.

A meeting of the Committee of the Lords of the King's Privy Council, was held Friday at one o'clock, at the Council Office, which was attended by the Earl of Harrowby, Lord Bexley, the Master of the Rolls, the Right Honourable Sir John Nichol, Sir John Becket, and Mr. Wynn. Their Lordships separated soon after three o'clock.

A number of the Cabinet Ministers assembled Friday afternoon about three o'clock, at the Foreign Office. Among those present were Earl Harrowby, the Earl of Westmoreland, Lord Bexley, Mr. Secretary Canning, &c. The Ministers continued in deliberation till five o'clock.

Friday afternoon, about five o'clock, the King went to visit his Royal Brother, the Duke of York, at the house of the Duke of Rutland, in Arlington-street, and remained with his Royal Brother about an hour.

Earl Pembroke has generously intimated to his numerous tenantry, his intention of deducting twenty-five per cent. on their respective rents, in consequence of the depressed state of agriculture.

Mr. Willock arrived yesterday morning at the East India House, with dispatches, dated the 19th of September, from the Persian Government. They announce, that the Persian Government was compelled, in consequence of the repeated aggressions of the Russians, to take up arms, and that, down to the above period, the Persian troops had not experienced any reverses. The Persian Government solicits the friendly mediation of England between the Belligerents.

ROMAN CATHOLIC CLAIMS—PROTESTANT PETITION.—We are requested to state, that a Petition to both Houses of Parliament, from the Protestant inhabitants of Waterford (whose names shall be thereunto affixed), upon the demands of the Roman Catholics, is in the course of preparation, and will be left at the office of this paper, in a day or two, to receive signatures.—Waterford Mail.

CAST METAL PIANOS.—Every day the use of cast-iron is becoming more general. In England it is now used in the erection of bridges and churches, in building steam-boats and in improving roads. Here, in Paris, we have lately got Pianos, the frame-work of which is formed of cast-iron. These instruments have been brought to such perfection by MM. Pleyel and Co. that not only do they rival, but, in many particulars, surpass the best English instruments. The solidity of the frame-work is so great, that they seldom get out of tune, and the sound-board, relieved from those enormous pieces of wood with which it was formerly cumbered, in order to resist the strain, possesses much more elasticity, and seconds the vibration of the strings much better. The tone of these instruments is wonderful, both in power and mellowness, and the mechanism is so perfect, that it admits of the most delicate, as well as of the strongest touch. Indeed, we have no doubt that, when they are known they will put an end to the importation of foreign pianos. MM. Pleyel have also obtained a patent for square pianos with single strings.—French paper.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE AT OLDHAM.—Tuesday night, about a quarter before ten o'clock, a fire was observed in the fourth story of a large mill belonging to Messrs. Cussons, Bradley, and Wilde, at Oldham. How, or by what means, this destructive fire originated, has not been ascertained; but from the statement of the manager of the male department, who went through every room between eight and nine o'clock, and who left his lanthorn as usual on the staircase, it appeared at that time to have been perfectly safe, and free from smell of fire. The fire was first discovered in the carding-room, and so rapidly did it communicate from engine to engine, that notwithstanding a plentiful supply of water, all hopes of arresting its progress were soon abandoned, and the whole of that extensive building, with all its valuable machinery, soon fell a prey to the flames. We are happy to add, that no lives were lost, and that the proprietors were insured to the amount of 26,000l. though it is supposed the property destroyed will amount to 30,000l. Four hundred persons, we are sorry to hear, will be thrown out of employment by this catastrophe. Mr. Cussons had nearly fallen a victim to his endeavours to extinguish the fire. His perilous situation attracting the notice of some of the workmen, he was carried away dreadfully scorched, and is now confined to his bed.—Manchester Herald.

At the meeting of the Royal Society, on Friday evening, Chas. Bell, Esq. Surgeon, and author of several highly valuable works on anatomy and surgery, was admitted a member. A paper was read from Col. Miller relative to percussion shells.

MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT.—One of those fatal and frightful accidents, solely caused by the inattention and carelessness of nurses leaving children alone in rooms where fires are lighted, has thrown the family of Mr. Turner, farrier, of Little Marlborough-street, into very great affiiction, by the loss of a fine little boy, aged only four years, who died from the dreadful injuries he received by his clothes having caught fire, while playing near a grate in an up-stairs room of his father's house. The poor child was left playing in the room, and was reaching something from the mantel-shelf when his clothes caught fire, and he was in an instant, from the slight texture of his dress, completely enveloped in flames. In this state he ran screaming into the street, and some passengers soon tore the clothes from the child's back. The child was taken to the hospital, where he expired in great pain. An inquest was held on Thursday evening at the Middlesex Hospital, and a verdict of "Accidentally burnt to Death," was returned. The Coroner and Jury censured the too prevalent practice of leaving children alone, and observed, that if woollen clothes were more generally placed on children, the probability was, that the danger of fire would be much diminished, as woollen clothes would not burn so quickly.

POOR BARNARD, THE COMEDIAN.—A night or two ago, this once favourite comedian, of the Drury-lane establishment, was sitting, with scarcely a rag to cover him, at the Harp Theatrical-house, in Russell-street, when some person present, observing him faint and hungry, gave him some boiled beef, of which he ate so voraciously that he was all of a sudden seized with a stupor, and appeared like a man much intoxicated.—The waiter spoke to him, but he could make no answer; his legs had ceased to do their office, and he was placed on a man's back, and carried home to his lodgings, No. 10, Russell-court, and he has, we believe, never spoke since, he having been deprived of the organs of speech, and the use of his right side, baralytic stroke. A gentleman named Hill, connected with the profession, waited on Mr. Dowton, and explained poor Barnard's situstion, and Mr. Hughes, of Drury-lane Theatre, visited him directly, and humanely ordered him to be taken the greatest care of, and has engaged a nurse to attend him night and day.

AT SIMPSON'S MEDICINE WAREHOUSE, No. 28, Henrietta-street, Covent-Garden, London, are sold

The ARABIAN VEGETABLE PILLS, 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. per Box, free from mercury or antimony, inestimable as a Family Medicine for the removal of Indigestion, Bilious and Nervous Complaints, and as a mild Aperient.

The ROYAL ELIXIR of LIFE, in Bottles of 11s. each, strengthens the Stomach, increases the Appetite, dispels Spasms and Gout in the Stomach, and prevents all the inconveniences produced by excess at table.

The ANTISEPTIC BOTANICAL TOOTH-POWDER, 2s. 9d. per Box, cleanses, whitens, and preserves the Teeth, and fastens them, even if loosened by mercury.

These articles are sold (by appointment) at all respectable Medicine Venders, Chemists, and Druggists, throughout the kingdom.

Superior Eau de Cologne and Swiss Eau d'Arquebusade, Mason's Convent Soap, &c. &c.

THE BRITISH SPECIFIC, for re-producing and promoting the GROWTH of HAIR.—The principle of its operation is to cool and contract the pores which are opened by a redundancy of heat, occasioning a relaxation of the roots, and render them incapable of retaining the hair; to counteract which nothing is better calculated than the British Specific, as, from its invigorating and oleaginous properties, it almost immediately arrests the falling off, and affords such effectual nourishment to the roots, that persons giving it a fair trial may assure themselves of its speedily restoring it, even where it has become completely bald, however long it may have been so, and, if grey, gradually to restore it to its natural colour. The superiority of this preparation (the invention of a medical man) derives additional recommendation from its being, unlike other compositions for the hair, so extremely clean and agreeable, that its application is a real pleasure, and is only requisite to be generally known to receive the preference of every article in use for similar purposes. To be had only of D. PEDEN, 209, Regent-street, and 15, Burlington Arcade, Piccadilly, in bottles, 6s. each, or cases of four bottles for 1l., forward to order on receiving the amount, post paid.

BURGESS' ESSENCE of ANCHOVIES, Warehouse, 107, STRAND, corner of Savoy Steps, London.---JOHN BURGESS and SON, being apprised of the numerous endeavours made by many persons to impose a spurious article for their make, feel it incumbent upon them to request the attention of the public, in purchasing what they conceive to be the ORIGINAL, to observe the Name and Address correspond with the above. The general appearance of the spurious descriptions will deceive the unguarded, and for their detection J. B. and Son submit the following caution:---Some are in appearance at first sight "Burgess' Essence of Anchovies;" others, "Burgis's," and many more without address.--JOHN BURGESS and SON having been many years honoured with such distinguished approbation, feel every sentiment of respect towards the public, and earnestly solicit them to inspect the labels previous to purchasing what they conceive to be of their make, which they hope will prevent many disappointments.

Burgess' New Sauce for general purposes having given such great satisfaction, continues to be prepared by them, and is recommended as a most useful and convenient sauce; will keep good in all climates.

Warehouse, 107, Strand, corner of the Savoy Steps.—The Original Fish-Sauce Warehouse.

MOGUL, OR REAL CHETNA SAUCE.

C. HODGSON, ORIGINAL INVENTOR AND SOLE PROPRIETOR, is induced to caution his Friends and the Public against several spurious Sauces offered for sale, under the title of "MOGUL, or REAL CHETNA."

C. H. will feel obliged if each purchaser of the above delicious Sauce will please to observe the Label; which should be signed, "C. HODGSON," and the Cork, sealed and impressed, "HODGSON'S MOGUL SAUCE," without which none can be genuine.

C. H. also begs to acquaint those who have not yet made a trial of this much approved Sauce, that the flavour will be found quite different, and far superior to any yet offered, for all kinds of Curries, Steaks, Stews, Chops, Hashes, Game, Grills, Broiled and Wild Fowl, Cold Meat, and for enriching Gravies, &c., and feels assured, that when tasted, it will fully justify what he has above stated. To Merchants and East and West India Captains, it is stongly recommended, being warranted to retain its full flavour in any climate.

To be had at the manufactory, No. 68, Long Lane, Borough, London, at the Piazza Coffee-house, Covent-garden, the Queen's Head Tavern, Holborn, and at any of the principal Oilmen and Grocers in Town and Country.

NEW EDITION, THE TENTH, ENLARGED,
With Observations on the Danger of trusting to Nostrums, as an Internal Remedy for the Cure of Strictures. Illustrated by Cases. Price 3s.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS on STRICTURES of the URETHRA and RECTUM, recommending an improved system for their Treatment and Cure; illustrating its efficacy by numerous remarkable and highly important cases, in some of which, Strictures of from ten to twenty years duration have been totally removed in a few weeks, and its superiority thereby fully established over every other method hitherto practised. By C. B. COURTENAY, M.D. To which are added, Observations and Practical Comments on Gleet, Seminal Weakness, and the miseries occasioned by Self Abuse, for the cure of which a mode of treatment, the result of long and successful practice, and at once safe, speedy, and effectual, is adopted by the Author.

Printed for the Author, Robert-street, Adelphi; and published and sold by Jones and Sherwood, Paternoster-row; Onwhyn, 4, Catherine-street, Strand; Chapell, Royal Exchange; Marsh, 145, Oxford-street; Walker, 90, High Holborn; Chappell, 94, Pall Mall; Sutherland, 9, Carlton-street, Edinburgh; and may be had of all Booksellers.

"We earnestly recommend the cases related by Dr. Courtenay to the perusal of such of our readers as are afflicted with the complaints which the Author has made the subject of these Observations. Several instances are adduced of the recovery of perfect health from states which were considered hopeless by Practitioners of eminent talents, and very extensive experience. We entertain the highest opinion of Dr. Courtenay's professional skill, and congratulate him on his successful and judicious application to these severe and often fatal diseases."—European Magazine.

TO FAMILIES TRAVELLING, PROMENADING, and ENJOYING AQUATIC EXCURSIONS, &c. &c. are respectfully recommended the following Genuine Articles, which at this season of the Year are indispensable for the preservation of personal attraction;—

ROWLAND'S KALYDOR FOR THE COMPLEXION.

An inestimable, mild, and innocent production, powerfully efficacious in thoroughly exterminating Eruptions, Tan, Pimples, Freckles, Redness, and all Cutaneous Imperfections; producing a delicate White Skin, and a Juvenile Bloom to the Complexion; preserving it from the Heat of Summer.—In Travelling, Promenading, or enjoying Aquatic Excursions, it immediately allays the smarting irritability of the Skin, diffusing a Pleasing Coolness truly comfortable and refreshing; affords soothing relief to Ladies nursing their offspring; warranted perfectly innoxious for the most delicate Lady or Infant.

To Gentlemen after Shaving, it allays the irritating and smarting pain, and renders the Skin smooth and pleasant. Price 4s. 6d. and 8s. 6d. per bottle, duty included.

To Preserve the Human Hair, during Travelling, Bathing, and Violent Exercise, and to retain it in healthy vigour to the latest period of Life, is particularly recommended

ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL.

The first production of the age, and the Original and Genuine.

A Vegetable Production, possessing salubrious and wonderful nutritive properties, which prevents the Hair falling off, occasioned by excessive perspiration; is pre eminently successful in nourishing the Hair; preventing its falling off or turning grey, &c. and has the unequalled property of giving a most fascinating and delectable appearance to the Hair.—Price 3s. 6d.—7s.—10s. 6d. and 21s. per bottle. The distinguished sanction it has received from Royal and Illustrious Personages, in addition to the flattering testimonials transmitted of its efficacy, places this declaration above suspicion.

CAUTION.—In consequence of the high popularity of the above articles, Flagrant Impostors have made false statements, and counterfeited each; Copying Bills, Labels, and Bottles, which renders it indispensably necessary on purchasing, to ask for "ROWLAND'S," strictly observing that each Bottle of Rowland's Genuine Articles are enclosed in a Wrapper, Signed on the Label in Red,

A. ROWLAND AND SON, 20, HATTON GARDEN.

Sold by appointment, by Mr. Hendrie, Perfumer, Titchborne-street; Mr. Smith, Messrs. Gattie and Peirce, 57, Mr. Delcroix, 158, D. Rigge, 35, New Bond-street; Bayley and Blew, Cockspur-street; Berry and Lloyd, Greek-street; Mr. Sanger, 150, Oxford-street; Mr. Low, 330, Prout, 226, Strand; Butler, Chemist, 4, Cheapside; Barclay and Sons, 95, Fleet Market; Mr. Rigge, 65, Cheapside; Mr. Sutton, Bow Church-yard; Mr. Edwards, 66, and Messrs. Newberry, St. Paul's Church-yard; Mr. Burgess, Holborn-hill; Mr. Kennaby, Bartholomew-close; Messrs. Evans, Long-lane; Messrs. Dunn and Co Hatton-Garden; and all respectable Medicine Venders, &c.

BIRTHS.—On the 19th inst. at Thorney, Bucks, the lady of Captain George Tyler, R.N. of a son.—On the 21th inst. at Clapham Common, Mrs. J. Shewell, of a son.—On the 24th inst. the lady of Mr. T. J. Mawe, of New Bridge-street, Blackfriars, of a daughter.

MARRIED.—On the 21st inst. at Bristol, Cornelius Hanbury, of Plough-court, Lombard-street, to Elizabeth Sanderson.

DIED.—On the 22d inst. in Harley-street, aged 17, Elizabeth, youngest daughter of the late John Dixon, Esq. of Cecil Lodge, Herts.—On the 22d inst. Thomas Harold, infant son of Mr. Thomas Cotsworth, of Camberwell, aged eight months.—At Leamington, Edward Chippendale, Esq. Solicitor to the Mint.—At Malta, in October, of a fever, aged 22, Lieut. George Windham, of his Majesty's ship Raleigh, second son of Admiral Windham, of Felbrigg Hall, Norfolk.—On the 21st inst. at his house, at the Brewery, West Ham, Mr. John Gray, aged 36.—On the 22d inst. John Armstrong, Esq. of Great Cumberland-street and Kent'sh-town.—On the 21st inst. at Richmond-green, Dorothy, relict of James Woodbridge, Esq. aged 67.—At East Barnet, Rear-Admiral Henry Warre, in his 71th year.—On the 23d inst. in Somerset-street, Portman-square, aged 25, Mary, youngest daughter of the late Rev. S. Lewthwaite, Rector of Hutton, in Cumberland.

London: Printed by R. D. RICHARDS, No. 1, Blake-court, Catherine-street and Published by him, at No. 343, Strand.

THE AGE.

" THE VERY AGE AND BODY OF THE TIME."

VOL. II. No. 82. SUNDAY, DECEMBER 3, 1826. Price 7d.

THEATRE ROYAL, DRURY LANE.—On Monday next, the Tragedy of Pizarro.—On Tuesday, Der Freischutz, with Amphitryon; or, the Two Sosias. And a favourite Farce.

ADELPHI THEATRE, Strand.—On Monday, and during the Week, will be presented an entirely new Burletta, called The Flying Dutchman, or the Phantom Ship. After which, a new comic Burletta, in one Act, called 23, John-street, Adelphi. To conclude with To Fry Shots.—Doors open at 6, commence ½ before 7.

KING'S ANCIENT CONCERT ROOMS, HANOVER-SQUARE.

By permission of the Right Hon. the Directors of the Concerts of Ancient Music,

THE Nobility, Gentry, and Subscribers to the Royal Academy of Music are respectfully informed, that a CONCERT will be given for the BENEFIT of the INSTITUTION, on WEDNESDAY next, the 6th instant. The Orchestra will be composed solely of the Pupils of the Academy.

SCHEME.—Part 1. Sinfonia, Mozart. Song, " Rolling in foaming Billows." (Creation) Haydn. Recitative, acc. " Me, when the Sun begins to fling;" and Air, " Hide me from day's garish Eye." (L'Allegro ed il Pensieroso,) Handel. Quartetto, " Over the dark-blue Waters," (Oberon) Weber. Concerto, Violin, Mayseder. Scena, from the Oratorio of Abramo, " Ah parlate," Cimarosa. Selection from the Creation of Haydn.

Part 2. Overture (Idomeneo), Mozart. Song, Clarionet Obligato, " Parto ma tu ben mio" (La Clemenza di Tito), Mozart. Concerto, Pianoforte, Hummel. Duo, Solo, and Coro, " Si tu m'ami" (L'Aureliano in Palmira), Rossini. Song, " Ah che forse," Rossini, Finale to the first Act of Il Matrimonio Segreto, Cimarosa.

The Concert will commence at Eight o'Clock. As this Concert is intended for the Benefit of the Institution, the Subscribers are requested to observe, that they will be entitled to personal Admission only, and that Tickets for them are now ready for delivery at the Academy. Non-Subscribers' Tickets (at 10s. 6d. each,) may be had at the Academy, and at the principal Music Shops.

By Order of the Committee,
HENRY WATTS, Secretary, Royal Academy of Music,
Tenterden-street, Hanover-square, Dec. 2, 1826.

FOR EXHIBITION and SALE, Nine Large Historical Pictures of the Coronation of Charles the Tenth. Open on Monday, December the fourth, Maddox-street, George-street, Hanover-square. These Pictures, from their brilliancy and effect, are admirably calculated for a Public Exhibition, or to adorn the palace of a prince, are the only series of pictures actually describing the ceremonies of a Coronation painted, consequently, must in time become valuable; will be sold moderate, with their frames and packing-cases; would form an excellent speculation as an exhibition in London, the provincial towns of England, Russia, and the United States.—Admittance One Shilling.—Descriptive Catalogue, One Shilling.

To follow the TIGER,

FOR VAN DIEMEN'S LAND and NEW SOUTH WALES, the beautiful, new first class brig, LION, ALEXANDER KENN, late of the William Shand), Commander. Burthen 275 Tons. Lying in the London Dock. Has excellent Accommodations for Passengers. For Freight or Passage apply to Buckles, Bagster, and Buchanan, 33, Mark Lane.

Is entered outwards, and to sail on or before the 10th January, 1827,

FOR CALCUTTA, the fine, new, first class Ship, HARRIET, 250 Tons Burthen. R. S. KINDLEY, Commander. Lying in the West India Dock. For Freight or Passage apply to Buckles, Bagster, and Buchanan, 33, Mark-lane.

OPERA BOXES by the NIGHT or SEASON at SAMS'S Library, opposite St. James's Palace. Pit Tickets, 8s. 6d. Private Boxes also for Covent Garden and Drury Lane, by the night, and Free Admissions for the Season. Terms of Subscription to the Library may be had on application.

DRURY-LANE, COVENT-GARDEN, ADELPHI.

Private Boxes at the Theatres, per Season or per Night,
In the choicest situations, both for hearing and for sight;
Inviolable Sanctums—Terms, the lowest ever made,
Enquire of CHARLES WRIGHT,—via, Opera Colonnade.

N. B. Champagne Imperial, the Cheapest in the Trade.

BARBARY WALL-FLOWER SNUFF, to be had only of the Importer, GEORGE EDLIN, Importer of Foreign Snuffs and Segars, No. 6, Aldgate, corner of Saracen's Head Inn, and of his Agent, Mr. J. Nuttl, 81, Lower Grosvenor-street, Bond-street.

DANCING.—Miss Byron has the honour to inform the Nobility and Gentry, that her Academy will commence the 13th of December, at her residence, 76, Charlotte-street, Fitzroy-square, where particulars may be known.

"LA VESTALE."—The following Songs, &c., in Spontini's "La Vestale," as performed at the King's Theatre, are published, and the rest of the Music will be ready in a few days:—

"Oh di funesta possa!" Aria.—"Alma Vesta del Ciel!" Hymn.—"Degli infelice O'Nume!" Preghiera.—"Te che invoco!" Cavatina!"—Sung by Madame Caradori.

"Avran pieta," Cavatina.—Sung by Signor Curioni.

"Che Sinonia, quai transporto," Duetto.—Sung by Madame Caradori, and Signor Curioni.

The Poetry to the above is by Signor Pistrucci.
GOULDING and D'ALMAINE, 20, Soho-square.

PIANOFORTES.—W. WALTER, (from Mr. Tomkison's) begs to recommend to those in want of a very superior Instrument, to inspect his stock of Grand, Cabinet, Cottage, and Square Pianos, which are warranted to be of the best description, at unusually low prices, and where the most decided satisfaction is not given, will be exchanged at the Manufactory, 118, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury.

ROSSINI'S LAST NEW OPERA.—Just published by Willis and Co. 55, St. James-street (opposite Jermyn-street), London, and 7, Westmoreland-street, Dublin.

The Overture, Songs, Duetts, Trios, and Chorusses, with English and French words of "Rossini's New Opera." "The Siege of Corinth," which is now performing at the "Academie Royale," with distinguished applause.

Willis and Co. beg to acquaint the public that the Opera of "The Siege of Corinth," and that of Maometto 2nds (also by Rossini) are two distinct works, and that the "Siege of Corinth" cannot be published by any other house in this country than that of J. Willis and Co. whose exclusive property it is.

A few of the pieces in this Opera are selected by the Composer from his Opera Maometto, but with considerable alterations and additions, and which can only be published by Willis and Co.

 In the Press, Labarre's Fantasia, and Variations for the Harp, on the favourite Greek March in Rossini's new Opera "The Siege of Corinth;" also, Labarre and de Berint's Fantasia for the Harp and Violin, on the celebrated Chorus sung during the deposition of the Greek Flag in the above highly popular Opera.

THE BROOM GIRL'S SONG.

Gentle Ladies fare ye well, arranged as a Song, Duet, or Trio, set to one of their national Melodies, sung by them in the streets of London, the poetry by Wm. Ball, price 3s.

Buona Sera Mio Signore, from Rossini's Opera of Il Barbiere di Seviglia, arranged for the Pianoforte by Augs. Meves, price 3s.

Piange il mia ciglio, from Rossini's Opera, "Matilde-de-chabran," arranged by ditto, 2s. 6d.

The Beauties of Winter's Opera of the Oracle, arranged for the Pianoforte; with flute and violoncello accompaniments ad lib. by Pio Cianchettini, price 4s.

The White Lady Quadrilles, taken from Boieldieu's Opera, La Dame Blanche, arranged for the Pianoforte, by M. Dunois, price 3s.

The Braes of Ballandyne	Miss Paton.	Pio Cianchettini
Bonny Brave Scotland	Ditto.	N. Gow
O where's the harm of a little kiss	Mad. Vestris.	J. Watson
Ah Maiden Gardez vous (Second Edition)	Ditto.	Ditto
Blue Bonnets are over the borders	Mr. Braham	Cianchettini
Young Mary	Mr. Phillips	Dr. Arne.

The Maiden at her wheel, sung by Mad. Vestris in the White Lady, Boieldieu, 1s. 6d.

The Secret, a Trio, from ditto, ditto, 1s. 6d.

A great assortment of Guitars by the most approved makers, for Sale or for Hire.

MORI & LAVENU, 28, New Bond-street.

KIRKMAN, (TUNER,) 15, Mortimer-street, Cavendish-square, begs leave to renew his sincere thanks to the Nobility and Gentry for the honour of their patronage, support, and encouragement, and respectfully to announce that his TUNING has been approved in the justly esteemed Manufactory of Messrs. BROADWOOD'S, and TOMKISON, in addition to his (father's) in Broad-street; 6½ Octave Grand Pianoforte, 5s.; Cabinet, 4s.; Square, 3s. 6d.; by the year 2l. 10s.; 22s.; and 1l. 11s. 6d. By the half year, the same in proportion.

NEW MUSIC.—HARP AND PIANO-FORTE.

MEYER'S "MEDEA in CORINTO," with Flute and Violoncello (ad lib) by N. C. Bochsa, in Books..... 10 6
——— Overture to ditto, ditto, ditto 6 0
Overture to "Caliph of Bagdad" ditto, ditto..... 5 0
Airs from "Il Crociato in Egitto," by W. H. Steil, in two Books (each) 7 6
——— Bishop's "Aladdin," by N. C. Bochsa.. ..... 7 0

PIANO FORTE.

Boieldieu's "La Dame Blanche," and as Duets, in Books, by J. F. Burrowe's .....(each) 4 0
Rossini's "Semiramide" ditto, ditto .....(each) 4 0
Meyer's "Medea in Corinto," by C. Dunon, in two Books.....(each) 4 0
Bishop's "Buy a Broom," Rondo, by T. A. Rawlings 2 6
——— "In my Bower a Lady Weeps," ditto, by G. Kiallmark.... 2 6

VOCAL.

"Buy a Broom!" sung by Miss Love, composed by H. R. Bishop 2 0
 The Public are respectfully cautioned that the original "Buy a Broom," is the one composed by H. R. Bishop.
"The Bonnie Lassie," composed by Mrs. Miles 2 0
"No longer the Song of the Lark," composed by J. Barnett 1 6
"Jane, the Mountain's Pride," ditto 1 6
"The King! God bless Him!" sung and composed by Mr. Braham.. 2 0

GOULDING and D'ALMAINE, 20, Soho-square.
Cabinet, Cottage, and Square Piano-fortes for Sale or Hire.

Just Published,

THE MUSIC in the admired popular comic Opera, THE TWO HOUSES OF GRENADA, now performing at the Theatre-Royal, Drury-Lane, composed by J. Augustine Wade, Esq.

The Overture arranged by T. Latour, price 2s. 6d.
Where is the spring time of youth and of pleasure?—sung by Mrs. Geesin.
Ask not my Love—Bravura—ditto, ditto.
Love was once a little boy. "Second Edition," sung by Miss Graddon.
Oh, ne'er with such bliss—ditto, ditto.
Oh, young maiden hearts beware—ditto, ditto.
If love's dream be o'er—sung by Mr. Braham.
Oh, do you remember the first time I met you—ditto, ditto.
Up, comrades, up—ditto, ditto.
Away, light vows of woman's love—sung by Mr. Horn.
For love and beauty's sake—ditto, ditto.
Love has its own sweet pleasures—Duet—sung by Mrs. Geesin and Miss Graddon.
I've wandered in dreams to the moonlight's home—Duet—sung by Mrs. Geesin and Mr. Braham.
Serenades are pleasant things—Comic duet—sung by Miss Cubitt and Mr Harley.
In what new home does love now dwell—Echo duet—sung by Mr. Horn and Miss Graddon.
Fair moon, on tow'r and tree, and stream—Duet—sung by Mrs. Geesin and Mr. Braham.
With love and thee—Duet—sung by Mrs. Geesin and Mr. Braham.
To be had of F. T. LATOUR, Musicseller to his Majesty, 50, New Bond-street.

MADAME VESTRIS'S NEW SONGS.

Just Published, by MAYHEW and Co., 17, Bond-street, London,

THE Bavarian Girl's Song, "BUY A BROOM," with an original and finely executed Portrait of Madame Vestris (in Character) by Gauci, arranged expressly for her, by Alexander Lee.—Price 2s.

NEW SONGS.	SINGERS.	COMPOSERS.
Love's Labour Lost	Mad. Vestris,	Alex. Lee
Smiles and Tears	Ditto,	Ditto
England the Home of the World	Mr. Braham,	J. Barnett
Fancy dipp'd her Pen in Dew	Miss Stepheus,	J. Whittaker
Light Guitar (4th edition)	Mad. Vestris,	J. Barnett
A Voice whispered softly, Dear Mary	Miss Love,	Geo. Perry
Yes, I will leave the festive Scene, in answer to the Light Guitar	Miss Paton,	J. Barnett
"Not a Drum was heard," the celebrated Ode on the Death of Sir John Moore	Mr. Sapio,	Ditto
Love's Delightful Hour	Mr. Pearman,	J. Emdin
The Queen of Bonnie Lasse	Mr. Braham,	J. Hart
The Joys of Liberty and Wine	Mr. Bedford,	Ditto
Paul Pry, "Hope I don't intrude," comic, with the original Portrait of Mr. Liston	Mr. Liston	Pigwiggin
The General Election, comic, written by Charles Dibdin the younger, with an illustration by Cruikshank	Mr. Mathews,	J. Barnett
Maiden, heedful be, The Token Flowers	Mad. Vestris,	Ditto
The Moorish Maiden	Mrs. Ashe,	J. Emdin
You ask a song, you bid me sing	Mr. Broadhurst,	G. Kiallmark
I left the Bowl in search of Love	Mr. Phillips,	Mr. Phillips.

NEW MUSIC.—Just published at the ROYAL HARMONIC INSTITUTION, Argyll Rooms, 246, Regent-street, the Songs, Duets, &c. in The ORACLE, composed by WINTER, and newly arranged by W. HAWES.

	s.	d.
"Overture"	2	6
"The rosy dawn hath driven," Chorus.	5	0
"When battles conch is soundiag," sung by Mr. Atkins	2	0
"The trumpet first is sonnded," sung by Mr. Thorn	2	0
"We Maidens mark me," sung by Miss Goward,	1	6
"All hail to the God of our Fathers," Chorus	2	0
"Now by love and peace invited." Sestett and Chorus	3	6
"Oh when thine eye is throwing," Duet, Miss Paton and Sapio	2	6
"All powerful Sun," sung by Mr. Phillips	2	0
"There was a time ere sorrow," sung by Miss Paton	1	6
"Between my hopes and fears suspended," Duet, by Miss Paton and Phillips	2	6
"When will peace relieve my breast?" sung by Miss Hamilton	1	6
"How the plaguing varlet teases," Duet, by Miss Goward and Thorn	2	6
"We hail thee Lord of Light," Finale, 1st Act	10	0
"Tho' we all can feel thy sorrow," Quartett and Chorus	3	6
"In what sad hour," Trio	3	0
"Oh heavens! the thought is frightful," Duet.	2	6
"Hast never mark'd the flower," Song, Miss Boden	1	6
"The Maid who'd wish to slumber," Quartett	2	6
"The Gloomy terrors of the grave," Scena, Mr. Sapio	2	6
"Farewell, yet not for ever," Quartett	4	0
"The evening is descending," Finale	10	0

The Overture to "OBERON," arranged for a full Orchestra, by C. M. Weber, price 10s.

A New TREATISE on THOROUGH BASS, or the art of playing from a figured Bass, with examples, &c. &c. by Dr. Crotch.

Burrows's Selection of Airs from Weber's Opera of Oberon, arranged for the Piano Forte, with Flute adlib, in four books, each 1s.

I'VE BEEN ROAMING—Arranged by T. A. Rawlings, as a Rondo for the Pianoforte.

BOCHSA's Select Airs from the Oracle, for the Harp, and Pianoforte, with Flute and Violin accompaniments, 10s. 6d.; also the Overture to the above, arranged as above, price 5s.

DEATH FETCH.—The music in this admired and popular Opera, composed by C. E. Horn.

I'VE BEEN ROAMING.—Cavatina, sung by Madame Vestris, by C. E. Horn, price 2s.

OBERON.—The music in this popular Romantic and Fairy Opera, composed by the late Carl Maria Von Weber.

 The Proprietors of the ROYAL HARMONIC INSTITUTION beg most respectfully to acquaint the Public, that the only correct copies of the Opera now performing at the English Opera House, called "THE ORACLE," are published by them, and that all other copies are spurious and an Invasion of their rights.

N.B. The whole of the Music in the New Opera of PEVERIL OF THE PEAK, by C. E. Horn, now performing with such enthusiastic applause at the Theatre Royal Covent Garden, is now published, and may be had separate.

TO the FACULTY—To be disposed of, in the parish of Shadwell, London, close to the River Thames, and in the heart of the Collier Shipping, an old established PRACTICE. Receipts £600 per annum, which may be considerably increased. Rent and Taxes very low. For particulars enquire, if by letter, post paid, of Mr. Hose, Chemist, 399, High Holborn. An advantage may be derived to the Purchaser from a circumstance which will be explained by the Advertiser.

Just Published, in 3 vols. post 8vo. Price £1 11s. 6d.

ALMACK'S. A Novel.

"This then shall be a tale for future times. That in an age when the cry for liberty was loudest, when sovereignty was attacked, and all authority was contemned, there arose a secret junto, which alone reigned unopposed, which alone could enforce authority; a junto so mysterious, that none can penetrate its intricate arcana; a junto which, in its own emphatic language, comprises "the whole world," and with a talismanic spell unites every possible desideratum in the one little word, "Almack's."

Printed for SAUNDERS and OTLEY, Public Library, Conduit-street.

For the Information of Magistrates, Clerks of the Peace, Solicitors, and others.

THE NEW EDITION of Mr. CHITTY'S TREATISE on the Principles and Practice of the CRIMINAL LAW, just published, contains an Abstract of Mr. Peel's late Act, 7 Geo. 4. c. 64. A complete set of Precedents are given, adapted to every description of offence, and copious Notes, explanatory of the process, indictment, plea, defence, evidence, trial, verdict, judgment, and punishment. Four large volumes, royal octavo. Price five guineas, boards.

Printed and published by S. Brooke, 35, Paternoster-row, and sold by all booksellers.

GAME LAWS.—A New Edition of Mr. CHITTY'S Treatise on the LAWS respecting GAME and FISH, just published, in One large Volume Royal Octavo. The following is an Epitome of its Contents:—1. The Legal Definition of Game.—2. The Restraints on taking it, whether at Common Law or by Statute.—3. Places privileged with respect to Game, such as Forests, Chases, &c. &c. and its protection in Places not privileged, as Manors, &c.—4. Enactments respecting Qualifications, and Decisions thereon.—5. Penalties and Punishments to which unqualified Persons are subject; also on Persons sporting without leave.—6. The time when Game may be taken, and the mode of taking it.—7. The offences of buying, selling, and having it in possession, taking Eggs, and burning Heath.—8. Summary Proceedings against Offenders, searching, and seizing Dogs, Guns, &c. by authorised Persons.—9. The various offences respecting Game fully considered, when punishable criminally, when by Penalties, Action, Indictment, or Information.—10. The Proceedings.—11. The private Remedies in Cases of Trespass.—12. Regulations respecting Game Certificates, and Decisions thereon.—13. The Rights and Privileges respecting private Fisheries, and the Penalties and Proceedings for Injuries thereto. The Appendix contains all the Statutes from Magna Charta to the present time, and a very comprehensive Collection of Precedents of Practical Forms of Proceedings before Magistrates, and otherwise; also Grants, Conveyances, Notices, Covenants in Leases, &c. &c. The Work will therefore be found to contain every description of Information which can be required by Magistrates, Solicitors, and Country Gentlemen.

Printed and published by SAMUEL BROOKE, Paternoster Row. Price £1. 8s. boards.

THE NEW MONTHLY MAGAZINE for December, contains, among other interesting Papers—1. Anecdotical Recollections of noted Personages—2. Drafts on Lafitte, No. 1.—3. A Visit to the Summit of Mount Blanc, by Captain Markham Sherwill, No. 1.—4. London Improvements—5. Parriana, No. II.—6. On the Dignity of Eating—7. A Canadian Campaign, by a British Officer, No. 1.—8. Letter from an Irish Protestant in Dublin—9. Sketches of Parisian Society, Politics, and Literature; with Original Anecdotes of Talma—10. Adventures of an Italian Emigrant, No. II.—11. The Brotherhood of Mercy—12. The Kaiser's Feast, by Mrs. Hemans—13. London Lyrics: the Birth of Podagra—14. Hymen's Ball—15. Tarshish—16. Ballads, No. II.—The King and the Lady, &c., and the usual varieties in Art, Science, Criticism, Biography, Petitions, and Commerce.

Printed for Henry Colburn, 8, New Burlington-street.

Second Edition, 8vo. with a Chart, 9s. 6d.

CAPTAIN MAITLAND'S NARRATIVE of the Surrender of Bonaparte, and of his Residence on Board H. M. S. Bellerophon, with the principal events that occurred in that ship between the 24th of May, and the 8th of August, 1815:—the Secret Correspondence of Captain Maitland with the Government, &c. &c.

"This is a narrative of great historical and personal interest."—Literary Gazette, June 3, 1826.

"This work forms a most essential document for one of the most extraordinary and romantic passages in the history of the late war."—Times, June 13, 1826.

"We opened this volume with a highly excited curiosity, and found it, in every page, full of interest."—Monthly Review.

"An historical document that ought to see the light, and for which the world should be grateful. We cannot withhold from Captain Maitland the praise of having performed a valuable and acceptable service to the world."—London Magazine.

Printed for HENRY COLBURN, 8, New Burlington-street.

Just published, in one vol. post 8vo. price 8s. 6d.

THE suppressed Work of a persecuted French Protestant, entitled "ROMAN TABLETS." Containing Facts, Anecdotes and Observations, on the Manners, Customs, Ceremonies and Government of Rome at the present day. By M. DE SANTO DOMINGO. Translated from the original MS.

This work was suppressed in France, at the solicitation of the Pope's Nuncio, and the Jesuits, and the Author fined and imprisoned. To which is added, (never before published) the Author's Defence before the Cour Royale at Paris, in solemn hearing.

Published by T. FLINT, 28, Burlington Arcade, Piccadilly.

"Were this work totally useless in itself, the consequences attending its publication would be alone sufficient to ensure public attention, and to excite a deep and general interest. 'The Academy of Arcadians' is an amusing picture: the Funeral of Cardinal Doria not less so, and the Flagellators exceed even these in ludicrous solemnity and all the irresistibly grave attributes of farce. 'The Literary Evening Party' is a fair specimen of the observant skill and pleasant style of the Author. His sketches embrace the Brigands, the Police, Miracles, Roman Females, &c. all of which exhibit much keen observation and knowledge of human nature (particularly of that portion of human nature with which the French may be considered almost intuitively conversant) together with a graphic power of delineation, which forms the most brilliant feature of his work. The task of translation has been performed with ability, and there are respectable lithographic views of the Forum and Mons Sacer, which tend in some measure to increase the many attractions of this interesting volume."—The Literary Chronicle.

"It contains some curious matters, and is the production of a very clever person."—The Literary Gazette.

"This volume contains so much general information, that a library will be incomplete without it."—The World of Fashion.

INTERESTING NEW WORKS, published by HENRY COLBURN, New Burlington-street, London, and sold by all Booksellers.

1. TALES of a VOYAGER. Stories told at Sea during a Voyage recently made to the Arctic Ocean. Interspersed with curious anecdotes, and a Narrative of the various Adventures and Perils of the Voyage. In 3 vols. post 8vo, 28s. 6d.

2. The TOR HILL. By the Author of "Brambletye House;" or Cavaliers and Roundheads; 3 vols. post 8vo. £1 11s. 6d.

3. A Second Series of TALES by the O'HARA FAMILY; comprising The Nowlans, and Peter of the Castle, in 3 vols. post 8vo. price 31s. 6d.

And in a few days will be published,

4. MEMOIRS of the LIFE of MRS. SIDDONS. By James Boaden, Esq., interspersed with Anecdotes of Authors and Actors, and intended as a Companion to the Life of Mr. Kemble. Printed uniformly with that work, in 2 vols. 8vo. with a fine Portrait, engraved by Turner, from a Picture, by Sir Thomas Lawrence. Price 28s.

5. LETTERS from the EAST. Written during a recent Tour through Turkey, Egypt, Arabia, the Holy Land, Syria, and Greece. By John Carne, Esq., of Queen's College, Cambridge. The Second Edition, in 2 vols. post 8vo. price 18s.

6. TRUCKLEBOROUGH HALL. A Novel. In 3 vols. post 8vo. 28s. 6d.

Diego—Mungo, can you be honest?
Mungo—Yat you give me, Massa?

7. The HON. GEORGE KEPPEL'S NARRATIVE of a JOURNEY from INDIA to ENGLAND, by Bussorah, Bagdad, the Ruins of Babylon, Curdistan, the Court of Persia, the Western Shore of the Caspian Sea, Astrakhan, Nishney Novogorod, Moscow, and St. Petersburgh, in the year 1824. In 1 vol. 4to. with coloured plates, &c.

8. The NATCHEZ; an Indian Tale. By the Viscount Chateaubriand, Author of "Atale," &c. Editions in French and English, in small octavo.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS, Wednesday, Nov. 29.

CORN LAWS.

Lord KING said he had another petition to present on the subject of Corn. Some thought the least said the better upon the Corn Laws at this time, yet he could not abstain from offering a few observations. Parliament had been made to understand, and he was sorry for it, that no alteration would be made in the Corn Laws till after Christmas. An alteration was intended to be made, but what that alteration was, God only knew. He really thought his Majesty's Ministers did not know themselves. He suspected that when it came to be known, it would turn out to be the minimum of improvement. It was reported that 17s. was to be the importation duty, instead of 35s. It was also said, there was a malignant party who never did justice to good intentions—a spirit something like the good and evil principle known in the East. He was afraid, that as far as regarded the Corn Question, the bad spirit would predominate over the good. The petition he had to present was from Manchester, signed at a numerous meeting held on the 25th of October. It stated that now, in the 12th year of peace, they were suffering from the means taken to prevent a free importation of corn, which circumstances deprived them of the advantage of exporting their own manufactures, and kept them destitute of the common necessaries of life.

The Earl of LIVERPOOL said, before he made any observations on what the Noble Lord had stated on his presenting the petition, he wished to say a few words on what passed yesterday. He came down to the House yesterday and the preceding day, and found it had adjourned. He came down at five o'clock, the usual time for commencing business. He saw no reason why it should not begin at an earlier heur; but if it did, it ought to be announced. He certainly did not mean to be influenced to enter into a discussion of the Corn Laws by any thing the Noble Lord had said, but he must say the Noble Lord was wrong if he thought his Majesty's Government had not come to a determination on this question. His Majesty's Ministers had come to a decision, and nothing prevented them bringing it forward before the holidays but a feeling that they should not be dealing fairly with Parliament, if they brought it under discussion at this season of the year. The only purpose for which Parliament had met was to grant an indemnity. At this time they might not be able to obtain a sufficient attendance of the House to discuss a question of such magnitude; and if it were not for that, there were many other circumstances which rendered it expedient that Government should not make known their measures, unless they could be surc of a full attendance of Members. Having proposed to discuss this matter after the recess, he would not be led to disclose what were the measures Government intended to adopt, as he thought a partial statement would tend to great public inconvenience. He would certainly mention the subject soon after Christmas, it being his wish that the House should be aware of the sentiments of the Government on this matter without delay.

The Earl of LAUDERDALE did not see anything objectionable in the plan of the Noble Lord. It might be very reasonable for him to say there were reasons why the country should not at present know the measures in contemplation, and all he wished was, that those measures might be made public in such time as that all parties might have an opportunity of expressing their sentiments. It had been said, that the table would be loaded with petitions from the agricultural interests, but there could be no departure from the interests of the community at large. The agriculturists had no wish to come to the House with petitions complaining of the corn laws, mixed up with Parliamentary Reform, and so on. Their only wish was, that Parliament would legislate for the protection of the agriculture of the country.

The Earl of LIVERPOOL said there could be no wish to defer the discussion of the question on the Corn Laws beyond the proper time, or to conceal the object of the measures intended to be proposed to the House. At the first sitting of the House he had given notice of his intention to make a general exposition of the measures he intended to lay before the House, with a view to settling the question. There was but one interest with the landholder, as well as the commercial part of the community; and when the question was discussed such would appear to be the case: but it was also important that a determination on the subject should be come to as speedily as possible. Having made these observations, for the purpose of meeting the plea of dilatoriness which might be urged on the discussion of the question, the Noble Earl hoped it would satisfy the House, and meet the view of the interests of the country.

The Marquis of SALISBURY wished to see seme alteration in the Corn Laws, as he considered a change necessary.

The petition was received.

The Earl of LAUDERDALE then moved that an humble Address be presented to his Majesty, praying orders might be sent to his Ambassadors to return with convenient speed an account of the laws in force respecting the exportation of corn and the country during the last twenty years.

THURSDAY, Nov. 30.

The Duke of WELLINGTON presented a petition from the Lord Mayor, Sheriffs, and Corporation of Dublin, praying that no more concessions may be made to the Roman Catholics. The petition was read, and laid on the table.

Lord KING said he had more petitions on the subject of the Corn Laws. If he was asked what constituted the greatest waste of labour, he should say the Corn Laws. Building a palace at Pimlico, and the erection of the Egyptian Pyramids, were ancient and modern instances of a waste of human labour; but the Corn Laws occasioned a greater waste. Man was doomed to live by the sweat of his brow, in labour and pain, and the Corn Laws, no doubt, increased all his sufferings. The country would never be quiet until the Corn Trade was placed upon a footing with other trades. The Noble Lord concluded his observations, by presenting petitions from six incorporated trades in the town of Arbroath. The petitions were read, and laid on the table.

FRIDAY, Dec. 1.

Lord Maynard and the Earl of Lucan took the oath and their seats.

Mr. Crafur, from the Treasury, presented at the bar an account of the price of wheat from 1546 down to the latest time, pursuant to an order of the House.—Laid on the table.

On the motion of the Earl of Shaftesbury, the House adjourned at a quarter past Four o'clock to Monday.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, Nov. 27.

Sir A. GRANT, as Chairman of Committees, pro tem. brought up the report of the Committee on the motion of supply.

On the question that it be read a second time,

Mr. HUME did not wish to offer any opposition to the present motion, which he was aware was one of course; but he felt anxious to know whether it was the intention of the Chancellor of the Exchequer to vote, at the present time, the usual estimates in a committee of supply.

Mr. HERRIES begged to state, in reply to the question of the Hon. Gentleman, that with the exception of the usual vote for Exchequer Bills, it was not intended to propose the estimates until the next meeting of Parliament, when the appropriation of last year's estimates would also be voted.

Sir A. GRANT brought up the report of the Corn Indemnity Committee, and a Bill was ordered to be prepared, and brought in.

Mr. C. W. WYNN gave notice, that on an early day after the recess, it was his intention to move, that the thanks of the House should be given to the officers and men who contributed to the glorious success of our arms in India. (Hear, hear.)

TUESDAY, Nov. 28.

Mr. Littleton moved certain resolutions for the improvement of Committees on Private Bills, which met with the approbation of Mr. Peel. After some discussion on particular resolutions, the principle part were agreed to.

WEDNESDAY, Nov. 29.

REV. R. TAYLOR, THE DEIST.

Mr. HUME presented a Petition from the Rev. R. Taylor, praying for religious toleration—he, after the maturest consideration, being against the Church doctrines, having become a Deist. He said he had not the benefit of law; his oath, for instance, could not be taken in a Court of Justice. Lately a Magistrate would not receive his oath in the case of one of Carlile's shopmen, who had been robbed of his watch. He (Mr. H.) submitted that the petitioner was persecuted, and therefore properly approached the House. The evidence of Infidels had been received in Courts of Justice—therefore was the petitioner hardly treated. He considered the petition a reasonable one, and it was respectfully worded. He submitted, that the time was come when redress ought to be forwarded.

Mr. Sergeant ONSLOW said he had not expected to hear such an address to the House of Commons. The Hon. Member could not have read the Toleration Act; but he had himself adduced proof of toleration, in stating, that Infidels were sworn according to the forms of their own country. What were the petitioner's sentiments? Did he believe in a future state of rewards and punishments?—(Hear.)—If not, what reliance could the community have on the oath of such a person?—(Hear, hear.)

Mr. BADDELEY was astonished that a British House of Commons should have endured such a petition—from a man educated at Cambridge, and who openly professed a disbelief in our Saviour? Such statements ought not to have been tolerated.

Sir E. CARRINGTON thought this was not a petition that ought to be received. Was it to be endured that the petitioner was to set up "Nature" for his "Deity."

Mr. Secretary PEEL observed that discussion was very unnecessarily raised. If a Bill were introduced, he should be prepared to defend the rights of society against those of the petitioner. He thought the House would do well to abstain from further remark, and not to make this petition of too much importance.

Mr. W. SMITH wished that others had displayed like temper with the Right Hon. Secretary. He contended that a Deist's oath might be received, whatever might be said respecting an Atheist's.

Mr. HUME said that the Learned Sergeant had not correctly represented the petitioner—he, therefore, wished the petition to be read.

It was read, in the course of which the petitioner said he believed in a future state, and impressed such belief on his hearers—(Hear, from Mr. Hume.)

Mr. HUME repeated what he had often said, that no person ought to suffer civil disabilities on account of religious opinions. According to the petition, the Learned Address fell to the ground. The statement that a Deist could not take an oath, was illiberal and unjust. He did not intend to bring in a bill on the subject—at the same time he thought some one ought to be introduced.

Mr. Serjeant Onslow and Mr. W. Smith explained.

Mr. HUME moved that the petition be printed—(Some cries of No, no.)

A Member said this would be to establish a mischievous precedent. As to the religion of Nature, it was no religion at all.

Mr. HUME had only desired it to be printed, in order that the light might be let into some minds; but he would not press that motion.

Petition ordered to lie on the table, but not to be printed.

THURSDAY, Nov. 30.

HALF-PAY.

Mr. Hume moved for a list of persons in the army who had sold out on half-pay since the last returns, which gave rise to an interesting discussion, and produced some important information on the subject. The papers were ordered in pursuance of the motion. It was agreed on all sides that the manner in which his Royal Highness the Commander in Chief exercised his patronage was perfectly impartial and unexceptionable.

MR. BROGDEN.

Mr. BROGDEN wished to know what course the Hon. Alderman intended to pursue respecting the proposed inquiries.

Mr. Alderman WAITHMAN said he should not limit the inquiry to Mr. Brogden, but made it general, embracing the Arigna Mining Company, &c.—He should submit his motion after the recess, but he was ready to go on—he mentioned after the recess for the accommodation of others.

Mr. MABERLY contended that inquiry ought to be gone into immediately, especially as Members generally were now to be charged. Why not to-morrow? But what had the House to do with the conduct of Members engaged in companies that had the sanction of Parliament? He was not engaged in them, and therefore might speak.

Mr. BROGDEN observed, that this was cruel conduct towards him—he was charged personally; and he trusted that the House would press enquiry.

Mr. Alderman WAITHMAN said he had preferred enquiry generally, and only promised enquiry about Mr. Brogden, should that gentleman be named for the Chair. He was induced to postpone his intentions, at the request of a Right Honourable Gentleman over the way. Whether he was supported or not, he should persevere, because he considered the honour of the House was concerned.

Mr. C. W. WYNN said this conversation ought not to be continued; the Hon. Alderman must determine what course he would pursue, and when he would bring it forward.

The conversation here dropped.

FRIDAY, Dec. 1.

Dr. Lushington and Mr. J. Brougham, Members for Tregoney, took the oaths and their seats.

ARIGNA COMPANY.

Mr. WAITHMAN gave notice, that on Tuesday next he should move for a Committee of Inquiry into the conduct of Members of that House in the Arigna Company. He had contemplated postponement for the accommodation of others; henceforth he would follow his own judgment.

Lord MILTON presented petitions from Bradford, &c. against the Corn Laws.

Mr. HUME presented a petition from Manchester for an inquiry into the Corn Laws, agreed to at a peaceable and properly conducted meeting. He contended that the subject ought to discussed without delay. Upwards of 450 Members had now taken the oaths, and surely there were Members enough to discuss the question forthwith.

Sir R. FERGUSON supported the petition, and said that he protested against the postponement of the question.

Mr. D. W. HARVEY said that the time had now arrived for petitioning the House, so that the time of delay might be usefully employed in making known the real sense of the country.

Mr. HUME said he had omitted the most important part of the petition; it prayed that the expenditure might be reduced as low as possible, that the Crown and Church lands might be sold for the benefit of the public, and that there might be Parliamentary Reform. The last was the most important. With a reformed House he should have no fear; every thing would then go on "smooth and easy."—Petition ordered to be printed.

Mr. CHICHESTER presented a petition from the Roman Catholics of Wexford.

Mr. D. W. HARVEY moved for returns of Crown Debtors now confined; and of petitions to the Excise for returns of auction duty.—Ordered.

Lord FOLKSTONE wished to be informed when Ministers intended to renew the Committee of Inquiry of last session regarding the currency and small notes.

Mr. HUSKISSON said he was not prepared to give an answer.

After some further observations of his Lordship, on postponing the question of the Corn Laws when the country was so much excited, and disposing of the Orders of the Day, the House adjourned.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

CONSTANTINOPLE.

Accounts which extend down to the 26th ult. still speak of the exeesses and anarchy which prevail in that capital. On the 11th a fire had broken out in a tower newly built at Eski-Serai, and new disorders were apprehended. The Government of the Sultan was, however, satisfied with ordering the guardians of that tower to be executed, and no further cruelties were then perpetrated. Suspicion was soon afterwards excited against a body of Janissaries, who had formerly belonged to the Imperial Household. About 1,590 of them were executed, and the rest were exiled to Asia. On a report that a body of disaffected troops had assembled on the Asiatic shore, a Pacha was sent to exterminate them, or to prevent their embarkation. The Government seems to make light of all these acts of rigour or vengeance. During the execution of one part of his disaffected troops the Sultan reviews another. Since accounts have reached Constantinople of the successes obtained by the Russian arms over the troops of Persia, the Porte has seen reason to congratulate itself on its prudence in having accepted the Russian ultimatum, and terminated the conferences of Ackerman without a war.

PORTUGAL.

The Times of yesterday contains the following remarks relative to Lisbon:—"Since yesterday, the tidings of some affairs of considerable importance have reached us from Lisbon. The fugitives from the Portuguese constitution, rebels, have actually entered their native country in the province of Tras os Montes, in hostile array. As this invasion can only have been effected by the connivance and ministration of Spain, notwithstanding the diplomatic arrangements existing between the two Governments, it may be judged what are the feelings of that of Portugal. The matter also appears to have created a proper sensation in another quarter; for, having been rapidly communicated by a telegraphic despatch to Paris, orders are said to have been there issued for the immediate recall of the French Ambassador from Madrid, in order to show, in the most formal manner, the disapprobation of his Court of the treacherous proceeding on the part of Spain. We must add, that we wish France would recall her army instead of her Ambassador, and then let Ferdiuand invade his neighbour if he pleases. The only security for peace between the great Powers of Europe, is the removal of both French and English forces, military and naval, from the Peninsula: our respective clients may otherwise force their principals into broils that may terminate in greater mischief.

SOUTH AMERICA.

The mail from Jamaica puts us in possession of a great mass of South American intelligence, the greater part of which is of the most important character. No less than seven departments of Colombia have declared against the existing system by which that republic is governed. The names of the departments are as follows:—Venezuela (known before), Apure, Guayaquil, Asuay, the Isthmus, Zulia, Magdalena. The sentiments of all are declared, more or less, to be in favour of the federal form of Government; some of them invoke in strong terms the return of Bolivar, as the only event which can save the Republic, and invest him with dictatorial powers for that purpose. By the latest accounts from Lima, which are to the middle of August, the Liberator still remained there, and nothing was positively known respecting the period of his intended departure for Colombia. The officer who, had circulated the false reports of the President's arrival at Truxillo, on his way to Bogota, had been taken into custody, and was to be punished for the deception practised on the people in an affair of so great importance. Some letters state that Bolivar had written to Paez, to appoint a meeting at Bogota in November; but in the correspondence from Lima, the opinion that he would decline visiting Colombia at all, and that he intended to fix his residence permanently in Peru, is very unhesitatingly expressed. He is said to be by no means unhesitatingly expressed. He is said to be by no means popular in Lima, and to have given much offence by marching the Peruvian troops out of Callao, and supplying their places by Colombians. Even his own officers are said to have formed a conspiracy against him; and twelve of them, among whom was Admiral Guise, the commander of the fleet, had been placed under arrest. Bolivar had further issued an order, requiring all Buenos-Ayres merchants to quit Lima in 15 days—a most extraordinary proceeding, for which no explanation has been given. These circumstances, and close observation on the whole of Bolivar's recent conduct, had given rise to the suspicion that, forgetting the patriotic views with which he had entered into the contest, and the medel he had proposed to himself in the character of Washington, his mind had become tainted with ambitious views, ending in the acquisition of the supreme power in his own person, over the fairest portion of South America, with the title of King or Emperor. Such a conclusion ought not, we admit, to be adopted, except on the clearest evidence; and the actual accomplishment of such views ought to be waited for before any comment is offered upon them; but the suspicion at least, that they are entertained by the Colombian President, is not confined to Peru, but has been current for some time past among the diplomatic circles of Europe.

In the Bogota Constitutional of the 24th of August, is a long letter addressed to Bolivar by Santander, the Vice-President, but it is not worth publication, and is only remarkable for evincing implicit confidence in the adherence of the Colombian provinces, almost at the moment that the majority, and by far the richest portion of them, were protesting, by a solemn act, against any further dependence on the Government of which Santander was the head.

Almack's.—Nearly the entire edition of the new novel of "Almack's" was, we understand, sold to the booksellers on the day of publication.

Crowded State of the Prisons.—Master Le Blanc, on Tuesday, read a rule of Court, stating, that according to a rule made during the 57th Geo. III., it was ordered that not more than three prisoners should sleep in one room in the King's Bench Prison when the number did not exceed 540, and not more than four when the number did not exceed 700. It is now ordered that not more than five be lodged in one room till the numbers exceed 900.

The Enniskillen Reporter of Thursday se'nnight announces that, on Sunday (this day) one hundred additional converts will renounce the errors of Popery in Arkeston.

It is now pretty evident, that the Silk Manufactures of France will be unable to compete with those of our own country. Several quantities of silk ribbons, figured satins, gauze, &c., have already been returned, the importers having found it impossible to realize a profit on them here.

Distress in Ireland.—The Freeman's Journal states, that the Dublin Mendicity Association, is so badly supported that it is likely to fail altogether. This paper sets forth feelingly the misery which must result from the doors of the asylum being closed to those whom the association were accustomed to relieve, and also the consequent mischief to the public. It is melancholy to see a truly humane institution about to break up, at the moment that Mr. O'Connel exults that fifty guineas a day are paid to the Catholic Rent!!

BATTLE WITH THE ASHANTEES.

GOLD COAST, AUG. 12, 1826.

The place where the battle was fought is a plain, with small clumps of trees, and underwood at intervals, about 20 or 24 miles north-east of British Accra, and nearly four miles south from a village called "Dodowah," by which name the natives distinguish the fight, the King of Ashantee having had his tent there that morning. It was expected by every person who knew any thing of the Ashantee customs, that they would attack our lines on Monday, that being their propitious day; accordingly, some scouts brought intelligence about eight o'clock, a. m. that the enemy were in motion, and the King's drum was distinctly heard beeting the war march. Our line was formed with all expedition, extending about four miles east and west, which had a very picturesque appearance, from the varied dresses and numerous flags British, Danish, and Dutch—that moved around. Our men were decorated with large sea-shells, suspended from their necks before and behind, or had a stripe of white calico, to distinguish them from the foe. Many of them fought with the cloth hanging from the barrel of their muskets, which added to the novelty of the scene. A squabbling had taken place for several days among the Kings of Akimboo and Dinkara and the Queen of Akim, who would attack the King of Ashantee's own band. It was at last agreed that the former should form our extreme right, and the two latter our extreme left; but they were (perhaps fortunately) disappointed, as it was afterwards known that the King had received intelligence that there were white men in the camp and in the centre; he therefore chose that place to gain more honour. When the attack commenced from right to left, about half-past nine o'clock, several of the natives came insulting and abusing the centre for cowards, on which representation to the commanding officer, he directed them to advance, which they did, about 400 yards, when a heavy and effective fire on our part took place; they went steadily forward amid the work of death, the enemy slowly and sulkily giving way. No prisoners were taken, but as they fell they were put to death. Happy those whose sufferings were short; in vain the gentlemen implored them to hold their hand, or, at least, kill them right out. Some were ripped up across the belly, and plunging their hands in, they took the heart from its seat, pouring the blood on the ground as a libation to the good fortune of the English; others, when they saw their own friends weltering in their blood, would give them a blow on the breast or head to end their misery. In many instances they dragged each other from the opposite ranks, and wrestled and cut in pairs. Fortunate he whose knife first found out the vital part in his foe during the deadly grapple, perhaps in his turn to be laid low by the same means. So hard were the enemy pressed at this moment, that a Captain of consequence blew himself up, nearly involving some of the Europeans in ruin. The number of guns, and various other articles, taken from the enemy, was very great; but as none were allowed to leave the field, and they had not spare hands, like the people of the native Chiefs, to collect such spoils, they were thrown aside for the present. When a cry arose that the Ashantees were getting between the centre and the right, which, in fact, was the case, as one party from the Dutch town, who supported the right of the Cape Coast people, had given way, and the enemy had walked into their place. Besides this, the whole of the Dutch natives, with their Cabboceer at their head, had fled early in the action, and the

Swallow-tailed banners of Danemaurk

were seen safely flying in the rear. The centre were now obliged to fall back, and relinquish every advantage, sustaining a galling fire in flank, and closely pressed with the mass of the enemy, who evidently were making a bold push to seize or bring down the whites. Captain Rogers, who was advancing with a small piece of artillery, would have been taken, had he not very promptly distinguished them as the enemy. This was the crisis of the battle. Colonel Purden advanced with the reserve and the rockets, a few of which thrown among the Ashantees occasioned the most dire terror and confusion; the hissing sound when thrown, the train of fire, the explosion and ghastly wounds they made, caused them to suppose they were thunder (snawman, in Fantee), by which name they are now known. Another party of Ashantees had attacked the left of King Chebbo, of Dinkara, the Winneboks having fled at the first fire, and never stopped till they reached Accra. But a few rounds of grape, thrown over the heads of our people, restored the battle there also, Chebbo being already in advance with part of his people, driving back his opponents. On the right, the battle was not for a moment doubtful. The King of Akimboo drove all before him, and penetrating to the King of Ashantee's camp, he took them in flank, and his path was marked by the column of smoke that rose in front. The short grass being dry, from our forces bivouacking at the roots of the trees for two nights, and extreme heat, caused it to take fire; the explosions of some Ashantee captains, who at intervals blew themselves up in despair, and was known by the smouldering smoke that curled over the trees; the shouts and groans of the combatants, the unmusical clamour of barbarous instruments, and the grass on fire, with the battle raging all around, formed no bad idea of the infernal regions. Fancy may paint, but it cannot be described, being like the wild fiction of an Oriental tale. The Danish natives seeing the enemy driven back by the rockets and grape, now advanced, and took possession of the plunder, which was immense, and deliberately walked off the field with it. They sent to request more ammunition, saying, they had only received twenty rounds each from their own Government; and when upbraided with their conduct, said, "it was against their Fetiche to fire on a Monday!" It was justly said, at Accra afterwards, that one part of the army fought and the other part got the plunder. About one o'clock the heads of the Ashantee chiefs began to be brought in. Several of the blood-royal and principal captains were known by the residents. When the death of any of them was reported to the King, he performed human sacrifices to their manes in the heat of battle. Among the sad trophies of the day, is the head of Sir Charles M'Carthy, which was taken by the Aquapim chief. The King carried it always with him as a powerful charm, and on the morning of the battle, he poured a libation of rum on it, and invoked the manes of Sir Charles to cause all the heads of the whites on the field to lie beside it. The skull is enveloped in paper, covered with Arabic, and a silk handkerchief; over all is tiger-skin, the emblem of royalty, which shows the estimation in which he was held by them. The whole of the Ashantee camp is taken, with their baggage and gold, the latter is said to be very considerable, but the Whites will never know what they got. Towards the end of the day, a great many slaves or prisoners were taken, being satiated with what they had killed in the early part of the fight, and, until it was dark, parties were coming in with plunder from every quarter. The troops lay on their arms all night, as it was not known but that the king, with his surviving friends, might make an attack, in despair, on us, as he was seen in front, wandering over the scene of his fallen ambition. Through the night, some of our chiefs struck their drums to some recitation, which was repeated along the line, and, as it died away, had a pleasing effect; but was generally succeeded by deep wailings from the glades in front of us, apparently from some unhappy Ashantee women, looking for their friends among the fallen.

The notorious Victor Hughes, called a Robespierre of the Colonies (because, being sent on different missions to the West India possessions of France, he perpetrated, or authorized, as many cruelties in that quarter as Robespierre did at home), died lately at Bourdeaux.

Both at Copenhagen and Stockholm a watchman is stationed every night on the top of the principal cathedral, who sounds a trumpet, and sings the time every quarter of an hour, proclaiming peace and security to the inhabitants.

MELANCHOLY SHIPWRECK.

(From the Greenock Advertiser.)

In addition to the loss of the Tuskett, of this port, with all her crew, off the coast of Ireland, we deeply regret to announce, that the same disastrous fate has befallen to the brig trader Castles, on her voyage hither from Limerick. The following letter to her owners, with the use of which we have been favoured, contains the afflicting particulars:—

"COLERAINE, NOV. 26, 1826.

"Messrs. D. Ferguson and Co.—Finding by the papers of the schooner or brig trader, that you are her owners, it falls to my lot to inform you of her hard fate, and that of her crew. At nightfall last evening, a brig was observed embayed, and trying to work to the eastward, after having in vain endeavoured to get into Derry Lough; at this time she was about two miles of the Bar of this place, when the wind checked a little to the eastward, it having blown from north to north-west all the day; and, about five o'clock, she struck on the sands, about half-a-mile to the westward of the Bar. This being perceived by some people on shore, a fire was kindled, and as loud a shout set up as they could, which was answered by the crew up to nine o'clock; but such was the situation of the place, with such tremendous surf, that no assistance could be rendered. An express was, immediately, on her striking, sent to me, knowing that I expected vessels, and I immediately applied to a Magistrate for the police, who were hurried off to watch the shore, and protect the property that might come in; and, as soon as the moon shone, I set off myself, and found that the masts had gone by the board, and the shore was covered with fragments, grain, &c. but no bodies, nor tho appearance of any person on board.

"When day-light came, I found that as the vessel lighted, she neared the shore, and I got a fellow daring enough to attempt to swim to her; he succeeded, and found the crew (six in number), all dead, and lashed to the stump of the foremast, the hatches up, and part of the deck blown up. We succeeded in getting two of the bodies on shore, but from the sea becoming more agitated, the man who went on board had to make the best of his way out again. The other bodies are still all on board, but I hope to get them out to-morrow if she holds together. I think one of the bodies got out was the master, having got nine sovereigns in gold, with some change, in his pockets, I beg to say, that every thing shall be done that humanity will dictate, and every attention shall be paid to the materials, &c. that may come on shore. I have got two large trunks with clothes, papers, &c. and a writing-desk, and some other articles. I found the trader was bound to Greenock from Limerick, with a cargo of oats and wheat.

"I remain, gentlemen, your very obedient Servant,

"THOMAS BLACK."

MURDER AT SEA.

HALIFAX, NOVA SCOTIA, NOVEMBER 3.—Last week, his Majesty's ship Grasshopper, came into harbour, having on board two prisoners, who were apprehended on the island of Cape Breton (on the information of two of their chief mates), for the murder of the captain and mate of an American schooner, the Fame, bound from Boston to Hamburgh. One of the prisoners is an Irishman, named Doyle, the other an American, named Curtis. Since their apprehension they have confessed their crime. It appears the crew of the vessel consisted of the captain, mate, and four seamen, and they had not been many days at sea, before they conceived the horrible design of murdering the captain and mate, and unhappily an opportunity soon presented itself for accomplishing their diabolical intentions.—In the morning of the fourteenth day of their being at sea, Doyle and Curtis had their watch on deck, the mate being asleep on the bencoop, when Doyle gave him a blow on his head with a hatchet, which completely stunned him, and then, with the assistance of Curtis, threw his body into the sea. They then went below, where the captain and the other two men were sleeping. Here Curtis took the hatchet, and aimed a blow at the captain, which hit him in the mouth; they then dragged him upon deck. This blow, however, had not been so effectual as the other, and when they reached the deck, the poor man recovered his senses, and entreated them not to murder him, but without regard to his supplication, they threw him also into the sea: as he fell overboard, they distiuctly heard him cry out, "Oh! Lord have mercy on my soul!"—Having thus accomplished their horrid design, they called up the other seamen, told them what they had done, and swore them to secrecy. The inducement to this inhuman act was an idea that there was a large sum of money on board, which it was their intention to seize, then scuttle the vessel, and embarking in the boat, make for the nearest shore, and give out that they had been wrecked; but they were disappointed: they searched the vessel, but found no money. They then steered in what they supposed was the direction of Newfoundland, and when within two days' sail of the shore, scuttled the vessel, took the boat, and landed at Louisburg, in the island of Cape Breton. Here their two shipmates, who did not consider themselves bound by an oath extorted from them under such circumstances, took the earliest opportunity of informing the magistracy.—They were immediately apprehended and sent to Sydney, from whence they were brought to this place. They are at present lodged in the gaol, where they will be detained till an opportunity offers for sending them to the United States.

OCCURRENCES IN BRIEF.

A project is on foot to erect an iron bridge from Lambeth to the Horse-ferry-road, at the estimated expense of 163,500l.—Mr. Duncombe, M.P. for Hertford, has given 50l. to the New "Constitutional Association" of the town, and 10l. to the National School.—At St. Alban's, on Wednesday, 36l. was collected for the benefit of the Society for promoting Christianity among the Jews, by the sale of ladies' fancy-work. Another sale is to take place in February for distressed manufacturers and orphans of the London silk-weavers.—The King of Saxony has bestowed a pension of 2060 francs on Weber's widow.—The Middlesex Quarter Sessions begin on Monday next.—Several persons have lately died from small-pox at Maulden, Beds.—It is necessary to be known that post-masters detaining newspapers, are liable to be punished by fine, dismission, and imprisonment.—A large portmanteau was cut from the Duke of Buckingham's carriage on Monday, on his return from Stow to London, containing, among other valuable articles, the insignia and brilliant collar of the Order of the Garter.—Ingenious Expedient—A Quaker being summoned before the Bury Magistrates for letting off fire-works, three appeared dressed so precisely alike, that the informer could not swear to the real "Simon Pure." A conviction was consequently impossible.—Mr. Noel, an attorney, was admitted to bail on Friday, charged with obtaining 100l. from a Mr. Robins, in change for a cheque on Sir Charles Scott and Co. to that amount, not having funds to meet it.—The property of Mr. Cuthbert, of Broadstairs, who was bail in 1600l. for Mr. Wakefield's appearance to take his trial for the abduction of Miss Turner was seized on Monday by the Sheriff of Dorset as forfeited to the Crown. George Biggerstaff, at the instance of Wheeler, was fined 10s. on Saturday se'nnight, at Guildhall, for striking a bullock with savage violence over the hock in Smithfield Market. Mr. Jolliffe applied at Lambeth-street Office, on Saturday se'nnight, for warrants against two men, one a watchman, on suspicion of stealing his wife's body the preceding evening from the first floor of his house in Bethnal-green. The Magistrate regretted that the case did not come under his jurisdiction, as they had not taken the least article of property, the law not making the abstraction of a body felony.—The Lord Chief Justice is understood to be better of his late accident, but has not yet been able to resume his official duties.

HIS MAJESTY'S LEVEE.

The King held his first Levee for the season on Monday, at St. James's Palace, which was most numerously attended. A great number of presentations took place. His Majesty appeared in excellent health and spirits.

Before the Levee, the two Houses of Convocation, who had come in procession from the Jerusalem Chamber, were received by his Majesty, seated on his Throne, and surrounded by the Great Officers of state. The Archbishop of Canterbury, with the Dean of Peterborough, Prolocutor of the Lower House, on his left hand, advanced to the foot of the Throne, and read the Address voted by the two Houses, which was received by his Majesty, with gracious expressions of satisfaction. The King's reply contained assurances of continued favour and protection to the Church of England.

SHOCKING CIRCUMSTANCE.

An inquest was held on Tuesday, at the Crown, Rosemary-lane, on the body of James Wilson, a native of Sweden. When the occurrence was communicated to the beadle, he hastened to the spot, and on entering the apartment, saw a number of rats tugging at the sinews and actively devouring the remains of the deceased. So intent were they on their banquet, that his presence did not in the slightest degree excite alarm; and in endeavouring to separate one of them from the corpse he was absolutely obliged to kill it. After the Jury were sworn, they proceeded to view the body, which lay in a miserable attic, exposed to every inclemency of the weather. It was enveloped in a piece of old sacking, without any other covering whatsoever, and presented the most emaciated appearance. One of the hands lay under the head, and the other, together with the right cheek, was much mutilated by the vermin. The room itself was full of rags, bones, and pieces of iron of all sizes; and in one part of it were some provisions in a decayed state. The deceased, who was of the most penurious disposition, denied himself the common necessaries of life, and is supposed to have left behind him a considerable sum of money, which yet remains undiscovered.—The evidence was to the following purport:—Sarah Coleman stated, that she was a charwoman and lived in the same house with the deceased. On Tuesday, between three and four o'clock, she broke open his room door, which was bolted on the inside. Her reason for doing so was that another lodger said, that as he had not been seen for a week, it was probable he was dead. On going in, she found him lying in a heap on the floor in an old sack. His jacket was lying near him, but there was no other covering. The deceased was in the habit of working for Jews, and used to go errands. He was 55 years of age, and she thought he starved himself to death—To the questions of the Jury, this witness replied, that the deceased had no friends, and was of a very miserly disposition. An old woman from the workhouse used to visit him, and she heard her say, "that she wished she had his, (the deceased's) money, as he had plenty of it in the Saving's Bank." He was a Swede, she understood, by birth, but had been a long time in this country.—The certificate of the surgeon, stating that he had died from natural causes, was handed in; and the Jury, on the recommendation of the Coroner, returned a verdict of—"Found Dead."

CORONERS' INQUESTS.

On Thursday, a Coroner's Inquest was held at the house of —— Abrahams, Esq., in Keppell-street, Russell-square, for the purpose of inquiring into the circumstances attending the death of Hannah Jeffereys, who was said to have destroyed herself by taking a decoction of meadow saffron, for the purpose of procuring abortion.

Mr. Henry Coombe, of Caroline-street, Bedford-square, surgeon, was called. On Monday last, about one o'clock in the day, witness was sent for to attend the deceased at the house of Mr. Abrahams. She was extremely ill, and in bed. Upon being questioned, she said, she had taken a quantity of meadow saffron, a tea-cup full. She said she had purchased three-pennyworth, and boiled it, and taken the infusion. She told witness she had taken it for a cough. Witness had no doubt that the quantity taken was the immediate cause of her death. The body of the deceased had since been opened. Death had been caused by the violent action of the liquid upon the stomach and bowels. The deceased was not enceinte; upon investigation there were no appearances to lead witness to suppose she was so. She was perfectly sensible; and she made no declaration of that kind to the witness.

Peter Ennis was then called, and replied with perfect readiness, but with some degree of flippancy, to a variety of questions from the Jury. The deceased told witness that she did not know whether she was in the family-way or not. She never, on any occasion, told him that she was in the family-way. Had seen an account in the papers, and read it, together, of a young woman having taken meadow-saffron to procure abortion, and she then said if she should be in the family-way she would take some. He told her if she did she would injure her health, and that he could give her a simple which would have the desired effect, without doing her any harm. He knew she was a married woman. They had been very intimate for some time. "I have had connection with her," said Ennis, with the utmost coolness, in answer to a question from a juror.

After some further remarks upon the case, the Coroner left it to the Jury to come to such a conclusion as they thought the evidence warranted.

The Jury, after a lengthened consultation, in the course of which a general feeling of indignation was expressed at the hardened profligacy shewn by the man Ennis, the following verdict was returned:—"That the deceased came by her death by taking a decoction of meadow-saffron, for the purpose of procuring abortion, she believing herself to be with child, but not with an intention to destroy herself."

The deceased was a fine young woman, 26 years of age, and most respectably connected. Mr. Abraham stated, that he had received a very high character with her, and had ascertained, by enquiry, that she was quite deserving of it.

DUEL.—A duel was fought on Tuesday morning between Mr. B—x—r and a Captain in the army, respecting a dispute at a coffee-room at the west-end of the town the preceding evening. The parties met on Putney-heath, when the captain received the contents of his adversary's pistol in the shoulder.

SOLAR ECLIPSE.—On Wednesday morning the promised eclipse of the sun took place at the appointed time. It commenced in Leeds 41 min. 3 sec. past nine o'clock, and terminated 51 min. 42 sec. past eleven o'clock mean time. The greatest obscuration was at 45 min. 17½ sec. past ten, nearly 6-10th of the sun's diameter having been then eclipsed, by the interposition of the south-east limb of the moon on its eastern side, or about one-third of the solar disk. As the period approached for observing this truly interesting celestial phenomenon, the corners of the streets in the town, as well as such doors and windows as commanded a view of the great luminary, contained groups of gazers, ready armed with smoked pieces of glass, to look at the eclipse. When the latter became perceptible, it seemed to excite more than ordinary feelings; and throughout the whole duration of the obscuration it was viewed with a mixture of wonder and awe. This was the largest eclipse that will be seen in England till 1836, and the first that has been visible since September, 1820. The latter took place while the late Queen's trial was proceeding, and at the moment Mr. Denman was in the midst of her defence!—Leeds Intelligencer.

NOTICES TO CORRESPONDENTS.

The letter signed "VERITAS," from one of the Drury-lane Orchestra, referring to the subject of a premature discharge, should be addressed to the Manager of that theatre.

"459" is thanked for his friendly addresses, and the hints he, from time to time, furnishes us with shall be thankfully adopted.

We have received a long letter from MICHAEL ROUGH, a schoolmaster formerly in the service of the Earl and Countess of GLENGALL, whom he now describes as persecuting him with remorseless fury, without any apparent reason: the poor man represents himself and wife as lingering in a positive state of starvation. We will certainly enquire into his case, and the public shall know more of it.

RAPHAEL'S letters have respectively come to hand, and will be laid by till a fitting opportunity.

We have not room for an IRISHMAN'S "Lines on St. James's Park."

The verses signed W. S. addressed to a Covent Garden Syren, are beneath even the contempt of delicacy.

We quite agree with a correspondent signed H. P. that it is impossible to mark too strongly the disgusting conduct of Col. PATTERSON, who appeared in the Court of Chancery a few days since, palpably aiding the cause of Mr. LONG WELLESLEY! Does not a voice from Wanstead, to say nothing of that of a living daughter, thunder out "shame" in this creature's ears?

W.'s joke, relative to the addenda of continental titles to those of obscure Englishmen, is not bad.

The "on-dits," relative to the Lusitanian party are inadmissible.

"The posthumous Letter to the Earl of GLENGALL" is under consideration, with a pile of others, which have, within this fortnight, made their appearance. Although we are determined not, from any persecution of that Noble Lord, to issue the malice of others against him, [of the truth of which we may be uncertain, yet we will enquire into the accuracy of these different points, and say what we do know.

A joke, ascribed to the "Way of Oatlands," that the signature of Mr. ANTHONY BROWN, the new Lord Mayor will be—"A Brown Mayor," is a common quibble—besides, the joker ought to know that, as Lord BYRON once said of Lord HOLLAND, "His Lordship's feasts! are better than his writings!"

DOGGREL'S four lines are but so-so; but we suppose they must have a corner:—

Would ye know why my Lord of Glengall and his friends
Seek law, their poor wrath to assuage?
Why—"THE AGE" they would glad make a scorn of,
Since they've long been "The scorn of the Age!"

We noticed, a week or two since, on the faith of a correspondent, an accident said to have happened to the Rev. Dr. FEARON, by his improperly setting a spring-gun on his premises—from the following letter, we have reason to believe the former was a hoax; if so, we think no chastisement too severe for a wretch who could sport in such a manner with the feelings of a respected family circle:—

Littleworth Cottage, Ore, Nov. 18, 1826.

Sir,—In your paper of last week appeared a statement relative to the Rev. Dr. Fearon, of Ore, Sussex.

I have to request that you will be pleased, in your next publication, to refute so foul and base a calumny. I can assure you, from the many years I have had the happiness of being personally acquainted with the Rev. Doctor Fearon, that such destructive weapons he never uses against his enemies? That nothing of the kind has ever been placed in his garden or grounds. That he is not one of the Magistracy; and having been for some hours in his company last evening, I can confidently state, the whole to be a most malignant falsehood; and the person, who could fabricate, and transmit to you, an accusation so totally unfounded, against a most worthy, upright, and blameless character, is not worthy to hold a place in civilized society.

From what I have said, I need not urge the insertion of this letter, to remove the anxiety it must have caused, and as far as you can, the impression that has been made to the prejudice of an excellent and faithful Minister of the Gospel.

I am, Sir,
Your most obedient humble Servant.
HENRY PHILLIPS.

Was it 5,000l. or 3,000l. paid by the Stock-broker to the Alderman for the evacuation of St. Alban's, to which ROY was privy?

SPY is wrong—the sum won by Mr. WALROND from Mr. AULDJO was 3,248l.!

The particulars of Mr. HAWKINS'S affair, and the conduct of the Jockey Club, are under consideration.

THE AGE.

LONDON, DECEMBER 3.

The presence of the KING in the metropolis, and the circumstances to which it has given rise, are the general themes of satisfaction. HIS MAJESTY held a levee on Monday last, and has subsequently visited the theatres: the particulars, attendant upon which will be found in another column. Of the occurrences which marked the former, we may be permitted to observe, that, among the foreigners of distinction who were presented, it gave us infinite satisfaction to see, in the suite of Prince POLIGNAC, that respected veteran, General VICTOR AURYOT, who has distinguished himself for so many years as the faithful follower of the HOUSE OF BOURBON.

THE NEW PARLIAMENT, limited as its present sitting is, appears to be gradually and effectually proceeding with the discussion of those important purposes for the prosecution of which it was thus early assembled: but, admitting this, as we fully do, it is quite impossible to omit some reference to those extraneous subjects which are from day to day brought in, for the purpose of exciting argument, without effecting any desired end. In proof of this, we need go no further than to some part of last Thursday's debate, wherein Mr. LITTLETON moved a Resolution respecting the Private Bills Committee, which was entered into, by Alderman WAITHMAN, in the most irrelevant and ridiculous manner imaginable, in the course of which all solid reasoning was sacrificed on the shrine of personality. WAITHMAN was called to order during his harangue, but seemed to pay very little attention to the reproof, until Mr. Secretary PEEL replied upon some parts of his speech, with that biting, but quiet sarcasm, for which he is so celebrated, and the force of which few who surround him can resist.—We need hardly say the linen-draper was mute for the rest of the evening.

But the important subjects that now agitate, and for some time will, the Councils of Great Britain are not to be intruded upon by this ill-timed foolery, from a set of ignorant people, who have no more business within the walls of Parliament, than we have behind their counters—these subjects are vital to the country's welfare, and require the serious and deep thought of the country's most intellectual supporters. Of the nature of these important positions, we cannot convey to the reader a stronger idea, than by transcribing the following comments from an admirable article, in this month's Blackwood's Magazine, replete with sound argument, perspicuous observation, and most correct illustration. Some of the mountebanks, who have crept by chance, or particular incident, into the recesses of the BRITISH SENATE, will do well to examine the subjoined remarks, as conveying to their bewildered imaginations some notion of those important Parliamentary duties, of the fulfilments of which they have not, at present, the most remote idea. To these worthy people, then, we submit them, in the hope that if they produce no extra display of genius, no knowledge of duty, or no inclination to attain either, they will at least produce forbearance, and on all occasions good manners:—

"If circumstances render it impossible for Parliament to deny that almost every interest is in bitter suffering, it must scrupulously refrain from casting any blame upon the New System. Changes were lately made in our trading laws of the most gigantic character; and it is alike unquestionable, that they have had very great operation, and that they have not operated for good. Nevertheless it must not inquire into their effects; but, on the contrary, it must solemnly decide that they were made on unerring principles by men who could not err—that they have yielded great public benefit—and that every change whatever, devised by the present Ministers, and sanctioned by the present leaders of the Whigs and Radicals, must of necessity be most wise and beneficial.

"A year ago the silk manufacturers were suddenly deprived of the orders of their customers. What was the cause? Notoriously and confessedly the opening of the silk trade. For several months before the admission of foreign silks, the dealers refused to buy on account of it; in the first week after these silks were admitted, three or four hundred thousand pounds worth of them, and in the first three months, one hundred and twenty-nine thousand pieces of them, were thrown upon the market: they are still largely imported.

"In the first instance, very many masters were ruined, and immense numbers of workmen were thrown out of employment by the suspension of trade; then the foreign silks drove a large portion of the English ones out of consumption, and nearly destroyed several branches of the English manufacture; they, besides, reduced prices one-third almost throughout the trade. In consequence, the masters who escaped ruin, are carrying on business almost without profit, and the workmen who are able to procure employment, can merely earn bread and water. Without this loss of legitimate profit, and this starvation, the silk manufacture of this country would be destroyed.

"The Shipping Interest has been for some time in great distress, and it is demonstrable that the distress has been chiefly produced by the changes. Taking into account the import of corn, there has been perhaps about as much employment for shipping between this country and foreign ones, in the last twelve months, as there was previously; and it is matter of direct proof, that the reason why such numbers of British ships are rotting in idleness is—they cannot possibly compete with foreign ones. It is likewise matter of direct proof that their inability to do this has caused a glut which has sunk freights below their proper level in almost every branch of the carrying trade, and that the changes alone created the inability. It is, moreover, matter of direct proof, that this distress of the Shipping Interest has grievously injured, not only those whose employment it is to build and fit out ships, but also the timber, iron, and various other trades. Will not then that common reason, which distinguishes man from the brute, justify us in believing that the changes have done mighty mischief to the Shipping Interest, and the vast numbers of our fellow-subjects depending upon it for subsistence? Nevertheless, Parliament must solemnly determine that these changes have done no injury to the Shipping Interest whatever, and that, if they had not been made, freights and seamen's wages would have been as low as they now are, and as many ships, sailors, ship-carpenters, &c. would have been idle, as are idle at present.

"The changes admitted into the market, more or less of foreign prints, muslins, cambrics, gloves, shoes, china, iron, copper, lace, &c. &c., when it was profusely stocked with home-made goods. These foreign articles forced a like portion of British ones out of consumption, and created glut, stagnation, and a pernicious depression of prices in every trade they acted upon. If only a trifling quantity of an article were imported, still perhaps the liberty to import it, and the low rate at which it could be sold, were sufficient to compel a whole trade so to lower its prices as to deprive the masters in a great degree of profit, and to place the workmen on wages that would scarcely supply them with food. The worst mischief was not done by the importations, although these necessarily stripped numbers of workmen of employment: the liberty to import, of itself, swept away almost half the profits and wages of various trades.

"The new colonial system permitted the colonies to buy of other nations various of those articles with which they had previously been supplied by this country. In consequence, they bought considerable quantities of cottons, cordage, nails, millinery, salted provisions, &c. &c., of foreigners, which they would otherwise have bought here. This was a subtraction from a regular trade; and of course it not only threw numbers of workmen out of employment in various trades, but contributed greatly to increase the destructive glut in these trades.

"The changes operated directly upon full two millions of the community, and perhaps upon a far greater number. They ruined many of the masters, and subjected those to immense losses whom they did not ruin; they deprived vast numbers of workmen of employment, and reduced the wages of those they left in employment to bread and water. They plunged part of the two millions into actual want, and the remainder into penury.

"Was this to have no effect on the rest of the community which was not directly touched by the changes? Yes, cry the Economists, it would benefit it greatly—the rest of the community would profit mightily from the cheapness of silks, ships, &c. Did then the silk-manufacturers, weavers, shipowners, shipbuilders, sailors, &c. &c. buy as much of the rest of the community in their distress as they had bought in their prosperity? No! their purchases were reduced one-half, and this operated powerfully to bring the rest of the community into glut, stagnation, and distress.

"The changes touching the currency directly affected the whole nation. When they were made, it was universally proclaimed, in Parliament and out of it, that they would reduce greatly the price of every thing which was not already at a ruinous price. This was universally believed in; and if the changes had been in all other respects perfectly inoperative, the belief would have been quite sufficient to cause a great reduction of prices. Every individual, from the labourer upwards, was convinced that all articles would immediately fall greatly, and this suspended all, save "hand to mouth" buying. No one, consumer, retailer, or wholesale-dealer, would purchase beyond what necessity required, except at greatly reduced prices. While the buyers could thus hold back, various of the sellers were compelled to sell for whatever they could obtain. The inevitable consequences were stagnation, glut, a destructive scarcity of money, inability to meet payments, bankruptcies, and such a fall of prices, as subjected every member of the community to grievous loss in one way or another.

"But the currency-changes had other effects. They deprived the country banks of stamps, and severely injured their credit. In consequence, an enormous mass of capital which had previously been employed in the support of trade, was withdrawn: and this, in the peculiar circumstances of the country, had naturally the most fatal operation.

"In addition to all this, the changes created so much uncertainty, that people in business knew not what to do; and this contributed to interrupt and derange general trade very greatly. The changes that were threatened, as well as those that were made, had their share in producing mischief. It was confidently expected that the Corn Laws would be abolished in the last Session, and it has since been confidently expected that they will be abolished in the present one. This depressed materially the price of land and its produce, and it interfered perniciously with the letting, mortgaging, and selling of land; it paralised the operations of agriculture. These effects had baneful influence over trade and manufactures."

PROGRESS OF THE REFORMATION.

We had an opportunity, last week, of introducing some important information relative to the advancement of Protestantism in Ireland, and we are this week enabled to lay before our readers a still more gratifying account of its effects. The following statement comprises an account of the Catholics converted in Cavan, from the 8th of October to the 26th of November, by which it will be seen, that in the short space of seven weeks, up to Sunday last, there have been in that one place no less than ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY-THREE CONVERTS! Their order and number of reformation occurred on these days:—

October	8th	17
	22d	20
	29th	10
Nov.	5th	15
	12th	8
	19th	20
	26th	43
		—133

GAMBOLS OF HIGH LIFE.

We have waited until the various statements and mis-statements, respecting this recent transaction, have been submitted to the public, for very obvious reasons—in the first place, to hear the accounts which the interested, or the busy, might furnish the world, and in the next place, to ascertain what conclusions the world would come to upon the subject. Now that all this has been made manifest—now that an indictment has been preferred, and a true bill found against some of the parties—now that a rule Nisi has been refused to one of the most interested among them, but now that the public mind is thus far made up, we think there can be no objection to our speaking. The statement which has run through the fashionable circles of the Metropolis, understood to be drawn up by one of the gentlemen concerned, and to have received the sanction of the others, we have perused, and, as it materially differs in some respects from the accounts already published, upon which an impression may have been created, we give them in detail.

At the close of the last month, a circumstance connected with the late election of Mr. Bethel Walrond, M.P. for Sudbury, occasioned a closer intercourse between him and Mr. O'Neill, M.P. for Hull, than had before existed, and took them twice to the neighbourhood of Richmond. During one of those trips, they made an engagement to dine, on a subsequent day, with a family in the neighbourhood. Mr. O'Neill said he would drive Mr. Walrond down in his tilbury, and desired him to come to his house for that purpose. Instead of that, he drove to Mr. Walrond's door, before he was ready; sitting with him in the tilbury was Mr. Boland, to whom he then introduced Mr. Walrond. Two or three days afterwards, Mr. Boland met Mr. Walrond in the street, and, talking of the emptiness of London, asked him where he was going to dine, either that day or the next, and finding he was disengaged, invited him to dine at his lodgings in Stratton-street, to meet Mr. O'Neill. Mr. Walrond went, and there, for the first time, saw Mr. Auldjo and his brother. Two or three days more passed, when Mr. Walrond was driving his cabriolet through Hyde Park gate, and met Mr. O'Neill, who said 'Will you come down and dine at Richmond today? Lord Clanricarde is going to drive a party of us down.' Mr. Walrond replied 'I do not know Lord Clanricarde,' when Mr. O'Neill said, 'Oh, I'll introduce you, come and take your chance of a seat:' this was in the morning, and in the afternoon, at about five o'clock, Mr. Walrond went to Mr. O'Neill's door, and there found Lord C.'s four-in-hand waiting, and himself and Lord Howth standing on the pavement. Mr. O'Neill was not then present. When, Mr. O'Neill came, he introduced Mr. Walrond to Lords Clanricarde and Howth. They all mounted on the outside of Lord Clanricarde's carriage, and drove to Richmond. At dinner, a conversation arose between Lord Clanricarde and Mr. O'Neill, which ended in a proposal from one to the other to play at Ecarté. Some time after dinner the bell was rung, cards were desired to be brought, and in the course of the evening they sat down to that game. Mr. Walrond moved from the dessert-table soon afterwards, and made some small bets with Mr. O'Neill upon the game. A round game was proposed by some of the gentlemen present, which, after some discussion, was agreed to. Macao was then proposed, and rejected. Afterwards loo was introduced, at the wish of Mr. Auldjo. Mr. Walrond did not know the game, in consequence of which, two or three rounds were played expressly to teach him before they played for money. Afterwards the play became high, and

Mr. Auldjo had won a large sum. Mr. Walrond had then lost 1,400*l.* or 1,500*l.* Mr. Auldjo, who sat next him, played with great coolness and care, never risking any thing unless he had a very good hand. He afterwards, however, began to lose, and Mr. Walrond was now a winner. Again he was a loser, and again a winner, having won from Lord Clanricarde, Lord Howth, Mr. O'Neill, and Mr. Auldjo. Having won so very largely, Mr. Walrond offered to 'cut' with any one; in consequence of which Lord Clanricarde and Mr. Walrond then cut the cards, and his Lordship won back the greater part of what he had lost. He (Lord C.) and Mr. Walrond then paid the bill, which, for an excellent dinner and dessert, with the best wines, waiters included, amounted to 10*l.* for six persons. Lord Clanricarde and Mr. Walrond paid five pounds exactly, and then joined the party who were in the yard, and drove home on Lord Clanricarde's carriage.

Upon this narrative we shall not at present offer an opinion, although we may consider ourselves in possession of whatever HONOURABLE quality may have been mixed up in the whole transaction, and to an exposition of the TRUTH thereof we have been urged by a greater mass of correspondence than has ever before been submitted to our discretion upon any given point. We will only pledge ourselves eventually to let the reader into the entire secret, and merely do not at present, because we may not interfere with any understanding either effecting, or about to be effected, upon the subject.

It appears, however, that this instance is not the only one on record, in which some of the same performers have previously figured in something of a similar cast of character. The following detail has been sent to us, upon authority we are disposed to believe; but if there is any inaccuracy, we will cheerfully correct it. On the evening of the St. Leger race of 1824, Captain GRADY asked a Mr. WEBSTER to dine with him, which he accepted, and went to the place appointed. Lord CLANRICARDE was alone in the room, and remained so with Mr. WEBSTER for some time, when a Mr. BOWLES and a Mr. BURTON entered---dinner was ordered, and when nearly finished, Captain GRADY came in with Captain O'NEILL, to the latter of whom Mr. WEBSTER was then introduced. The cloth was scarcely removed, when a card-table was ordered, and Captain GRADY asked Mr. WEBSTER to play at loo, and although he told him he knew nothing of the game, he and some of the party pressed him to play, and said they would teach him. Down they all sat, and after the first game, they cut up small pieces of paper, and wrote on them, "I. O. U. £25," which were distributed. At first, Mr. WEBSTER lost twenty-five pounds, and Mr. BURTON about the same sum, when he went away; upon which they continued playing for about half an hour longer, when Mr. BOWLES apprized Mr. WEBSTER that he had lost 1,300*l.* He said it was impossible; but the rest of the party testifying to the fact, and remarking how unlucky he had been, he got up and left the room. The next morning, Mr. WEBSTER paid 500*l.*, after some hesitation, and gave Mr. BOWLES a bill for the remaining sum. They were not playing above an hour altogether.

These two scenes we now leave for the present, to speak for themselves; but when some circumstances, now pending, be fully adjudged, we will undertake to speak for them, as plain, if not plainer than they do for themselves.

FOLLY AS IT FLIES.

TOM DUNCOMBE met a friend in St. James's-street the other day, to whom he mentioned Sir JOSEPH COPLEY'S "last." At a late dinner at Sprotsborough, PETRE asked COPLEY, on helping him to some mutton, whether he should cut saddleways, or not?—to which the modern MILLER replied, "No, bridle-ways, to be sure; and then we shall stand some chance of getting a bit in our mouths."

Mr. BALL HUGHES has been safely delivered of the following squib:—

Lord ——* asked me, on finding, one night,
He was greatly in CROCKFORD's arrears,
"What his Club House was like?"—I replied, "London-bridge,
"Because 'tis supported by Piers!"

Mr. ROGER KEATING has sent a line to Lord HARBOROUGH, who every body knows is so fond of sailing, advising him to have his new vessel's bottom coppered with tin.

Mr. RAIKES, who has lately returned from Paris, having "shewn" with a very odd rainbow-looking sort of neckcloth, was asked if it was not something new—to which TOM replied, "Yes, it is a novel-tie."

Mr. RAIKES, furthermore, has brought over a somewhat ill-natured joke on BALL HUGHES, who, when travelling some time since in France, and wanting to send his servant on by the Diligence, was asked by the conducteur whether he would wish his servant to go in the Diligence or Cabriolet (the front part of it)—to which BALL replied, "Oh, by whichever gets first into Paris!"

Young JONES started the other morning from MILTON'S, in a break, symptomish of a "break-UP" in that establishment.

Lord BELGRAVE, on his return to town, has, we are sorry to inform the good people of Chester, looked nearly half-starved, though but lately arrived from Eat-on Hall. "Half-STARVED," said HENRY DE ROOS, on hearing this—"I should like to know which half of him is fed!"

A novel entitled "Almack's," has just been sent into the world by those spirited publishers, Messrs. SAUNDERS and OTLEY, which appears to have agitated, in no ordinary degree, the nerves of the "Elites," more particularly as it is understood to be the production of a Lady of quality. We have not read the work, but we find it on the table of most fashionable people in the metropolis.

The Morning Chronicle, the only last hope that poor HUME has to cling to, has been a party this last week to the publication of a correspondence entertained about a year since between this man of figures and the Editor of the Times, which has evidently been resorted to, by the Chronicle, for the purpose of imputing to its contemporary some malicious motive in the late handling of HUME, by that paper, for his precious transactions with the Greeks. This is that correspondence, published under the authority of JOSEPHUS himself, and thus prefaced by the presiding deity of the Chronicle:

Mr. Hume has published the following correspondence. The letters refer to an anonymous letter published in the Times of the 14th of November, 1825, which reached Edinburgh on the day of a public dinner given to Mr. Hume in that city:—

"TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES.

"Bryanstone-square, Dec. 2, 1825.

"Sir—On the 14th ult. whilst I was in Scotland, a letter signed 'A Hater of Humbug,' and dated Glasgow, Nov. 8, was published in your paper.

"The Glasgow Chronicle republished that letter, after the editor had been informed, by the agent of the colliers, that it was 'an abominable and malicious falsehood;' and, as it is believed in Glasgow that the letter was not written there, but by some slanderer in London, I have to request you will favour me with the name of the writer, and that you will not lend yourself, on any future occasion, to give currency to anonymous abuse of,

Sir, your obedient Servant, "JOSEPH HUME."

"Times Office, Dec. 2, 1825.

"The Editor of The Times presents his compliments to Mr. Hume; he assures Mr. Hume that the letter signed 'A Hater of Humbug' came from Glasgow; but he cannot consent to give up the name of the writer. He is surprised that Mr. Hume should make such a request, after the ample amends made by The Times journal in the insertion of the long contradiction published by the Glasgow Free Press.

"As to any future mention of Mr. Hume in The Times journal, the Editor will be governed solely by his own judgment, and certainly will not feel it necessary to consult Mr. Hume on the subject.

"The Editor, of course, will never allude to Mr. Hume, except by reference to his public or parliamentary conduct."

"TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES.

"Bryanstone-square, Dec. 3, 1825.

"Sir,—I cannot consider the republication of the contradiction from The Glasgow Free Press as a sufficient reparation for the injury which the letter of the 'Hater of Humbug' was intended to do, and might have done, me; I therefore, once more, request you to give up the name of your anonymous correspondent (that he may be exposed to the obloquy which he deserves), or leave yourself under the suspicion of being the author of that 'abominable and most malicious falsehood.'

"I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

"JOSEPH HUME."

To this letter no answer was returned.

EXTRACT FROM THE TIMES OF NOV. 4, 1826.

"It cannot be supposed that we have any animosity, any ancient grudge to gratify against the persons charged: on the contrary, our political opinions have generally coincided with theirs; and one of them we have ever esteemed the most useful member in the British Parliament."

The object of this, on Mr. HUME'S part (and to which the Morning Chronicle has so absurdly lent itself), is to throw an air of discredit over the very proper castigation which the Times has inflicted on the Aberdeen Member, respecting the Greek Loans—he might as well undertake to roll, before the appointed time, the stone of SYSIPHUS; for, we can assure Mr. HUME, however much his own ingenuity, or the assistance of the absurd part of his friends, may attempt to conceal it to the world, that even by the few who did admire his persevering stupidity, he is now looked upon with becoming contempt, for which he is mainly indebted to the chastisement his conduct has received from the Times.

THEATRICALS.

We intimated to our readers, on Sunday last, that we had reasons to believe HIS MAJESTY would honour the theatres with HIS PRESENCE, during his short stay in town; and that gratifying event has taken place during the past week—at Covent Garden on Thursday, and Drury Lane on Friday evening.

It is unnecessary to enter into that minutia which has been indulged in by most of our daily contemporaries, respecting "the pomp, pride, and circumstance," of the Royal visit; and it will therefore be merely essential to observe, that the KING was in excellent health, and was received by his people with those thunders of enthusiasm, which fully denoted in them a prayer for its continuance. The performances selected for HIS MAJESTY'S pleasure, at Covent Garden Theatre, consisted of WEBER'S opera of Oberon, and POOLE'S farce of the 'Scape Goat, which appeared to give him unmixed satisfaction. In the former, it is impossible that such a distinguished musical judge as the MONARCH is known to be, could be otherwise than delighted with the music of this fine opera, as well as with the admirable manner in which that part of it was executed, which fell to the lot of Madame VESTRIS and Miss PATON, who received, throughout the evening, the especial attention and encouragement of the Royal Box. The performances at Drury Lane consisted of the Devil's Bridge, and Love, Law, and Physic. The wide difference between the compositions of the German and English masters were, on these respective occasions, submitted to HIS MAJESTY'S taste: and, however critical opinion may differ on their various qualifications, it is impossible to deny, that in each of these operas, there is ample display of the pretensions of both. In the Devil's Bridge there are some of the prettiest ballads known to English ears, composed by the talented individual who sung them on this occasion, by virtue of which, the gratification was rendered more complete. We never heard BRAHAM in better voice than he was on Friday, and, aware of the high tribunal before which he was performing, he exerted his powers to the utmost—in his execution of one part of God save the King, his delivery was the most electrifying thing we ever listened to.

There is nothing so delightful to us, at least in matters of a theatrical nature, as the point we are now discussing—the appearance of the KING, in a national theatre. The subject is here permitted to hold a species of respectful communication with HIS SOVEREIGN, which is obviously denied to him on any other occasion—the intellectual pursuit of the drama (by which it has been wisely said the character of a nation is best displayed), is herein mutually enjoyed by Prince and peasant—there is no restraint placed on the feelings of the one or other, and the conviction thus brought home to the humblest mind, that he has some impulse in common with the RULER OF HIS COUNTRY, renders doubly strong the sensation of loyalty he entertains towards him. We have already mentioned the manner in which the truth of this remark was rendered apparent on both evenings in question—never before did KING receive more hearty congratulations from SUBJECT, and never before did subject feel more perfect sincerity in bestowing them.

We have perused, with much regret, the unfeeling levity with which the sale of Mr. ELLISTON'S effects in Stratford Place has been treated by several of the daily journals—the unfortunate, when "fallen too far to fear a further fall," are rather entitled to commiseration than sarcasm; and, surely, something is due to one, who, however inimical he may sometimes have been to the best interests of the drama, was, after all, a greater enemy to his own; and, in catering many years for the public taste, and receiving, during that period, the public favour, has so far profited by it, as to be left in his old age pennyless. The Times seems particularly fond, lately, of recording, "theatrical anecdotes," a specimen of which is to be found in the following paragraph from that paper of Thursday last:—

"Much amusement is excited in the theatrical circles on the subject of the courtship of one of the most fascinating of our singers, by a gentleman of fortune, to whom she has been lately united. The following particulars, which we give without decoration or overcharge, are the most striking connected with the history of this romantic affair:—The lady, while performing in one of the popular operas, brought out a few seasons ago, played the mischief with the heart of a poor man, who, though of sufficient rank and wealth to venture upon a self-introduction amongst such 'small fry,' did not know exactly how to go about it. At last an opportunity presented itself. He was informed that the lady was to set off for Manchester, on a certain day, in the mail, and putting two Bank-notes, the one for 100*l.* the other for 10*l.*, in his pocket, he paid for the three vacant seats in the coach, in the expectation of a delightful tete-a-tete. How great then must have been his disappointment, when, upon entering the coach, he found, not the exquisite creature whose features were ever present to his imagination, but an old harridan, like her of whose chin Sheridan said, from the mouth of the Jew, 'a razor would not be amiss for either of us.' Before he reached the second stage he left his companion in disgust; but having received the strongest assurances that she whom he sought must reach Manchester within a given time, he drove off in a post-chaise. They reached the town nearly at the same moment. This was ominous; but still he was at a loss for an introduction, and in this emergency, he determined at length to 'stoop to conquer,' by associating with her satellites. He set up at a fashionable hotel, and invited several of the performers to dine with him; but as he did not wish that his family should be informed of his pranks, he passed with his landlord and guests as Mr. Jenkins. Many a jovial scene took place in the house of the landlord, who, although he liked the address and liberality of Mr. Jenkins well enough, by no means admired his choice of companions, and thought it was high time to send in the bill. The day before this determination was come to, however, an awkward accident occurred to poor Mr. Jenkins.—The benefit night of his beloved was advertised. Here was an occasion of introducing himself with the most acceptable grace. He knocked at the door. She was at home. He announced himself in his real name. She had heard it before, and blushed to hear it again. He was admitted to her presence, looked, sighed, begged a ticket, received it, seized the hand that held it, kissed it, threw a bank-note upon the table, looked and sighed again, and ran out of the house. 'Now,' said he to himself 'that I have accomplished so much, I had had better go home to prevent the suspicion of my mother. I shall just pay my bill with this 100*l.* note, and be off.' He pulled out his only bank note, and looked at it as Macbeth looked at the 'air-drawn dagger.' It was the ten pounds. He had given the other for the ticket for the play. His bill was nearly 60*l.*, and he was a stranger in Manchester, and not master of more than a sixth part of the sum. In this extremity, he wished to apply to a banking-house in the town, confident that the name of his family must be known there. Having mentioned to one of the partners his necessity, which, he said, was occasioned by a strange accident; he told his name, and requested that his draught upon his banker in London might be cashed. The Manchester banker was willing to oblige, but he thought proper to inquire the applicant's address in the town, and having requested that he would be seated for a few minutes, sent to the hotel to learn some particulars. The landlord stared when he heard a name so unlike that of his new guest. 'No,' said he, 'I have nobody of that name in my house, but, by—, I have somebody very like him, and I believe he is a bit of a schemer, for he looked very blue when I asked him for my bill.' This intelligence was immediately brought to the banker, who, thereupon, politely, but coldly, expressed his regret that the accommodation could not be afforded. The unfortunate lover had no alternative but that of writing to London. His landlord (who eyed him with the greatest suspicion—for the report that he had applied at the banker's soon reached the hotel), resolved, that his customer should never go out without a guard; so that wherever he went, a distorted shoe-boy was seen at his heels, until a remittance arrived, and enabled him to enter, without his filthy companion, into the presence of the lady who was then the dearest object of his wishes, and is now, of course, the greatest source of his felicity."

The parties referred to are the late Miss TREE and JEMMY BRADSHAW; and, although somewhat exaggerated, the circumstances, which occurred a considerable time since, are pretty faithfully narrated.

EXECUTION OF SIX MEN!

On Wednesday morning the penalty of the law was carried into effect on John Hayes, aged 25; George Nicholls, aged 24; James Goulby, aged 18; John Robinson, aged 19; James Boyce, aged 25; and Robert King, aged 21. The particulars of their various offences have been recently before the public; they all died penitent. After the men had been turned off some time, a cry of murder and deafening hisses were heard from the crowd; it was then discovered that the rope was not properly adjusted round the neck of Robinson, and that he was suffering dreadfully; the undersheriffs returned to the scaffold, and ordered the executioner to adjust the rope, on his doing which the vociferations of the mob was terrible: it was near ten minutes before animation ceased. The others died without a struggle.

The Times had the following remarks on the occasion:—

"In pity for the fate of the wretches who have perished by the hands of the executioner, we hope the abhorrence of their several crimes will not be lost. When honest men cannot live in security, either as to property or life, it is necessary that thieves should perish. The atrocities that were committed in the eastern part of London called for the interference of the law, and demanded redress. We could wish to take pity as much as possible away from the victims who die on the gallows, and affix it on the poor men who cannot walk the streets in safety—on those who may have quitted their wives and families one hour in perfect health, and the next be stretched on the earth by the hand of violence.—May those who are condemned to die, and suffer death, feel, for their own sakes, their criminal state, and obtain pardon by penitence but it would be better, for the sake of the public, if they saw the consequences of their criminal conduct sooner—if they kept innocency, and gave heed to the thing that was right; for that only will bring a man peace to the last."

DREADFUL SUICIDE.

Thursday morning, a young man of extreme gentlemanly exterior, arrived at the Four Swans Inn, in Bishopsgate-street, by a Suffolk coach; on entering the coffee-room, he desired the waiter to provide him a bed-chamber, as he was wet, and he wished to retire. The waiter accordingly gave directions to the chamber-maid, who lit a fire in one of the ante-chambers, after which the stranger retired: a short time had only elapsed before the bell of his room rung, and on the maid making her appearance, the gentleman requested that his bed might be warmed, as he did not feel himself well, and wished to rest. After his wishes were attended to, the maid retired, and till about six o'clock in the evening no person disturbed the visitor, as it was imagined that he was asleep, and did not wish to be disturbed; about the above stated hour, however, the waiter repaired to the gentleman's room—the door was not fastened inside; on his entrance, the curtains of the bed were closely drawn round: on the waiter opening the curtains, he involuntarily started back at the very dreadful spectacle that was presented to his view: the unfortunate gentleman laid on the bed, completely undressed, and literally saturated in a gore of blood. The waiter, on somewhat recovering himself, discovered that the unhappy man had shot himself through the heart. In his right hand a large duelling pistol was clenched. From the appearance of the wound, death must have been instantaneous.

From letters and other papers found upon his person, his friends have been traced; they are highly respectable, and reside at Debenham, in Suffolk. The deceased's name is William Jackson, aged about twenty-two years. No cause has yet been assigned for the commission of the dreadful act. The report of the pistol was not heard; and it is inferred, that the wretched man fired at the time when a coach was coming up the yard, which would drown the noise of the report.

On Friday an inquest was held, when the Jury returned a verdict "that he shot himself in a state of temporary derangement."

New London Bridge.—A Special Jury was summoned on Monday to assess the amount of compensation to be paid to Mr. W. Thompson, the proprietor of Red-cross Wharf, Old Swan-passage, which it is necessary to remove to form the approach to the new bridge. The claim was 18,000l. for the loss of his business, being for an average of six years' purchase at 3,000l. per annum; for losses sustained by his wagons, &c. 1,785l.; and 20,000l. for his freehold—making a total of 39,785l. Witnesses were examined on both sides touching the value of the property, and after a most minute investigation, the Jury assessed the damages as follow:—for the value of the freehold, 14,617l.; loss of trade, fixtures, &c. 4,138l. 16s.; being 21,029l. 4s. less than the amount claimed!—Robert Collins, a tenant upon sufferance of a wharf on the same premises, claimed 1,658l.—Verdict of compensation, 100l.!

On Friday last, at Crondall, near Odiham, a farmer's son, aged 18, named Thomas Snuggs, took a gun for the purpose of shooting rooks, and not returning home at his usual hour, a strict search was made, but without effect; on the following morning he was found a corpse, a few fields from the house. It is supposed from the position in which the body was found, that the unfortunate young man was endeavouring to make his way through a bushy hedge backwards, and, in drawing the gun after him, the trigger caught a twig, the contents entered his breast, and passed out of his back.

To prevent immediate piracy abroad, it is said that Sir Walter Scott's forthcoming "Life of Napoleon" will appear simultaneously in English, French, and German.

A notice has been issued from the Exchequer-bill-office, that the bills dated in October, November, and December, 1825, will be paid off on the 22d instant, the holders, as usual, having the option of money or new bills, of the same rate of interest as those now in circulation.

A French fishing-boat, whose crew consisted of 28 men besides the commander, was lost last week off the coast opposite Dieppe, to which place the boat belonged; by this calamity, 28 families are left destitute, and upwards of 60 children left orphans, without any hopes of assistance but from the donations of the charitable.

Savage Brutality.—On Thursday evening, between five and six o'clock, as two officers of the 2d Dragoon Guards, now stationed in our barracks, were driving down Lower Moseley-street, the vehicle, owing to the gross misconduct and obstinacy of a carter, became jammed between two carts, in such a manner as seriously to endanger the lives of the officers. One of them, a Captain Caldwell, we believe, jumped out of the gig, and collared the man whose misconduct had caused the mischief. A scuffle ensued, and then a battle, in which the carter received a sound drubbing; the fellow, on finding that he was worsted, drew a knife out of his pocket, with which he cut Captain Caldwell across the face, dividing the cartilage of his nose, and inflicting a frightful wound on each cheek. We are sorry to add, that in the confusion created by this savage and cowardly attack, the carter contrived to drive away his cart, before any one thought of ascertaining to whom it belonged.—Manchester Mercury.

The late Murder on Saffron-hill.—A few days ago, a gentleman, connected with the legal profession, went into Newgate to advise with some of the unfortunate inmates therein. Among the rest he was introduced to Ambrose, who most solemly appealed to God that he was innocent, and that he was without the means of employing either an attorney or counsel on his trial, which will take place on Friday week. The gentleman above alluded to was induced, to draw out a petition to Mr. Sheriff Farebrother and his colleague, and waited upon them in person. Mr. Sheriff Farebrother, upon perusal of the petition, ordered Mr. Prance, his Under Sheriff, to assist Ambrose with what money, &c. might be necessary for conducting his defence.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

VICE-CHANCELLOR'S COURT, Tuesday, Nov. 28.

LADY ERSKINE AND OTHERS v. LORD ERSKINE AND OTHERS.

Mr. Cooper said that this was a bill filed by Lady Erskine on behalf of herself and others, creditors of the late Lord Erskine, against the present Lord Erskine and several other defendants, whose names were set forth in the pleadings, and who were trustees under a deed of 1825, and it prayed that the sum of 10,637l. 18s. 7d. 3 per cent. consols, now standing in the Bank books in the names of these trustees, be transferred to the credit of the Accountant-General of this Court, for the purpose of being applied according to the provisions of the said deed. It stated that Lady Erskine had been married to her late husband in Scotland, in the month of October, 1818, and by an anti-nuptial contract, executed immediately before the marriage took place, his Lordship settled 300l. a-year upon her for the term of his natural life. In some time afterwards, his Lordship instituted a suit of divorce against his wife in the Ecclesiastical Courts, on the alleged ground of adultery; but, being subsequently convinced of her innocence, he discontinued the suit, and executed another deed in 1821, confirming the provisions of the anti-nuptial contract. Lord Erskine died in November, 1823, and the present Lord Erskine was his heir at law and personal representative. In the month of May, 1825, a deed was executed, to which the plaintiffs and the defendants were parties, whereby his Lordship's real estates in Sussex were conveyed to trustees, to be by them disposed of for the benefit of the creditors.

The Vice-Chancellor—I suppose Lady Erskine became a party to the deed in respect to the anti-nuptial contract?

Mr. Cooper said that was so.

The Vice-Chancellor asked how was the contract proved?

Mr. Cooper said it was a writing signed by the parties at Gretna Green, on the 12th of Oct. 1818.

The Vice-Chancellor—What is it?

Mr. Cooper read it to the Court. It was to the following effect:—"Gretna Green, in the county of Dumfries, October 12, 1818. Whereas, the Right Hon. Thomas Lord Erskine has this day declared his intention of marrying me, according to the laws and customs of Scotland, in consideration of which marriage, and of the sum of 300l. of lawful money of Great Britain, I hereby renounce all right and claim of dower, and consent to accept in lieu thereof, the sum of 300l. a-year, for the term of his natural life, to be paid to me out of his real estates; in witness whereof," &c. The contract was signed by both the parties, and was acknowledged by Lord Erskine in the subsequent contract in 1821.

The Vice-Chancellor—Is there no deed charging the 300l. a-year on any particular estate?

Mr. Cooper said that there was not, and that was the cause of this suit having been instituted. The trustees had no doubt as to the deed, but the bill was filed for the purpose of ascertaining the right of priority.

The Vice-Chancellor—You now ask that the trust-money be paid into Court?

Mr. Cooper said that was all he asked.—Granted.

COURT OF KING'S BENCH, Monday.

Mr. Easthope v. The Age.

Mr, Scarlett on a former day obtained a rule calling on Mr. Richards to show cause why a criminal information should not be filed against him as the sole proprietor of The Age Sunday newspaper, for a libel published on the 1st of October, in that paper, imputing to Mr. Easthope, a stock-broker, and M.P. for St. Albans, that he had fraudulently brought into the market for sale certain Chilian Bonds, well knowing at the time that they were valueless, as the dividends would not be paid on them.

The Common Sergeant and Mr. Chitty showed cause against the rule, contending that for every purpose the object of Mr. Easthope was already answered by the affidavits he had made in applying to this Court, and by the retraction of the imputation which the defendant had published in his paper of the 21st of October. The defendant also stated that rumours had been in circulation that Mr. Easthope and a Mr. Solomons, also a member of the Stock Exchange, had had an altercation as stated in the libel, in which Mr. Solomons had imputed to Mr. Easthope, that he had sold Chilian Bonds, well knowing at the time that no dividend could be paid on them; and that this defendant having reason to believe at the time that the charge was true, considered that the circumstance of a Member of Parliament acting in such a manner was a fit subject for him as a public journalist to mention and comment upon. The learned counsel, therefore, under these circumstances, submitted that the rule ought to be discharged, and Mr. Easthope should be left to the ordinary remedy, if he thought it necessary to seek for any further redress.

Mr. Scarlett supported the rule.

The Court were of opinion, that if Mr. Easthope insisted upon it, the rule ought to be made absolute.

THE KING v. SHACKELL.

Mr, Denman appeared to show cause against a rule which had been obtained for a criminal information against the defendant, the proprietor of a newspaper called the John Bull, for having published a false and malicious libel against a Mr. Hartshorn. The libel imputed to that gentlemen a crime of a detestable nature. The affidavit of the defendant stated, and the counsel was ready to give that statement the greatest force and publicity, that there was no ground whatever for that charge; that he regretted extremely that the paragraph in his paper should have been supposed to point to Mr. Hartshorn, whose name he had never before heard, and against whom he could consequently have no malicious feelings whatever. He hoped this would be enough to satisfy the prosecutor, and that the rule might be discharged upon payment of costs.

Mr. Scarlett said the affidavit which had been communicated to him convinced him of the necessity of the rule being made absolute, because the defendant swore that he was in the habit of inserting in his paper whatever information was sent to him by anonymous correspondents, without inquiring into the truth or falsehood of such communications,—a practice which it was high time he should be taught to discontinue.

Mr. Denman then proceeded. He read the paragraphs, which, after alluding in terms, which, though not precise, were too plain to be misunderstood, to the crime which it was insinuated had caused Mr. Heber, the late Member for Oxford, to quit the country, added, that the cause of his complaint was, "an overaddiction to Hartshorn." This libel appeared in May; Mr. Hartshorne swore that it came first to his knowledge in August, when he immediately wrote to Mr. Heber to come to England and meet the charge which was attempted to be made against him. Mr. Heber did not comply with that request, but answered the letter. The contents of that letter, Mr. Hartshorn said, he thought he was not at liberty to communicate to the Court, but he had circulated it amongst his friends. It was a singular circumstance that Mr. Hartshorn did not swear that he was the person pointed at by the paragraph, but some other person did so. Mr. Hartshorn swore that he had received the most gratifying reception by his friends, some of whom were persons of distinction, and that his motive for making this application was to remove all imputations from his character, a step which, as he was about to apply for ordination in the spring, had become the more necessary. He, therefore, submitted that this was not a case which required any extraordinary interposition. The defendant had inserted, as was his custom, this paragraph in that part of his paper which bore the title of News Raisonnée, and he swore that he did not know the prosecutor, nor did he know or believe that the paragraph contained any allusion like that which had been imputed to it. He knew this would be no answer to a civil action, nor to an indictment, but he thought it formed a good reason why the Court should not interfere by means of a criminal information, or pledge itself to a result which might be uncertain.

Mr. Justice Holroyd said the Court did not pledge itself at all.

Mr. Denman added, that the defendant could not give up the name of the author of the paragraph, because he did not know it, nor the manuscript, because he had destroyed it.

Mr. Holt and Mr. Park were heard on the same side.

Mr. Scarlett was about to reply, when

Mr. Justice Holroyd said, the Court saw no reason why the information should not go, and directed the rule, therefore, to be made absolute.

THE KING v. FAIRMAN.

Mr. Denman moved to make absolute a rule for a criminal information which had been granted against one William Blennerhassett Fairman, commonly called Colonel Fairman, the editor of a newspaper called the Palladium, for a libel against Lord William Lennox.

Mr. Justice moved that the rule should be enlarged, on the ground that the defendant being in distress and in prison, was unable to have access to correspondence and papers which might enable him to answer the affidavit of the prosecutor. The defendant stated also, that he had only been served with a copy of this rule on Thursday and that having been obliged to attend in the Court of Common Pleas two days last week, he had been unable to obtain a copy of the prosecutor's affidavit.

The Court ordered the rule to be enlarged until next term.

The prosecutor, Lord W. Lennox, was in Court the whole of the day.

THE KING v. WM. INNELL CLEMENT.

Mr. Brougham, on behalf of Captain O'Neil, a member of the present parliament, applied to the Court for a rule, calling on the defendant, who is the proprietor of several newspapers, to show cause why a criminal information should not be filed against him for a libel he had published in his paper of yesterday, entitled Bell's Life in London. The affidavit of Captain O'Neil stated, that in consequence of some occurrences which had taken place, he had been made the subject of various attacks in the defendant's paper, and had therefore instituted proceedings against him. On Saturday last a true bill had been found by the grand jury against the deponent and two other persons, and it was observed in this very court that the defendant's attorney was at that time acting in conjunction with the attorney of the parties who had preferred the bill against the prosecutor. That such conduct could only be attributed to one motive was perfectly obvious, and accordingly on examination of all the Sunday papers that had been published yesterday, in the defendant's paper alone was found a report of the bill having been found by the grand jury, and of the cause which had produced that proceeding, under the title of "Play in High Life."

The Court refused the rule, principally upon the ground that Capt. O'Neil was engaged in an illegal transaction, his affidavit stating that he had lost 65l. and the law allows only 10l. to be lost at a sitting. The Court recommended the ordinary mode of proceeding by indictment.—Rule refused.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS, Monday.

PROSSER v. FAIRMAN.

The defendant in this case (proprietor of the Palladium newspaper) was brought up in custody to the bar of this Court, charged in execution. He then moved the Court to delay the execution of judgment, and stated by affidavit, that he was prepared with a good defence, and that judgments had been suffered to go against him, in consequence of the negligence of an attorney named Wragg, whom he had furnished with money to proceed in his case, but who had entirely neglected to act, and who refused to account for his behaviour, unless he received a direct order from the Court to do so.

The Court then appointed this day to hear the defence of the defendant, and ordered the attorney to account for his conduct.

Mr. Sergeant Wilde now moved that defendant should be charged in execution, and to show cause why the rule, which had been obtained in Trinity term last against defendant, should not be laid open. The Learned Sergeant also appeared in behalf of Wragg, the attorney. He commenced by reading the affidavits of the defendant, in which he stated, that he had advanced 10l. to Wragg, for the express purpose of proceeding in this action, and in which he said Wragg had not acted, after having accepted the money. To this Wragg replied by affidavit, stating that he was himself unable to act, being confined to his house by an attack of the gout: that he had directed his clerk to proceed, but that the said clerk had mistaken his directions. With respect to the 10l., he said he had received it on the general account. That defendant owed him about 100l., and that this money was not paid for the express purpose of proceeding in this action. He swore that he had called twice on defendant with respect to this action, but that defendant had refused to see him, and had employed another attorney.

The Learned Sergeant thought this would be sufficient to clear Mr. Wragg. He said that judgment had been entered against Col. Fairman since last Trinity Term, and he contended, that if Col. Fairman intended to move to set that aside, he should have done it at the commencement of the term, and not have left it until the term was nearly expired.

The Court decided that the rule against Mr. Wragg should be discharged, but without costs, as it appeared that his clerk had neglected to perform the directions he had given him. It being proved that Colonel Fairman had been aware since last Trinity Term that judgment had been entered against him, and as he had not come into Court sooner, he must be charged in execution.

TUESDAY.

BROWN v. FAIRMAN.

The defendant (proprietor of the Palladium) was brought up to the bar of this Court, charged in execution. He made a similar motion to that in the case of "Prosser v. Fairman," to stay the judgment which had been entered against him, and handed in an affidavit, stating that no consideration had been given for the bill upon which this action was founded, and that judgment had gone against him in consequence of the neglect of his attorney. He prayed that judgment might be delayed until the first day of term, when he should be provided with a good defence.

The Court said they were sorry, but they could not grant the present application.

The defendant then expressed a wish to file an affidavit, which would criminate Mr. Wragg, the attorney; but

The Lord Chief Justice said it was one of the rules of the Court not to receive affidavits of this nature on the last day of term, as it would not allow the parties accused an opportunity of defending themselves.

WEDNESDAY.

LIBEL—THE LITERARY GAZETTE.

WRIGHT v. JERDAN AND OTHERS.

This was an action by Mr. Charles Wright, wine merchant, against the defendants, as proprietors of the Literary Gazette, to recover compensation in damages for libels published in their paper on the 29th of July and the 26th of August last. The first of the alleged libels was to the effect, that the champagne advertised by the plaintiff as genuine "was made by himself, without the aid of the grower in France;" and the second libel was, in effect, a repetition of the first.

Mr. Sergeant Vaughan addressed the Jury for the plaintiff, and called witnesses to prove the publication of the libels, and the proprietorship of the Literary Gazette in the defendants.

Mr. Sergeant Taddy, for the defendants, in a very humorous speech, contended that the alleged libels would not bear the construction put on them by the plaintiff, and that they were not calculated to injure his character as a trader, or the sale of his champagne, which, puffed as it had been in all the newspapers, was still better puffed by the speech of his Learned Friend, Mr. Sergeant Vaughan. This, he (Mr. Sergeant Taddy) had do doubt was the principal object of the present action, and it had met with complete success.

The Chief Justice, in charging the Jury, said he had no hesitation in stating, that if a person published anything of another calculated to injure him in his trade, that was a libel, for which the party could call on a Jury to give him compensation in damages. The first libel stated that the plaintiff was a puffer, and if it had stopped there, his Lordship thought the plaintiff would have had no just cause of action, because it appeared that he was in the habit of inserting poetical advertisements in the newspapers in praise of his champagne, and the old proverb said—

"Good wine needs no bush."

But the article went on to state that this must be Mr. Wright's own wine, "because he makes it himself, without the aid of the grower in France;" and, inasmuch as this clearly implied that Mr. Wright was in the habit of advertising that to be genuine wine, which was, in fact, adulterated, his Lordship had no hesitation in saying that it was a libel. As to the question of damages, that was entirely for the consideration of a Jury. His Lordship should have said that too small damages could not have been given but for the publication of the second libel, which contained a repetition of the objectionable matter in the first, though in a different form of words. The Jury would, however, if they found their verdict for the plaintiff, give such fair and moderate damages as would be sufficient to compensate him for the injury of which he complained.

The Jury found for the plaintiff, damages 50l.

The Court was immensely crowded.

FRIDAY.

DOE, DEM. WINTER, V. STOCKDALE.

Mr. Sergeant Bosanquet stated the case to the Jury. The plaintiff was formerly a respectable solicitor in London, but had since retired from business, and resided at Acton. The defendant was too well known to the public to need any description from him. The plaintiff let the defendant a house and eight acres of land at Acton, at a rent of 150l. per annum. The present action was brought to recover possession of those premises, in consequence of certain acts done by the defendant, by which he had forfeited his lease. The lease was dated in August, 1825, and the rent was made payable in advance on the first day of each quarter. It contained the usual covenants to repair certain hedges, &c., and reserved to the plaintiff a right of way over a certain field. In June, 1825, an execution was put in the house by one of the defendant's creditors, and he himself was soon after taken in execution, and confined in the Fleet Prison, upon which he gave notice of his intention to apply for his discharge under the Insolvent Debtors' Act, and in the schedule, which he filed on that occasion the property mentioned as available for the payment of his rent, amounted to only 5l. In addition to the non-payment of his rent, the defendant had failed to repair the premises, and had also refused to the plaintiff the right of way reserved in the lease. By which acts the lease became forfeited, and the plaintiff was entitled to recover possession of the estate. He then called Miss Emily Winter, the plaintiff's daughter, who proved the execution of the lease.

Thomas Wall examined—Was gardener to the defendant, and slept on his premises; there is a hedge adjoining, which separates the stable-yard from the field. He grubbed it up by the defendant's order on the 25th August, 1825.

Mr. Sergeant Adams addressed the Jury for the defendant.—He said it was one of the privileges of Englishmen that their misconduct on one occasion should not be brought forward to ruin them on another.—His client had repeatedly been dragged before the public, and his character attempted to be destroyed. He trusted the Jury would dismiss from their minds any unfavourable impressions that had been endeavoured to be excited against him. If the Jury decided against him, he would be driven from house and home without a place to lay his head, after having spent a considerable sum in improving the premises, the value of which improvements the plaintiff, by this action, sought to put into his own pocket. The trifling circumstances sworn to, did not prove the forfeiture of the lease. To most of the alterations the plaintiff himself, who was constantly on the premises, had consented while they were making. In a letter which he wrote afterwards, demanding payment of his rent, he concluded by saying, "Your grounds appear in very nice order." He then called Jeremiah Stockdale, the defendant's son, who stated that the hedge in question was removed in consequence of the difficulty in getting at the coach-house. The defendant asked the plaintiff's leave to remove it, which was granted. There was property on the premises, liable to seizure, sufficient to pay the rent in arrear.

The Lord Chief Justice then summed up the evidence, and the Jury, after consulting together about a quarter of an hour, returned a verdict for the plaintiff.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER, TUESDAY.

THE CUSTOM HOUSE.

It will be recollected, that in this case, which was a proceeding against Mr. Peto, the builder, for the improper manner in which he had erected the Custom-house, the Jury found a verdict for the Crown upon one issue, viz. "that if diligent search had been made, a stratum of gravel could be found, into which the piles could be driven, according to the specification." In last term the Attorney General obtained a rule to show cause why judgment should not be entered up for the Crown on that issue, or why a new trial should not be had.

Mr. Scarlett also, for Mr. Peto, had obtained a Rule calling on the Crown to shew cause why a verdict should not be entered for the defendant, or a new trial had, on the ground that there was no evidence to support the finding of a stratum of gravel into which the piles could be driven.

On Saturday week the case came on for judgment, when Mr. Scarlett, Mr. Denman, Mr. Rotch, and Mr. Pattison, were heard for the defendant, and the Attorney-General, Mr. Clarke, Mr. Walton, and Mr. Park, on behalf of the Crown. The arguments not being concluded, the case was postponed till Tuesday, when

The Lord Chief Baron observed, that if he entertained any doubt respecting the question before the Court, he would take time to consult with his Learned Brothers; but it appeared to him, that the Crown was entitled to judgment on one of the issues which the Jury had found for the Crown. Counsel on behalf of the defendant had felt, that unless they could show that Mr. Peto had authority to deviate from the specifications, they should fail in making a defence. The Jury found that Mr. Laing was vested with power to direct the alterations, and that Mr. Peto had in no particular deviated from the specifications, except as ordered by Mr. Laing; but respecting the fact of Mr. Laing having authority to give such directions, or of Mr. Peto being justified in obeying such directions, he (the Chief Baron) never entertained the slightest doubt. Mr. Peto had engaged to complete a building, according to the certain specifications, for the sum of 165,000l. He is accused of not having completed the building according to the specification; and he says, "True, I have not; but I followed the directions of your surveyor, such as they were;" and it was to him (the Chief Baron) a matter of great surprise, that when a person had executed so important a contract as this, he should take upon himself to make such material alterations without consulting those with whom he had contracted. Mr. Peto's answer amounted to this—that he was under an obligation to complete a certain work according to specifications; but that this obligation involved another obligation, whereby he was bound to obey the directions of another man. Whatever such directions might be, even if they were to build a church, he (the Chief Baron) should say, that under moral circumstances, such important power to vary a whole scheme could not be given by parole, or otherwise than by a solemn deed; yet the ingenuity of Counsel has been exercised to stretch out for this purpose an authority which was evidently given for different causes. Mr. Laing's authority was only to give directions for such additions as might be deemed prudent, and such power was clearly introduced to prevent the original contract being affected, in case the Commissioners might deem proper to direct more additions or omissions: that part of the contract states, that in case the surveyor shall order any extra work, or shall order that any of the work in the specification shall be omitted, the amount shall be paid or deducted, as the case may be, by valuation. It concludes thus:—"In all other respects these presents shall be in full force, and shall be fully executed and not neglected under any pretence whatsoever." From this it was evident, that the surveyor had no power except to order additions or omissions; it was a most violent strain of authority to infer from the contract, that the surveyor was empowered to give directions that would prove subversive of the entire original scheme. It would seem that Mr. Peto had forgotten that he had executed a bond. If he had made the alterations complained of from his own suggestion, he acted negligently and carelessly; if he had been influenced to make them by another he certainly was to be pitied; but if he suffered, he (the Chief Baron) could not help it; his duty was to act according to the law, and in so doing, it appeared to him that judgment should be entered for the Crown.

The other Judges concurred.

Mr. Scarlett then addressed the Court, and asked if he was to understand that, even if the Jury had found those issues in favour of the defendant which they found for the Crown, the Court would be of opinion that judgment should be entered for the Crown.

Mr. Baron Hullock—Certainly; so taking the bond and the specification together, the Court could not find that Mr. Laing had the alleged authority.

Mr. Scarlett—Then it is useless to move for a new trial.

MAYOR'S COURT.

FORD, PLAINTIFF; REMINGTON AND CO. BANKERS, GARNISHERS; WALROND, M.P. FOR SUDBURY, DEFENDANT.

Upon a former day, Mr. Barnard moved that the plaintiff should shew cause why common bail should not be filed in dissolution of this attachment, the defendant having the privilege of Parliament.

The amount of the plaintiff's claim was 1050l. and it was admitted by him that the defendant was a Representative in Parliament.

A rule was granted, and

Mr. Barnard, on Wednesday, called upon the plaintiff to shew cause.

Mr. Bolland, for the plaintiff. He would most unfeignedly say that common bail ought not to be taken in dissolution of this attachment, and he would state the grounds of rejection. The question was not one between the plaintiff and the garnishers, but between the plaintiff and Mrt Walrond, who had not thought proper to appear and answer to the cause, or to endeavour to release his property from custody in the usual way, but at once broke loose from the jurisdiction of this Court, upon his privilege of Parliament, which was known to every one not to extend its protection beyond the person of the Representative, and to leave the property subject to every process of law to which that of other persons was liable. By the 12th and 13th of Wm. III. cap. 3, it was enacted, that, for the prevention of the great inconveniences arising from the privilege of Parliament, an action might be commenced against any peer, burgess, &c. &c. of Parliament, and that, after prorogation of Parliament judgment might be given, and execution issued thereon against the goods. In the 45th of Geo. III. cap. 124, there was further security granted against the inconveniencies arising from the privilege of Parliament. This Act confirmed the provisions of that of William III. It enumerated the privileges, but gave to the Representative no exemption from being sued in the common way.

Mr. Barnard contended, that the attachment ought to be discharged, upon the filing of common bail. Mr. Walrond was not, he contended, liable to be held to bail in that court. The plaintiff's action must be brought according to the custom, and it must appear upon the return, that Mr. Walrond was non est inventus et nihil, before he could be made amenable, and no such return had been made.

Mr. Law said that such return had been made.

Mr. Barnard denied it. How could it be said that Mr. Walrond could be held to bail. In what court could he be held to bail—no capias could go against his person. He could not be brought into that Court, and therefore the foundation of the action failed. The question really was whether this gentleman, as a Member of the House of Commons, could be held to bail in that Court. How would the Speaker of the House of Commons digest the intelligence, that because a member refused to appear in this Court, he was sent to the Poultry Compter?

Mr. Law—He wouldn't like it at all, I dare say.

The Recorder—Well, Mr. Barnard, I have very little doubt indeed on the case, but I shall consider it.

Judgment postponed.

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

GUILDHALL.—Mr. Edward Jones, a coal-merchant, at Whitefriars Wharf, appeared before Sir Peter Laurie, on Thursday, upon a summons to answer the complaint of Mr. Thomas Jones, the proprietor of the White Horse Tavern, Fetter-lane, for unlawfully detaining, and converting to his own use, four bills of exchange, entrusted to him for the purpose of being discounted. A Mr. Castles attended as solicitor for the defendant.

Mr. Harmer briefly stated the complaint. The defendant, he said, was a coal-merchant, and in that character his client had had some dealings with him; but, a few days ago, his client asked Mr. Edward Jones, if he could discount some bills, and upon his undertaking to do it, sent him four bills of exchange, for a sum of 200l. altogether; and had been unable to get more than 30l. in return. He called a

Mr. George Allen, who deposed, that he carried three bills of exchange, for a total sum of 150l., to the defendant's, on Saturday week.

Cross-examined.—Had accepted a bill, which would become due about 24th December, and might be in Mr. Jones's hands.

Defendant—Which bill you have said you cannot pay.

Mr. Harmer insisted that prior transactions could not be brought in aid of the one complained of. That of the four bills was distinct from every thing else. They were received with a promise, that they should be discounted, and then the defendant refused to fulfil his engagement, or return the bills.

Samuel Jones, the complainant's brother, saw the fourth bill delivered to the defendant, but did not hear what passed.

Mr. Jones, the complainant, said, that having asked the defendant if he could cash four bills for him, he answered that he would cash them to any amount, and he afterwards called for them several times, before they had come into witness's possession. Witness had, prior to this transaction, given the defendant a bill for 48l. for some coals, and did not otherwise owe him a penny; but a bill held by the defendent, and which had witness's name upon it, for a sum of 40l., which had become due since the defendant's refusal to return the four bills, had been dishonoured.

Mr. Harmer urged that the bills had not been placed in the defendant's hands as a security, with regard to the complainant's liabilities from former bill transactions.

Mr. Castles, on the other side, insisted that a case within the reach of Sir T. Plumer's Act was not made out.

In reply to a question from Mr. Castles, the complainant admitted that Mr. E. Jones was to have deducted 40l. out of the 200l., as an anticipated payment of the 40l. bill, which had since been dishonoured, a week before it became due.

Sir P. Laurie, who had called in the assistance of the City Solicitor, under that learned gentleman's advice, held that the defendant had acted under an opinion, and colour of right, in detaining the bills, and therefore was not amenable as for a criminal offence.—The parties were then dismissed.

MARLBOROUGH-STREET.—An invalid pensioner of the 60th regiment, of the name of Williams, lately returned from the West Indies, with a wife and two children, was stationed at the Depot at Chatham, till regularly discharged, whence he removed to a lodging in Jew's-row, Chelsea, preparatory to his going to Ireland. Another soldier of the same name lodged in the same house, whom the complainant employed to shew him to the Bristol Waggon-office, which he did, and afterwards took the complainant's chest, containing all his little property, to the value of 15l. Williams treated the prisoner, booked his chest, and returned home. On their way the prisoner said, "If your chest is not at Bristol when you get there, go over to Ireland just the same, it will be sure to follow." In an hour after, the prisoner returned to the White Bear booking-office, in Piccadilly, told the clerk the soldier was going to remain in London a week longer, and obtained the chest. The poor fellow travelled with his family to Bristol, and there learned that the waggon had arrived without his chest. He left his family at Bristol, and travelled to London with only four shillings in his pocket, and arrived on Monday at Chelsea. He went to the prisoner, who advised him to go back again, telling him it had gone down, no doubt, while he was coming up. Williams not being satisfied, asked the prisoner to go to the White Bear, and speak to the clerk for him. After some time hesitating he went, but on the road made excuses for the complainant to walk on, and when they got to the office, went down the yard under a pretence, and persuaded Williams to go in by himself, where he learned the fate of his box, and was advised to give the prisoner in charge.

Mr. Conant heard the case, and sent for the clerk at the White Bear, who swore positively to the prisoner being the man who brought and took away the trunk, and said, as the prisoner had been the spokesman in the business, he let him have the chest unsuspectingly.

The prisoner admitted taking the trunk to the office, but denied fetching it away. An officer being sent to search his lodging, a shirt belonging to the prosecutor was found, and the prisoner was fully committed for trial.

Williams said he had nothing to subsist on; that he walked the streets all one night for want of money, and must have been in the street the next night, but for a comrade of the same regiment, who gave him half a bed in Chelsea parish.

Mr. Conant understanding the man had no settlement in London, gave him a note to one of the overseers of Chelsea, having slept in that parish last. Williams found an overseer at 74, Sloane-street, who opened the note, and told him to go away, that he had no business to come there, and should have staid where he was, and refused to relieve him. Next morning Williams came to the office to say how he had been treated, when Mr. Dyer (whose day it was to sit) said he never heard such incivility from an overseer to a magistrate, and ordered the man to have a summons to take to 74, Sloane-street, for the overseer to appear at Marlborough-street.

On Thursday the overseer attended, and stated that when the man gave him the summons, he relieved him with a shilling.

Mr. Roe told the overseer the man had slept in their parish, and was entitled to relief as casual poor.

Overseer—I have given him a shilling; we cannot give to all who choose to apply—we have a great number of poor.

Mr. Roe—I am talking to you legally as an overseer. I never knew a note sent by a magistrate to an overseer that was not attended to, if only from courtesy. The man has been robbed of every thing he had, and must have relief till the prisoner is tried; the soldier is bound over to prosecute. I don't want you to pass him to his parish, which is Birmingham; he will get his expences as a witness for the prosecution, and then will pass himself. You can keep him in the house; it will not cost you much.

Overseer—It will cost us five or six shillings a week.

Mr. Roe—Well, if you do not do it willingly, you shall do it. The man is not to starve. Look at his face. (Williams was very pale and thin.) It is unfeeling to refuse the man under such circumstances.

The Overseer then consented, and took Williams with him.

MARY-LE-BONE.

SINGULAR CHARGE OF BIGAMY.—A young man, named Lilley, was brought before the Magistrates on a charge of having deserted his wife; but which charge ultimately involved a rather curious case of bigamy.—Maria Hast, a young woman about twenty-five years of age, deposed, that she was married to the prisoner on the 3d day of August last, in the parish Church of St. Ann's Westminster. She had previously lived with him five years, and he was the father of her two children; he had since deserted her, leaving her and her children chargeable to the parish.—James Matthews, a brush-maker in Coleman-street, stated, that during his absence in the country, the prisoner married his daughter, Eliza Matthews. The marriage was solemnized on the 25th of July last, exactly eight days prior to the prisoner's second marriage. He added, that the prisoner was living very comfortably with his daughter when the first wife suddenly made her appearance, and had him apprehended by a parish officer. He likewise commented in strong language on the villany of the prisoner's conduct.—Mr. Rawlinson remarked, that it appeared to be a most singular case. Here was a man who had been living with a female five years, marrying another woman, and subsequently marrying the mother of his children apparently with a view of making her reparation.—The prisoner on being called on for his defence, admitted having formed a marriage with Maria Hast, but said that he did it in order to preserve her reputation in the eyes of her friends! He was certain that she must have been acquainted with the fact of his first marriage when she married him.—Maria Hast, however, on being recalled, denied this part of the prisoner's statement.—Mr. Rawlinson said, that the marriage not having been technically proved it would be necessary to remand the prisoner.

HATTON-GARDEN.—A deaf and dumb lad, named Wright, was charged with the following atrocious attempt to injure a valuable horse, belonging to a person named Wall, a stable-keeper, in Black Horse-court, Gray's Inn-lane.

From the evidence it appeared, that the prisoner entertains a most vicious propensity to injure every kind of animal that comes within his reach, forcing hot iron down dog's throats, sprinkling aquafortis over fowls, pouring scalding water over cats, &c. About eight o'clock on Friday morning (his father's premises adjoining those of Mr. Wall), he was seen to go into the stable, and was shortly after followed by Mr. Wall, who, to his horror and astonishment, caught him in the act of forcing a piece of window-lath, three feet long, into the bowels of a horse. The boy immediately ran out, but was pursued, and taken into custody.

The horse sank to the ground in a state of exhaustion, and is not expected to recover. This is the third occasion on which valuable horses have fallen victims to the diabolical practices of this young monster.

The prisoner, who had been educated in the Deaf and Dumb Asylum, in writing denied the charge, declaring he had never been in the stable at all; but Mr. Rogers recollecting him to have been before him for a similar offence, ordered him to be remanded till to-day, when the state of the horse might be ascertained, declaring that, should the account be unfavourable, he should inflict the full penalty of three months' imprisonment.

PRICE OF STOCKS UP TO FOUR O'CLOCK YESTERDAY.

BRITISH.

Bank Stock, 202½	Long Anns. 19$\frac{3}{32}$
Red. 3 per Cent. 82¾⅞	India Stock,
3 per Cent. Cons. 83½⅜¾½	India Bonds, 37 36 prem.
3½ per Cent. Cons. 88⅞	Exch. Bills, 1000, 18 19 pm.
3½ per Cent. Red. 88¾⅝	Do. 500, 18 19 pm.
New 4 per Cent. 98¾½	Do. Small, 19 22 pm.
4 per Cent. 1826, 97½	Cons. for Acc. 83⅞ 4⅛

In the Court of King's Bench yesterday, a verdict of guilty was pronounced against the proprietor and printer of The Sunday Monitor weekly newspaper, for libels published on two successive days in February last, on the celebrated musical composer M. Bochsa, imputing to him the character of a robber, forger, bigamist, a runaway from the gallies in France, &c. Besides the injury sustained in character, the prosecutor has been removed from several lucrative engagements. A number of technical objections were urged by Messrs. Brougham and Richards, the whole of which were overruled by the Court. The Learned Judge, in summing up, said it appeared to him that the publications were libellous; and the jury by their verdict, which was returned immediately, accorded with his Lordship's opinion.

VIENNA, Nov. 17.—Among the arrivals, in the Court Gazette, is his Royal Highness Prince Gustavus of Sweden, Lieutenant-Colonel in the Austrian Regiment called the Emperor's Hulans.

PARIS, Nov. 28.—Lady Cochrane, on her arrival at Leghorn, was received with every demonstration of joy by the numerous Greeks residing in that city. It is said that this lady, after staying a short time at Leghorn, proceeded to Pisa, and that she was escorted the whole way by a great number of Greek gentlemen, all wearing the costume of their country.

The son of Murat has fought a duel in America, with Colonel Macromb. The former was wounded.

The Tyne frigate, to carry 28 guns, was launched at his Majesty's Dock-yard, Woolwich, on Thursday, amid the acclamations of a number of spectators, who had assembled to witness the gay spectacle. Captain J. K. White has been appointed to the command of this vessel.

From despatches, dated the 24th of August, received from Col. Purdon, at Cape Coast Castle, it was supposed that the King of the Ashantees had died of the wounds he had received in the battle which took place on the 7th of August.

We beg to acquaint the public, that the Westminster Wine Company, conducted by Oldfield, whose trial took place in the Exchequer on Thursday last, has no connexion with the respectable house, called the LONDON and WESTMINSTER WINE and SPIRIT COMPANY, of the Strand, conducted by Mr. GODFREE.

It is said, we know not with what truth, that Lord Amherst is to be advanced to the dignity of an Earl, and Lord Combermere to that of a Viscount.—Times.

FRIDAY'S GAZETTE.

INSOLVENTS.

R. BURMAN, Southam, Warwickshire, money-scrivener.
J. SIMONDS, Bartholomew-lane, and Tottenham, stock-broker.
R. B. WITHY, Phœnix-alley, Covent Garden, coal-dealer.
G. H. BEAUMONT, Commercial-place, City-road, corn and coal dealer.

BANKRUPTCY SUPERSEDED.

J. COCKS, of Norwich, tailor.

BANKRUPTS.

J. MELLOR, Micklehurst, Mottram, Longdendale, Cheshire, dealer in wool—B. FRYER, Bristol, mahogany and timber-dealer—R. NEWTON, Liverpool, tailor and draper—J. FRENCH, sen. Frome-Selwood, Somerset, clothier—C. HOWARD, Shacklewell, victualler—A. GRUBB, Great Russell-street, Covent Garden, tavern-keeper—W. HILLYARD and J. MORGAN, Bristol, booksellers—J. PROUT, Bath, innkeeper—T. ANNETT, Almnouth, Northumberland, corn-merchant—P. LUCAS, Preston, Lancashire, innkeeper—J. PARSONS, High-street, Shoreditch, butcher—J. ROBINSON, Derby, tape-manufacturer—G. COULSTON, Derby, slater—J. HINTON, St. John's Wood-road, victualler—H. PERCY, Whaddon, Wilts, horse-dealer—J. M'LEOD, Clement's-lane, Lombard-street, leather-seller—S. C. HIGGINS, Gloucester, upholsterer—J. HEYWOOD, Great East Cheap, commission-agent—G. BULLOCK, Congleton, Cheshire, silk-throwster—W. HAMMERTON, Barnsley, Yorkshire, innkeeper.

TUESDAY'S GAZETTE.

INSOLVENTS.

J. LEWER, Surrey-place, Kennington, builder.
T. BUCKLE, Cheltenham, grocer.
E. ROBINSON, Stokesley, Yorkshire, grocer.
T. COLBOURNE, Wolverhampton, lock-manufacturer.
D. BOULTER, Reading, linendraper.

BANKRUPTCIES SUPERSEDED.

J. HARTER, Poole, timber-merchant.
H. M. F. GOOLD, Brighthelmstone, dealer.
G. COUPLAND, Bristol, dealer.

BANKRUPTS.

W. SWEETMAN, Westow-hill, Norwood, carpenter—W. FRANKLIN, Jermyn-street, tailor—R. PEAKER, Mirfield, Yorkshire, shopkeeper—J. GORDON, Spring-gardens, army-agent—T. TREHERN, Hereford, carpenter—A. ANDERSON, jun. East-street, Walworth, baker—J. BOWERS, East-street, Spitalfields-market, victualler—J. LANGDON, jun. Brontiplace, Walworth, commission-broker—J. ASHTON, Tottenham-court-road, mercer—I. STANLEY, Charlton-Kings, Glocestershire, baker—G. T. GUNN, Foley-place, St. Marylebone, coachmaker—J. HARRIS, Leamington-Priors, Warwickshire, chymist—J. BISHOP, East Church, Isle of Sheppy, farmer—T. THORNE, Frome-Selwood, Somersetshire, common brewer—S. COOMBE, Shepton-Mallett, Somersetshire, common brewer—S. PETERS, Sheepshead, Leicestershire, grocer—J. MILLER, Norwich, chymist—R. FIRTH, Wickens, Yorkshire, clothier—W. MITCHEL, Meeting-house-court, Old Jewry, merchant—R. RODEL, Crown-court, Threadneedle-street, wine-merchant—E. and E. LEIGH, Chiddingstone, Kent, farmers—W. HARRISON, Nottingham, grocer—W. B. HILL, Manchester, shopkeeper—A. CLARKE, jun. Liverpool, merchant—J. and S. PROCTOR, Leeds, machine-makers.

THE LONDON and WESTMINSTER WINE and SPIRIT COMPANY, No. 16, STRAND, opposite St. Martin's Church, have constantly on Sale—

	Per Dozen.		Per Dozen.
Port, Vintage 1820	27s to 30s	Bucellas	42s to 48s
Ditto, Crusted	36s to 42s	Claret, St. Julien	42s to 48s
Ditto, 5 to 8 years in bottle	48s to 56s	Ditto, Latitte and Margaux	72s to 96s
Sherry, Pale and Brown	27s to 36s	Sparkling Champagne	72s to 84s
Ditto, Amontillado	42s to 48s	Ditto, and Creaming, of the
Cape, from	16s to 24s	first quality	90s to 96s
Madeira, West India	36s to 42s	St. Peray, dry and sparkling	63s to 72s
Ditto, East India	48s to 60s	Chablis	59s to 63s
Teneriffe, Lisbon, Vidonia,		Hermitage, Red and White	72s to 84s
and Mountain	30s to 36s	Moselle, Sauterne, &c.	50s to 60s

Old Tom, Jamaica Rum, Cognac Brandy, Feru-tosh, &c. per imperial measure at reduced prices.—Bottled Stout, Cider, Perry, Burton and Edinburgh Ales.
☞ All Goods must be paid for on or before delivery.
Letters post paid, to be addressed William Godfree and Co. No. 16, Strand.

SCOTS! of foreign foes the dread,
Irish Lads! to conquest bred,
Cambrians bold! who never fled
The cause of liberty;

Ye, who guard a matchless dower,
England's glory, England's power,
At whose shout the nations cower,
Britons! List to me.

Ye, who, from the battle-plain,
Or the wild and warring main,
Greet your happy homes again,—
Lords of land and sea!

Ye, whom friendship's smiles surround,
At the board with welcome crown'd,—
Joyous souls! wherever found,—
List awhile to me.

Where'er the gen'rous Wine, array'd,
Lends the social spirit aid,
Let the Opera Colonnade
Your emporium be.

For the treasures of the cask,
Cheapest, purest, case or flask,
Ready cash is all I ask,—
Come, my boys, to me.

Haymarket. CHARLES WRIGHT

SIXTY-TWO, HOLBORN HILL!
Next door but one west of St. Andrew's Church.

C. MUKING particularly solicits the attention of Purchasers to the following prices of HOUSEHOLD LINENS, &c. now on sale, without reserve, at his extensive Warehouses, 61, and 62, Holborn-Hill.

		s.	d.
HAMBRO' & SILESIA DAMASK TABLE LINEN.	1½ yards long	1	6	each.
	2 do.	2	0
	2 do. fine	3	9
	3 do. superior, worth 16s	6	6
	5 do. do.	11	0
RUSSIA & SCOTCH SHEETINGS.	1-4ths Strong for Servants	0	1	per yd.
	5-4ths do. fine	0	7½
	3 yds wide, real Russia) which prevents a seam	1	9
	6-4ths German Hollands	1	1
	Curiously fine Leipsic, do.	3	3	a pair.
7-8ths and 4-4ths IRISH LINENS.	7-8ths strong	0	4½	per yd.
	Do. fine	0	7½
	Do. very fine Coleraines	0	11
	4-4ths superior for gentlemens wear, from 1s. to 1s. 8d. per yard, those at 19d. and 20d. are worth	3	0

With every other requisite article suitable for household and domestic purposes, at equally low prices.—C. MUKING's Wholesale and Retail Warehouses, 61 and 62, Holborn Hill.
☞ Country orders attended to. All orders under Ten Pounds must be post paid.

KING'S THEATRE, Tuesday, December 5th.
ANNUNCIATION.

Bond-street men! of order high,
Brummel who in taste outvie,
Flow'r of western chivalry!
Seek the Masquerade.

Templers! quit your ancient nooks,
Leave your undigested books,
To report fair maiden's looks,
At the Masquerade!

Ladies bright! from bow'r and hall,
Ye, who hold all hearts in thrall,
List to love and pleasure's call,
Seek the Masquerade!

Mirth and wit, in happiest vein,
'Mid the flow of proud Champagne,
There, our master-spirits, reign:
Join the Masquerade!

The Wines (of the first quality) to be supplied by Mr. CHARLES WRIGHT of the Opera Colonnade. Tickets may be had, and Boxes engaged for the occasion, as heretofore, of Mr. Ebers, 27, Old Bond-street.

CAFE DE L'EUROPE, No. 9, Haymarket.—At the desire of numerous patrons of this Establishment, the Proprietor respectfully informs the Public that the COFFEE ROOM will be OPENED this DAY, and every SUNDAY in future, at One o'Clock, when Soups and Dinners of every description, Wines, Tea and Coffee, and Refreshments, will be provided in the style and excellence which have ranked it amongst the first public Rooms in Europe.

GENERAL NEWS READING ROOMS, 14, York-street, Covent Garden.

THE Public and the Gentlemen resident in the parish of St. Paul, Covent Garden, the surrounding parishes, and their vicinities, are respectfully informed, that two elegantly fitted-up Apartments are ready for their admission as NEWS READING ROOMS.

The Rooms are supplied regularly with five of the principal Daily Morning, and two Evening Newspapers; an assortment of those published on Sunday; the most popular of the Monthly Magazines; and other Periodical Publications.

TERMS.

Per Week	1s. 6d.	Per Quarter	14s.
Per Month	5s. 6d.	Per Annum	2l. 2s.

Annual Subscribers will have the privilege of introducing a Friend, (non-resident in London) on application to the Proprietor. The Rooms to be open from Ten o'clock in the morning, until Ten in the Evening.
☞ Casual Visitors to pay Three-pence on going into the Rooms.

FOR SALE, some extraordinary fine SHERRY, well worth the attention of an Invalid or Connoisseur. Also some RED MADEIRA, many years in bottle.—Apply at 7, Blenheim-street, New Bond-street.

CHOCOLATE of the finest Quality, 3s. per lb.—COCOA-NUTS, the finest Grenada, 2s. per lb.—The Public are respectfully informed they may now purchase the above-mentioned Articles, warranted of the finest quality, at MARSHALL and Co.'s Tea and Coffee Warehouse, No. 12, Southampton-street, Strand. Also, Turkey Coffee, warranted of the finest Quality, at 3s. per lb.

THE IMPROVED SILK HAT ON BEAVER.—
For Cash only.
They are made to suit the natural form of the Head.
The Colour is permanent. For durability, shape, and quality, they are unrivalled ... 15s.
HUGH FRANKS & Co.
Patentees of Improved Waterproof Hats,
Corner of Queen Street 70, CHEAPSIDE.

SILK and BEAVER HATS.—At a time like the present, it behoves the most opulent to act economically in the purchase of a HAT, particularly when all the vehicles of advertisements teem with pretended Cheap Goods! a name only, for one half of the Hats offered to public notice are in the end the dearest of all others. To purchase a good article, bearing a small profit, is the safe road to economy.

PERRING'S HATS are manufactured by workmen experienced in the trade, and are made of such qualities as cannot fail to meet the wishes of the wearer.

The Double-edged SILK HAT surpasses any attempt at imitation, and is really the best Hat ever invented, price 17s. Good Wearing Silk Hats in a variety of Shapes, made in the usual way, 12s. 15s.

BEAVER HATS can be made at almost any Price, but none are worthy the attention of the Wearer under 20s. 22s. 24s. such are of good texture, light, and Waterproof, and will in the end prove in value equal to the purchase.

GENTLEMEN'S TRAVELLING CAPS of every description, in Furs, Cloth, Oil, Silk, &c. &c. at 12s. Waterproof.

YOUTHS' and BOYS' HATS in great variety. Light Summer Hats, &c. 413, Strand, two doors west of the Adelphi Theatre, and at Hammersmith.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH.—MR. WM. BEACALL, and Mr. ROSE, Surgeon Dentists, 13, Newman-street, Oxford-street having with unremitting diligence long made the Science of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, where mechanical contrivance is requisite, their peculiar study, continues to supply the loss of Teeth, with Natural or Artificial, in a superior manner, without the least pain, from a single Tooth to a complete Set, at little more than one-half the usual charges. Teeth cleaned if ever so discoloured, and rendered white and beautiful, without pain or injury to the enamel. Extracting, Stopping, and every operation on the Teeth and Gums.—Attends at home from Ten till Four.

STAYS and ELASTIC BELTS.—VISTIRIN and COMPANY submit to Ladies their fashionable CORSETS of various unique patterns, which they engage to fit in a superior style of elegance and beauty, however difficult the figure. Their PATENT STAYS counteract and rectify spinal curvatures, and support and cure persons awry, invisibly making the form appear perfectly straight and shapely, without any pernicious steel, padding, or pressure. ELASTIC BELTS, which reduce corpulency, visceral enlargement, umbilical hernia, local dropsy, relieve and strengthen abdominal debility, and give comfortable support before and after accouchement.—Country residents instructed to send measures.—Letters must be post paid.—Be correct in the address.—No. 65, New Bond-street, two doors from Brook-street, London.

WORM and CONDITION BALLS for HORSES. They will effectually destroy every species of Worm to which Horses are subject, without requiring any alteration in Food or intermission of Labour. If these Balls be given two or three times a year, they supersede the use of other Medicines, as they not only improve the health and vigour of the Animal, but also purify the blood and materially add to the glossy appearance of the coat. The Proprietor, who is known as having himself kept a numerous Stud, has used them for Thirty Years with the most satisfactory results. They only require a trial to prove their efficacy. References can be given.—Sold in Packets at 9s. containing Nine Balls, with Directions for Use, by Courtney, Regent Circus, Oxford-street; Sanger, 150, Oxford-street; Smith, 29, Haymarket; Prout, 226, Strand; Rogers and Co. 93, Cheapside; Butler, corner of St. Paul's Church-yard; and Wilmott, 83, St. Margaret's Hill, Borough.

AT SIMPSON'S MEDICINE WAREHOUSE, No. 28, Henrietta-street, Covent-Garden, London, are sold

The ARABIAN VEGETABLE PILLS, 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. per Box, free from mercury or antimony, inestimable as a Family Medicine for the removal of Indigestion, Bilious and Nervous Complaints, and as a mild Aperient.

The ROYAL ELIXIR of LIFE, in Bottles of 11s. each, strengthens the Stomach, increases the Appetite, dispels Spasms and Gout in the Stomach, and prevents all the inconveniences produced by excess at table.

The ANTISEPTIC BOTANICAL TOOTH-POWDER, 2s. 9d. per Box, cleanses, whitens, and preserves the Teeth, and fastens them, even if loosened by mercury.

These articles are sold (by appointment) at all respectable Medicine Venders, Chemists, and Druggists, throughout the kingdom.

Superior Eau de Cologne and Swiss Eau d'Arquebusade, Mason's Convent Soap, &c. &c.

THE BRITISH SPECIFIC, for re-producing and promoting the GROWTH of HAIR.—The principle of its operation is to cool and contract the pores which are opened by a redundancy of heat, occasioning a relaxation of the roots, and render them incapable of retaining the hair; to counteract which nothing is better calculated than the British Specific, as, from its invigorating and oleaginous properties, it almost immediately arrests the falling off, and affords such effectual nourishment to the roots, that persons giving it a fair trial may assure themselves of its speedily restoring it, even where it has become completely bald, however long it may have been so, and, if grey, gradually to restore it to its natural colour. The superiority of this preparation (the invention of a medical man) derives additional recommendation from its being, unlike other compositions for the hair, so extremely clean and agreeable, that its application is a real pleasure, and is only requisite to be generally known to receive the preference of every article in use for similar purposes. To be had only of D. PEDEN, 209, Regent-street, and 15, Burlington Arcade, Piccadilly, in bottles, 6s. each, or cases of four bottles for £1., forward to order on receiving the amount, post paid.

BURGESS' ESSENCE of ANCHOVIES, Warehouse, 107, STRAND, corner of Savoy Steps, London.—JOHN BURGESS and SON, being apprised of the numerous endeavours made by many persons to impose a spurious article for their make, feel it incumbent upon them to request the attention of the public, in purchasing what they conceive to be the ORIGINAL, to observe the Name and Address correspond with the above. The general appearance of the spurious descriptions will deceive the unguarded, and for their detection J. B. and Son submit the following caution:—Some are in appearance at first sight "Burgess' Essence of Anchovies;" others, "Burgis's," and many more without address.—JOHN BURGESS and SON having been many years honoured with such distinguished approbation, feel every sentiment of respect towards the public, and earnestly solicit them to inspect the labels previous to purchasing what they conceive to be of their make, which they hope will prevent many disappointments.

Burgess' New Sauce for general purposes having given such great satisfaction, continues to be prepared by them, and is recommended as a most useful and convenient sauce; will keep good in all climates.

Warehouse, 107, Strand, corner of the Savoy Steps.—The Original Fish-Sauce Warehouse.

MOGUL, OR REAL CHETNA SAUCE.

C. HODGSON, ORIGINAL INVENTOR AND SOLE PROPRIETOR, is induced to caution his Friends and the Public against several spurious Sauces offered for sale, under the title of

"MOGUL, or REAL CHETNA."

C. H. will feel obliged if each purchaser of the above delicious Sauce will please to observe the Label: which should be signed, "C. HODGSON," and the Cork, sealed and impressed, "HODGSON'S MOGUL SAUCE," without which none can be genuine.

C. H. also begs to acquaint those who have not yet made a trial of this much approved Sauce, that the flavour will be found quite different, and far superior to any yet offered, for all kinds of Curries, Steaks, Stews, Chops, Hashes, Game, Grills, Broiled and Wild Fowl, Cold Meat, and for enriching Gravies, &c., and feels assured, that when tasted, it will fully justify what he has above stated. To Merchants and East and West India Captains, it is stongly recommended, being warranted to retain its full flavour in any climate.

To be had at the manufactory, No. 68, Long Lane, Borough, London, at the Piazza Coffee-house, Covent-garden, the Queen's Head Tavern, Holborn, and at any of the principal Oilmen and Grocers in Town and Country.

IMPOSTURE UNMASKED.—The progress of Merit, although frequently assailed, is not impeded by Envy and Detraction. The aggression of ambuscade terminates in defeat; and conscious rectitude ultimately triumphs in the attainment of the grand object—public approbation. The test of experience is the guarantee of favour, and has established WARREN'S BLACKING in general estimation; of which there exists not a stronger proof than the tacit acknowledgment of a host of servile imitators, who surreptitiously obtrude on the unwary a spurious preparation as the genuine article, to the great disappointment of the unguarded purchaser, and manifest injury of WARREN, whose character and interest by this iniquitous system are equally subject to detriment. It becomes therefore an indispensable duty to CAUTION THE PUBLIC against the manœuvres of Unprincipled Venders, who having no character to lose, and stimulated by avarice in their nefarious pursuits, aim at the acquisition of money through any medium than that of honour! The original and matchless BLACKING bears on each bottle a short direction, with the signature

ROBERT WARREN

All others are counterfeits; and in many instances the imposition labels are artfully interlined with a different address, in very small characters, between the more conspicuous ones of "No. 30," and "STRAND." It is earnestly recommended to Shopkeepers and others who are deceived by base fabrications of WARREN'S BLACKING, to return the detected trash to the source whence it came, and expose the machinations of rascality to merited obloquy.

WARREN'S BLACKING is surpassingly brilliant:—it excludes damp; gives pliancy to the leather; retains its pristine virtue in all climates; and, combining elegance with comfort, is an article equally of indispensable fashion and utility. Sold by every respectable Vender in Town and Country, in bottles, at 6d. 10 12d. and 18d. each.

EXPERIENCE IS THE TEST OF PRETENSION.

MANY years have now elapsed since the just appreciation, by a discerning Public, of ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL as the most infallible promoter of the growth, accelerator of the beauty, and antidote to decay, of the human Hair, of any specific of ancient or modern times. Uniformly successful in felicitous result, and unparaleled in universal estimation, this benign and balsamic fluid pervades, with creative energy, the pores of the head, cherishes the latent roots of the hair, and elicits a luxuriant flow of that fine adornment of manhood, and fascinating enhancement of female attractions.

Not less conspicuous for energetic virtues is ROWLAND'S KALYDOR, the ORIGINAL and GENUINE, as the faithful auxiliary of beauty, sustaining unimpaired the charms of loveliness in youth and maturity, and renovating age itself, with a juvenile bloom. So perfectly innoxious and efficacious, that Infant and Adult derive pleasure from its application, while it operates as a thorough cleanser of the skin from all unseemly impurities, by mild, yet powerful and imperceptible influence, irradiating with transparent whiteness, and adorning the neck and arms with transcendant and irresistless attraction. Rowland's Macassar Oil and Kalydor thus pre-eminently distinguished, and established as indispensable at the toilet and the dressing-table, have excited the envy of empiricism.

The Public are therefore CAUTIONED against the manœuvres of IMPOSITION, and respectfully recommended, in purchasing Macassar Oil, or the Kalydor, to ask for Rowland's; to attend to the labels on the respective bottles of the original specifics, each bottle bearing the autographical signature and address, in red ink, "A. ROWLAND and SON, No. 20, Hatton-garden," all other preparations vended as Macassar Oil, or the Kalydor, are gross impositions.

DR. COURTENAY'S NEW WORK, Price 4s.

AN HISTORICAL and PRACTICAL TREATISE on SYPHILIS, Gonorrhea, Gleets, Seminal Weakness, Strictures, Eruptions, Nodes, and Nocturnal Pains, so frequently mistaken for Rheumatism. These subjects are illustrated by a variety of highly-interesting cases, together with the miseries of a secret vice, so long and so unhappily pursued by the youth of both sexes. In the one it will be found the unfailing source of barrenness; the other have ravages fatally developed by a distressing state of debility, which, if not timely remedied, terminates in impotence; these are its remote and ultimate effects, while consumptions, loss of muscular power, and various nervous complaints, usually characterise the earlier stages of this most destructive and insidious habit, for the cure of which, a mode of treatment, the result of long and successful practice, and at once safe, speedy, and effectual, is adopted by the Author. With concluding remarks on the evils resulting from attempts at Self-cure.

Principiis obsta; sero medicina paratur.

By C. B. COURTENAY, M.D. Robert-street, Adelphi.—Printed for the Author. Published and sold by Sutherland, No. 9, Carlton-street, Edinburgh; Jones and Co. Paternoster-row; Onwhyn, 4, Catherine-street, Strand; Walker, 90, High Holborn; Chappell and Son, Cornhill; Marsh, 145, Oxford-street; Chapple, Pall-mall; and may be had of all Booksellers in town and country.

"Amongst the numerous medical and surgical works of the day, we consider that written by Dr. Courtenay, on Syphilis, and other frequently fatal complaints, to be worthy of the highest encomiums, and justly deserving the serious attention of all those persons who may unfortunately happen to be afflicted with the maladies which form the subject of this very interesting publication. The luminous view taken of these diseases, together with important warnings against excesses, entitle this work to great praise; and we may add, as a further recommendation, that it is written with much delicacy and morality."—Inspector and Literary Review.

BIRTHS.—On the 24th ult. at Rosstrevor, the lady of J. Wilmot Williams, Esq. of a son and heir.—At Beverley, Yorkshire, on the 23d ult. the lady of Lieut. C. W. Clubley, R.N. of a son and heir.

MARRIED.—On the 23d ult. Col. M'Creagh, C.B. and K.C.T.S. to Frances Elizabeth Wilson.—On the 24th ult. at St. Mary's, Bryanstone-square, the Rev. J. J. Saint, of Speldhurst, Kent, to Sophia Heath.—Mr. T. Wenham, of Baldock, to Miss Jane Saunders.—J. Elliott, Esq. of Blackheath, to Miss James.—At Risely Beds, Mr. W. Jackson, aged 75, to Mrs. S. Allen, aged 79.—At East Sheen, Thomas Frederick Vernon Wentworth, Esq. of Wentworth Castle, York, to Lady Augusta Louisa Brudenell Bruce, the daughter of the Marquis of Ailesbury.—At Kington Magna, Dorset, the Rev. Thos. Manners Sutton, Rector of Great Chart, Kent, to Lucy Sarah, only daughter of the Rev. N. S. Mortimer, Rector of Kington Magna.

DEATHS.—At Weston Underwood, Bucks, aged 52, Mr. Wm. Hipwell.—In Court-street, Whitechapel, R. L. W. Farmer, Esq. in the 80th year of his age, Prothonotary of his Majesty's Court of Record within the Manors of Stepney and Hackney.—At Amersham, in the 96th year of her age, Ann Killham. She lost her sight between 20 and 30 years ago, but in other respects retained her faculties to the last.—At Holne Chase, aged 69, Sir B. Wrey, Bart. of Tavistock Court, Devon.

London: Printed by R. D. RICHARDS, No. 1, Blake court, and Published at THE AGE Office, No. 1, Catherine-street, Strand.

THE AGE.

" THE VERY AGE AND BODY OF THE TIME."

VOL. II. No. 83. SUNDAY DECEMBER 10, 1826. Price 7d.

THEATRE ROYAL, DRURY LANE.—On Monday next, the Tragedy of Brutus, with Der Freischutz.—On Tuesday, the Merry Wives of Windsor.—On Wednesday, Henry Quatre, with the Lottery Ticket. Mr. Liston is engaged, and will make his first appearance on Monday, the 18th inst.

ADELPHI THEATRE, Strand.—On Monday, and during the Week, will be presented an entirely new Burletta, called The Flying Dutchman, or the Phantom Ship. After which, a new comic Burletta, in one Act, called 23, John-street, Adelphi. To conclude with the Married Bachelor—Doors open at 6, commence ½ before 7.

CAFE DE L'EUROPE, No. 9, Haymarket.—At the desire of numerous patrons of this Establishment, the Proprietor respectfully informs the Public that the COFFEE ROOM will be OPENED this DAY, and every SUNDAY in future, at One o'Clock, when Soups and Dinners of every description, Wines, Tea and Coffee, and Refreshments, will be provided in the style and excellence which have ranked it amongst the first public Rooms in Europe

A CHARTERED SHIP

Is entered outwards, and to sail on or before the 28th December, 1826,

FOR CALCUTTA, the fine, new, first class Ship, HARRIET, 950 Tons Burthen. R. S. KINDLEY, Commander. Lying in the West India Dock. (With leave to land Goods at Madras.) For Freight or Passage apply to Buckles, Baxster, and Buchanan, 33, Mark-lane.

DRURY-LANE, COVENT-GARDEN, ADELPHI.

Private Boxes at the Theatres, per Season or per Night,
In the choicest situations, both for hearing and for sight;
Inviolable Sanctums—Terms, the lowest ever made,
Enquire of CHARLES WRIGHT,—via, Opera Colonnade.

N. B. Champagne Imperial, the Cheapest in the Trade.

THE FLYING DUTCHMAN.—The admired Ballad, "Return, O, my Love;" composed by G. Herbert Rodwell, and sung by Miss Boden, in the Romance of the "Flying Dutchman, or, Phantom Ship," will be published to-morrow by Messrs. GOULDING and D'ALMAINE, Soho-square. Also will be published in a day or two, the Overture to the same Piece, arranged as a Duet for the Pianoforte.

"LA VESTALE."—The following Songs, &c., in Spontini's "La Vestale," as performed at the King's Theatre, are published, and the rest of the Music will be ready in a few days:—

"Oh di funesta possa!" Aria.—"Alma Vesta del Ciel!" Hymn.—"Degli infelice O'Nume!" Preghiera.—"Te che invoco!" Cavatina!"—Sung by Madame Caradori.

"Ayran pieta," Cavatina.—Sung by Signor Curioni.

"Che Sinonia, quai transporto," Duetto.—Sung by Madame Caradori, and Signor Curioni.

The Poetry to the above is by Signor Pistrucci.

GOULDING and D'ALMAINE, 20, Soho-square.

NEW MUSIC.—HARP AND PIANO-FORTE.

MEYER'S "MEDEA in CORINTO," with Flute and Violoncello (ad lib.) by N. C. Bochsa, in Books	10 6
——— Overture to ditto, ditto, ditto	6 0
Overture to "Caliph of Bagdad" ditto, ditto	5 0
Airs from "Il Crociato in Egitto," by W. H. Steil, in two Books (each)	7 6
——— Bishop's "Aladdin," by N. C. Bochsa	7 0

PIANO FORTE.

Boieldieu's "La Dame Blanche," and as Duets, in Books, by J. F. Burrowe's (each)	4 0
Rossini's "Semiramide" ditto, ditto (each)	4 0
Meyer's "Medea in Corinto," by C. Duinon, in two Books (each)	4 0
Bishop's "Buy a Broom," Rondo, by T. A. Rawlings	2 6
——— "In my Bower a Lady Weeps," ditto, by G. Kiallmark	2 6

VOCAL.

"Buy a Broom!" sung by Miss Love, composed by H. R. Bishop	2 0

 The Public are respectfully cautioned that the original "Buy a Broom," is the one composed by H. R. Bishop.

"The Bonnie Lassie," composed by Mrs. Miles	2 0
"No longer the Song of the Lark," composed by J. Barnett	1 6
"Jane, the Mountain's Pride," ditto	1 6
"The King! God bless Him!" sung and composed by Mr. Braham	2 0

GOULDING and D'ALMAINE, 20, Soho-square.
Cabinet, Cottage, and Square Piano-fortes for Sale or Hire.

NEW MUSIC.—Just published, by F. T. LATOUR, Music-seller, 50, New Bond-street,

The favourite Airs in the Opera of "La Vestale," arranged for the Pianoforte, with Flute accompaniments, ad lib. in 2 books, by T. Latour, each	4 0
The ditto in "Medea," arranged for pianoforte, with flute accompaniments, ad lib. in 4 books, by ditto, each	4 0
The ditto in Rossini's "Mahomet Secondi, or the Siege of Corinth," arranged for ditto, with ditto, by ditto, each	5 0
The ditto in "The Interrupted Sacrifice," in 19 Nos. by ditto, each	1 0
"I have Fruit, I have Flowers," arranged for pianoforte, ditto	2 6
"Love was once a little Boy," ditto, ditto	2 0
The Songs, Duetts, &c. in the comic opera of "The two Houses of Grenada," composed by J. A. Wade, Esq.
The Songs, Duetts, &c. in the farce of "A Trip to Wales," by T. Parry.
"I have Fruit, I have Flowers," a favourite cavatina, sung by Miss Love, composed by J. A. Wade, Esq.	2 0
"The Vesper Bell," sung by Miss Paton, ditto	2 0
"Meet me by Moonlight," ditto	2 0

THE BROOM GIRL'S SONG.

Gentle Ladies fare ye well, arranged as a Song, Duet, or Trio, set to one of their national Melodies, sung by them in the streets of London, the poetry by Wm. Ball, price 2s.

Buona Sera Mio Signore, from Rossini's Opera of Il Barbiere di Seviglia, arranged for the Pianoforte by Augs. Meves, price 3s.

Piange il mia ciglio, from Rossini's Opera, "Matilde-de-chabran," arranged by ditto, 2s. 6d.

The Beauties of Winter's Opera of the Oracle, arranged for the Pianoforte; with flute and violoncello accompaniments ad lib. by Pio Cianchettini, price 4s.,

The White Lady Quadrilles, taken from Boieldieu's Opera, La Dame Blanche, arranged for the Pianoforte, by M. Dunois, price 3s.

The Braes of Ballandyne	Miss Paton.	Pio Cianchettini
Bonny Brave Scotland	Ditto.	N. Gow
O where's the harm of a little kiss	Mad. Vestris.	J. Watson
Ah Maiden Gardez vous (Second Edition)	Ditto.	Ditto
Blue Bonnets are over the borders	Mr. Braham	Cianchettini
Young Mary	Mr. Phillips	Dr. Arne.

The Maiden at her wheel, sung by Mad. Vestris in the White Lady, Boieldieu, 1s. 6d.

The Secret, a Trio, from ditto, ditto, 1s. 6d.

A great assortment of Guitars by the most approved makers, for Sale or for Hire.

MORI & LAVENU, 28, New Bond-street.

SPANISH GUITARS.—Just imported by WILLIS and Co. Royal Musical Repository, No. 55, St. James's-street, opposite Jermyn-street, London, and No. 7, Westmorland-street, Dublin, an elegant and extensive assortment of the above Fashionable Instruments, of the finest quality and workmanship, which they are enabled to offer at unusually low prices; they have also published the following new Guitar Music:—

May's new and easy Instructions for the Spanish Guitar, with an elegant Frontispiece	5 0
Sola's 20th Set of favourite English Songs	5 0
Rugato's 1st Set of Favourite English Songs	3 0
Aurora che Sorgeral, with a Guitar Accompaniment, by Pauly	1 6
Bonnie wee Wife, ditto, by Sola	1 6
Buona Notte, ditto, by May	1 0
Cherry Ripe, d tto, by Sola	1 6
Carulli's Sixteen Exercises for the Spanish Guitar	3 6
Davies' Six Songs,—English, Italian, and French	3 6
Three French Romances, with Pianoforte, and Guitar Accompaniment by Bertioli	2 6
Three Familiar Duetts, with ditto, by C. M. Sola	3 6
Nunca de ti me, with ditto, by P. Verini	2 0

WILLIS and Co. beg leave to inform the Nobility and Gentry, that their Repository is constantly supplied with every description of Grand, Cabinet, Cottage, Square, and Circular Pianofortes, with the latest Improvements, by all the most approved Makers (which will afford the Public the great and peculiar advantage of forming their own judgment of their respective merits) at the lowest Manufacturers' prices.

N.B. Pianofortes, Harps, &c. let out on hire.

PIANOFORTES.—W. WALTER, (from Mr. Tomkison's) begs to recommend to those in want of a very superior Instrument, to inspect his stock of Grand, Cabinet, Cottage, and Square Pianos, which are warranted to be of the best description, at unusually low prices, and where the most decided satisfaction is not given, will be exchanged at the Manufactory, 118, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury.

MADAME VESTRIS'S NEW SONGS.

Just Published, by MAYHEW and Co., 17, Bond-street, London,

THE Bavarian Girl's Song, "BUY A BROOM," with an original and finely executed Portrait of Madame Vestris (in Character) by Gauci, arranged expressly for her, by Alexander Lee.—Price 2s.

New Songs.	Singers.	Composers.
Love's Labour Lost	Mad. Vestris,	Alex. Lee
Smiles and Tears	Ditto,	Ditto
England the Home of the World	Mr. Braham,	J. Barnett
Fancy dipp'd her Pen in Dew	Miss Stephens,	J. Whittaker
Light Guitar (4th edition)	Mad. Vestris,	J. Barnett
A Voice whispered softly, Dear Mary	Miss Love,	Geo. Perry
Yes, I will leave the festive Scene, in answer to the Light Guitar	Miss Paton,	J. Barnett
"Not a Drum was heard," the celebrated Ode on the Death of Sir John Moore	Mr. Sapio,	Ditto
Love's Delightful Hour	Mr. Pearman,	J. Emdin
The Queen of Bonnie Lasses	Mr. Braham,	J. Hart
The Joys of Liberty and Wine	Mr. Bedford,	Ditto
Paul Pry, "Hope I don't intrude," comic, with the original Portrait of Mr. Liston	Mr. Liston	Pigwiggin
The General Election, comic, written by Charles Dibdin the younger, with an illustration by Cruikshank	Mr. Mathews,	J. Barnett
Maiden, heedful he, The Token Flowers	Mad. Vestris,	Ditto
The Moorish Maiden	Mrs. Ashe,	J. Emdin
You ask a song, you bid me sing	Mr. Broadhurst,	G. Kiallmark
I left the Bowl in search of Love	Mr. Phillips,	Mr. Phillips.

NEW MUSIC.—Just published at the ROYAL HARMONIC INSTITUTION, Argyll Rooms, 246, Regent-street, the Songs, Duets, &c. in The ORACLE, composed by WINTER, and newly arranged by W. HAWES.

	s.	d.
"Overture"	2	6
"The rosy dawn hath driven," Chorus	5	0
"When battles conch is sounding," sung by Mr. Atkins	2	0
"The trumpet first is sounded," sung by Mr. Thorn	2	0
"We Maidens mark me," sung by Miss Goward,	1	6
"All hail to the God of our Fathers," Chorus	2	0
"Now by love and peace invited," Sestett and Chorus	3	6
"Oh when thine eye is throwing," Duet, Miss Paton and Sapio	2	6
"All powerful Sun," sung by Mr. Phillips	2	0
"There was a time ere sorrow," sung by Miss Paton	1	6
"Between my hopes and fears suspended," Duet, by Miss Paton and Phillips	2	6
"When will peace relieve my breast?" sung by Miss Hamilton	1	6
"How the plaguing varlet teases," Duet, by Miss Goward and Thorn	2	6
"We hail thee Lord of Light," Finale, 1st Act	10	0
"Tho' we all can feel thy sorrow," Quartett and Chorus	3	6
"In what sad hour," Trio	3	0
"Oh heavens! the thought is frightful," Duet.	2	6
"Hast never mark'd the flower," Song, Miss Boden	1	6
"The Maid who'd wish to slumber," Quartett	2	6
"The Gloomy terrors of the grave," Scena, Mr. Sapio	2	6
"Farewell, yet not for ever," Quartett	4	0
"The evening is descending," Finale	10	0

The Overture to "OBERON," arranged for a full Orchestra, by C. M. Weber, price 10s.

A New TREATISE on THOROUGH BASS, or the art of playing from a figured Bass, with examples, &c. &c. by Dr. Crotch.

Burrows's Selection of Airs from Weber's Opera of Oberon, arranged for the Piano Forte, with Flute ad lib, in four books, each 4s.

I'VE BEEN ROAMING—Arranged by T. A. Rawlings, as a Rondo for the Pianoforte.

BOCHSA's Select Airs from the Oracle, for the Harp, and Pianoforte, with Flute and Violin accompaniments, 10s. 6d.; also the Overture to the above, arranged as above, price 5s.

DEATH FETCH.—The music in this admired and popular Opera, composed by C. E. Horn.

I'VE BEEN ROAMING.—Cavatina, sung by Madame Vestris, by C. E. Horn, price 2s.

OBERON.—The music in this popular Romantic and Fairy Opera, composed by the late Carl Maria Von Weber.

 The Proprietors of the ROYAL HARMONIC INSTITUTION beg most respectfully to acquaint the Public, that the only correct copies of the Opera now performing at the English Opera House, called "THE ORACLE," are published by them, and that all other copies are spurious and an Invasion of their rights.

N.B. The whole of the Music in the New Opera of PEVERIL OF THE PEAK, by C. E. Horn, now performing with such enthusiastic applause at the Theatre Royal Covent Garden, is now published, and may be had separate.

Just Published, in 3 vols. post 8vo. price £1 11s. 6d.

ALMACK'S.—A Novel.

Printed for SAUNDERS and OTLEY, Public Library, Conduit-street.

In 1 vol, 8vo. price 14s.

FOUR YEARS in FRANCE; or, Narrative of an English Family's Residence there during that period. By a late Fellow of Magdalen College, Oxford, preceded by some account of the author's Conversion to the Catholic Faith in 1798.

"This is an eccentric, but not an ephemeral book. The ordinary purchasers of 'Tours,' 'Six Months,' and 'Journals,' will meet with matter too curious and too good for them. The work is, in fact, a piece of autobiography. It is indeed composed in the form of a Tour, and there are a journey and a foreign residence narrated in it; but the main object of it is to draw two grand pictures, and, though wholly different in their nature, they form together a pair of the finest subjects ever painted by the skilful hand of a patient artist. The subject of the first picture is the conversion of the author, (a Fellow of Magdalen College, Oxford, a clergyman of the Church of England, and the son and grandson of prebendaries of Lincoln,) to the Roman Catholic faith; and the other is the early life, character, and death of his son. Perhaps this character is the most beautiful portrait of an angelic youth ever drawn. The details are ample—the hand of affection dwells on every trait, and the genius of a master finishes every stroke.—ATLAS.

Printed for HENRY COLBURN, 8, New Burlington-street.

NEW WORKS.—Printed for HENRY COLBURN, 8, New Burlington-street.

TALES of a VOYAGER to the ARCTIC OCEAN, 3 vols. post 8vo. 1l. 8s. 6d.

"In thrilling regions of thick-ribbed ice."—SHAKSPEARE.

2. The TOR HILL. By the Author of "Brambletye House;" or Cavaliers and Roundheads; 3 vols. post 8vo. £1 11s. 6d.

3. TALES by the O'HARA FAMILY, Second Series, comprising the Nowlans, and Peter of the Castle, in 3 vols. post 8vo. price 31s. 6d.

4. LETTERS from the EAST. Written during a recent Tour through Turkey, Egypt, Arabia, the Holy Land, Syria, and Greece. By John Carne, Esq., of Queen's College, Cambridge. The Second Edition, in 2 vols. post 8vo. price 18s.

5. RECOLLECTIONS of the LIFE of JOHN O'KEEFFE, the Veteran Comic Dramatist, written by himself, 2 vols. 8vo. 1l. 8s.

6. A NEW SERIES of ARABIAN NIGHTS' ENTERTAINMENTS; selected from the original Oriental MS. By Jos. Von Hamuer, and now first translated into English by the Rev. George Lamb, in 3 vols. small 8vo. 18s.

"And here is a new collection of the records of fairy revels—new at least to us, although challenging equal antiquity and genuineness with its predecessor:—three fresh volumes, filled with the exploits of goules and gnomes and genii, and beautiful youths and bewitching damsels, and all the paraphernalia of Arabian magic."—Literary Gazette.

TRUCKLEBOROUGH HALL. A Novel. 3 vols.

The NATCHEZ; an Indian Tale. By the Viscount de Chateaubriand, Author of "Atala," &c. Editions in French and English, in small octavo.

And in a few days will be published,

MEMOIRS of the LIFE of MRS. SIDDONS. By James Boaden, Esq., 2 vols. 8vo. with portrait, 1l. 8s.

CORN AND CURRENCY QUESTION.—Now ready,

1. A LETTER on the CORN LAWS. By the Right Hon. Wm. Huskisson, addressed to One of his Constituents in 1814. Price 6d.; or for distribution 21. 2s. per Hundred.

2. A Letter from Earl Stanhope, on the Corn Laws. Price 2s. 6d.

3. Corn and Currency. In an Address to Land-owners. By Sir James Graham, Bart. M.P. Third Edition, with additions, 4s. 6d. boards.

4. Views on the Subject of Corn and Currency. By T. Joplin, 4s. boards.

5. Jacob's Report on Foreign Corn and Agriculture. Third Edition, 9s. boards.

6. A Compendium of all the Laws regulating the Importation or affecting Corn; with Tables of Average Prices, from the earliest official Period to the present time. Forming a Companion to Jacob's Report, 4s.

7. Corn, Trade, Wages, and Rent. By Edward Cayley, Esq. Second Edition, with additions, 2s.

8. The National Interest Considered, &c. By J. Benet, Esq. M.P.

9. Mr. Dumbell's Letter to Mr. Peel on Corn and Currency, Poor Laws, &c. 3s.

JAMES RIDGWAY, 169, Piccadilly.

DOUBLE LAND TAX.—Now ready, price 2s.

A LETTER to the PROTESTANTS of ENGLAND, on the Unjust Surcharge to which their estates are made liable, by the Law intending to Relieve Roman Catholics of the Double Land Tax. By William Blount, Esq.

Printed for J. RIDGWAY, 169, Piccadilly. Where may be had,

1. Letters to Lord John Russell, on the Original formation of the House of Commons. By Thomas Creevey, Esq. 3d Edition, with an Introductory Preface, 3s.

2. Lord John Russell's Letters to Viscount Althorp, on Bribery at Elections, 1s. 6d.

Just published, price 1l. 8s. in roan, or elegantly bound in morocco, price 1l. 15s.

STOCKDALE'S CALENDER for 1827, carefully revised and amended, and corrected to the present time: containing—

1st—The Peerage of the United Kingdom, with the Arms, &c. of all the Peers, with entirely new Plates.

2nd—The Baronetage, with the Arms, &c. of all the Baronets, with entirely new Plates.

3rd—The Almanack for 1827.

4th—The Companion, containing the List of the New Members to Parliament, showing the contested Elections, &c. with considerable additions and emendations.

5th—The Index.

N.B. The Peerage and Baronetage may be had separately, price 7s. 6d. each, in boards.

Also, the Companion, price 2s. boards.

RIDGWAY, 169, Piccadilly.

On the 1st of January will be published, in 2 vols. 12mo. elegantly embellished,

SAMS'S ANNUAL PEERAGE of the BRITISH EMPIRE.—The plan of this Work is entirely new, combining facility of reference with the greatest perspicuity in the arrangement of the respective Families.

It is designed to embrace all the Members of each Noble House, and offers to the Public notices of more than 2,000 Persons never before introduced into a Work of this nature.

The authenticity of the whole is ascertained either from personal communications with Noble Families, to many of whom the Authors and Publisher are under the highest obligations, from documents of unquestionable authority, or from the most diligent revision and collation of all the best Works on the subject extant.

It is confidently hoped that the labour and expense which have been unsparingly bestowed upon this Publication will be found to entitle it to general patronage; and that while it offers to the higher ranks of society indispensable information in an attractive form, its comprehensiveness, as a book of reference, will ensure its utility to all classes.

Printed for WILLIAM SAMS, Book and Printseller to the King and the Royal Family, 1, St. James's-street, opposite the Palace.

BARBARY WALL-FLOWER SNUFF, to be had only of the Importer, GEORGE EDLIN, Importer of Foreign Snuffs and Segars, No. 6, Aldgate, corner of Saracen's Head Inn, and of his Agent, Mr. J. Nohil, 31, Lower Grosvenor-street, Bond-street.

CHOCOLATE of the finest Quality, 3s. per lb.—COCOA-NUTS, the finest Grenada, 2s. per lb.—The Public are respectfully informed they may now purchase the above-mentioned Articles, warranted of the finest quality, at MARSHALL and Co.'s Tea and Coffee Warehouse, No. 12, Southampton-street, Strand. Also, Turkey Coffee, warranted of the finest Quality, at 3s. per lb.

THE IMPROVED SILK HAT ON BEAVER.—For Cash only.

They are made to suit the natural form of the Head.
The Colour is permanent. For durability, shape, and quality, they are unrivalled. } 15s.

HUGH FRANKS & Co.
Patentees of Improved Waterproof Hats,
Corner of Queen Street 70, CHEAPSIDE.

TRY IT.

Fine Port, and bright Sherry, well worthy of name,
Two Shillings per bottle—Madeira the same;
Good Cape, Flitoen-pence—and, the marvel to crown,
Champagne, Five and Sixpence—the cheapest in town!

Opera Colonnade. CHARLES WRIGHT.

Depots,—65, Crawford-street, St. Marylebone.
4, Sussex Place, and Kent Road.
13, St. James's-street, Brighton.
Quiet-street, Bath.

THE LONDON and WESTMINSTER WINE and SPIRIT COMPANY, No. 16, STRAND, opposite St. Martin's Church, have constantly on Sale—

	Per Dozen.		Per Dozen.
Port, Vintage 1820	27s to 30s	Bucellas	42s to 48s
Ditto, Crusted	36s to 42s	Claret, St. Julien	42s to 48s
Ditto, 5 to 8 years in bottle	48s to 56s	Ditto, Lafitte and Margaux	72s to 96s
Sherry, Pale and Brown	27s to 36s	Sparkling Champagne	72s to 84s
Ditto, Amontillado	42s to 48s	Ditto, and Creaming, of the first quality	90s to 96s
Cape, from	16s to 24s	Madeira, West India	63s to 72s
Ditto, East India	48s to 60s	St. Peray, dry and sparkling	63s to 72s
Teneriffe, Lisbon, Vidonia, and Mountain	30s to 36s	Chablis	56s to 63s
		Hermitage, Red and White	72s to 84s
		Moselle, Sauterne, &c.	50s to 60s

Old Tom, Jamaica Rum, Cognac Brandy, Fern-tosh, &c. per imperial measure at reduced prices.—Bottled Stout, Cider, Perry, Burton and Edinburgh Ales.

☞ All Goods must be paid for on or before delivery.

Letters post paid, to be addressed William Godfree and Co. No. 16, Strand.

TOOTHACHE effectually and permanently Cured, without Extraction or Pain; and carious Teeth rendered lasting and useful, by a new, safe, and simple process, invented by Mr. J. P. CLARK, 5, King-street, Bloomsbury-square. Reference can be given to several of the Nobility and Gentry, and particularly to eminent Medical Gentlemen, who have experienced or witnessed the benefit of the discovery. Mr. C. begs to state that he has no longer any objection to communicate his System to the Profession on equitable terms.—Natural and Artificial Teeth supplied; and all operations connected with the Teeth performed on scientific principles.—At home, daily, from 10 to 4.

N. B. For the satisfaction of Gentlemen of the Medical Profession, and the Public in general, Mr. C. will be happy to attend a case of Tooth-ache in any Public Institution, School, or Academy, gratis.

CHILBLAINS, SORES, BURNS, &c.

MARSHALL'S UNIVERSAL CERATE.—This Cerate will be found most efficacious in every kind of Wound, Sore, Scald, Burn, Bruise, Eruption, Ulcers of every denomination, especially Sore and Ulcerated Legs, which have been healed in so rapid a manner that a new method of cure has been established by this useful Preparation; Sore Breasts, Inflammation of the Eyes, Scorbutic and Cancerous Humours, Erysipelas, or St. Anthony's Fire, Ring Worm, Sore Throats, Chops, Chilblains, &c. &c.

Sold in Boxes, at 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. by Butlers, Chemists, Cheapside, corner St. Paul's; 73, Princes-street, Edinburgh; and 54, Sackville-street, Dublin; Savory and Co. 135, New Bond-street; Willmott, 83, High-street, Borough; and the principal Medicine Venders in the United Kingdom. Of whom may be had BUTLER'S CAJEPUT OPODELDOC, strongly recommended for Chilblains, Chronic Rheumatism, Spasmodic Affections, Palsy, Stiffness, and Enlargement of the Joints, Sprains, Bruises, &c. In Bottles, at 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—Thursday, Dec. 7.

Lord MELVILLE presented six or seven Petitions from incorporated trades in the City of Glasgow and its vicinity, against the Corn Laws. His Lordship observed, that the petitions were respectfully worded.—The petitioners wished for a free importation of corn, and the repeal of the existing Corn Laws. How far their Lordships had power to comply with the prayer of the petitioners he could not then decide.—The subject was one which demanded the most serious attention, and it would come under regular consideration.

The Petitions were laid on the table.

The House went into a Committee on the Indemnity Bill, and the Earl of Shaftesbury took the chair (first time this Session.)

The clauses having been read and agreed to, the Bill was reported without amendments.

Their Lordships then adjourned.

FRIDAY, Dec. 8.

The Marquis of LANSDOWN said, he held in his hand two petitions which came from a part of the country with which he had no connexion, but they related to a subject which must, from the unhappy situation of the petitioners, obtain the attention of the House. Upon looking into the petitions, he had found, from the nature of them, that they could not properly be entertained by that House without the approbation of his Majesty's Government, inasmuch as the petitioners prayed that pecuniary assistance might be afforded to them, in order to enable them to transport themselves and their families to his Majesty's Colonies, or some other part of the world, instead of that which they now found incapable of affording them the means of subsistence. In submitting this petition to their Lordships, all he could therefore ask, on behalf of them who had done him the honour of placing the petition in his hands, was to express a hope that it might meet the attention of the Government, and that it might, with every other measure for relief, be found practicable, and in unison with the system of the constitution of the country.

Earl BATHURST said, as these petitioners required the consent of his Majesty's Government, he should state that application for that consent would not be refused, and he rose therefore not for the purpose of saying any thing in objection to the petitions, but to explain the difficulties the petitioners would have to labour under in the execution of their plans. It was impossible to hear of the distress which the petitioners experienced without sympathising in their misfortunes. He believed there never had been a time when distress was accompanied by so much forbearance.—(Hear, hear.) With respect to the plans of the petitioners, they were desirous of settling in the colonies, and of having some part of the tracts of the Crown lands, unoccupied in North America. It was true there were such tracts, but to place a body of persons accustomed to live in towns in a trackless wilderness, where even the hardiest peasant could not bear the severity of the climate, would be exposing them to the greatest calamity. If measures were adopted to sanction and promote emigration, nothing could be done without preparation and fore-thought. The aged and infirm could not be included, not because they were not entitled to relief, but because that particular class of persons would not survive the hardships and difficulties attending emigration.—Adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, Dec. 4.

Petitions were presented, complaining of undue returns for the following places:—Borough of Sudbury, (to be considered Thursday, 11); borough of East Looe, (January 11); borough of Wootton Bassett, (Friday, January 12); county of Galway, (two petitions). (Jan. 12); county of Dublin. (Jan. 13); county of Monaghan, (January 13); borough of Tregony, (Monday, Jan. 15); borough of Marlborough, (Jan. 15); county of Banff, Jan. 15); borough of Hedon, (Jan. 16); borough of St. Ives, (Jan 16); borough of East Retford, (Jan. 16.)

Mr. HUME presented a petition from Anthony Marmion, Esq. complaining of an undue election for Dundalk.

It was ordered to be received as an election petition, and to be considered on Tuesday. Jan 16.

Mr. M. A. TAYLOR gave notice, that on the 27th of February, he would submit a motion to separate all matters of bankruptcy from the office of the Great Seal.

Colonel TORRENS presented a petition, signed by 8,000 of the inhabitants of the township of Great and Little Bolton, in the county of Lancaster, praying for a repeal of the corn laws. Similar petitions were presented by Mr. G. Phillips from the Chamber of Commerce in Manchester, and by Mr. Hume, from the seven incorporated trades of Montrose, and from the town of Bradford, in Yorkshire, and five villages in its vicinity.

Mr. PEEL gave notice, that immediately after the holydays he would move for the appointment of a select committee to examine into the state of the police in the districts and parishes adjoining to the metropolis.

Mr. PEEL then stated, that after the recess he would move for leave to bring in bills to consolidate and amend the laws respecting larceny, embezzlement of money by servants, and the disputes arising between masters and journeymen. The Right Hon. Gent. mentioned two other bills, but in so low a tone of voice that the particulars could not be gathered in the gallery.

After some observations from Mr. Littleton and others, the debate on the Private Bill Committees, the debate was adjourned to the 15th Feb.

A Member presented a petition from the inhabitants of Fowey, in Cornwall, complaining of an undue return for that borough. It was read, and ordered to be taken into consideration on the 17th of January.

Another Honourable Member presented a petition from Mr. Southcott, complaining of an undue return for the county of Cavan. It was read, and ordered to be taken into consideration on the 17th of January.

TUESDAY, Dec. 5.

Mr. Alderman WAITHMAN presented a petition from Roger Flattery, stating that he had been induced, by representations of persons, some of whom were Members of that House, to enter into contract for the sale of iron works in Ireland, by which he had sustained great loss, and praying enquiry.

Mr. BROGDEN said the allegation of the petition, that the petitioner had communications with Members of that House, so far as it related to him, was untrue.

The motion, that the petition be printed, was negatived.

Mr. Alderman WAITHMAN presented a petition from Shareholders in the Arigna Mine Company, stating, that 10,000l. had been given for the mine, and 25,000l. charged to the Company, 15.000l. being divided amongst the Directors, some of whom were Members of that House. The petition enumerated the Directors, the sums they received, amongst whom were Sir William Congreave, Mr. Brogden, and Mr. Bent.—The petition prayed for a rigid inquiry.

Mr. BROGDEN said the petition had been carried about for many days by a person of the name of Clark, who was at present under judgment for a libel, and was one of the subscribing witnesses, and could, by all his efforts, procure but three or four.

Mr. Alderman WAITHMAN said, whether the petition was signed by one person, or a thousand, could not make truth falsehood.—The petition was ordered to be printed.

Mr. MARTIN suggested that the names of the petitioners should be printed, that the people of England might know who were the accusers of his Hon. Friend.

Mr. BROGDEN hoped the usual course would not be departed from.

Mr. Alderman WAITHMAN presented a petition from electors of Sudbury, stating, that John Wilks, jun. having been returned to serve in Parliament for that borough, and had been since accused of transactions that they believed him to be unfit to sit in Parliament, and prayed for relief,

Mr. Alderman WAITHMAN said he felt great difficulty in bringing forward the motion of which he had given notice, as he must make statements which would probably excite strong sensations in the minds of some Hon. Gentlemen and their friends. He never meant to make a charge against an individual; his object was of a much higher nature. He looked at the question on public grounds, as it concerned the honour and integrity of Parliament. He believed few Members of that House had formed any idea of the magnitude of the subject. Within the last three years there had been 600 Joint Stock Companies, the capitals of which amounted to 300,000,000l. A great number of the Companies vanished almost as quickly as they were brought forth, still deposits were paid and lost, the whole being illegal. Sixty of these were Mining Companies, which caused a great abstraction of the public currency from the pockets of the credulous to those of the designing. The Hon. Alderman here read a statement of the capital of these Companies, with a capital of 250.000,000l., the deposits and average premiums on the shares of which amounted to 12,000,000l., which was a complete loss to those who had paid it, and a robbery on the part of those by whom the fraud was practised. The shares had passed through so many hands, that the present holders were not the greatest losers. In some instances shares had sold at 1400l. premium; and it appeared that in a Company lately dissolved, 14,000l. was lost in deposits, and 30,000l. more was lost in premiums. It was said that the country was neither richer nor poorer, that the money had only changed hands; but the same might be said when a purse was taken on Hounslow Heath. He called upon the House to go into an inquiry into the nature and conduct of those Joint Stock Companies. He should at present confine himself to a few, as they were almost all of the same character. Some persons were concerned in a great many of those Companies, and professed the most unbounded benevolence, as they were all for the public good, and employment of the people. About fifteen persons, whom he could name, were remarkable in this way. When the Pasco Peruvian was brought out, the highest description was given by the Directors of the profits to be made. They sold for some time at 60l. a share, they were now in the market at 1l. 5s. This, and a great many others, probably commenced with the Imperial Gas Company. The Arigna Mine Company was probably not inferior to any other in iniquity. The shares in one day rose from 8¼ to 24; could that be without some trick? It appeared, from documents he had seen, that the Company was about seeking for an Act of Parliament—he was unwilling to allude to the Hon. Gentleman, (Mr. Brogden) because he believed others were infinitely worse, and that if the House did its duty they could not retain their seats. The Hon. Gentleman was a trustee, put in that situation to take care of the interests of others. The first question of the trustees was, how are we to be paid—is it by shares? Oh, no; there has been so much said about shares, that will not do;—here is 1047l.—put it in your pocket. Could it be supposed the gentlemen who did this supposed it was profit on the sale of shares? They could not suppose it, for they had no shares, they had paid no deposits. Not only that—but the Lord Chief Justice had decided that the Companies were illegal—and were the makers of laws to be the persons to act in violation of law?—(Hear, hear.)—One gentleman got 2500l. of the plunder, and 1250l. for shares, though he had not paid a shilling deposit.—(Cries of "Name.")—Mr. Alderman Waithman said he had no objection to name—that person was the Chairman of the Company, Sir William Congreve.—(Hear, hear.) And, besides what he got for himself, his brother-in-law got 1000l., and his private secretary 1000l. more. (Hear, hear.) There was another Committee of that House, in which 24 Members had 12,000 shares, and the majority of the Committee were Directors. (Cries of "Hear.") They sold the shares when they were at a premium; but when they fell to a discount, then they refused to pay the deposit. The Equitable Loan Company was brought forward as a benevolent institution, for the benefit of persons in necessitous circumstances; and by some contrivance, and no doubt very gross misrepresentations, they procured the Duke of York to lend his name to their scheme. They all knew how ready the Duke of York was to assist in benevolent objects, and he thought the imposition practised on his Royal Highness was not the least part of the fraud. (Hear, hear.) They told the public in their prospectus, that they would make an impartial distribution of the 40,000 shares, of which the Company was to consist, that the public at large might have an opportunity of partaking in its advantages. They gave, however, 35,000l. shares to the Directors, and the remainder they divided principally amongst their officers, and persons connected with the newspapers. These Directors were to hold a certain number of shares as a qualification; but one of them had told him that he had sold all his shares at a profit of 1200l. The Hon. Alderman concluded by moving, That a Select Committee be appointed to inquire into the origin, conduct, and present state of the several Joint Stock Companies formed in the years 1824, 1825, and 1826, and the connexion of Members of that House with any of said Companies. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. CANNING said, that he had no wish to oppose any inquiry that could be useful; but he could not think that the general inquiry proposed by the Hon. Alderman could be beneficial. He could not agree in the opinion which the Hon. Alderman appeared to entertain against Joint Stock Companies generally. Some of the highest and most beneficial commercial companies in the country were of that description; for instance, the Bank of England, and the East India Company; and he did not think there was any thing in the mere fact of the formation of a Joint Stock Company to call upon the House to institute an inquiry into its origin and character. Indeed, what appeared to be the Hon. Alderman's principal object, an inquiry into the proceedings of the Arigna Mine Company, would probably be merged and lost in the multiplicity of the details to which it would lead. He would therefore propose, that in the first instance the inquiry should be confined to the Arigna Mine Company, for which inquiry he thought a sufficient ground had been laid before the House. (Hear, hear.) And if grounds for inquiry into the conduct of other Companies should be laid before the House, he would have no objection to the appointment of such Committees. (Hear, hear.) He was confident that the Hon. Alderman, in naming his Committee, would show that there was no wish to put together persons of any particular political bias. The Hon. Alderman had put a list into his hands of forty Members of that House, all unexceptionable, certainly, as individuals; but when put together on a Committee, presenting, perhaps, an appearance of being rather too many on one side, though he believed fourteen of them sat on the same side as himself. (A laugh.) The Right Hon. Gentleman moved an amendment, substituting the Arigna Company for all Joint Stock Companies. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. BROGDEN said, he felt himself called upon to address the House for a short time on a subject so important to him. A great prejudice had been excited against his character, and he thought he had reason to complain of the Hon. Alderman for the uncandid, not to say unfeeling manner in which he had spoken of him; but when he came before the Committee, he would have the means of entirely removing every imputation which had been made against him; and he rejoiced that a Committee was now to be appointed, for if the charges were to remain hanging over him till after the holidays, he feared he should not be living to disprove it. The Hon. Gentleman here read a number of letters from the solicitor of the shareholders of the Arigna Mine Company, and Resolutions passed by their Committees, all exculpating him in the fullest manner from any participation in or knowledge of the fraud that had been practised on them. From early life he had been concerned in Joint Stock Companies, all of which had been beneficial to the shareholders. And the Mining Companies that had been lately formed in South America had been highly useful to English interests there. He should only add, that he heartily concurred in the appointment of a Committee, and hoped they would speedily proceed to the inquiry, that he might the more speedily obtain justice at their hands. (Hear, hear)

Mr. Alderman WAITHMAN said, he wished to observe that he readily admitted that some Joint Stock Companies were useful, and had no doubt that Hon. Members of that House joined them for the public good.

Mr. FERGUSSON supported the motion, and was happy that the Hon. Gentleman (Mr. Brogden) would have an opportunity of setting his character right with the public. He thought the proceedings in many other Companies were even more guilty than in the Arigna Mine Company, and hoped the Hon. Alderman would persevere in bringing them all to light, and was confident Ministers would not interfere to screen the guilty. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. HOBHOUSE thought the House and the country were greatly indebted to the Honourable Alderman for bringing the subject before the House, and also to Ministers for consenting to the Committee; and he thought no one could have more reason to be obliged than the Honourable Gentleman (Mr. Brogden), who would be afforded the means of vindicating his conduct. He was confident that unless some measure was brought forward to prevent the recurrence of similar frauds, the country would again be made their victims. In 1825, he predicted the consequences that would follow to the country from the mania that existed, and the disgrace that would fall on Members of that House for being concerned in promoting it.

Mr. ATWOOD said but two facts had been mentioned reflecting on Members of that House; the one was the division of 15,000l. among the Directors of the Arigna Company, the other, the conduct of the Members on the Equitable Loan Bank Bills. But Members being concerned in Joint Stock Companies could be no charge against them. The whole country was covered with the works of Joint Stock Companies; all its canals, and many of its harbours were made by them; and but for a joint stock company, that great improvement, gas illumination, would not be brought to perfection. He thought it quite as innocent to buy a share in a joint stock company as to buy a share in a shawl. (A laugh.)—He contended that many of the companies—the mining companies, with which he was connected, did not deserve the character of "fraudulent," which had been generally applied. On the contrary, he maintained that they would advance the interests of this country. And many of the joint stock companies—such as that for General Steam-navigation, for instance, were useful. He begged to rebut the imputation thrown out against all Members of Parliament connected with joint stock companies. (Hear.)

Sir A. GREY GRANT said, as the question had been narrowed by the amendment, he should make a remark or two. He had been a Director of a Company—for a few weeks only. A Frenchman, who attended the late King and Queen of the Sandwich Islands, professed to have powers to grant exclusive privileges of trading with them. (A laugh.) The subject was ludicrous, certainly. It was to trade in sandals, to be conveyed to China. (Laughter.) A company was projected, but unfortunately, it was found that the powers spoken of were not possessed, though 20,000l. or 30,000l. were raised. Dissolution took place. The loss was 2.000l. or 3,000l.; but as they had acted under a fallacy—though their names had induced the public to come forward—they thought they ought to take the onus on themselves. (Cheers.) They did so, and prevented the company from losing one shilling. (Cheers.) Circumstanced as he was in that House, he had deemed this explanation requisite.—[The Chairman, pro. tem.]

Mr. J. SMITH denied that joint stock companies merited the sweeping condemnation which had been dealt out. He praised the Australian Company, and thought the Equitable Loan Company would have been of great use to the lower classes. The laws regarding pawnbrokers required amendment. The surplus capital was, it could not be denied, the cause of the schemes that had been put forth, many of which had been fraudulent, artful, designing, or ridiculous.

Mr. HUSKISSON said, he had not any share or shares in any of these companies. He had an interest in one of the oldest companies (Sun), and two shares in two canals, which were not productive. He possessed them on account of local motives. The "Silk Company" was useful, but he had declined all connection with it. Joint Stock Companies, however, did not deserve the sweeping and unqualified condemnation of the Hon. Alderman. In this country they had been eminently useful—in canals, bridges, roads, water companies, &c. Only last Session, they had been engaged in endeavouring to reduce the Bank Charter, in order to have branch establishments for the better security of such concerns. As to the "bubbles" of the last two years, their disgraceful character was indisputable; and he had not failed constantly to caution the public against connecting themselves with such companies. He wished the law would prevent people from having any thing to do with delusive schemes.

Colonel DAVIES vindicated the Equitable Loan Company; said he was a Director; and denied that he had trafficked in his shares. Any such charge against him was false.

Mr. H. GURNEY said that some of the companies were good, but, undoubtedly, many of them were most fraudulent.

Mr. ROBERTSON thanked the Hon. Alderman for bringing forward this motion, and did not think that he had meant any sweeping condemnation against all joint stock companies. He knew their value, and did not intend to mix them up with the ephemeral companies and bubbles. They had practised the greatest frauds ever witnessed upon the face of the globe. He was for the amendment, but he was prepared to go further.

Sir C. FORBES applauded the manner in which the question had been brought forward, and the spirit that had been displayed in saying within the walls of that House, what was universally said out of it. (Cheers.) He was glad the Government had consented to enquiry. As to the Australian Company it was a monopoly—it was a job. He would pledge himself to prove such to be the fact. He hoped the Hon. Alderman would be supported in his enquiry. He hoped Mr. Brogden would be able to acquit himself, and lamented that he had not refunded the money.

Mr. J. SMITH defended the Australian Company; and said its tendency would be to civilize the original natives, who had been described as the most barbarous people. The Company's utility, he thought he could approve, even to the Hon. Member.

Sir C. FORBES explained. He should be glad to have his opinion corrected.

Mr. W. HORTON defended the Australian Company, and denied that it had been formed from sinister information, and motives. The charge of its being a job was a fallacy, and was absurd. Not one share was possessed by any person connected with the Colonial Department.

Mr. H. DAVIS also defended this Company, and said, it was likely to be of the greatest use to the mother country.

Mr. TAYLOR also defended the Company.

Mr. Alderman WAITHMAN replied. He had no objection to the amendment. He had communicated the motion to the Right Hon. Gentleman. He had never intended any thing so wild as to attack Joint Stock Companies generally. He was not against the employment of capital—but against schemes to get money from people and divide it amongst themselves. His charges against the Equitable Loan Company were not lightly made—they were on documents. All the facts he was ready to prove whenever the opportunity presented itself.

The original motion was put and the amendment, the latter being adopted.

The Select Committee were then proposed. The names were as follows:—Mr. Alderman Waithman, Lord Althorp, Mr. Ward, Mr. H. Twiss, Mr. G. Lamb, Mr. Warburton, Sir T. D. Acland, Sir C. Ross, Mr. Hobhouse, Mr. Lockhart, Mr. Pallmer, Mr. N. Calvert, Mr. G. Bankes, Mr. Fazakerley, Mr. W. Whitmore, Colonel Trench, Sir R. Vivian, Major Maberly, Mr. S. Wortley, Mr. Dickinson, Sir J. Grant. Five to be a quorum, and to have power to send for persons, papers, and records.

Two petitions were presented complaining of the returns for Beverley and Sudbury.—Ordered to be considered in January next.

WEDNESDAY, Dec. 6.

The Speaker informed the House he had received from the Clerk of the Hanaper, in Ireland, two petitions, one complaiuing of an undue election for the town of Galway, the other of an undue election for the County of Cavan.—Ordered to be referred to Election Committees.

Mr. Abercrombie moved for a new writ for the election of a Member for the City of Cork, in the room of the Honourable Christopher Hely Hutchinson, deceased.—Ordered.

The Hon. Member also moved for a writ for the election of a new Member for the town of Bandon, in the room of Lord Duncannon, who being returned for the County of Kilkenny and the town of Baudon, had made his election to serve for the former place.

Mr. Moore presented a petition last night to the House of Commons from a gentleman named Orpen, complaining of a power alleged to be exercised by the Roman Catholic Priests of Ireland, in excommunicating Members of the Roman Catholic Religion.

Mr. SPRING RICE said, that such power was stated in Election Petitious preseuted to the House to have been improperly exercised, which would be brought to trial before a competent tribunal, and they would decide not upon petitions, but upon sworn evidence.

Mr. JAMES GRATTAN expressed his concern that such a petition was presented. He believed on his conscience, the evil complained of did not exist, though both Protestant and Catholic Clergy used their influence on political subjects.

The Petition prayed that any person excommunicated, should be entitled to recover 20l. by civil bill process from the priest, by whom he was excommunicated.

Mr. SPRING RICE objected to the printing the Petition, which he said would be a firebrand cast among the people that would produce a conflagration.

Mr. ABERCROMBIE said, that he had been in Ireland, and returned with a conviction that not a moment should be lost in endeavouring to save the integrity of the empire by timely concessions to the Catholics of Ireland.

Mr. Secretary PEEL observed, when the proper time arrived, he would be prepared to state his opinion; but, in the mean time, he wished both parties to abstain from inflammatory language.

The Petition was ordered to lie on the table; and, after disposing of the Orders of the Day, the House adjournod.

THURSDAY, Dec. 7.

A new writ was ordered to be issued for Cambridge University, in the room of Sir R. Copley; and for Hastings, in the room of Sir W. Curtis and Sir C. Wetherell; and for Stafford, in the room of the late Mr. Ironmonger.

Mr. W. HORTON gave notice last night in the House of Commons, that on the 15th of February he would move for the re appointmeut of the Emigration Committee. It was most desirable, he said, that the fullest information should be obtained on the subject.

Mr. ABERCROMBIE expressed a corresponding opinion, and observed, that no time should be lost in coming to some conclusion.

Mr. JAMES GRATTAN said, that the evidence before the Committee last year held out no hope of assistance to emigrate.

Mr. HORTON said, he came to a different conclusion, and was of opinion the evidence was in favour of emigration.

Sir J. GRAHAM called the attention of the House to the lamentable state of Destitution of the Weavers in the Manufacturing Districts, which he attributed to the improvement of machinery,—the introduction of the Power-loom, he said, must eventually be of public good, but as the unhappy men were in a state of great distress, he hoped some special remedy would be applied to their case.

Mr. PEEL observed, that each emigrant would cost the country 20l. Emigration would not afford any great relief to the superabundant population, but it might make Canada a flourishing colony, and a great market for our manufacturers.

On the subject of the Cape of Good Hope, Mr. Horton said, the Report of the Commissioners would speedily be laid before the House; and with respect to the observations of Mr. Hume, he assured the Hon. Member that whatever specific charge may be brought against Lord Charles Somerset, every paper and document would be cheerfully produced calculated to elucidate the subject.

FRIDAY, Dec. 8.

Mr. BROUGHAM said, some allusion had been made last night to the petition which he presented from Bishop Burnett, respecting the conduct of Lord Charles Somerset at the Cape of Good Hope. He had not read the report of the Commissioners, but he understood that Lord Charles Somerset was come home, for the purpose of having all charges against him examined into; and he wished to give notice that he should take an opportunity of having those charges enquired into.

Mr. HOBHOUSE said he wished to learn, for the sake of his constituents, at what time those of them living in the neighbourhood of Charing-cross might be turned out of their houses?

Mr. HERRIES said the Commissioners were actively engaged in making arfangements, which they would bring before the public as speedily as possible, though he could not yet name the day.

Mr. HESCOT made his election to serve for the University of Oxford, and a new writ was ordered for the borough of Dowton.

On the motion of Mr. WYNN, a new writ was also ordered for the borough of Dowton, in the room of Robert Southey, Esq. who had stated his inability to qualify according to law.

Mr. MARTIN said he had intended to move the addition of a Member to the Committee sitting on the Arigna Mine Company, but his Honourable Friend (Mr. Brogden) felt so perfectly satisfied with the Committee as it stood, that he would not move for any addition.

Mr. BROGDEN said he felt himself perfectly safe in the hands of the present Committee.—Adjourned.

The Gazette of Tuesday contains the promotion of Lord Amherst to the dignity of Earl, and of Lord Combermere to the dignity of Viscount.

The readers of The Age will have observed an advertisement announcing that the proprietor of that splendid establishment, the Cafe de L'Europe, in the Hay-market, has begun, and means to continue to give dinners to his patrons, having previously confined himself to the sale of wines and coffee. To those who have tasted the latter class of refreshments, it is unnecessary to say more than that the larder of the Cafe de L'Europe equals in excellence its cellars; and, to the public in general, we feel that we cannot render a more agreeable service than by recommending to their notice this deserving, economical, yet magnificent establishment.

The Masquenade.—The season for masquerades commenced last Tuesday at the King's Theatre. To say any thing of the characters would be useless. They were—after the usual fashion of such things—strange anomalies. There was an Irishman, sober, and breaking no man's head; and a Turk walking in the most perfect amity with a Greek. These, however, are all old; and there was nothing new, if we except such things as the talk of the day, and the more recent directions of public attention dictated. Such were the Paul Pry, a Dame Blanche, a ghost of the late elephant, and a king going to open the Parliament. Considering how early it was in the season, the masquerade was tolerably well attended. The supper was excellent, and the wines, Champaign Wright's best.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

The accounts from Spain, communicated through the French papers, represent Ferdinand to be sadly perplexed with respect to the affairs of Portugal. The Spanish Government has evidently taken fright at what has been done, and is now anxious to repair the errors it has committed. What motives have led to this repentant disposition, we will not too curiously inquire into; it is enough that it exists. It is positively asserted that a telegraphic dispatch had announced to the French Government that the King of Spain had just issued a decree, by which all Portuguese refugees are ordered to withdraw sixty leagues from the frontiers.

Advices from Gibraltar state that the Algerine fleet will now retire, as the poor King of Spain has consented to pay the tribute to the Barbarian; the amount was at Carthagena, ready to be shipped, and Ferdinand has applied for a French frigate to transport the specie to Algiers, as none of his brave fleet like the voyage. According to one account the sum was 300,000 dollars; another letter estimates it at 100,000 dollars.

The Message of the Mexican President has reached this country. It is of local, rather than of general interest. After stating the power under which this meeting of Congress had been convoked, the President says—"Mexico depends on her public credit—that basis on which all nations depend. The civilized world fixes its eye on the prudence of the Legislators of Mexico. Good faith in contracts, the due performance of promises, are the ties of friendship with one people and another. Of all the laws necessary for the final arrangement of the treasury, the regulation of commerce is the moft urgent, because it affects the interests of the first order, not only as it concerns ourselves, but as it concerns the whole universe. There will be submitted, for the consideration of the Congress, the treaties concluded between this Government and foreign nations. The executive will examine, with the greatest attention, the compact of the great American Assembly in Panama. Agriculture, commerce, and industry, all demand the improvement of our roads. Desertion in an army ought to be cut off like a cancer; and the inefficiency and complicated nature of the existing laws on this subject are palpable. The Executive recommends very particularly this important subject, as the army is the firmest prop of our independence. Military justice at present is without a head, until the duties of the Supreme Tribunal of War are regulated, which, at present also are charged equally with the affairs of the Marine Service. The active militia, which is the bulwark of the public liberty, imperiously calls for the finishing hand to its organization. The officers of the Commandants Generals' Veteran Companies of the Coasts, and every thing necessary for the defence of the nation, shall occupy the attention of the Chambers."—The remainder of the speech refers merely to internal arrangements, of no great interest.

COLONIAL.

The Sierra Leone Gazette Extraordinary, of the 9th of October, contains a despatch, addressed to Sir Neil Campbell, Knt. C.B., Commander-in-Chief, from Commodore Charles Bullen, C.B., Commander-in-Chief of his Majesty's Squadron on the Sierra Leone Station, communicating the total defeat of the Ashantee Army, commanded by the King in person, on the 7th of August, by the British troops and our Native Allies, under the command of Lieut.-Colonel Purdon. The battle took place on the plains of Accra, and was vigorously and obstinately contested by the Ashantees. The fate of the day was long doubtful, and for some time the British had almost the worst of the action; but Col. Purdon, by a very judicious arrangement, opened a very heavy fire from four nine-pounders and eight rocket tubes upon the enemy, which wounded the King. The Congreve rockets caused consternation among the Ashantees, while Acoto, King of Aquamboe, made a circuit with his force, and commenced an attack on their rear, and who solely and eventually decided the fate of the battle. Several of the enemy's chief warriors were killed, and the Ashantee King was nearly made prisoner, having been wounded in three places. His equipage and camp, and several of his wives, with a very rich booty, estimated at 500,000l. sterling, fell into the hands of the British and their allies; and in the camp was found the head of Sir Charles M'Carthy, carefully preserved as a trophy, in a double folding of paper. An oblation of rum had been made to it by the King in the morning, invoking it to call to him the heads of all the English Chiefs, and to give him victory. The loss of the British was trivial. The Ashantees had between five and six thousand killed on the field, and 2,000 made prisoners by the Accras.

The first vessel bound to this country under the Haytian flag, and manned entirely with Blacks, the Union, has arrived in the Downs.

The Dover Smugglers.—Four more persons engaged in the smuggling transactions on the coast of Kent, underwent an examination before Sir Richard Birnie, on Thursday. Their names are James Smead, William Wheeler, alias "Tom the Blacksmith," —— Questen, and —— Hogben, and they were charged with having been concerned in the wilful murder of Richard Morgan, a quarter-master of the Ramillies on the beach at Dover, on the night of the 29th July, while he, in the execution of his duty, was endeavouring to prevent them from running a cargo of contraband spirits. The evidence adduced in support of the charge against the prisoners was precisely the same as that upon which their companions were committed; and, as it was reported fully at the time, it is not necessary to repeat it. The approver (Horne) identified three of the prisoners as having been present, armed, when Morgan was shot; and they were committed to take their trials for the murder of Morgan. Questen was not armed, and therefore he was committed for feloniously assembling with others, who were armed, for the illegal purpose of running contraband goods.

James Bishop Wilson was next put to the bar, charged with having been concerned in a smuggling transaction on the coast between Dymchurch and Hythe, on the night of the 10th of May, when a Preventive Service man, named Wynne, was shot at and wounded by the smugglers. (The prisoner was so ill with an ague that he was allowed to sit by the fire during his examination.—Lieut. Johnson, of the Ramillies, stated, that he went on duty on the Dymchurch Wall, at eleven o'clock on the night of the 10th of May, and shortly after he heard firing at some distance from him, which he knew to proceed from an affray between the smugglers and blockade men. He left his station to intercept the retreat of the smugglers, and when he returned, he found Wynne lying wounded. That night eight tubs of spirits were seized, and the next morning twenty-two more were found on the beach. Horne, the approver, was called, and he deposed that he was "out" with the smugglers on the night in question, armed; and that the prisoner was there also, armed with a gun. He fired upon the blockade men himself, but he did not see the prisoner fire.—Pooley, Maidstone constable, deposed, that he apprehended the prisoner, who confessed, though the witness cautioned him not to say any thing that might hurt himself, that he was "out" on the night of the 10th of May. He also said, "they did not care any thing about Paultry (an approver), it was Horne they were afraid of." And when witness asked him if Horne could hurt him, he said, "Yes, Horne was with us."—Fully committed for trial.

We perceive, from the Box List, that Mr. Sams, of Pall-Mall, has again secured Private Boxes in the best situations, at Covent-Garden and Drury-Lane Teeatres, and we have no doubt, the patronage of the fashionable world will amply compensate him for his spirited speculation.

A coach is about to be established, to run from Bridgewater to London (a distance of 150 miles) in one day!—It is to be called the Wonder, and will commence running immediately after Christmas.

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS.

1. The Literary Souvenir, edited by Alaric A. Watts.
2. Friendship's Offering, Thomas K. Hervey.
3. Forget Me Not, Frederick Shoberl.
4. The Amulet.

The first thing that strikes the reader in the Literary Souvenir is a beautiful portrait of a girl in a Florentine costume of A. D. 1500, by Mr. H. Howard. Mr. Watts has some fine lines in illustration of this picture, which we regret we cannot transcribe. The portrait of Byron is certainly a failure, although it has received the certificates of Messrs. Hobhouse and Leigh Hunt. The Contadina is the most delightful engraving in the whole volume; Mr. C. Eastlake has surpassed himself in this picture of domestic life, and Delta's lines are worthy of the subject. The compositions in prose and verse, with some exceptions, are superior to those of last year, and altogether it forms a splendid volume.

We find, from the preface to Friendship's Offering, that during the progress of the work, Mr. Hervey, the Editor, was taken ill, and that his duties devolved on another gentleman; his deputy has acquitted himself extremely well, but some loss must have occurred to the volume from the removal of its original editor. Some of the embellishments are extremely beautiful, and the literary department is aided by the genius of Mr. Croly, Mr. Dale, Mrs. Hemans, and others. Mr. Croly has some fine verses on a "Contadina of Frascati dictating to one of the scribes who ply in the streets of Rome." The plate is engraved by Humphreys, from a clever picture by J. P. Davis.

Mr. Ackermann's Forget Me Not deserves particular attention, if it were only for the fact, that he was the first man who originated these pretty trifles in England; but this year's volume need not shrine from a comparison with any of its compeers. The story of the "Red-nosed Lieutenant," is admirable. The last publication that claims our attention is "The Amulet, or Christian Remembrancer." We see no great use of the term Christian, for a Heathen literary remembrancer is a thing out of the question in this country. But if the editor is afraid of being esteemed a Heathen, he is right in advertising himself to be a Christian. We have never been able to very distinctly understand what portion of the inhabitants of this island constitute the "religious world." Some writers insist upon it that people in general are indifferent about their souls; we should think not, for life and death are serious matters; and it is not fair to accuse our brethren of being indifferent about either, merely because they have their own way of showing the interest they take in a here and a hereafter. However, making due allowance for some heaviness and common place prosing, the contents of the "Amulet" are very amusing, and Mr. Montgomery, Mr. Croly, Mrs. Opie, and other well known writers, have contributed some pieces in their best manner.

CORONERS' INQUESTS.

Charge of Manslaughter against Five Boys.—On Monday evening an adjourned Inquest was held at the house of Mr. W. Davis, the Hoop and Grapes, in Queen-square, Westminster, before Thomas Higgs, Esq. on the body of Sarah Hood, whose death was occasioned by the wanton conduct of some boys.

Robert Watts stated, that on the evening of Lord Mayor's day, he was passing down Charles-court, in the Strand. There were a great many boys in the court. The deceased was coming down, when Frederic and Thomas Williams called out "Here comes the Scotch bawd, let us have a lark." They all pushed her along the court, and when opposite to her own door, No. 10, they forced her down. It was by the push of Frederic and Thomas Williams that she fell. Deceased cried out, "Oh, my thigh is broken." A lad opposite brought out a lighted candle to assist her, when Thomas Williams tried to blow it out. They had often played tricks with her before. There were also present William Quick, Henry Dover, and Samuel Bassett, all assisting to throw her down.

The Coroner having summed up the evidence, the Jury unanimously returned a verdict of Manslaughter against Frederick Williams, Thomas Williams, William Quick, Samuel Bassett, and Henry Dover.

The Coroner immediately issued his warrant for their apprehension.

Distressing Accident.—Tuesday evening Mr. Stirling, the coroner for Middlesex, and a very respectable Jury, assembled at the sign of the Grapes, at Brompton, for the purpose of inquiring into the circumstances attending the melancholy death of Mr. Charles Clementi, aged 21, the only son of Mr. Clementi, of Cheapside. The following evidence was adduced,—

Mr. George Kiallmark, of St. John's Wood, a musical professor, stated, that he knew the deceased, who was 21 years of age, and resided with his family at No. 4, Lower Brompton-grove. On Sunday last the deceased, the witness, and a younger brother of his (witness's) returned to Mr. Clementi's house from a walk, and had not been in long when the deceased inquired of his mother if she would allow him to discharge a blunderbuss for sport. The deceased was very fond of that species of amusement. Having obtained permission, he discharged the blunderbuss several times out at the window of his own apartment. The blunderbuss was then put aside, and the deceased, after showing the witness and his brother several different descriptions of fire-arms, produced a brace of pistols, which had been given to him by his father some short time previously. These pistols had percussion locks. The deceased was showing the use of the locks, and placing the detonating cap upon one of them, when witness exclaimed, "For God's sake, Charles, do not handle them so much, you know I have a great aversion to such instruments." The deceased, without replying to the remark, said to the witness's brother, "Now, Edwin, see, I could soon shoot myself," at the same time placing the muzzle of the pistol to his chest. The witness, much alarmed, exclaimed, "Do not be foolish, pray." The deceased replied, "O, nonsense, they are not loaded," At this moment the deceased pulled the trigger, and the pistol went off; the deceased walked, or rather staggered, some paces, exclaiming, "It has given me a devil of a knock." He fell to the ground, upon which witness ran to him, and then discovered that his chest was covered with blood. Seeing there was no time to lose, witness ran for medical assistance, and procured the immediate attendance of Messrs. Glen and Auderson, surgeons, in the vicinity. Before they arrived, however, the deceased had breathed his last.

Mr. James Anderson, surgeon, stated that on arriving at Mr. Clementi's house, he found the deceased young gentleman lying on a bed in his chamber. Witness found on examination that life was quite extinct. A pistol bullet had entered his left side, and in its progress had lacerated the heart to a considerable extent. Death must have ensued in less than a minute after the discharge of the weapon.

The Jury, after a few words from the Coroner, returned a verdict of "Accidental death."

The deceased was an only child of Mr. Clementi's, by a former wife. Mr. Clementi, senior, is now in Italy.

A bill of indictment against Master James Mitchell Winn, preferred by Mr. Field, of Bolt-court, Fleet-street, was thrown out on Thursday, by the London Grand Jury. Master Winn, a few days ago, was charged before the Lord Mayor, on suspicion of felony, and bailed by virtue of Mr. Peel's late act.

Mr. Gulley, the famous ci-devant pugilist, now the General Scott of Newmarket and Doncaster, was the highest bidder for the Ware Park estate in Hertfordshire, the seat of Mr. Byde. When this celebrated warrior was fighting Gregson in Sir John Sebright's park, in that county, some 16 years ago, he did not expect so soon to be in a condition to take his station among the aristocracy of Hertfordshire. It is said that the price of the Ware Park property, for which he offered about 44,000l. is a trifle compared with the value of such an estate as Mr. Gulley has, from his great wealth, now in his power to purchase.—Star.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

The favours of our this-week's Correspondents shall be replied to on Sunday next.

THE AGE.

LONDON, DECEMBER 10.

The motion made by Alderman WAITHMAN on Tuesday last, in the House of Commons, respecting the implication of several Members of Parliament in sundry Joint Stock Companies, has excited a very general sensation; and so necessary, nay vital, have we all along considered such a step, that if we have any regret on the subject, it is, that the task did not fall into abler hands; for although the Alderman came armed with a few established facts, he possessed not any share of that tact, or judgment, which is essential, to be enabled fully to characterise the nature of the business on which he had to treat.

In the sweeping clause of condemnation which we have repeatedly had occasion to introduce, while discussing this subject, we would not be thought to include every Company, which is now established in the country, for that would be passing a censure on some of the most important and useful charters, that ever were granted—but it is for the purpose of drawing a line of distinction between the respectability and consequence of such, and the constitution of the different bubbles, lately created under a similar nomenclature, with the sole view of deluding and defranding the speculators therein. Exactly a twelvemonth since, when the public distress, arising from the creation of these schemes, was at its climax, we urged the very step, which has now been adopted by Alderman WAITHMAN, on the attention of the House of Commons, and pointed out to them the precedent on which any Member, taking upon himself so serious a task, might act—which was the proceeding enforced by Parliament, during the visitation of the famous South-Sea Bubble; and in the event of Mr. WAITHMAN, or any Member with whom he may cooperate, not being sufficiently in possession of all that passed at that important era, we will take the liberty of telling them. £50,000 stock was taken by KNIGHT, treasurer to the South-Sea Company (who ran away), for the use of the Earl of SUNDERLAND (First Lord of the Treasury), on which account his LORDSHIP resigned his place—other fictitious stock was distributed amongst Mr. AISLABIE, Chancellor of the Exchequer (who was expelled the House, and committed to the Tower), Mr. Secretary CRAGGS, and Mr. CRAGGS, senior, who died of a lethargy, before he underwent the censure of Government; while various Directors! in the persons of Sir GEORGE CASWELL, Sir JOHN BLUNT, Sir JOHN LAMBERT, Sir JOHN FELLOWES, and Mr. GRIGSBY, were taken into custody, and Sir THEODORE JANSEN, Mr. SAWBRIDGE, Sir ROBERT CHAPLAIN, and Mr. EYLES, were expelled their seats, and apprehended; and having, in obedience to the order of the House, delivered in inventories of their estates, they were confiscated by an Act of Parliament, towards making good the losses sustained by the public.

This is a brief outline of the grounds on which any investigation into the present speculations may with safety and propriety proceed, while at the same time it presents some idea to the promoters, of all the ruin which they have been the means of inflicting on the people, and of the punishment which will justly await them, on conviction of what they now stand charged with. In referring to the oratory which passed on Tuesday night, in furtherance of, or opposition to, the motion, it is impossible not to notice the harangues of Mr. ATTWOOD, Mr. J. SMITH, and Colonel DAVIES, particularly—in whom, as having been deeply involved in several of the bubbles, which were the topic of conversation, silence would have been the most becoming quality they could possibly have exhibited: for whatever argument might be adduced by them should be regarded very cautiously, as having for its object to defeat those ends, it is most desirable to attain. We shall abstain, for the present, from giving any opinion respecting the implication, or otherwise, of Mr. BROGDEN, and really think, if he were wise, he would say little about it himself, until the report of the Committee appointed be known; but we cannot avoid remarking, that we have seldom listened to a more unsatisfactory explanation of the 1,047*l.* received by him, for his services as a Director of the Arigna Company, than he gave on the evening in question. Sir WILLIAM CONGREVE, who has all along seemed to us more deeply involved in these wild schemes than almost any of his coadjutors, did not appear on the occasion, but despatched, in lieu of himself, a sick certificate to the Speaker, apprehensive we should presume that his own word would not go any very great way. We had rather Sir WILLIAM had done nothing of the sort—it has not furthered any one particular purpose, and has done any thing but remove one particle of the opinions which people had previously entertained of his liabilities. The attempt of Mr. ATTWOOD to transfer to Sir A. GRANT a portion of whatever blame might have been fixed on Mr. BROGDEN (whom Sir ALEXANDER has succeeded as the Chairman of the Ways and Means) was as paltry and ridiculous an effort, as we can now call to mind; and we are happy in bearing testimony to the candid explanation given by Sir ALEXANDER, which completely satisfied the whole house, and confounded Mr. ATTWOOD into the bargain.

We shall watch over the proceedings of this Committee with the utmost assiduity, and report whatever may arise that can in any respect affect the public cause—for it is decidedly to its tribunal we are to look, not only for a correction of those evils which have existed, and even now are not altogether allayed, but also for any future prevention of a recurrence of such glaring misdoings. In selecting either the advice, the nominal or pecuniary assistance of any BRITISH SENATOR, in whatever mercantile transactions the people of England may wish to embark, they naturally anticipate the aid of the highest character which England possesses, the value of whose title should give consequence to the speculation and security to the speculator—but if the feeling of gambling (for it is nothing else) be once engendered in these very individuals, to whom we are taught to look for protection, instead of a violation of it, why such undertakings lose the consequence of mercantile respectability, and degenerate into common swindles.

The amendment to Alderman WAITHMAN's motion, made by Mr. CANNING, was highly desirable, as being the means of producing, in one instance, an investigation, which, if ably conducted, may lead to those important disclosures, in other cases, which it is the object of the motion to produce.

At one of their Meetings last week in Dublin, a Roman Catholic was speaking rather disrespectfully of Mr. BLACK, the editor of the Morning Chronicle, for some article which had appeared in that paper. Mr. SHIEL defended Mr. BLACK very warmly, and considered him one of the best friends their cause had; observing to his Papistical neighbour, "And even if he were not a good friend, he might be a dangerous foe; and therefore, as the poet says, HIC Niger EST, HUNC TU Romane CAVETO."

We never gave SHIEL credit for saying half so good a thing.

ANNOUNCEMENTS FOR THE WEEK!

THEATRE ROYAL, ST. STEPHEN'S.

To-morrow, Monday, Dec. 11, 1826, his Majesty's Servants will perform Reynolds's comedy of SPECULATION.

Project .....Mr. ATTWOOD.

Between the play and farce, a pas-seul by Sir H. COOKE.

To conclude with Beazley's farce of

WHERE SHALL I DINE?

Sponge .....Mr. O'NEILL.

On Tuesday, THE BUSY BODY; Marplot, Alderman WAITHMAN; with the farce of the WEATHERCOCK; Briefwit, by Mr. H. TWISS.

On Wednesday, THE SLAVE; Sharpset, Mr. J. WILKS; Fogrum, Mr. HUME. With the farce of CENT. PER CENT; Tilwell, Mr. CAPEL.

On Thursday, THE ROAD TO RUIN.

Mr. Dornton, (the banker) Mr. ATTWOOD.
Harry Dornton .....Mr. BROGDEN.
Milford .....Mr. WALROND.
Sulky.....Sir W. CONGREVE.
Silky, (the usurer) .....Mr. EASTHOPE.
Goldfinch.....Marquis of CLANRICARDE.
Mr. Smith .....Mr. J. SMITH.
Hatter.....Mr. BORRADAILE.
Haberdasher.....Alderman WAITHMAN.
Grocer.....Mr. GYE.

Previous to the farce, the admired shawl-dance, by Alderman WAITHMAN.

To conclude with the farce of

HIT OR MISS.

Dick Cypher.....Mr. R. MARTIN.

On Friday will be revived (which has been in rehearsal since JULY LAST!) Sir John Vanburgh's comedy of

THE CONFEDERACY.

Gripe .....Mr. WALROND.
Moneytrap.....Mr. O'NEILL.
Dick.....Marquis of CLANRICARDE.
Brass.....Earl HOWTH.

Supernumeraries.

Clip .....Mr. AULDJO.
Mrs. Am-let .....Landlady of the Talbot at Richmond.

(N.B. The present Licenser has sent orders to the Theatre, that the beginning of the 2nd Scene, 1st Act, must be omitted.)

After which will take place (by particular desire,) A MISCELLANEOUS CONCERT, in which will be introduced, amongst others, the following pieces of music:—

Song—With his chin, Sometimes out, Sometimes in! } ....Sir A. GRANT.

Song—"A mercer I am, in a very good style,"
Ald. WAITHMAN.

Duett—"I'm bubbled, I'm bubbled, oh! how I'm troubled,"
Messrs. WALROND and WILKS.

Song—"'Tis woman that seduces all mankind,"
By Mr EASTHOPE (dressed in the character of Filch).

Song—"I was called knowing Joey,"
Mr. HUME.

Duett—"Prythee hush that flattery's tongue,"
Sir W. CONGREVE and Mr. BROGDEN.

Song—"I sing of the Greeks, both the present and past,"
Mr. O'NEILL.

Air and Chorus—"When you censure the Age, Be cautious and sage,"
By Mr. EASTHOPE and the rest.

INSTRUMENTAL PERFORMERS.

First Fiddle .....Alderman WAITHMAN.
Haut-boy .....Mr. O'NEILL.
Trumpet .....Mr. H. TWISS.
Bass'un .....Mr. WILKS.

To conclude with the laughable burletta of

TOM THUMB.

Lord Grizzle .....Lord BINGHAM.
Tom Thumb.....Mr. R. STEPHENSON.
Noodle .....Mr. HUME.
Doodle .....Mr. EASTHOPE.
Dolla-lolla (for the occasion) Mrs. CHATTERTON.

"WAYS AND MEANS"

OF FORMING A JOINT STOCK COMPANY.

There's no one like BROGDEN, though nothing he pays,
To raise up a Company, ev'ry one weens,
For out of his own head, he brings forth the ways,
And out of the pockets of others, the means.

Having now waited, until that process of law which has been directed against us has taken its course, we venture to offer a few general remarks upon the subject, endeavouring to avoid as much as possible any charge of egotism. The "full-fledged conspiracy," at which we some time since hinted, has come out in all its brightest array, under command of Colonel the Earl of GLENGALL, who, as Commander in Chief of this expedition, has honoured us with two indictments, and one criminal information, attended, in the serving of them, with a species of personal persecution, that must either be unknown to HIS LORDSHIP, or must make him blush, whenever he reflects upon it. But by all these measures, neither HIS LORDSHIP nor his confederates have effected one solitary point, beyond the probable incarceration of an individual, of whom they know nothing, while they have been, for so long a period, attempting to ruin his property. If this be their object, it is not unlikely they may attain it—but if their aim has been to silence that spirit of malevolence of which they complain, they have gone the worst way in the world to work—that can only be done by the indication of some feeling of conciliation on their part, by a forbearance of those hostile measures they have so long secretly been planning against this paper, and above all, by a correction of that public department, which at present disgraces the times they live in. The admission by Lord GLENGALL, through his counsel, Mr. SCARLETT, that he had employed the menial we alluded to, and that menial being then scribbling for the journal we mentioned, is a satisfactory evidence that his Lordship has indirectly given information to that paper, even if there were no other testimony; but, when we call to mind the various matter that has repeatedly appeared therein, affecting the movements of his Lordship, or his party, we cease to have a doubt upon the subject, and have no hesitation in saying, that unless the noble persons, who have been maligned in our contemporary, demand a rigid account for the same, at his Lordship's hands, they richly merit the treatment they have received. On this understanding, then, we part with the Noble Lord—and, although it will ever, unaffectedly, give us great pleasure to come to a cessation of hostilities with a gentleman of his rank, we can fearlessly assert, that it can only be done by virtue of the above prescription—at present, we may fairly exclaim, "Let the galled jade wince, our withers are unwrung."

In reference to the several prosecutions which have been preferred against us, we do not hesitate to admit, that in one or two instances, justice, by the law of the land, has been properly dispensed, for our comments have certainly come within the pale of designated libel; but, in admitting this, we must also assert, that if we had adopted any other course, we should have abandoned a public duty, and been therefore unworthy the trust which our readers have reposed in us. On the other hand, in some cases, the distribution of the law against us has been oppressive and inconsistent in the extreme. Lord BINGHAM, who was refused a rule nisi, last Michaelmas term, on the ground of his not having sworn his belief of our charging him with cowardice, has, this term, sworn to such belief, in spite of our asserting that we had no such intention; and the rule he obtained was made absolute, amidst the titters of the whole Court! Mr. EASTHOPE's rule was equally absurd, and obtained with equal inconsistency—and, when the hour of trial comes, we shall endeavour to convince a jury of the frivolous pretext on which we are brought before them.

From a view of these cases, in which we ourselves are mainly involved, let us turn to a consideration of others, which have been directed, in several instances lately, against the public press, and from a perusal of which, it would really appear that a feeling had been engendered, among the whole bench, against the most vital part of our national consequence. Mr. SCARLETT, who has appeared pro. and con. in most of these actions, very properly stated, in the late cause against The Times, that a discretion must on all occasions be exercised by the conductors of public journals, or there would be an end at once to the control of public opinion, and the thief tried at the Old Bailey would be entitled to bring his action for any notice taken of the circumstances which led to his commitment. There cannot be a more complete truism, and one which has lately been borne out fully, by the verdicts obtained, by a foreign vagabond of the name of BOCHSA, against two Sunday Papers, for a comment on the enormity of his character, while the following sentence against him stands recorded in the French Moniteur of Thursday, February 19th, 1818:—

COURT OF ASSIZE AT PARIS—SITTING OF FEB. 17.

CASE OF THE COMPOSER BOCHSA.

The Court condemned, in contumacy, Nicholas Bochsa, composer of music and harp-player, whose disappearance about a year ago, it will be recollected, made so scandalous a noise. He was accused—

1. Of having, on the 26th of last September, committed the crime of private forgery, by counterfeiting, or causing to be counterfeited, a bond for four thousand francs, and by signing it with the forged signatures, Berten, Mehul, Nicolo, and Boyeldieu.

2. Of having, on the 13th of October, 1816, committed a private forgery, by counterfeiting a resolution and receipt of the committee of the shareholders of the theatre Feydeau, and by signing them with the forged signature Rezicourt.

3. Of having, on the 20th of January, 1817, committed a private forgery, by counterfeiting a resolution of the shareholders of the theatre Feydeau, with the same forged signature.

4. Of having, on the 1st of March, 1817, committed a commercial forgery, by fabricating a bill of exchange for 16,500 francs, and signing it with the forged signatures, Despermont, Perregaux, Lafitte and Company, and Berton.

5. Of having, on the 9th of March, 1817, committed a private forgery, by counterfeiting an invoice of musical instruments, and a bond for 14,000 francs, and signing them with the forged signature of Pozzo di Borgo.

6. Of having, on the 11th of March, 1817, committed the crime private forgery, by fabricating three bonds for different sums, and signing them with the forged signatures, Count Chabrol, and Finquerlin.

7. Of having, on the 11th of March, 1817, committed a private forgery, by fabricating two bonds, one for 10,000 francs, the other for 5,000 francs, upon the funds of the English legation, and by signing them with the forged signatures, Stuart, Amaury, and Wells.

8. Of having knowingly made use of all these forged documents.

Besides these forgeries, Bochsa appears to have fabricated many others, particularly bonds bearing the forged signatures of M. le Comte de Cazes, and of Lord Wellington.

The Court pronounced him guilty of all these private and commercial forgeries, and condemned him to twelve years of forced labour, to be branded with the letters T. F., to be fined 4,000 francs, &c.

We cannot bring our minds to believe that the learned and upright Judges by whom, in these instances, the law has been laid down, can possibly be aware of these atrocities having been proved against the man, to whom they have extended the advantage of legal protection. Truth is deemed a libel, and in some cases, with great propriety, but such a sentence can never be held to be available on occasions like to this—you may as well be convicted for charging the man, who breaks into your house, of burglary, or he who kills your friend, of murder—to us there appears not the slightest distinction—and English liberty must have come to a fine pass indeed, if every foreign felon, who has eluded the justice of his own country, should seek an asylum in this, ingratiate himself into the society, and obtain the patronage of respectable people, and then have the power of incarcerating an Englishman, who charges him with his crimes, for the sole purpose of purifying our homes of his infectious presence. None can venerate the law, or the distributors of it, more than we do; and we therefore feel assured that the facts, attendant on this man's situation, cannot have come to the knowledge of those Judges, who delivered the verdicts sought for at his hands, or they never could have so decreed; and under this persuasion, therefore, we cannot but think that the sentences, which naturally follow conviction, will in these cases be abandoned altogether. The continuation of a persecuting system, like this, would soon arouse the all-corrective voice of the people, and bring such excess of power down to that true and proper level, from which it should never have been permitted to extend.

PARLIAMENT GINGERBREAD—Cut 1st.

BURTHEN—John Gilpin.

JOHN EASTHOPE was a Citizen
Who lived at Tewkesbury,
Where eke, with sleeves and apron,
He weighed butter on the Quay.

JOHN EASTHOPE'S spouse said to her dear,
Him patting on the face,
I'm getting sick of every one
In this here stupid place.

And as we've done so very well,
And got such fair renown,
Suppose we make the most of it,
And start for London town.

He soon replied, "My dearest dear,
"What's your behest I'll do;
"For I admire, of womankind,
"At present, only you!"

So all was sold, except a box,
Sent off to town per boat,
Which held his deary's caps and gowns,
And JOHNNY'S Sunday coat.

They went per coach—his love inside,
And JOHNNY up behind,
For "though on pleasure he was bent,
"He had a frugal mind."

Arrived in town, and settled all,
He turned it in his head,
How best employ his capital,
And to his wife he said:

"I think, dear, as they know us not,
"The money erst we've made,
"We'll not embark in, any more,
"So low a thing as trade!

"A worthy man, I know right well,
"Who, as I chanced to range
"Abroad to-day, has said he'll take
"Me to the Stock Exchange!

"And as they are not over nice,
"Whom people to them bring,
"I really, dearest, think I can
"Not do a better thing!

"No capital you want, or if
"You did, we've got enough,
"And then at making bargains, love,
"You know I'm 'up to snuff.'"

"Not snuff alone, but any thing
"You're up to," then said she;
"And, therefore, JOHN, in all you've said,
"Right truly I agree!"

'Twas done—JOHN took a counting-house,
In time, a partner, too;
And JOHN took to him something else,
Which I shall tell to you.

Says JOHN unto himself, "I'm now
"A man of fair estate;
"And, though I'm rather small myself,
"I move among the Great.

"So, in like mode, as others do,
"From home incog. who dwell;
"Though I've a wife, why should I not
"A mistress have as well?"

His mind was fixed—in business hours,
Few wives do know, I ween,
What passes, now-a-days, their mates
And customers between!

As, for a lady fair, one day,
JOHN bought, or sold some pelf;
Says he, "I'll business do for her—
"And some, too, for myself!

"She hath a sister, whom I've gazed
"Full pleasantly upon;
"Whom I have chanced to hear her call
"MATILDA CHATTERTON!"

The parties met—MATILDA bowed
To JOHNNY'S right good will,
And he, not sinking yet the shop,
In future called her Til.

Of "MALTHUS' Population," JOHN
Had heard the people tell,
So, having got a mistress, why
He got a child as well!

But JOHNNY having some elsewhere,
And fearing more might come,
He left MATILDA CHATTERTON,
Without a house, or home!

"What's next?" said JOHN—"why, let me see,
"As I can sport the 'dubs,'
"As well as any there, I think
"I'll get into the Clubs."

JOHN knew a member, whom he had
Lent certain sundry pounds,
And wisely thought he could not go
On any better grounds!

He was proposed—of his success
JOHN entertained no doubt.
But soon as one bawled in his name,
Another balled it out.

"What's next again?" said JOHN—"they say
"The Parliament will be
"Full soon dissolved, and that, I wis,
"Presents a chance for me."

JOHN got a friend, on Fish-street-hill,
To HEYGATE straight to go,
And buy the votes of all he might
In fair St. Alban's know.

"To make assurance doubly sure,"
He who to JOHN had showed
At BROOKES'S, so much courtesy,
JOHN "touched" for what he owed!

Because this friend now stood the poll
Within a neighbouring town,
And JOHNNY heard his interest
Would clash against his own.

"Through thick and thin" famed JOHNNY, thus,
Did push his ventrous way,
Then posted he straight up to town,
To wait the opening day!

So now let's sing, Long live the King,
And JOHNNY, long live he,
And long as he's in Parliament,
May I be there to see!

MORE GAMBOLS.

We have received the following letter from Mr. WEDDERBURNE WEBSTER, relative to an article in our Paper of Sunday last, and freely give it insertion:—

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE AGE."

Sir,—Having observed a paragraph in THE AGE of last Sunday, in which my name was mentioned relative to a gambling transaction with Mr. O'Neill, &c., I beg to inform you, that it was inserted without either my knowledge or sanction.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

Coventry, Dec. 5, 1826. CHAS. W. WEBSTER.

We do not doubt the truth of any word in the foregoing epistle, but it was quite unnecessary in Mr. WEBSTER to tell us, unless it be for the satisfaction of himself or friends, what we were before perfectly well acquainted with. Many things appear in this paper without the knowledge of the parties to whom they relate, and as to sanction, we seldom trouble ourselves to obtain that, unless in cases wherein we have happened to hold private communication, and confidence has been entertained—then we never think of mentioning either circumstances, or names, without a full authority. It appears, however, from the letter which has been inserted in the daily papers, under Mr. O'NEILL'S signature, that our information was tolerably correct; and it is always to that important subject that we direct our best energies.

With reference both to this subject, and to the more important one at Richmond, we shall be prepared, by Sunday next, to submit the opinions we have formed, from all the mass of information which has come to our knowledge, and which certainly places the matter in a different light to that in which it is now received by the public. The fallacious spirit that is now abroad, by virtue whereof so many thousands of pounds are daily sacrificed in this country, and so many individuals ruined in consequence, requires every castigation that can possibly lead to its being eventually subdued; and although this instance, respecting which such an outcry has been raised, is but a trifling one, compared with the other numberless excesses of a similar nature, though on a much larger scale, with which this metropolis is now infested. In the proportion that we have been instrumental in directing public attention to this isolated instance, so we will hereafter lead it into an examination of the secrets of some of those fashionable sinks, in which property is for ever sunk, as in a shipwreck. But we will revert to this subject again, when opportunity is more fitting, and in the mean time enter forthwith upon the point more immediately in question.

THEATRICALS.

Before we enter upon any other topic, under this head, we take leave to call the reader's attention to a circumstance connected with the late visit of his MAJESTY to Drury Lane Theatre—we allude to the appearance of Mr. LISTON, dressed out in a Court suit, for the purpose of receiving the KING. Upon what principle this piece of tomfoolery was undertaken, we cannot pretend to say; but a more ill-advised, a more indelicate, and a more impudent step, was never before taken by any person, under similar circumstances. Is it to be supposed, for an instant, that because the MONARCH commanded Mr. LISTON'S services, that he expected any thing more of Mr. LISTON than his grimaces in the afterpiece? If such had been the case, he would have been surrounded, in like manner, by every mime who figured in his presence that evening, and the object for which he condescended to visit the theatre, would have become completely frustrated. The only persons who should presume to enter the ROYAL presence, on such occasion, are the established officers of the theatre, in whom it is an indispensable duty; but beyond them, the slightest addition is the grossest infringement of etiquette imaginable. If HIS MAJESTY had commanded, in imitation of his Royal predecessors, a court-fool or jester to be present for the night, then Mr. LISTON might have had some excuse for his intrusion—but as the case now stands, it can only be looked upon, either in the light of ignorance (which the managers ought to have corrected), or in that of a joke—and the KING is the last man in existence against whom such a liberty should be practised. Mr. LISTON has not sincerer admirers of his extraordinary abilities than we are, but it must be in their only proper sphere; and he should learn that, however condescending and affable may be the gracious character of HIS MAJESTY, in even coming to such places at all, the dignity of his illustrious person and presence is not to be subject to any such ill-timed mummery.

We confess that we had considerable curiosity to see YOUNG'S Richard on Monday last, and for that purpose we squeezed into the pit, your only legitimate place for a critic. We have never been more thoroughly disappointed; for, even in the earliest scenes of the play, where it was to be expected that he would give great effect to the wily quality of the character, he infused nothing more than that sarcastic sort of cunning, which pervades, and very properly, his performance of Iago. The monotonous hum, which Mr. YOUNG so constantly allows his voice to adopt, is out of all place in such a decisive part as Richard, and consequently in those impetuous moments, where he so frequently ejaculates, "Come hither, Catesby"—"Ratcliffe"—"Lord Stanley," his tone had more the manner of asking these respective personages to dinner, than issuing an order to them which was to be the forerunner of a monarch's annihilation. The soul of Richard "rides in the whirlwind, and directs the storm;" but Mr. YOUNG was as innocent of all this palpable materiel, as if he had been a novice in his profession. He has nothing to do with this character, and we are sorry to see him play it—he is an eminent performer (though not worth 20*l.* per night!) but we had rather see him in parts which enchain the heart, than those which merely astonish the understanding: These remarks, which we hope will be received as friendly, are due to Mr. YOUNG—they would be lost on a person of inferior capabilities.

Miss STEPHENS returned to her engagement at Drury Lane on Thursday, in good health, and, supported by the unapproachable BRAHAM (our country's musical evergreen) gave due effect to the Siege of Belgrade. Before the opera began, Mr. WALLACK appeared to apprize us, that Miss GRADDON had withdrawn herself from the part of Catherine, and to crave indulgence for Miss A. TREE, who had undertaken it—the secret of which is, we hear, that Mrs. GEESIN had been requested to prepare herself for performing it, but declined so doing; and, consequently, Miss GRADDON could not think of resuming a part which had been once taken from her. There really is no end to the humbug of these mimes. Mrs. GEESIN cannot play "second fiddle" to Miss STEPHENS, nor Miss GRADDON to Mrs. GEESIN!!—while, barring the sweet warbling KITTY, the public cares not a fig if they never heard either of them again. Mr. WALLACK is highly to be extolled for his manly and straight-forward way of telling the public the truth, in which we will support him "tooth and nail." As respects Miss GRADDON, the thing is too contemptible for any feeling but ridicule—of Mrs. GEESIN we expected better; and if she again adopt conduct like this, she will some night hear there are other geese in the theatre besides herself.

The Thespians are "all alive and kicking," in every department, it seems—Messrs. BENNETT and MERCER are about to have a benefit, and Miss HAMMERSLEY about to have—we mean she is enceinte—"lots of KOLLI*flowers*," as Mingle has it—then, BEAZLEY has written the Lottery-ticket for LAPORTE, and Mr. POOLE has a comedy in rehearsal, to show off Madame VESTRIS; while Sir SNUFFLE SHUFFLE, having paid the 10 000*l.* into Court, to become director of the music at Covent Garden, has engaged young RODWELL of the Adelphi to do duty for him, and prevailed on BISHOP to conduct the Oratorios. Subjoined, the reader will find a violent tirade against Miss PATON, with that lady's reply, from which we are disposed to remove all bad feeling, on her part, in the business, altogether. Miss PATON is reported to be a very troublesome lady, on most occasions—most likely it is so; for we hardly know a player, who has attained any popularity, against whom the same charge has not been preferred. If Miss PATON had acted, as the statement implies, we would be the first to hurl round her ears the indignation of the public voice; but her letter distinctly and openly denies that she has, and we really, on the face of things, believe it. Mr. HOWARD PAYNE, who translated the White Lady, for Covent Garden, is reported to be the editor of the periodical in which this charge has been made, and certainly the statement smells very strongly of the lamps—if it be so, we cannot imagine a more impudent thing, than a disappointed Yankee actor, thus handling performers with whom he becomes mixed up, by its admission into the circle of English theatricals. But here are the documents, and the reader had better judge for himself:—

Mention has been made in the daily papers of some very extraordinary conduct of Miss Paton, respecting a character assigned to her in the opera, long announced as forthcoming at Covent Garden, entitled the White Maid. We had been apprized of the circumstance before it was made public, but purposely abstained from naming it, until "convinced, against our will," that the character of Starling, which was almost thought too gross to be real, when recently represented in the acted Green Room, could show itself in the actual Green Room, and what is worse, in the person of a female. In an early number of this work, we had occasion to allude to some perplexing conduct of the same nature, although not injurious to the same extent; and we then requested to be made acquainted with every similar instance in which the spoiled children of popularity trifled with the favour which had raised them from nothingness to the power of doing mischief, and made the expectations of the public, and the interests of managers and authors, the sport of their personal prejudice or puerile caprice. It appears that such an instance is now before the public; and it is with sincere regret that we find it in an highly-gifted individual, whom we have never before had occasion to mention without a praise as hearty and as honest as our present censure.

We have a Covent Garden play-bill before us, bearing date Wednesday, September 27, 1826. That bill announces, that "A new Comic Opera, in three acts, the music composed and compiled by Mr. Horn, and an Opera, in two acts, taken from La Dame Blanche, the music by Boieldieu, have both been in preparation during the summer, and will be produced in succession, as soon after Miss Paton's return to her engagement, as is consistent with the attention they demand."

At the foot of the bill of Friday, Nov. 24, it is announced, "On Saturday, Dec. 2, will be produced the Opera of the White Maid, taken from La Dame Blanche, with Boieldieu's music; the principal characters by Madame Vestris, Mr. Phillips, Mr. G. Penson, Mr. J. Isaacs, Miss Paton, Miss Cawse, Miss Henry, Mrs. Davenport."

From Sept. 27 to Nov. 24, the interval between the dates of the two bills, is within a day or two of two months; and yet this lady, intrusted with a very difficult character of very difficult music, does not discover, until within one week of the time specified for the first representation of the piece, that she cannot perform the principal part in it! After stating some circumstances which occurred while she was making up her resolution, we will advert to effects from which it is quite impossible not to have foreseen.

Not only did Miss Paton appear pleased with the part assigned to her, but the very next day following the distinct announcement for Dec. 2, she saw Mr. Fawcett in his room upon one particular passage, told anecdotes of her early life in Scotland, how she had observed there the very action in question (something about a spinning-wheel), and concluded by declaring in substance, that she felt herself, from that circumstance, to be the only actress in England capable of giving the situation the effect of which it was susceptible. This took place late on Saturday afternoon, the 25th November. The same evening she performed the gentle Clari. During its performance, after an apologetic preface in the Green Room to Mr. Fawcett, professing all sorts of civil things, she told the astonished manager that some substitute must be found for her in the White Maid, as it was a character for which she was in no way qualified; and presently sent her woman to the manager's room, returning the manuscript and the music.

Now, in the first place, as there is no one in the theatre less unknowing of what she is about than Miss Paton, she had no need whatever of all this time to make such a discovery. In the second place, there is no one in the theatre more conscious, that, for difficult music her equal in quickness and science is not to be found there. And, in the third place, she was sure enough that it would be impossible to produce the opera within the time if she withdrew, and could not have been quite sure of the practicability of producing it at all. Under these circumstances, she waits until the last moment, and then declares herself.

On Monday, Nov. 27., an apology was made for the postponement of the White Maid; and on Friday, Dec. 1. it is announced for Saturday, the 9th, with the new name of Miss Goward in place of Miss Paton. We understand Miss Cawse has been removed from the part originally assigned to her, and put in that of Miss Paton, and the original part of Miss Cawse transferred to Miss Goward.

Here, then, are two young ladies, almost novices on the boards, both oblized to appear at a week's notice in characters of great musical difficulty, to humour the caprice of a practised performer, who seems to have been two months waiting to create the embarrassment. Here is a theatre which has raised this same performer to the consequence which enables her to do it injury, exposing the establishment, to which she ought to feel grrateful, to the maimed exhibition of a celebrated musical work, to which it has looked with confidence for fame and profit from long and elaborate arrangements, to produce it in a state of unprecedented completeness. The young lady who has become her sudden substitute, will, of course, appear under most dangerous disadvantages, both for herself and the task with which she is intrusted. But to pursue this branch of the subject, will lead us up into speculations which we trust Miss P. must be too high-minded to deserve. She can have no wish to injure a beginner by comparisons for which there has been no time for her to prepare, even had she the ability. But the theatre, the writer of the piece, and the exertions of the rest of the performers are pretty certain to suffer. Miss Paton has her party both in the audience and the press. The cause she has deserted will, by that party, be pronounced a bad one; and are the many interests involved in such a speculation to be tamely sacrificed to the vagaries of mere vanity? This is the proper light in which to view her conduct, and if her feelings are ruffled at the sternness of the truth, she should remember that mischief is but gently answered, when only visited by advice. And there is one lesson Miss Paton has yet to learn. She should dwell on it in time. She has been but four years known from the million, and is yet not sufficiently mixed up with our theatrical necessities to make it safe for her to exercise the stale trick of favourites who fancy themselves "deared by being lacked" This kind of affectation soon wearies, and actors and actresses, who can so often do without the public, find out too late that the public can do without them. The tenure upon which popularity is held, in any case, is a very frail one, and higher persons than Miss Paton have had terrible falls when thrown off their balance by the giddiness of self-conceit. Whether she be Miss Paton or Lady William Lennox, while she is before the public she is their servant, and to them responsible; and, if she wishes to make herself respected in a coronet, heartlessness towards her equals, before she is allowed to wear one, is by no means the way.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES.

SIR,—In your Paper of this day's date, I perceive a paragraph copied from a weekly paper, in which a very simple occurrence is magnified into an act of heartless conduct on my part (I allude to the mention of my having given up the part of the White Lady.) With regard to the length of time my name appeared in the bills of the day, I do not hold myself answerable, as it was inserted, though unusual in theatres, long before the opera was read or the part sent to me. Anxious to do all in my power to serve the theatre to which I belong, I took the part of the White Maid, and did not discover, till the rehearsal convinced me, of the difficulties of representing melo-dramaic and pantomimic business, and singing a song (totally unconnected with the part) in a tremulous voice, like an old woman. I then certainly did (word for word, as minutely stated in the paragraph in question) represent to Mr. Fawcett my total inability to render the part effective; nor did I imagine my secession from it of great importance to the theatre, as no comment was made upon it, nor any anxiety shown to remove the difficulty of which I complained. I was also aware, that had I taken the part, it must shortly have been given to another, as in a few weeks from the time it was first announced I had permission to fulfil an engagement in Dublin. I now beg to say, that as I am amenable by a fine to the theatre for refusing any part improperly, and as none in this instance has been levied, though in every other respect the greatest restriction has been adopted towards me, I have a right to suppose that the management have drawn the line between incapacity and caprice. I am anxious to do my duty to the public, and have never, during my engagement at Covent Garden Theatre, refused a part, and have (to prevent disappointment in the run of a new piece) played more nights in the week than compelled to do by engagement, and for which extra-performance I received no emolument. But, with every respect to the public (to whom I shall ever feel most grateful), I do not see that the conversations I have with Mr. Fawcett privately on business, and my arrangements with the theatre, should be made the subject of garbled statements to the public. As you have, through the great circulation of your paper, given publicity to the statement of which I complain, I appeal to your usual justice, to give the enclosed explanation.

I have the honour to remain your obedient servant,
304, Regent-street, Dec. 7. MARY-ANN PATON.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

COURT OF KING'S BENCH, MONDAY.

THE KING V. JOHN HUNT.

This was an indictment against the defendant, who is proprietor and publisher of the Examiner Sunday newspaper, for having published in the said newspaper, of the 19th of February last, a false, scandalous, and malicious libel of and concerning Nicholas Charles Bochsa, a Professor in the Royal Academy of Music. The defendant pleaded Not Guilty.

Mr. Scarlett—This was a prosecution against the defendant, Mr. J. Hunt, who was the editor and proprietor of the Examiner Sunday newspaper.

The libel was in these words:—

"ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

"This silly institution, with its cant about morality and religion, seems likely to be brought into general contempt by the discussions now taking place about it. Already the Archbishop of York must feel himself in very awkward company, when transacting business with his worthy friend, Mr. Bochsa, and the Academy Chaplain has no sinecure in protecting the boys and girls from bad precepts and worse examples.

"It has been said very irrevelantly, that 'if there were no Devil, there would be no need of parsons;' and we, therefore suppose it is to find the Chaplain in work that Mr. Bochsa has been introduced somewhat in that character. The Chaplain saveth, 'Keep your hands from picking and stealing, your tongue from lying, and your body in soberness and chastity.' The Devil replieth, with a sneer, 'Do as I do.'

"If the archbishop and his deputy have power to cast out devils, they will serve their academy best by turning out Beelzebub, the prince of the devils.

"But the whole business is truly ridiculous, with poor Velluti to instruct the boys and girls in the Italian mode of making singers—Lord Burghersh to teach them the short road to composition—the parsons to teach them morals—the opera to unteach them again—and, lastly, Beelzebub to show them, by his example, that the patronage of the great has nothing to do with honesty or decency, and that, in fact, character in the musical profession, amounts to nothing. Does not the archbishop shake his wig at this? X."

Henry Watts—I am the Secretary of the Royal Academy of Music, which was established in the year 1822. It is conducted by a Committee of Management. The Archbishop of York is a Director, and was so in February last. Nicholas Charles Bochsa was the principal professor of the harp, and the general superintendant of the practice of the pupils. It is an office of emolument. Mr. Bochsa was to receive remuneration for his services from Christmas last.

The libel having been put in and read,

Mr. Brougham addressed the Jury for the defendant.

The Lord Chief Justice, in summing up, observed, it had been admitted that Mr. Hunt was a man of character and respectability, and that no motive of malice or ill-will had influenced him in publishing this article. That might be the fact, and he (the Lord Chief Justice) did not question it; but, by law, the proprietor and publisher of a newspaper were answerable for all articles which appeared in their newspapers, which were founded in malice, no matter what might be their motives in publishing them; because, by so doing, they lent themselves to the malice. If that were not the law, proprietors of newspapers would have absolute imdemnity for carrying on a system of slander to gratify the malice of a third party. It was said, that this libel was published for the purpose of putting the Directors of the institution upon their guard. If any person really wished to give information to the Directors, respecting a person who was in the Academy, he (the Lord Chief Justice) should have thought, the proper course would be, to make the communication to the Directors themselves; but that was not the course taken.

The Jury, having deliberated a few minutes, found the defendant Guilty.

WILLIS V. DUNCOMBE.

This was an action by the plaintiff, Mr. Isaac Willis, a music-seller in St. James's-street, against the defendant, a publisher in Queen-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields, to recover a compensation in damages for the infringement by the latter of the plaintiff's copyright in the celebrated song called "Cherry Ripe."

Mr. Scarlett (with whom was Mr. Chitty), for the plaintiff, stated the case. The song in question had been introduced into the celebrated comedy of Paul Pry, in which it was sung at the Haymarket Theatre by Madame Vestris. The music of it had been composed by Mr. Horn, the well-known composer and singer, of whom the plaintiff, in the early part of the present year, purchased the copyright. The plaintiff was at a great expense in publishing the song, for which there was subsequently a great demand. It went through a great many editions, and sold at the price of two shillings. The Jury had, perhaps, no idea of the immense value of a popular song like this, so great was the passion for music in this country. Every gentleman who had the good fortune to be acquainted with a lady who could sing, would be sure to ask her to sing "Cherry Ripe." The spurious publication sold by the defendant as the original air, was said to be composed by a Mr. Waring. The price affixed to it was 1s. 6d., but the defendant had sold it for 6d. The very title of it imported a fraud, for it was said to be the song "as sung by Madame Vestris." Certain variations had been made by the defendant, for the express purpose, no doubt, of having a ground that it was not a piracy of the original air. It had, however, been sold by the defendant as the original air, and that was quite sufficient to justify the plaintiff in interposing the arm of the law to protect his legitimate property.

The Chief Justice inquired whether the matter had not better be referred to a gentleman at the bar.

Mr. Scarlett said he had just heard that the action was undefended.

Mr. Charles Edward Horn was then called.—He stated that he was the composer of the music of the original song called "Cherry Ripe," which he had compared with that composed by Mr. Waring. The latter was an imitation of the former, with some variations.

The assignment of the copyright of the original song to the plaintiff, and the publication of the spurious air by the defendant, were then proved.

A young man, a shopman in the employ of the plaintiff, proved that there was a very great demand for the original song, which was sold at 2s. The plaintiff had expended 400*l.* in the publication of it.

The Chief Justice told the Jury that in estimating the amount of damages, they ought to take into consideration the expense the plaintiff had been at in engraving the music, and publishing the original song.

The Jury retired, and after a quarter of an hour's deliberation, returned with a verdict for the plaintiff.—Damages 200*l.*

COURT OF EXCHEQUER, DEC. 6.

THE KING, ON BEHALF OF WM. SMITH, V. BRODIE, LAWSON, CARDEN, AND OTHERS.

This was an action brought by the plaintiff, who, by a fiction of law, was supposed to be a debtor to the King, and therefore was brought in this Court against the defendants, who are the printer, publisher, and part proprietors of the Times newspaper, to recover from them a compensation in damages for two alleged libels, published by them in their Journal of the 10th of February and 3d of March, imputing to the plaintiff atrocious cruelty towards an idiot brother. The defendants pleaded the general issue, Not Guilty, whereupon issue was joined.

Mr. Campbell and Mr. Talfourd appeared for the plaintiffs; Mr. Scarlett and Mr. Platt for the defence.

Mr. Campbell addressed the Jury in the following terms:—If my Learned Friend who opened this case had thought fit to read to you the libels, you would have found them the most atrocious that ever were published by one man against another; they impute such conduct to the plaintiff, that, if he were guilty of it, he ought to be expelled from society, for he would be the disgrace of our common nature. But, gentlemen, I have the satisfaction of knowing that the libel is altogether false, and that the defendants come here only to ask for mitigation of damages. Mr. Smith, whom I represent, is a most respectable farmer in Staffordshire; his character has sustained an injury in this metropolis, and here he seeks redress. He is the son of Mr. Isaac Smith, who had a numerous family, and among these, it pleased Providence that one should be an idiot; this is George, who, from his birth, was deaf and dumb, and never acquired any of those faculties that distinguish man; he was likewise subject to fits, which, long before his father's death, had reduced him to the greatest imbecility. About seventeen years ago, his father had removed to a place called Mucklestone Wood; at that time it was with the greatest difficulty that he could be removed from one place to another; his father, as is usual in such unfortunate cases, was pre-eminently attached to him; he did every thing he could to alleviate the sufferings of his son, who had lost the power of being moved, except by persons who carried him. About three years after his father removed to Mucklestone Wood, the father was taken ill, and at that time he requested that his son might never be sent to a lunatic asylum, but that he might be kept at home. The dying wish of the father was religiously attended to; he was fed from the table of the family; and every thing was selected, before they took their meal, which was most likely to please him; and his sister, whose name is introduced in this libel, watched him by day, and watched him by night, and did every thing in her power to make him comfortable. It happened on the 25th of January of the present year, that, some secret communication having been made to Mr. Eld, by some secret enemy of the family, stating that George Smith had been ill-used—a communication made not by any servant, or by any person connected with the family—that gentleman, with Mr. Broughton, went and asked admittance to the house; at the very time of their visit, the brother and sister, who were at home, were employed in washing him; and, as soon as Miss Smith was in a state to receive strangers, she came and saw the magistrates, who thought that, instead of remaining with his family, he should be removed to the Lunatic Asylum. The Magistrates are, I believe, extremely sorry for what they decided on, and for having interfered. This having happened on the 25th of January, there appeared, on the 10th of Feb. following, the article which I will now read.

Here the libel was read.

Mr. Scarlett addressed the Jury for the defendant, though he should admit that his Learned Friend, Mr. Campbell, was as competent as any other in the profession to manage this case, yet he looked on his elaborate statement and evidence taken together to be like the fable of the Mountain and the Mouse, much ado about nothing. From his Learned Friend's statement he expected that a dozen witnesses at least should be examined to prove the facts therein mentioned; but to his great surprise, he brought only a single witness, who proved nothing. His Learned Friend had stated that the publication complained of contained a picture so extravagant as outraged probability, and that if represented in the form of a melo-drame on the stage, it abounded with such absurdity, that it would be classed among the same species as the "Fairy Tales." Yet, notwithstanding its inconsistency with probability, notwithstanding that it was of such a character, that no person could believe it, his Learned Friend had stated, that his client's character had been ruined by it; but with respect to the real merits of the case, he admitted, with his Learned Friend, that when a publication was likely to excite prejudice, or to inflame the passions, the particular details of a case ought not to be published in a paper which circulated in the neighbourhood, from which the Jury was to be taken to try a cause relating to the subject of that publication; but he would not go so far as to say that Editors of Newspapers should refrain from all remarks on subjects, however atrocious, that were likely to come before a Jury. If his Learned Friend's doctrine were true, an Editor of a Newspaper would be liable to be indicted by any thief or robber in the Old Bailey for noticing his committal, if his trial were to take place at any time after such notice. It would be very dangerous to lay it down as a rule that the Press should refain from "ex-parte" statements in all cases, though he (Mr. Scarlett) would admit, that in several cases such statements would prove injurious. He (Mr. Scarlett) could not subscribe to the doctrine laid down by his Learned Friend, that, by law, a person might indict another for a libel on a man that was dead. As long as he (Mr. S.) breathed, he would oppose such a doctrine. If any man were to quote a paragraph out of Hume's History of England, reflecting on the character of any of the ancestors of the Jury, according to the principles laid down by his Learned Friend, the man quoting such a paragraph, would be liable to be indicted by any of the posterity of such ancestors as a libeller; the doctrine was too absurd to be entertained for one moment.

The Chief Baron, in charging the Jury, observed, there could be no doubt the publication in question were libels, and libels of a most atrocious description, calculated to injure the reputation of the plaintiff, for which The Times, though highly respectable Journal, must be answerable. This, however, was only the opinion of the Learned Judge, because the Jury were not only to decide upon the question of damages, but on the question of libel also.

The Jury retired at one o'clock.

The Jury having been called into Court at five o'clock, by order of the Judge. His Lordship asked if they were likely to agree as to their verdict. The Foreman said that they had already agreed as to their verdict, but not as to the amount of damages; ten of the Jurymen were for giving only one farthing damages, and two of them for giving 10l.

Mr. Platt, as Counsel for the defendants, consented to divide the 10l., and to relieve the Court and Jury from further inconvenience by letting a verdict go for the plaintiff for 5l. After some hesitation, the plaintiff's solicitor consented, and a verdict was returned accordingly.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS, Dec. 5.

THE MORNING CHRONICLE.—STOCKLEY V. CLEMENT.

This was an action of libel against the proprietor of the Morning Chronicle newspaper, by the plaintiff, who was described to have been a coal merchant. The alleged libel had been inserted in the Morning Chronicle in the form of an advertisement, addressed to Jew brokers and others, and contained a caution against receiving a bill of exchange drawn by the plaintiff, and accepted by the Dowager Lady Page Turner, for 6000l. with interest, payable at six months, stating that the signature of Lady P. Turner to such bill had been forged, or that, if the hand-writing was genuine, the bill had been obtained by fraud.

It appeared that the plaintiff had been a tenant of Lady P. Turner, who was stated to be 80 years of age, and that he had obtained the bill in question from her as an accommodation bill. On the circumstances being made known to Mr. Binns, the agent of Lady P. Turner, that gentleman drew up the advertisement, and caused it to be inserted in the Morning Chronicle.

Mr. Sergeant Vaughan, in addressing the Jury for the defendant, observed, that the editor of a newspaper had no very easy task to perform. It was very important that the public should be furnished with information on all topics that concerned them, and juries should be very careful to inquire, when cases like the present came before them, whether the motive of the journalist was fair and honest. If they found it was, then they ought to lean to the side of the journalist, and protect him against such attacks as the present. The Learned Sergeant commented very strongly, and at great length, on the circumstances of this case, and submitted, that there was no evidence to warrant the Jury in inferring malice on the part of the defendant, which alone would justify them in finding their verdict for the plaintiff.

The Lord Chief Justice, in charging the Jury, said, that this was a very important case, and required their best attention. An action for libel or slander was founded in malice; and if no circumstances are laid before the Jury, from whence they can infer malice, the action is not maintainable. The question in this case for the consideration of the Jury was, whether, under all the circumstances, malice could be inferred; or, rather, whether the circumstances, as they had been given in evidence, did not repel the inference of malice on the part of the defendant. The Learned Judge said, he thought the agent of the Dowager Lady P. Turner, on finding that the bill in question had been improperly obtained by the plaintiff, had taken the best course to caution the public against receiving the bill. A public newspaper was the best medium for cautioning the public against being imposed on by a transaction like the present; and, if the party inserting such caution in the paper does it bona fide, and not with a view to injure any person, that it is an honest publication, and cannot be made the subject of an action. The question, therefore, for the Jury to determine, was, whether or not the advertisement was sent into the world maliciously, with a view to injure the character of the plaintiff, or honestly and bona fide for the purpose of protecting the public from fraud and imposition? If the Jury saw enough of fraud in the transaction in question to justify the party in inserting the advertisement, then he (the Lord Chief Justice) had no hesitation in saying that it was no libel.

The Jury turned round, and in less than a minute pronounced their verdict for the defendant.

ASSIZE INTELLIGENCE.

WINTER HOME CIRCUIT.—Hertford, Dec. 7.

The Winter Gaol Delivery commenced here on Wednesday, before the Hon. Mr. Justice Bayley and the Hon. Mr. Justice Gaselee. The calendar is unusually heavy for this county, there being nearly 50 prisoners for trial.

(Before Mr. Justice Gaselee.)

MALICIOUSLY SHOOTING.

James Field was indicted under Lord Ellenborough's Act, for maliciously shooting at and wounding Charlotte, his wife, with a loaded pistol, at King's Walden, on the 13th of May, with intent to murder her.

Mr. Jessopp conducted the prosecution, and Mr. Dowling and Mr. Ryland the defence.

It appeared in evidence that the prisoner, who is a shoe-maker by trade, had married the prosecutrix (who was his second wife), about two years since. They had lived unhappily together, having frequently quarrelled repeatedly. In April last he had been committed to the House of Correction, in consequence of having beaten her severely. On the morning of the 13th of May, he purchased a brace of pistols at Luton, in Bedfordshire, and, at his request the shopkeeper loaded them with bullets, he finding the powder; he was also furnished with several other bullets. In the evening of the same day he went to King's Walden, where his wife was then residing with her mother. Seeing his wife in the garden, he spoke to her in kind terms, and inquired after her health. She answered him in the same manner. He then presented a pistol at her head, and fired. The ball entered at the nose, and came out at one corner of the mouth. He then ran into a neighbouring wood. Two men, who witnessed the transaction, shortly afterwards pursued him. On coming up, he presented two pistols, and swore he would blow the brains out of the first man who laid hands upon him. They, however, pursued him about a mile, when he voluntarily surrendered, and gave up the pistols, both of which were loaded. In his waistcoat pocket several bullets were found. It was sworn by one witness, that, about three months before this transaction, he swore he would be the death of his wife. The prisoner had been committed for trial at last assizes, but the wife having recovered from her wounds then, the trial was postponed until these assizes. She now attended and gave evidence, but did not appear to be materially hurt.

The prisoner said nothing in his defence.

Several witnesses were called on his behalf, for the purpose of proving that he was of unsound mind. They swore that he was a person of weak intellect, and of a harmless disposition.

The Learned Judge summed up the case, and the Jury found the prisoner Guilty.

Sentence of death was pronounced, and the Learned Judge told the prisoner that he must prepare to undergo the last extremity of the law.

OLD BAILEY.

OLD COURT.

The sessions commenced on Thursday. The calendar, considering the short period that has elapsed since the termination of the last sessions, is heavy, being about three hundred, among whom are—four for murder, one for rape, two for cutting and maiming, two for manslaughter, and 175 for larcenies. The other offenders are principally for burglaries and highway robberies.

At ten o'clock Mr. Baron Hullock and Mr. Justice Littledale, the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor, the Recorder, and several Aldermen, took their seats on the bench.

Royal Keates and Wm. Keates, two brothers, were found guilty of stealing seven sheep, the property of William Welch and John Lamb, on the 22d of November last, but recommended to mercy. Their defence was, that they had found them on the public road.

NEW COURT.

SINGULAR CHARGE OF FELONY.

James Francis Abbott was indicted for stealing part of a carding, twisting, and spinning machine, of the value of 14l. one smith's bellows, and other articles.

The prosecutor, James Mowbray Warren, as he had no counsel to conduct the prosecution, then stated, that he was a carver and anatomical instrument maker, and resided in Augustus-street, Regent's-park. His workshop was in China-mews, Tottenham-court-road. The Magistrate at Bow-street dismissed his complaint, and he afterwards preferred a bill before the Grand Jury without the intervention of a Magistrate. On the 22d of July he was sent for to his workshop, and informed that the prisoner was there. He knew the prisoner before; he carried on business as a broker. Witness found the articles mentioned in the indictment placed in a cart in the front of his house. He demanded by what authority those goods were taken, having distrained four days previous for more than the amount of the debt due. The distress was put in for rent, at the suit of the executors of Mr. W. Gaskell, his landlord. They distrained for one quarter's rent more than was due. Believed the prisoner was employed by the executors, but he would not show his authority. Had not offered to pay the money. The goods had been sold, and the proceeds applied to the payment of the claim. The goods were taken away openly in his presence. There was no attempt at concealment. He bought in part of the goods himself.

Cross-examined by Mr. C. Phillips—Prisoner sent to him before he put in the distress, stating that he would allow him time to pay it before he proceeded to sale. When he applied to the Judges upon the subject they told him there was no pretence for charging the prisoner with the felony.

Mr. Sergeant Arabin here stopped the case, and directed the Jury to acquit the prisoner, which they instantly did.

The Court stated that the prisoner left the bar without the slightest imputation upon his character.

The prosecutor applied for his expenses, which the Court instantly refused.

BIGAMY.

William Reed was indicted for marrying Catherine Hair, his former wife being then living.

Mr. Charles Phillips stated the case for the prosecution. The prisoner was a police officer, in which station he conducted himself with the greatest propriety. He had married a second wife at a time when he was living with his first.

He then called John Hair, who stated that his daughter, Catherine Hair, was married to the prisoner. He had searched the register of St. James's Church, Westminster, and also that of St. Martin's-in-the-Fields. Prisoner married his daughter on the 30th October last.

The registers were put in and read: the first was that of the prisoner's marriage to Mary Hitchcock, on the 7th December, 1818, and the other of his marriage to Catherine Hair, on the 30th October, 1826.

Mr. Hair's examination resumed—When witness consented to prisoner's marriage with his daughter, he represented himself as a single man. He paid his addresses to her for two years altogether, and the last three months he visited at his house.

Cross-examined by Mr. Law.—Had heard a report previously that he was already married. Did not make any inquiry upon the subject. Thought there was no foundation for the report. It was great neglect on his part not to make inquiry respecting it.

This closed the case for the prosecution.

The prisoner declined saying any thing in his defence, and his Counsel declined calling any witnesses.

The Common Sergeant, in summing up, said that he himself could say the prisoner's general character was respectable, and he sincerely regretted to see him placed in such a situation. His good character, however, could not save him from the consequences of the present charge.

Verdict, Guilty.

RAPE ON A CHILD.

James Wingfield was indicted for committing a rape upon the person of Sarah Weatherley, a little girl only twelve years of age.

The prosecutrix stated, that on the 18th of October, she was at work in a field near Harrow; the prisoner was at work in the same field. He came up to her, and addressed her in language which she did not understand. He afterwards repeated the expression, but witness did not take any notice of him—this was in the morning. In the afternoon he came up to her again, and, seizing her by the arm, forced her alongside a hedge, where he threw her down; she cried out for assistance, and prisoner said, "Hold your tongue, you b—h." He covered her mouth with his hand, and, in spite of her resistance, effected his purpose. He then got up, but afterwards threw her down again, and repeated the offence. She told him she would tell her mother, when prisoner said he would give her something if she did not. The prisoner then left her, and went to his work. Witness went home in a very weak state, and afterwards told her mother what had happened. She did not consent to the prisoner's conduct towards her.

Mr. Baron Hullock then examined the prosecutrix very minutely, as to those legal proofs necessary to establish the capital part of the charge, and her replies tended to prove it completely.

Mr. Rotch cross-examined the prosecutrix at considerable length, in order to shew that the act was committed with her own consent, but she persisted in her former statement.

Esther Weatherly, the child's mother, described the distressed state she was in when she returned home.

Mr. Bower, a surgeon, stated, that he was called in to attend her on the following day. He examined her person, and the result satisfied him that she had been violated. She was very weak and ill for several days afterwards.

William Lipscombe, an officer, proved the apprehension of the prisoner, who, being taken, said, "I know I shall be hanged for it—kill me now."

This closed the case for the prosecution.

The prisoner, in defence, said, he went towards the hedge, and the prosecutrix followed him.

Mr. Baron Hullock then summed up the evidence.

The Jury retired for about three quarters of an hour, and, on their return into Court, gave a verdict of Guilty—Death.

John Ambrose, aged sixty-four, stood indicted for the wilful murder of Mary Ann Perry, on the 9th day of September last

Wm. Robinson—Lived on the first floor of the same house. On Sunday morning Ambrose came down to his room and brought a flat iron that he had sent for. He asked where his wife was; the prisoner replied, "she has been out all night; she is gone to her brother." He went up stairs and brought down some French beans, and asked him to accept of them; he did so. The prisoner went out and remained out all day. Between six and seven o'clock he saw him go up stairs; he heard no more of him until the Monday morning, when he heard him moving about the room. He (witness) went out to work. In consequence of something he heard, he went into the room, he put his head into the room; he was rather in fear; he called Thomas; he put his elbow against Ambrose's door, and it opened; he saw a bonnet and shawl on the table; he then went down, and said to Mr. Jay, his landlord, that he thought all was not right. Jay and witness then went up, and saw the body of deceased, and a sack, lying across two chairs; he made no particular remark respecting the body, he did not stay long enough; he went down, and sent for Barnsley, the beadle of the parish.

Mr. John Shepherd, surgeon, described the state of the body. Some of the bruises appeared recent, others not; he could not say whether they were occasioned by falls or blows, they might be from falls.

Mr. Justice Burrough—Suppose one violent blow had been given, so as to knock the person down, and sensation enough left to struggle, would that have produced the marks that you have described?

Witness—It certainly would; there was no wound from whence blood had flowed, the blood had flowed from the nose and mouth, and might have been caused by a violent blow on the mouth. On opening the head there was a considerable extravasation of blood on the brain, between the dura mater and pia mater; that was sufficient, in his judgment, to cause death.

Cross-examined—The liquid seen on the floor might have flowed from the nose and mouth after death. The appearances of the body might have been the same in some cases of apoplexy. Persons accustomed to take much strong liquors were certainly subject to apoplexy.

Hannah Mayes saw the body of the deceased; there was a piece out of her left arm; it appeared as if it had been bitten out; there was the same appearance on one of her thighs; it might have been done by rats.

Mr. Shepherd re-called—There were such marks; they appeared to have been bruises, and gnawed by mice or rats; it was not an uncommon case.

The officer who took the prisoner was also examined. When he took him at Portman-green he said it was an accident; that he had been to receive some money in Leather-lane; that he bought some pork and French beans, which he took home for Ann's supper and his own. When he went home she began to abuse him, and call him foul names; he struck her, when her head came in contact with the door; he removed her from thence, and put her in the corner, where he used to put her when she got tipsy. When he waked, in the morning, he found she was dead. He said he stopped in the room from Saturday night until Monday night. He also said that he had tried several times to make away with himself, but he could not. He said he thought that he should be hanged.

This was the case for the prosecution.

The prisoner put in a written statement. The deceased, it stated, was in the habit of getting drunk, when she was very abusive. He had lived with her about eight years. It then went on to state the particulars of the quarrel, which were, in substance, what he had stated to the officer who took him into custody. In conclusion, he declared solemnly before his God, that he was innocent, and that his statement was true.

Mr. Walker, for whom the prisoner worked as a shoemaker, believed him to be a very sober, quiet man; he had known him about 11 months.

Mr. Justice Burrough expounded the law relative to murder, to the Jury; they must be satisfied there was malice aforethought; in his opinion, there was not a sufficient evidence to substantiate the charge of murder, and the question was, whether there was evidence sufficient to find him guilty of the lesser offence. His Lordship was then about to read the evidence, when the Jury intimated that they would save him the trouble. They accordingly retired, and after being absent a quarter of an hour, returned a verdict of Guilty of Manslaughter.

The Author of "Tales of a Voyager," who is without doubt a person of considerable literary celebrity, states, in his introduction to his present work the following reason for endeavouring to remain incognito:—"Should I be tempted," says he, "to give sufficient information to enable others to identify me, the discovery would lead to the recognition of those who were my companions during my voyage; and, as I am not certain that it would be agreeable to some of them to be brought before the public, I consider myself bound in honour to take precautions for concealment."

The Memoirs of Mrs. Siddons will appear on Thursday next. The publication has been delayed on account of the portrait, which is from a picture by Sir Thomas Lawrence. The engraving is by Turner, in mezzotinto, executed under the personal inspection of Sir Thomas. It is said to be one of the finest specimens extant of that class of art.

Mr. John Carne, of Queen's College, Cambridge, has lately made a visit to Switzerland, some account of which, in a series of letters, will be published, we understand, in the forthcoming numbers of the New Monthly Magazine. A new edition is also preparing of his Letters from the East, a volume remarkable peculiarly valuable by its graphic descriptions, written on the spot, of the present actual state of the places which have been the theatres of the great events recorded in the Bible.

The case of Mr. Sedgwick (says The Post) we understand, has at length been determined. Under all the circumstances, it has been decided that he is entitled to no pension. The house heretofore occupied by the Chairman is to be converted into offices. A reduction of about 40 subordinates is to take place, and the plan of establishing an open stamp warehouse, possessing all the facilities of a common law stationer's shop, is to be carried into execution.

TO MR. ROWLAND, 20, HATTON GARDEN.

Rowland, thy fame hath reached the lofty skies,
The Gods behold thee with admiring eyes;
All wonder at thy skill and magic art,
And wish to (but they cannot) take a part.

O Rowland! sole proprietor of oil,
That can enrich a dry and barren soil!
Thou right hand man of Ladies, Men, and all,
Of Kings, and Princes, high, low, great and small!
To thee an humble bard inspires his lays,
To sing thy much deserved and dear bought praise.

Let others boast inventions of their own,
Thou keep to thine, and boast of that alone;
That man who hath the power of pleasing Kings,
As Pindar says, "performeth wond'rous things;"
That power, O artist, doth to thee belong,
For thou, besides a criticising throng,
Hath pleased e'en Princes of this noble race,
By thine enliv'ner of the human face.

PRICE OF STOCKS UP TO FOUR O'CLOCK YESTERDAY.

BRITISH.

Bank Stock, 203	Long Anns.
Red. 3 per Cent. 83¼ 3⅜ 3	India Stock,
3 per Cent. Cons.	India Bonds, 40 42 prem.
3½ per Cent. Cons.	Exch. Bills, 1000, 19 20 21 pm.
3½ per Cent. Red. 89⅞ ½	Do. 500, 19 20 21 pm.
New 4 per Cent.	Do. Small, 20 23 pm.
4 per Cent. 1826, 97¾ 8 7¾	Cons. for Acc. 84½ 4 ⅛ ¼

Parliament will, probably, adjourn on Tuesday next over the holidays. No business stands in the Order-book of the House of Commons for any day beyond Monday, except the notice given on Friday night by Sir R. Wilson, upon the subject of "Transactions in Portugal and the Peninsula, in prejudice of existing British treaties." This was fixed for Tuesday; but we shall not be surprised to find, either that the House adjourns without entering upon the consideration of such a subject, or that Sir R. will see the propriety of withdrawing his notice. It is certain, that any explanations with respect to the proceedings of the Spanish Government, or of the course pursued by our own, would be withheld, from reasons obviously founded upon the most judicious motives.

We are desired by Lady Gresley to state that she declines entering into any discussion of recent occurrences in the public prints. She feels she stands too high in the estimation of her real friends to be affected by any such discussions. A report has prevailed that Lady Gresley paid a sum of money to Sir Roger as an inducement to abandon the proceedings against her. Such report is false and unfounded, and Lady Gresley is about to commence proceedings against the authors and circulators of so foul a calumny.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer, we regret to say, was so seriously indisposed, at his seat in Lincolnshire, on Thursday last, that an express was sent to London for Dr. Warren. We are, however, happy to add, that he became so much better towards the evening, that the attendance of the physician was countermanded.

A shocking affair happened last Monday evening at Startston, near Harleston, Norfolk. Four gentlemen, one of whom was the clergyman of the parish, suspecting that a preserve, near by, would be visited by some poachers that evening, agreed to go out armed in pursuit of them. Three went together, and one by himself. It appears that they agreed to meet at a certain place. The single gentleman, who is quite a youth, meeting the other three unexpectedly, within about ten or twelve yards, and conceiving them to be poachers, was so much terrified that he immediately fired and wounded the clergyman in the side, who instantly fell; and his two companions having no hesitation that the person who had fired was a poacher, fired in return, and so much shattered one of his hands, that it is feared it must undergo amputation. The youth ran home, and said he had shot a poacher. Surgeons were immediately sent by both parties, and the mistake was not discovered till next morning. The reverend gentleman lies in a dangerous state.—Suffolk Chronicle.

At the public office, Birmingham, on Thursday, a woman named Matilda Ross was committed to the Quarter Sessions, charged with having on her person 1134 counterfeit shillings, with intent to utter the same. The base coin was found concealed in a number of pockets in a kind of belt, which was wrapped round her body under her stays, and supported by bands across her shoulders. It is supposed she was going to Ireland for the purpose of passing the counterfeits. She came from that country on Saturday, no doubt to lay in stock at the Birmingham market. There are several other persons in custody at Birmingham, charged with disposing of forged bank-notes, counterfeit sovereigns, and other base coin.—Derby Mercury.

The state of fever in this city, which has already been communicated, through the medium of the Constitution, as well as of that of our contemporaries, appears to have made a most serious impression upon the minds of the inhabitants in general. Such a mass of human wretchedness, indigence, disease, and contagion, all uniting their dismal influence, give a peculiar depth to the shade of misery which overhangs at this moment the city of Cork.—Cork Constitution.

An inquisition was taken on Tuesday at Bromley, Middlesex, on the remains of Harriet Stokes.—Mr. John Wallace, a Surgeon, residing in Bow: I cannot tell when I was first called on to attend the deceased. I think it may have been a fortnight since. I found her violently sick, with a great pain in her bowels and stomach. She admitted to me that she had taken poison, and that it was corrosive sublimate. I did not continue to attend her till her death. I visited her for eight or ten days. She died on Saturday evening, and, as I am convinced, from the effect of the corrosive sublimate.—Juror: Has she had medical aid since you attended her?—Witness: Her husband is himself a medical man.—Juror: Have you opened the body as desired by the Coroner?—Witness: I have not. The reason of my not doing so was, that the appearance of the face, and the falling off of the hair, were sufficiently indicative of the cause of death; besides, I thought the task unpleasant, 14 days having elapsed since she took the poison, and I have before suffered in my health from similar operations.—Juror: What may have been the cause of your discontinuing your visits?—Witness: Because her husband was with her.—Juror: You have said she admitted that she took the poison; did she mention its name?—Witness: Yes, she told me it was corrosive sublimate.—Mrs. Sarah M'Donnell examined: I am landlady of the house; the deceased lodged with me for a week before she took the poison. She came on a Wednesday, and it took place on the Thursday week following. On that night she came to my room twice, and said she was very unwell. I pressed her to go up stairs; her husband also came down. After she took the poison, Mr. Wallace attended her. Mr. Stokes, her husband, went for him; I cannot tell the cause of her taking it.—Juror: What reason did she give for coming to your house?—Witness: She said that her father had turned her out, and that her husband could not give her a home.—Juror: Was it would not, or could not?—Witness: I cannot say?—Examination resumed: It was about half an hour after she came to our room, that Mr. Stokes followed; he always conducted himself well towards her; he was never away from her but one night; she had been in a desponding way.—To questions from the Jury, this witness replied, that she was married on the 1st of Sept. at Bromley Church, and she was in the 18th year of her age.—Mr. John Huggans, the father of the deceased, lives at No. 18, Norfolk-street, Strand: I saw her for the last time about three weeks since; I came to see her at this house, but was not allowed; in a few days after she had taken the poison I heard of it. [The witness here went into a long account of the connection between Mr. Stokes and his daughter, and was proceeding, when the Coroner interrupted him.

Coroner: Can you, Sir, say that your son-in-law has been at all accessary to this calamity:—Witness. He was by his ill treatment, and he brought a parcel of medicines into the house, and described the poisonous nature of some of them to my daughter.—Juror: Had you at any time, from the violence of your son-in-law, occasion to go to a police-office?—Witness: I did not go there, but whether I had reason or not, you can judge from those letters. I have now, in this room, the protection of a police-officer.—Coroner: Did you, or did you not, turn your daughter out of doors, as stated by the landlady?—Witness: I did, so far as telling her I wished she would leave the house. I have been robbed by her, and the property has been found in her trunk.—Mr. M'Donnell, the landlord, stated, that the deceased told him, she had been ill-treated by her husband and father, and was determined to make away with herself.—The Jury, after a short consultation, returned a verdict of "Suicide, committed while labouring under insanity."

FRIDAY'S GAZETTE.

INSOLVENTS.

R. COLLINS, Chew-Magna, Somerset, surgeon.
E. A. SPILSBURY, Walsall, Staffordshire, apothecary.

BANKRUPTCY SUPERSEDED.

D. DE PASS, King's Lynn, Norfolk, draper.

BANKRUPTS.

J. TENNANT, Malmsbury, Wilts, grocer—G. H. BEAUMONT, Commercial-place, City-road, corn-dealer—A. THOMSON, New-grove, Mile End-road, nurseryman—W. LOCK, Edward-street, Dorset-square, builder—L. THOMPSON, Great St. Helen's, printer—R. BADNALL, jun. Ashenhurst Hall, Staffordshire, dealer—R. W. ELLISTON, Theatre Royal, Drury-lane, and Leamington, bookseller—H. W., J. W., and M. W. WOOD, Wakefield, woolstaplers—R. DALLY, Bongor, Sussex, ironmonger and money-scrivener—W. BLAKE and J. RUTHERFORD, Shewingsheels, Northumberland, sheep-salesmen—J. BOOTH, Plymouth Grove, Lancashire, cotton-spinner—J. REED, Bristol, tiler, plasterer, and painter—S. SHELLEY, Oulton, Stone, Staffordshire, flint-grinder—E. ATSBURY, Stone, Staffordshire, scrivener and brewer—C. BAKER, St. John's-street, Clerkenwell, distiller—W. H. WALLIS, Carlisle-street, Soho, perfumer—J. TATE, Manchester, grocer—J. RADCLIFFE, Burnley, Lancashire, painter and paper-hanger—G. PARKES, Dudley, Worcestershire, nail-ironmonger—C. and J. OSBORNE, St. James's-street, tailors—G. CLISBY, Crown-court, Pall-mall, perfumer—D. BOULTER, Reading, Berks, draper—J. JAMES, Adam's-place, Southwark, and Vauxhall, tailor—M. WILLIAMS, Tring, Hertfordshire, builder—W. HILLYARD and J. MORGAN, Bristol, booksellers—R. HORN, Oxford, baker—G. POTTER, Fenchurch-street, wine-merchant—J. WRIGHT, Peckham-Rye, Surrey, brickmaker—J. Y. OLIVER, Cambridge, jeweller—W. BEAL, Thrapston, Northamptonshire, linen-draper—M. PARK, Old Trinity House, Water-lane, merchant—J. BECKLEY, Old Fish-street, wine-merchant—G. HYDE, Chapel-street, Tottenham-court-road, chemist.

TUESDAY'S GAZETTE.

INSOLVENTS.

C. INCE, Craven-street, Strand, wine and spirit merchant.
M. WASBROUGH, Brydges-street, Covent Garden, and Grove-place, Brixton, stationer.

BANKRUPTCIES SUPERSEDED.

A. WATSON, Blackburn, Lancashire, draper.
J. LAY, Cheltenham-place, Lambeth, stationer.
E. HANKINS, Hereford, dealer.

BANKRUPTS.

J. CAYZER, John-street, Oxford-street, tailor.——N. TURNER, Allhallows-lane, fish-dealer——R. FINCH, Egham, Surrey, grocer.——L. BARNES, Heywood, Lancashire, cotton-spinner.——A. RICHARDSON, Manchester, victualler——G. WHICHER, Petworth, Sussex, apothecary.——J. WEBB, Nailsworth, Horseley, Gloucestershire, grocer.——J. SALTER, Lyncombe and Widcombe, Somersetshire, florist and gardener.——M. and R. HOLT, Hulme, Manchester, dyers.——T. JONES, Ynysmarchog, Llywel, Brecon, cattle-dealer.——T. GRIFFITHS, Abergele, Denbighshire, corn-factor.——C. LANE, Oxford, builder.——J. GRANT, Barnsley, Yorkshire, grocer.——E. TAYLOR, Dodworth, Yorkshire, linen-manufacturer.——J. STRONG and I. DODDS, Durham, engine-builders.——P. SMITH, Liverpool, hatter.——J. LEVETT, Rowley Regis, Staffordshire, farmer and nail-ironmonger.——E. MOON, Worthing, Sussex, grocer.——G. HUDSON, New Malton, Yorkshire, ironmonger.——J. DUNCAN, and W. CLEGG, and T. HOLLINS, Manchester, merchants.——M. NELSON, Preston, Lancashire, innkeeper.——J. BANNISTER, Merthyr-Tydvil, Glamorganshire, currier.——S. MULCOCK, Farringdon, Berkshire, draper.——J. W. TAYLOR, Exchange-buildings, London, merchant.——J. HULME, Museum-street, Bloomsbury, pawnbroker.——G. WILKINSON, S. BATESON, and J. MEGGS, King's-Arms-yard, merchants.——R. C. REYNARD, New Bond-street, tailor.——H. WALKER, Preston, Lancashire, corn-merchant.——C. and J. OSBORNE, Pall-Mall, tailors.

GENUINE EAU DE COLOGNE.—Just received direct from Messrs. R. E. and M. Farina, of Cologne, a fresh supply of this celebrated article, of the finest quality, and to be had of J. C. Huse, late Kinnard, 309, High Holborn, two doors from Chancery-lane.

THE PATENT INVISIBLE UNDER GARMENT composed of real Spanish Lambs' Wool, without the mixture of Cotton' are to be had exclusively at the Patentee's, Mrs. ROBERTSHAW's, 99 and 100, Oxford-street. Likewise an article mixed with cotton, commonly called Merino, in Petticoats under Opera Dresses, Drawers, Waistcoats, &c.—Children's of every size. Gentlemen's Under-waistcoats, Drawers, Stockings, &c. Ladies' wash-leather Drawers and Waistcoats. Nos. 99 and 100, Oxford-street.—Mrs. Robertshaw personally attends at the Warehouse on Ladies.

BRADBERRY's PATENT SPECTACLES, upon unerring principles, to preserve the sight to extreme old age. It is necessary to caution the public against the use of improper Spectacles, as their effects prove injurious, instead of beneficial to the eye. The unremitted and anxious study Mr. Bradberry has paid to his glasses for upwards of 30 years, has called forth the most distinguished approbation of their merit from the medical profession, and from many thousands of persons of the highest rank and respectability.—To be had only at 28, Holles-street, the first door out of Oxford-street, next to the large Fruiterer's at the corner, facing Hanover-square, and at no other place in the United Kingdom.—Orders from the country immediately attended to. Removed from 332, Oxford-street.

HORSES.—WORM and CONDITION BALLS. They will effectually destroy every species of Worm to which Horses are subject, without requiring any alteration in Food or cessation from Labour. If these Balls be given two or three times a year, they supersede the use of other Medicines, as they not only improve the health and vigour of the Animal, but also purify the blood and materially add to the glossy appearance of the coat. The Proprietor, who is known as having himself kept a numerous Stud, has used them for Thirty Years with the most satisfactory results. They only require a trial to prove their efficacy. References can be given—Sold in Packets at 9s. containing Nine Balls, with Directions for Use, by Courtney, Regent Circus, Oxford-street; Sanger, 150, Oxford-street; Smith, 29, Haymarket; Prout, 226, Strand; Butler, corner of St. Paul's Church-yard; and Wilmott, 83, St. Margaret's Hill, Borough.

AT SIMPSON'S MEDICINE WAREHOUSE No. 28, Henrietta-street, Covent-Garden, London, are sold

The ARABIAN VEGETABLE PILLS, 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. per Box, free from mercury or antimony, inestimable as a Family Medicine for the removal of Indigestion, Bilious and Nervous Complaints, and as a mild Aperient.

The ROYAL ELIXIR of LIFE, in Bottles of 11s. each, strengthens the Stomach, increases the Appetite, dispels Spasms and Gout in the Stomach, and prevents all the inconveniences produced by excess at table.

The ANTISEPTIC BOTANICAL TOOTH-POWDER, 2s. 9d. per Box, cleanses, whitens, and preserves the Teeth, and fastens them, even if loosened by mercury.

These articles are sold (by appointment) at all respectable Medicine Venders, Chemists, and Druggists, throughout the kingdom.

Superior Eau de Cologne and Swiss Eau d'Arquebusade, Mason's Convent Soap, &c. &c.

A CHOICE at CARDEN & Co's. 118, Oxford-street, of 2,000 Satin Teur, Tohlne, Laventine and Gros de Naples Cloaks, trimmed and lined in the most elegant and fashionable style, amongst which are about 250 trimmed and lined with rich Sable, Ermine, Siberian Squirrell, Chinchilla and Russia Lapine Fur, also some very superb SPANISH MANTLES, made from Geneva Velvet, Satins, &c. which for the Opera or Carriage, outvie any thing of the kind ever yet offered to Ladies of rank and fashion. 14,000 yards of rich Gros de Naples, Ducapes, &c. from 2s. 1d. to 3s. 2d. per yard. Messrs Carden and Co. beg to return their sincere thanks to the Nobility and Gentry for the distinguished patronage they have received since Mr. Riley quitted the business, and hope by a continuance of their exertions to unite elegance and taste with economy and attention, they may be found deserving those favors which have hitherto been so liberally conferred upon them.

Country Orders punctually attended to, and all Letters, post paid, 118, Oxford-street, late Riley's.

SIXTY-TWO, HOLBORN HILL!
Next door but one west of St. Andrew's Church.

C. MEEKING particularly solicits the attention of Purchasers to the following prices of HOUSEHOLD LINENS, &c. now on sale, without reserve, at his extensive Warehouses, 61, and 62, Holborn-Hill.

		s.	d.
HAMBRO' & SILESIA DAMASK TABLE LINEN.	1½ yards long	1	6	each.
	2 do.	2	0
	2 do. fine	3	9
	3 do. superior, worth 16s	6	6
	5 do. do.	11	0
RUSSIA & SCOTCH SHEETINGS.	4-4ths Strong for Servants	0	4	per yd.
	5-4ths do. fine	0	7½
	3 yds wide, real Russia) which prevents a seam	1	9
	6-4ths German Hollands	1	1
	Curiously fine Leipsic, do.	33	0	a pair.
7-8ths and 4-4ths IRISH LINENS.	7-8ths strong	0	4½	per yd.
	Do. fine	0	7½
	Do. very fine Coleraines	0	11
	4-4ths superior for gentlemens wear, from 1s. to 1s. 8d. per yard, those at 19d. and 20d. are worth	3	0

With every other requisite article suitable for household and domestic purposes, at equally low-prices.—C. MEEKING's Wholesale and Retail Warehouses, 61 and 62, Holborn Hill.

☞ Country orders attended to. All orders under Ten Pounds must be post paid.

DECEMBER.

Come, December! Trim thy brows
With the shining holly,
All thy wanted sports arouse,
Freaks and gambols jolly.

Wake anew thy Christmas cheer,
And thy song of gladness;
Shame 'twould be to let the year,
With its parting blessing near,
Die a death of sadness!

Daily shall our bright Champagne,
First of festive treasures!
Greet thee and thy joyous train,
And around thy exit rain
Long-remember'd pleasures!

Opera Colonnade. CHARLES WRIGHT.

Champagne 63s. 72s. per Dozen.

SILK and BEAVER HATS.—At a time like the present, it behoves the most opulent to act economically in the purchase of a HAT, particularly when all the vehicles of advertisements teem with pretended Cheap Goods! a name only, for one half of the Hats offered to public notice are in the end the dearest of all others. To purchase a good article, bearing a small profit, is the safe road to economy.

PERRING'S HATS are manufactured by workmen experienced in the trade, and are made of such qualities as cannot fail to meet the wishes of the wearer.

The Double-edged SILK HAT surpasses any attempt at imitation, and is really the best Hat ever invented, price 17s. Good Wearing Silk Hats in a variety of Shapes, made in the usual way, 12s. 15s.

BEAVER HATS can be made at almost any Price, but none are worthy the attention of the Wearer under 20s. 22s. 24s. such are of good texture, light, and Waterproof, and will in the end prove in value equal to the purchase.

GENTLEMEN'S TRAVELLING CAPS of every description, in Fure, Cloth, Oil, Silk, &c. &c. at 12s. Waterproof.

YOUTHS' and BOYS' HATS in great variety. Light Summer Hats, &c.

413, Strand, two doors west of the Adelphi Theatre, and at Hammersmith.

THE BRITISH SPECIFIC, for re-producing and promoting the GROWTH of HAIR.—The principle of its operation is to cool and contract the pores which are opened by a redundancy of heat, occasioning a relaxation of the roots, and render them incapable of retaining the hair; to counteract which nothing is better calculated than the British Specific, as, from its invigorating and oleaginous properties, it almost immediately arrests the falling off, and affords such effectual nourishment to the roots, that persons giving it a fair trial may assure themselves of its speedily restoring it, even where it has become completely bald, however long it may have been so, and, if grey, gradually to restore it to its natural colour. The superiority of this preparation (the invention of a medical man) derives additional recommendation from its being, unlike other compositions for the hair, so extremely clean and agreeable, that its application is a real pleasure, and is only requisite to be generally known to receive the preference of every article in use for similar purposes. To be had only of D. PEDEN, 209, Regent-street, and 15, Burlington Arcade, Piccadilly, in bottles, 6s. each, or cases of four bottles for £1., forward to order on receiving the amount, post paid.

BURGESS' ESSENCE of ANCHOVIES, Warehouse, 107, STRAND, corner of Savoy Steps, London.---JOHN BURGESS and SON, being apprised of the numerous endeavours made by many persons to impose a spurious article for their make, feel it incumbent upon them to request the attention of the public, in purchasing what they conceive to be the ORIGINAL, to observe the Name and Address correspond with the above. The general appearance of the spurious descriptions will deceive the unguarded, and for their detection J. B. and Son submit the following caution:---Some are in appearance at first sight "Burgess' Essence of Anchovies;" others, "Burgis's," and many more without address.--JOHN BURGESS and SON having been many years honoured with such distinguished approbation, feel every sentiment of respect towards the public, and earnestly solicit them to inspect the labels previous to purchasing what they conceive to be of their make, which they hope will prevent many disappointments.

Burgess' New Sauce for general purposes having given such great satisfaction, continues to be prepared by them, and is recommended as a most useful and convenient sauce; will keep good in all climates.

Warehouse, 107, Strand, corner of the Savoy Steps.—The Original Fish-sauce Warehouse.

MOGUL, OR REAL CHETNA SAUCE.

C. HODGSON, ORIGINAL INVENTOR AND SOLE PROPRIETOR, is induced to caution his Friends and the Public against several spurious Sauces offered for sale, under the title of "MOGUL, or REAL CHETNA."

C. H. will feel obliged if each purchaser of the above delicious Sauce will please to observe the Label: which should be signed, "C. HODGSON," and the Cork, sealed and impressed, "HODGSON'S MOGUL SAUCE," without which none can be genuine.

C. H. also begs to acquaint those who have not yet made a trial of this much approved Sauce, that the flavour will be found quite different, and far superior to any yet offered, for all kinds of Curries, Steaks, Stews, Chops, Hashes, Game, Grills, Broiled and Wild Fowl, Cold Meat, and for enriching Gravies, &c., and feels assured, that when tasted, it will fully justify what he has above stated. To Merchants and East and West India Captains, it is strongly recommended, being warranted to retain its full flavour in any climate.

To be had at the manufactory, No. 68, Long Lane, Borough, London, at the Piazza Coffee-house, Covent-garden, the Queen's Head Tavern, Holborn, and at any of the principal Oilmen and Grocers in Town and Country.

COLDS, COUGHS, ASTHMAS, &c.

BUTLER'S PECTORAL ELIXIR. Experience during a very long period has incontestably proved the superior efficacy of this Medicine, in all cases of Colds, Coughs, and Asthmatic Affections. By promoting gentle expectoration, it very shortly relieves the Patient of a slight or recent Cold, and a few doses are generally sufficient to remove those which neglect has rendered more confirmed and obstinate, and which are accompanied with Cough, Spitting of Blood, and other serious symptoms. Its peculiar balsamic powers tend to heal soreness, and allay the irritation of the lungs, in cases of Cough; and in Asthmatic Affections it assists and gives freedom to the Breath.

Sold in Bottles, at 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. by Butlers, Chemists, Cheapside, corner of St. Paul's; 73, Princes-street, Edinburgh; and 54, Sackville-street, Dublin; Savory and Co. 136, New Bond-street; Willmott, 83, High-street, Borough; and the principal Medicine Venders in the United Kingdom. Of whom may be had BUTLER'S BALSAMIC LOZENGES, used in recent Coughs, Hoarseness, &c. and for rendering the Voice clear and flexible, and protecting its organs from the effects of exertion. In Boxes, at 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d.

N.B. Be careful to ask for Butler's Pectoral Elixir.

DR. COURTENAY'S NEW WORK, Price 4s.

AN HISTORICAL and PRACTICAL TREATISE on SYPHILIS, Gonorrhea, Gleets, Seminal Weakness, Strictures, Eruptions, Nodes, and Nocturnal Pains, so frequently mistaken for Rheumatism. These subjects are illustrated by a variety of highly-interesting cases, together with the miseries of a secret vice, so long and so unhappily pursued by the youth of both sexes. In the one it will be found the unfailing source of barrenness; the other have ravages fatally developed by a distressing state of debility, which, if not timely remedied, terminates in impotence; these are its remote and ultimate effects, while consumptions, loss of muscular power, and various nervous complaints, usually characterise the earlier stages of this most destructive and insidious habit, for the cure of which, a mode of treatment, the result of long and successful practice, and at once safe, speedy, and effectual, is adopted by the Author. With concluding remarks on the evils resulting from attempts at Self-cure.

Principiis obsta; sero medicina paratur.

By C. B. COURTENAY, M.D. Robert-street, Adelphi.—Printed for the Author. Published and sold by Sutherland, No. 9, Carlton-street, Edinburgh; Jones and Co. Paternoster-row; Onwhyn, 4, Catherine-street, Strand; Walker, 90, High Holborn; Chappell and Son, Cornhill; Marsh, 145, Oxford-street; Chapple, Pall-mall; and may be had of all Booksellers in town and country.

"Amongst the numerous medical and surgical works of the day, we consider that written by Dr. Courtenay, on Syphilis, and other frequently fatal complaints, to be worthy of the highest encomiums, and justly deserving the serious attention of all those persons who may unfortunately happen to be afflicted with the maladies which form the subject of this very interesting publication. The luminous view taken of these diseases, together with important warnings against excesses, entitle this work to great praise; and we may add, as a further recommendation, that it is written with much delicacy and morality."—Inspector and Literary Review.

BIRTHS.—On the 6th instant, at Goldings, Herts, the Lady of S. Smith, Esq., of a son.

DIED.—On the 1st instant, at his seat, Barmer, Syderstone, Norfolk, Thomas Kerslake, Esq., in his 82d year.—On Wednesday morning, Mr. William Horsfield.—At Mudeford, Joseph Tanner, Esq., solicitor, of Salisbury.—R. Holt, Esq., banker, and father of the corporation of Grantham.—On the 27th of July, at sea, the Rev. John Ross.—On the 7th instant, at Sale Cottage, Hertford, in her 20th year, Sophia Baker Lloyd.—On the 6th instant, in Lower Grosvenor-place, aged 75, Henrietta Amelia, relict of W. T. Lewis, Esq. the late celebrated comedian at Covent Garden Theatre.—On the 1st instant, at Croydon, Mr. Francis Fetloe, aged 76, late Chief Surveyor of his Majesty's Exports.—At Chislehurst, Kent, on the 1st instant, Sophia Dashwood, youngest daughter of the late S. Dashwood, Esq. of Well Hall, Lincolnshire, aged 78.—Suddenly, at Chichester, on the 2d instant, Sir Justly Watson Green, Bart. aged 72 years.—At Richmond, Surrey, Lady Price, widow of Sir Rose Price, Bart.—At St. Helier's, Island of Jersey, Captain Touchet Campbell, one of his Majesty's Poor Knights of Windsor.—On Thursday, in Buckingham-street, Fitzroy-square, aged 72, the celebrated John Flaxman, Esq. R. A. and Professor of Sculpture at the Royal Academy.

London: Printed by R. D. RICHARDS, No. 1, Blake-court; and Published at THE AGE Office, No. 1, Catherine-street, Strand.

THE AGE.

" THE VERY AGE AND BODY OF THE TIME."

VOL. II. No. 84. SUNDAY, DECEMBER 17, 1826. Price 7d.

THEATRE ROYAL, DRURY LANE.—On Monday next, the Comedy of The Hypocrite, and Love, Law, and Physick.—On Tuesday, The Two Houses of Grenada, The Lottery Ticket, and The Children in the Wood.—On Wednesday, Rob Roy, and Deaf as a Post.—A new Opera is in rehearsal, which will be brought out immediately after the Christmas Pantomime of The Man in the Moon.

ADELPHI THEATRE, Strand.—On Monday, and during the Week, will be presented an entirely new Burletta, called The Flying Dutchman, or the Phantom Ship. After which, a new comic Burletta, in one Act, called 23, John-street, Adelphi. To conclude with Luke the Labourer—On Tuesday, Dec. 26, a new comic Pantomime, called Harlequin and the Eagle! or, the Man in the Moon and his Wife.—Doors open at 6, commence ½ before 7.

ARGYLL ROOMS.—First GRAND BALL and MASQUERADE for the Season, Wednesday, Dec. 27.

Air—"Wine! wine! rich and rosy wine!"—DER FREISCHUTZ.

Hail! all-hail the signal hour!
Pleasure re-illumes her bow'r!
Welcome, heart-inspiring pow'r!
Lo! before thy radiant eye
Care's obtruded shadows fly,
Strains of gladness meet thee,
Goddess fair, we greet thee!

Hero thy sov'reign rule to aid,
Song, and Dance, and Masquerade,
All their mingling fancies lead;
Beauty, with her smiling train,
Bacchus, with his bright Champagne,
Joyous vot'ries, meet thee:
Goddess fair, we greet thee!

The Wines (of the first quality) to be supplied by Mr. CHARLES WRIGHT, of the Opera Colonnade, of whom, as heretofore, Tickets may be had, and Boxes engaged for the occasion.

DRURY-LANE, COVENT-GARDEN, ADELPHI.
Private Boxes at the Theatres, per Season or per Night,
In the choicest situations, both for hearing and for sight;
Inviolable Sanctums—Terms, the lowest ever made,
Enquire of CHARLES WRIGHT,—via, Opera Colonnade.
N. B. Champagne Imperial, the Cheapest in the Trade.

FOR VAN DIEMEN'S LAND and NEW SOUTH WALES, the beautiful new first class Brig LION, ALEXANDER KENN, (late of the William Shand), Commander. Burthen 275 Tons. Lying in the London Dock. Has excellent accommodations for Passengers.—For Freight or Passage apply to Buckles, Bagster, and Buchanan, 33, Mark-lane.

NEW MUSIC.—Just published, by F. T. LATOUR, Music-seller, 50, New Bond-street.

The favourite Airs in the Opera of "La Vestale," arranged for the Pianoforte, with Flute accompaniments, ad lib. in 2 books, by T. Latour, each	4 0
The ditto in "Medea," arranged for pianoforte, with flute accompaniments, ad lib. in 4 books, by ditto, each	4 0
The ditto in Rossini's "Mahomet Second, or the Siege of Corinth," arranged for ditto, with ditto, by ditto, each	5 0
The ditto in "The Interrupted Sacrifice," in 10 Nos. by ditto, each	1 0
"I have Fruit, I have Flowers," arranged for pianoforte, ditto	2 6
"Love was once a little Boy," ditto, ditto	2 0
The Songs, Duetts, &c. in the comic opera of "The two Houses of Grenada," composed by J. A. Wade, Esq.
The Songs, Duetts, &c. in the farce of "A Trip to Wales," by T. Parry.
"I have Fruit, I have Flowers," a favourite cavatina, sung by Miss Love, composed by J. A. Wade, Esq.	2 0
"The Vesper Bell," sung by Miss Paton, ditto	2 0
"Meet me by Moonlight," ditto	2 0

NEW MUSIC.—HARP AND PIANO-FORTE.

MEYER'S "MEDEA in CORINTO," with Flute and Violoncello (ad lib.) by N. C. Bochsa, in Books	10 6
——— Overture to ditto, ditto, ditto	6 0
Overture to "Caliph of Bagdad" ditto, ditto	5 0
Airs from "Il Crociato in Egitto," by W. H. Steil, in two Books (each)	7 6
——— Bishop's "Aladdin," by N. C. Bochsa	7 0

PIANO FORTE.

Boieldieu's "La Dame Blanche," and as Duets, in Books, by J. F. Burrowe's (each)	4 0
Rossini's "Semiramide" ditto, ditto (each)	4 0
Meyer's "Medea in Corinto," by C. Dumon, in two Books (each)	4 0
Bishop's "Buy a Broom," Rondo, by T. A. Rawlings	2 6
——— "In my Bower a Lady Weeps," ditto, by G. Kiallmark	2 6

VOCAL.

"Buy a Broom!" sung by Miss Love, composed by H. R. Bishop	2 0
"No longer the Song of the Lark," composed by J. Barnett	1 6
"Jane, the Mountain's Pride," ditto	1 6
"The King! God bless Him!" sung and composed by Mr. Braham	2 0

 The Public are respectfully cautioned that the original "Buy a Broom," is the one composed by H. R. Bishop.

"The Bonnie Lassie," composed by Mrs. Miles 2 0

GOULDING and D'ALMAINE, 20, Soho-square.
Cabinet, Cottage, and Square Piano-fortes for Sale or Hire.

NEW MUSIC.—Just published at the ROYAL HARMONIC INSTITUTION, Argyll Rooms, 246, Regent-street, the Songs, Duets, &c. in The ORACLE, composed by WINTER, and newly arranged by W. HAWES.

	s.	d.
"Overture"	2	6
"The rosy dawn hath driven," Chorus.	5	0
"When battles conch is sounding," sung by Mr. Atkins	2	0
"The trumpet first is sounded," sung by Mr. Thorn	2	0
"We Maidens mark me," sung by Miss Goward,	1	6
"All hail to the God of our Fathers," Chorus	2	0
"Now by love and peace invited." Sestett and Chorus	3	6
"Oh when thine eye is throwing," Duet, Miss Paton and Sapio	2	6
"All powerful Sun," sung by Mr. Phillips	2	0
"There was a time ere sorrow," sung by Miss Paton	1	6
"Between my hopes and fears suspended," Duet, by Miss Paton and Phillips	2	6
"When will peace relieve my breast?" sung by Miss Hamilton	1	6
"How the plaguing varlet teases," Duet, by Miss Goward and Thorn	2	6
"We hail thee Lord of Light," Finale, 1st Act	10	0
"Tho' we all can feel thy sorrow," Quartett and Chorus	3	6
"In what sad hour," Trio	3	0
"Oh heavens! the thought is frightful," Duet.	2	6
"Hast never mark'd the flower," Song, Miss Boden	1	6
"The Maid who'd wish to slumber," Quartett	2	6
"The Gloomy terrors of the grave," Scena, Mr. Sapio	2	6
"Farewell, yet not for ever," Quartett	4	0
"The evening is descending," Finale	10	0

The Overture to "OBERON," arranged for a full Orchestra, by C. M. Weber, price 10s.

A New TREATISE on THOROUGH BASS, or the art of playing from a figured Bass, with examples, &c. &c. by Dr. Crotch.

Burrows's Selection of Airs from Weber's Opera of Oberon, arranged for the Piano Forte, with Flute ad lib, in four books, each 4s.

I'VE BEEN ROAMING—Arranged by T. A. Rawlings, as a Rondo for the Pianoforte.

BOCHSA's Select Airs from the Oracle, for the Harp, and Pianoforte, with Flute and Violin accompaniments, 10s. 6d.; also the Overture to the above, arranged as above, price 5s.

DEATH FETCH.—The music in this admired and popular Opera, composed by C. E. Horn.

I'VE BEEN ROAMING.—Cavatina, sung by Madame Vestris, by C. E. Horn, price 2s.

OBERON.—The music in this popular Romantic and Fairy Opera, composed by the late Carl Maria Von Weber.

 The Proprietors of the ROYAL HARMONIC INSTITUTION beg most respectfully to acquaint the Public, that the only correct copies of the Opera now performing at the English Opera House, called "THE ORACLE," are published by them, and that all other copies are spurious and an Invasion of their rights.

N.B. The whole of the Music in the New Opera of PEVERIL OF THE PEAK, by C. E. Horn, now performing with such enthusiastic applause at the Theatre Royal Covent Garden, is now published, and may be had separate.

PIANOFORTES.—W. WALTER, (from Mr. Tomkison's) begs to recommend to those in want of a very superior Instrument, to inspect his stock of Grand, Cabinet, Cottage, and Square Pianos, which are warranted to be of the best description, at unusually low prices, and where the most decided satisfaction is not given, will be exchanged at the Manufactory, 118, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury.

PIANOFORTES.—KIRKMAN, (TUNER,) 15, Mortimer-street, Cavendish-square, (in returning his sincere thanks to the Nobility and Gentry for the honour of their patronage, support, and encouragement,) begs leave to announce that his TUNING has been approved in the justly esteemed manufactories of the Messrs. BROADWOOD's, and TOMKISON, in addition to his (father's) in Broad-street; 6¾ Octave Grand Pianoforte, 5s.; Cabinet, 4s.; Square, 3s. 6d. (half yearly) £1 5s. £1 1s. and 16s.

MISS HINCKESMAN, (pupil of Mad. Szymanowska and Mr. Kollmann,) respectfully informs her Friends and the Public, that she has removed from No. 24, Dover-street, Piccadilly, to No. 188, Regent-street, where she continues to give instruction on the Pianoforte, in Mad. Szymanowska's style, and in thorough Bass, on Mr. Kollmann's approved system. Letters, (post-paid) punctually attended to, or personal application as above, from one to three o'clock on Mondays and Thursdays.

"BUY A BROOM QUADRILLES" for 1827, New Figures by an eminent Professor, containing Horn's admired Air "Buy a Broom," "Horn of the Chace," and "Evening Sun," "All the Town is Cherry Ripe," and the elegant Quadrille "Ettrick and Teviotdale," with the favourite "Adelaide Waltz" by T. Cooke, arranged for the Pianoforte by G. W. Maddison.

Published (only) by Williams, 2, Strand, and sold by every music-seller in the kingdom, price 3s.

Ladies desiring this celebrated set of Quadrilles, to avoid false copies, should be particular in sending for the set with Horn's "Buy a Broom," of which a third edition of the Song is just published.

"LA VESTALE."—The following Songs, &c., in Spontini's "La Vestale," as performed at the King's Theatre, are published, and the rest of the Music will be ready in a few days:—

"Oh di funesta possa!" Aria.—"Alma Vesta del Ciel!" Hymn.—"Degli infelice O'Nume!" Preghiera.—"Te che invoco!" Cavatina!"—Sung by Madame Caradori.

"Avvan picta," Cavatina.—Sung by Signor Curioni.

"Che Sinonia, quai transporto," Duetto.—Sung by Madame Caradori, and Signor Curioni.

The Poetry to the above is by Signor Pistrucci.

GOULDING and D'ALMAINE, 20, Soho-square.

NEW FLUTE MUSIC, by TULOU, with an accompaniment for the Pianoforte, his last Productions.

Published by MORI & LAVENU, 28, New Bond-street, viz.:—

"Sento un interna voce," from Rossini's Opera Elizabetta, price 3s.

"Ah, come rapida fugge la speme," from Meyerbeer's Opera, Il Crociato in Egitto, price 3s.

"Vieni fraquesti braccia," from Rossini's Opera, La Garza Ladra, price 3s.

"Una voce poco fa," from Rossini's Opera Il Barbiere di Seviglia, price 3s. 6d.

"Beco ridenti il cielo," do. do. do. 3s.

Se un istante, duet, from Mercadanti's Opera, Elisa e Claudio, arranged as a duet for two flutes, price 5s.

PIANOFORTE MUSIC.

Meyer's Petite Rondo "Ah Maiden Gardezvous," price 2s.

The White Lady Quadrilles, taken from Boieldieu's Opera, La Dame Blanche, arranged for the Pianoforte, by M. Dunois, price 3s.

VOCAL.

The Maiden at her wheel, sung by Mad. Vestris in the White Lady, Boieldieu, 1s. 6d.

The Secret, a Trio, from ditto, ditto, 1s. 6d.

A great assortment of Guitars by the most approved makers, for Sale or for Hire.

SPANISH GUITARS.—Just imported by WILLIS and Co. Royal Musical Repository, No. 55, St. James's-street, opposite Jermyn-street, London, and No. 7, Westmorland-street, Dublin, an elegant and extensive assortment of the above Fashionable Instruments, of the finest quality and workmanship, which they are enabled to offer at unusually low prices; they have also published the following new Guitar Music:—

May's new and easy Instructions for the Spanish Guitar, with an elegant Frontispiece	5 0
Sola's 20th Set of favourite English Songs	5 0
Rugato's 1st Set of Favourite English Songs	3 0
Aurora che Sorgerai, with a Guitar Accompaniment, by Pauly	1 6
Bonnie wee Wife, ditto, by Sola	1 6
Buona Notte, ditto, by May	1 0
Cherry Ripe, ditto, by Sola	1 6
Carulli's Sixteen Exercises for the Spanish Guitar	3 6
Davies' Six Songs,—English, Italian, and French	3 0
Three French Romances, with Pianoforte, and Guitar Accompaniment by Bertioli	2 6
Three Familiar Duetts, with ditto, by C. M. Sola	3 6
Nunca de ti me, with ditto, by P. Verini	2 0

WILLIS and Co. beg leave to inform the Nobility and Gentry, that their Repository is constantly supplied with every description of Grand, Cabinet, Cottage, Square, and Circular Pianofortes, with the latest Improvements, by all the most approved Makers (which will afford the Public the great and peculiar advantage of forming their own judgment of their respective merits) at the lowest Manufacturers' prices.

N.B. Pianofortes, Harps, &c. let out on hire.

MADAME VESTRIS'S NEW SONGS.

Just Published, by MAYHEW and Co., 17, Bond-street, London,

THE Bavarian Girl's Song, "BUY A BROOM," with an original and finely executed Portrait of Madame Vestris (in Character) by Gauci, arranged expressly for her, by Alexander Lee.—Price 2s.

New Songs.	Singers.	Composers.
Love's Labour Lost	Mad. Vestris,	Alex. Lee
Smiles and Tears	Ditto,	Ditto
England the Home of the World	Mr. Braham,	J. Barnett
Fancy dipp'd her Pen in Dew	Miss Stephens,	J. Whittaker
Light Guitar (4th edition)	Mad. Vestris,	J. Barnett
A Voice whispered softly, Dear Mary	Miss Love,	Geo. Perry
Yes, I will leave the festive Scene, in answer to the Light Guitar	Miss Paton,	J. Barnett
"Not a Drum was heard," the celebrated Ode on the Death of Sir John Moore	Mr. Sapio,	Ditto
Love's Delightful Hour	Mr. Pearman,	J. Emdin
The Queen of Bonnie Lasses	Mr. Braham,	J. Hart
The Joys of Liberty and Wine	Mr. Bedford,	Ditto
Paul Pry, "Hope I don't intrude," comic, with the original Portrait of Mr. Liston	Mr. Liston	Pigwiggin
The General Election, comic, written by Charles Dibdin the younger, with an illustration by Cruikshank	Mr. Mathews,	J. Barnett
Maiden, heedful be, The Token Flowers	Mad. Vestris,	Ditto
The Moorish Maiden	Mrs. Ashe,	J. Emdin
You ask a song, you bid me sing	Mr. Broadhurst,	G. Kiallmark
I left the Bowl in search of Love	Mr. Phillips,	Mr. Phillips.

Splendid Christmas Presents, at Moderate Prices.

JUST PUBLISHED, by W. MARSHALL, Price Nine Shillings, THE PLEDGE of FRIENDSHIP for the year 1827; a greatly enlarged and splendid Volume of Moral Essays, interesting Tales, and Original and Selected Poetry; designed as a Christmas Present and New-Year's Gift. The Contributions in the various branches of Literature, are from Writers of well-known talent. The Embellishments comprise Fifteen splendid efforts of Art, from the designs of Stothard, R.A, Wright, Shephard, and Corbould, with an embossed Inscription Plate. The Engravings by Heath, Edwards, Lacey, and Ensom.

W. M. has also published a series of Twenty different POCKET BOOKS and ALMANACKS for 1827, on a scale of variety that every class of Purchasers are sure to be suited at Marshall's Establishment. The Ladies Pocket Books are embellished with full-length portraits of ladies of distinction in the newest Parisian costume, four pages of original music, eight views, and a variety of pleasing and useful information, price 2s. 6d. gilt edges, and may be had with an Almanack. The Gentlemen's Pocket Books contain correct Lists of the Members of the New Parliament, the House of Peers, Town and Country Bankers, useful Tables, the Army and Navy, Great Officers of State, &c. price 2s. 6d. and may be had with an Almanack; Marshall's Family Account Book, for keeping a regular statement of domestic Expences, with valuable Recipes, useful Tables the Art of Carving, &c. price 2s.; also Marshall's New Pocket Books, are only 1s. 6d. with fine engravings, List of Bankers, Public Funds, &c.—the gilt edge edition 2s. No. 36, and Vol. 3, of Marshall's Views, are ready. The whole published by W. MARSHALL, No. 1, Holborn Bars, corner of Middle Row.

To-morrow, in 3 vols. post 8vo.

ALMACK'S.—A Novel.

Second Edition.

"These volumes present, perhaps, the best picture of the gayest fashionable life that has ever issued from the press.—LITERARY GAZETTE.

Printed for SAUNDERS and O'TLEY, Public Library, Conduit-street.

Just Published, in 4to. price 18s. in boards, and on royal paper, with proof Impressions of the plates on India paper, £1 11s. 6d.

PRACTICAL HINTS on LIGHT and SHADE in PAINTING, illustrated by finished etchings of 39 Examples from the Italian, Flemish, and Dutch Schools. By JOHN BURNET.

London: published by JAMES CARPENTER & SON, Old Bond-street, of whom may be had, by the same Author, in 4to. price 12s.,

HINTS on COMPOSITION in PAINTING, illustrated by examples from the ancient and modern masters.

NEW WORKS.—Printed for HENRY COLBURN, 8, New Burlington-street.

In 2 vols. 8vo. with a fine Portrait, engraved by Turner, from a Picture by Sir Thomas Lawrence, Price 28s.

MEMOIRS of the LIFE of Mrs. SIDDONS. By James Boaden, Esq. interspersed with Anecdotes of Authors and Actors, and intended as a Companion to the Author's Life of her Brother, Mr. Kemble.

2. TALES of a VOYAGER to the Arctic Ocean. 3 vols. post 8vo. £1 8s. 6d.

"In thrilling regions of thick-ribbed ice."—SHAKSPEARE.

3. The TOR HILL. By the Author of "Brambletye House;" or Cavaliers and Roundheads; 3 vols. post 8vo. £1 11s. 6d.

4. TALES of the O'HARA FAMILY, Second Series, comprising the Nowlans, and Peter of the Castle, in 3 vols. post 8vo. price 31s. 6d.

5. LETTERS from the EAST. Written during a recent Tour through Turkey, Egypt, Arabia, the Holy Land, Syria, and Greece. By John Carne, Esq., of Queen's College, Cambridge. The Second Edition, in 2 vols. post 8vo. price 18s.

6. RECOLLECTIONS of the LIFE of JOHN O'KEEFFE, the Veteran Comic Dramatist, written by himself, 2 vols. 8vo. 1l. 8s.

8. A NEW SERIES of ARABIAN NIGHTS' ENTERTAINMENTS; selected from the original Oriental MS. By Jos. Von Hammer, and now first translated into English by the Rev. George Lamb, in 3 vols. small 8vo. 18s.

"And here is a new collection of the records of fairy revels—new at least to us, although challenging equal antiquity and genuineness with its predecessors—three fresh volumes, filled with the exploits of goules and gnomes and genii, and beautiful youths and bewitching damsels, and all the paraphernalia of Arabian magic."—Literary Gazette.

THE following NEW WORKS will be published in the course of December and January, by HENRY COLBURN, 8, New Burlington-street.

1. TRAVELS in MESOPOTAMIA; including a Journey from Aleppo, across the Euphrates to Orfah, (the Ur of the Chaldees;) across the Plains of the Turcoman Tribes to Diarbekr; in Asia Minor; from thence to Mardin, on the borders of the Great Desert, and by the Tigris, to the Mosul, the Ruins of Nineveh, Arbela, Bagdad, and Babylon. By J. S. Buckingham, Esq. Author of "Travels in Palestine," &c. &c. 1 vol. 4to. with numerous Engravings.

2. The NATCHEZ; an Indian Tale. By the Viscount de Chateaubriand, Author of "Atala," "Travels in the Holy Land," &c. Editions in French and English, in small octavo.

3. THE LIFE of EDWARD JENNER, M.D. LL.D. F.R.S. Physician Extraordinary to the King, &c. &c. With selections from his Correspondence. By John Baron M.D. F.R.S. 8vo.

This work has been composed from the most authentic sources; the whole of the Papers and Correspondence of Dr. Jenner having been placed in the author's hands by the executors, in consequence of his uninterrupted and confidential intercourse and friendship, with that distinguished individual, during the last fifteen years of his life.

4. The Hon. GEORGE KEPPELL's NARRATIVE of a JOURNEY from INDIA to ENGLAND, by Bussorah, Bagdad, the Ruins of Babylon, Curdistan, the Court of Persia, the Western Shore of the Caspian Sea, Astrakhan, Nisney Novogorod, Moscow, and St. Petersburgh, in the year 1824. In 1 vol. 4to. with a map and coloured plates, &c.

5. MEMOIRS of the LIFE and WRITINGS of the late Rev. SAMUEL PARR, LL.D. By the Rev. William Field. In 2 vols. 8vo. with Portraits.

6. TRUCKLEBOROUGH HALL. A Novel. In 3 vols. post 8vo. 28s. 6d.

7. TRAVELS and ADVENTURES in SOUTHERN AFRICA. By George Thompson, Esq., eight years a resident at the Cape; comprising an account of the present state of the Native Tribes; with observations on the progress and prospects of the British Emigrants of 1820: on the Agricultural and Commercial Resources of the Colony, and on its adaptation for receiving a large addition of European Settlers. Accompanied by a new and greatly improved Map, and numerous other Engravings, 1 vol. 4to.

8. The PRAIRIE; a Tale. By the Author of "The Spy," "The Pioneers," "The Pilot," &c. In 3 vols. 12mo.

CHARGER.—A Chesnut Mare, warranted sound, rising seven, highly broke, and has carried a Lady, equal to great weight.—Also a thorough-bred Brown Horse, five years old, sound, has been five months in a Cavalry riding-school.

To be seen at Hall's Riding Academy, entrance to the Regent's Park.

BARBARY WALL-FLOWER SNUFF, to be had only of the Importer, GEORGE EDLIN, Importer of Foreign Snuffs and Segars, No. 6, Aldgate, corner of Saracen's Head Inn, and of his Agent Mr. J. Nohil, 81, Lower Grosvenor-street, Bond-street.

CHOCOLATE of the finest Quality, 3s. per lb.—COCOA-NUTS, the finest Grenada, 2s. per lb.—The Public are respectfully informed they may now purchase the above-mentioned Articles, warranted of the finest quality, at MARSHALL and Co.'s Tea and Coffee Warehouse No. 12, Southampton-street, Strand. Also, Turkey Coffee, warranted of the finest Quality, at 3s. per lb.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH.—MR. WM. BEACALL, and Mr. ROSE, Surgeon Dentists, 13, Newman-street, Oxford-street having with unremitting diligence long made the Science of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, where mechanical contrivance is requisite, their peculiar study, continues to supply the loss of Teeth, with Natural or Artificial, in a superior manner, without the least pain, from a single Tooth to a complete Set, at little more than one-half the usual charges. Teeth cleaned if ever so discoloured, and rendered white and beautiful, without pain or injury to the enamel. Extracting, Stopping, and every operation on the Teeth and Gums.—Attends at home from Ten till Four.

TOOTHACHE effectually and permanently Cured, without Extraction or Pain; and carious Teeth rendered lasting and useful, by a new, safe, and simple process, invented by Mr. J. P. CLARK, 5, King-street, Bloomsbury-square. Reference can be given to several of the Nobility and Gentry, and particularly to eminent Medical Gentlemen, who have experienced or witnessed the benefit of the discovery. Mr. C. begs to state that he has no longer any objection to communicate his System to the Profession on equitable terms.—Natural and Artificial Teeth supplied; and all operations connected with the Teeth performed on scientific principles.—At home, daily, from 10 to 4.

N. B. For the satisfaction of Gentlemen of the Medical Profession, and the Public in general, Mr. C. will be happy to attend a case of Tooth-ache in any Public Institution, School, or Academy, gratis.

CHILBLAINS, RHEUMATISM, SPRAINS, &c.

BUTLER'S CAJEPUT OPODELDOC.—Cajeput Oil, which is the basis of this Opodeldoc, has been long esteemed on the Continent, as a remedy for Chronic Rheumatism, Spasmodic Affections, Chilblains, Palsy, Stiffness, and Enlargement of the Joints, Sprains, Bruises, and Deafness; and the experience of late years, in England, proves that it merits the high character given of it by the most eminent in the profession, in those obstinate complaints. Being combined in the form of Opodeldoc, it is rendered more penetrating, and consequently much more efficacious as an external application. Rubbed upon the skin, by means of flannel, or the warm hand, it allays morbid irritation of nerves, invigorates the absorbents, and accelerates the circulation.

Sold in Bottles, at 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. by Butler's, Chemists, Cheapside, corner of St. Paul's; 73, Princes-street, Edinburgh; and 54, Sackville-street, Dublin; Savory and Co. 136, New Bond-street; Willmott, 83, High-street, Borough; and the principal Medicine Venders in the United Kingdom. Of whom may be had MARSHALL's UNIVERSAL CERATE, an excellent Remedy for Chilblains when broken; used also in Scalds, Burns, &c.

☞ Ask for Butler's Cajeput Opodeldoc.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—Monday.

His Majesty's Message relative to Portugal was brought down by Lord Bathurst, and ordered to be taken into consideration on Tuesday.

TUESDAY, Dec. 12.

HIS MAJESTY'S MESSAGE.

Earl BATHURST gave an historical detail of the transactions which took place from the time Sir Charles Stuart, the British Ambassador, was appointed by Don Pedro, the Emperor of Brazil, to declare the Portuguese Constitution, to the time of the Spanish aggression. The latter, it appears, was first communicated to our Government by the Government of France. The Noble Earl concluded by moving an Address to his Majesty, concurring in all the statements contained in his gracious Message.

Lord HOLLAND gave his most zealous support to the Address. He considered Ministers bound to assist Portugal, and contended, that they could not rely on the assurances of France, as that Power had the means of putting an end to the perfidy of Spain at once.

The Duke of WELLINGTON said the hostile movements of Spanish troops upon the bank of the Douro and the Tagus left no doubt that the Spanish Government had concerted and ordered the same. The Noble Duke thought the Spanish Ministers and the Captain-General of the Provinces most to blame in these aggressions.

The Marquis of LANSDOWNE supported the Address.

The question was then put, and the Address carried nem dis.

WEDNESDAY, Dec. 13.

HIS MAJESTY'S ANSWER TO THE ADDRESS.

Earl BATHURST delivered his Majesty's Answer to the Address, voted yesterday.

The LORD CHANCELLOR read the same from the Woolsack.

"My Lords—I thank you for your loyal and dutiful Address, and accept with satisfaction the assurance of your cordial concurrence and support, in measures taken for the protection of Portugal, which will be found the best means of avoiding war with Spain. "G. R."

His Majesty's gracious Answer was ordered to be recorded on the Journals.

Earl BATHURST then moved an Adjournment to the 8th of February, and the House adjourned accordingly to the 8th of February.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, Dec. 11.

MESSAGE FROM THE CROWN.—AID TO PORTUGAL.

Mr. Secretary CANNING made his appearance at the bar of the House with a document in his hand.

The SPEAKER.—Mr. Secretary Canning, what have you got there?

Mr. CANNING—A message from his Majesty.

The SPEAKER desired him to bring it up.

Mr. CANNING then delivered it to the Speaker, who, after the Members had uncovered, proceeded to read it to the House. It was in the following terms:—

"George R.

"His Majesty acquaints the House of Commons, that his Majesty has received an earnest application from the Princess Regent of Portugal, claiming, in virtue of the ancient obligations of alliance and amity subsisting between his Majesty and the Crown of Portugal, his Majesty's aid against an hostile aggression from Spain.

"His Majesty has exerted himself for some time past, in conjunction with his Majesty's ally the King of France, to prevent such an aggression; and repeated assurances have been given by the Court of Madrid of the determination of his Catholic Majesty neither to commit, nor to allow to be committed from his Catholic Majesty's territory, any aggression against Portugal.

"But his Majesty has learnt with deep concern, that, notwithstanding these assurances, hostile inroads into the territory of Portugal have been concerted in Spain, and have been executed under the eyes of Spanish authorities by Portuguese regiments which had deserted into Spain, and which the Spanish Government had repeatedly and solemnly engaged to disarm and to disperse.

"His Majesty leaves no effort unexhausted to awaken the Spanish Government to the dangerous consequences of this apparent connivance.

"His Majesty makes this communication to the House of Commons with the full and entire confidence that his faithful Commons will afford to his Majesty their cordial concurrence and support, in maintaining the faith of treaties, and in securing against foreign hostility the safety and independence of the kingdom of Portugal, the oldest ally of Great Britain. "G. R."

After the message had been read,

Mr. CANNING rose, but in consequence of indisposition, spoke in tones so feeble, that his words were very indistinctly heard in the gallery. We understood him to say, that in pursuance of the custom hitherto observed on occasions of this kind, he should now give notice that he would to-morrow move an address to his Majesty, thanking him for the communication which he had made to the House, and affording him the strongest assurances of the cordial support and co-operation of his faithful Commons. It would be contrary to the practice hitherto followed, for him to enter into any statement of the reasons which had induced his Majesty to make to the House the communication they had just heard, and besides, it would be unfair to the House itself, as it was totally unprepared for such a discussion. He would merely confine himself to moving, that his Majesty's most gracious communication should be entered on the journals.

Sir ROBERT WILSON observed, that when upon a former night he gave notice of his intention to bring the present state of Portugal under the consideration of Parliament, he was influenced by a sincere and honest desire to enable the Government, if it had any hesitation, to uphold with a strong hand, the honour and interest of the Crown, which, in this country, were inseparable from the honour and interest of the people. He could assure the Right Hon. Secretary that in giving that notice, he was influenced by no party motive. The gentlemen with whom he had communicated knew of no party but their country, where its honour and its interests were at stake. He felt great happiness in hearing the communication which had just been made to them, and declared that it rendered unnecessary the proceeding which he should otherwise have deemed it incumbent to take. He had no doubt that his Majesty would not only meet the cordial concurrence and co-operation of Parliament, but would also meet the unanimous support of the people of England.

Mr. CANNING observed, that the course of events which had decided his Majesty to make his present communication to Parliament had not been matured till very recently. Indeed, the events which had rendered this communication necessary were not known to his Majesty until last Friday night.

The Message was then entered on the journals, and was fixed for consideration on Tuesday.

TUESDAY, Dec. 12.

SPANISH AGGRESSION.

Mr. Secretary CANNING moved, that the King's Message be considered. He rose to propose an Address, which would be an echo of the Message, observing, that it became a British Minister, who proposed what might approximate to war, to do so with regret. He did so—and he was persuaded that it was of vital consequence that peace should be continued. (Hear.) He was as persuaded of that as any man could be; but there were some matters that could neither be compromised nor adjourned, namely, national faith and national honour (cheers); within such description the present case came. It was a question of national law and of fact. That would be apparent from a view of existing treaties; and there was nothing so old, so precise, and so honourable, as our treaties with the House of Braganza. They had often been renewed, and often maintained amidst the greatest difficulties. It had been sometimes burdensome; but the alliance had held fast through all difficulties. It was renewed in modern compacts—especially at Vienna, when this country had its eyes open to the inconveniences, as well as advantages, of such alliance. The third article of the treaty of 1815, of "Alliance, Friendship, and Guarantee," strongly renewed it. He read the article, and adverted to the withdrawing of the King of Portugal to Brazil. Then we entered into a secret treaty not to acknowledge any sovereign on the throne of Portugal except one of the House of Braganza. That treaty was put an end to by the power of the sovereign authority to return—but the treaty to sustain Portugal, and to remain in friendship with her, continues. The obligations were known to all the world; and they had continued from the celebrated treaty of 1661—extracts from which Mr. C. read, then undertaking to stand by Portugal as if it were England. The obligations were most clear. He then adverted to the subsequent treaties. The next treaty, that of 1703, said, that if Spain and France, separately or conjointly make war on Portugal, then should England aid the interests of Portugal. It might be said, that the obligation of those treaties were now relaxed by time; but, without entering into pleading, it was sufficient for him to say, that if objection could have been taken, they ought to have been taken at Vienna. After that treaty, he declared, on moral and political grounds, that Portugal had a right to call on England as her ally. Portugal had, on seeing the coming storm, applied to England for aid. As to the delay which had been somewhere made, he admitted that it was mentioned by the Portuguese Ambassador—but positive intelligence did not arrive untill Friday night. The Government decision was taken on Saturday; it was approved of by the King on Sunday; and communicated to Parliament on Monday, and, at the hour of his addressing them, troops were on their march. (Loud Cheers.)—Therefore, he thought there could be no just ground of complaint of delay. (Cheers.) But it was important to ascertain that the acts of the Executive here would be approved in Portugal. This morning dispatches had been received from Sir W. A'Court, announcing the approbation of such steps on the part of the Chambers in Lisbon. They had approved the steps by acclamations, and the Deputies rose from their seats and added, that they were ready to render personal service. (Cheers.) Further intelligence had been received of more than one irruption on the Portuguese frontiers by troops arranged in Spain. One irruption might be without authority, but attacks all along the frontiers must be by consent. The Portuguese rebels were armed and supported by Spain—the mercenaries were got from Portugal—and, would it not be petty quibbling to say that this was not foreign invasion? It was not the object of this country to interfere with the internal proceedings—but here was an undoubted and clear obligation, and invasion; foreign aggression, aided by foreign means, and devoted to foreign objects. He was sure that the House would not hesitate to sustain those undoubted obligations. He had fully explained that all might know what were the motives of the British Government. The address which he should move, would thus be rather as a measure of defence for Portugal than a declaration, necessarily, of a war against Spain. Though Portuguese deserters had been encouraged by Spain, Spanish deserters had not been encouraged. Those who had any such intentions, were warned against such proceedings; but in Spain the Portuguese deserters had been collected and equipped; and, if Spain were not party to this, let it be said so. It was just to add, that France had been equally urgent against the proceedings in Spain. He had had no reason to question her sincerity and good faith. He had no reason to apprehend that war was inevitable. He did not dread war on account of our resources—he had faith in them—but he dreaded war from anxiety for the tremendous consequences that might be the result. Another general war would be of momentous consequence and weight; one of conflicting opinions; agitating all those who might be dissatisfied with their Government. It might be great to have a giant's strength—nobler to use;—it would be afflicting to let loose the passions of mankind. He would bear any thing rather than violation of honour and faith—rather than let loose the furies of war, therefore he had been slow for war. We went not to Portugal to rule or dictate—but foreign aggression shall not interfere with the Government of Portugal. There England has placed her standard, and there a foreign invader shall not come. (Cheers.) He concluded with moving an address on the Message.

Sir R. WILSON was glad at the course that had been resolved on. The invaders had Spanish arms in their hands. It was an effort to expel British influence. All the aggravations had been rather loosely and imperfectly stated. It had been mentioned as if there were room for repentance. All had taken place under the sanction of the Spanish Court. It was mockery to talk of faith with Ferdinand, who signed an amnesty at Cadiz, stating that it was the dearest act of his heart,—before the ink was dry, the same Ferdinand signed a most dreadful proscription. As long as France remained in Spain and Cadiz, the aid of France was in reality given. We are bound to require that France should withdraw her troops from Spain, which, left to its own means, would never think of such daring aggressions. He did not believe that the Spanish people were indifferent to liberal institutions and constitutional governments. He would avoid topics that might create dissension; he hoped there would be none. He trusted that there would not be greater expenditure than was absolutely necessary. He was for the contest—and whatever might be the result, if disaster instead of triumph, he should be prepared to take his share of it.

Mr. HUME thought the Right Hon. Gentleman had viewed only one side of the question. Treaties had been mentioned; he regretted that they existed, but it was morally impossible that we could ever receive any assistance in return. He thought they were about to plunge the country into a war most rashly. If we we were to keep faith with our ally, after the threat of "tremendous consequences," was faith with the public creditor to be violated? That was what was meant by the tremendous consequences that were to be apprehended. The standard of England was to be planted in Portugal, but was a case made out to warrant such a rash proceeding, leading to a war? Were we to sustain all the burdens, to find men and money? Could taxation be borne when there were such extreme distresses in the country?—It was not called for by any of the interests of this country. The Right Hon. Gentleman ought to have come to the House to propose the repeal of the Foreign Enlistment Bill—that Bill which had caused the ruin of Spanish interests. Was there any individual who would not say that the case came from France? If France were sincere, let her troops be withdrawn, the Foreign Enlistment Bill be repealed, and let Mina have the opportunity of returning. It was said to be a war against fanaticism; but why were we to be plunged into a war on such an account? He had only expressed his own opinion. If Portugal could not put down a few rebel regiments, it was madness for us to interfere—to brave that tremendous crush of which they had heard. He saw no good in the contest; he protested against it. All ought to be done before war was commenced. He thought we ought to take time to deliberate; as yet there had been no time to deliberate. The House ought to be called over, and the debate adjourned for a week. He should move that as an amendment.

Mr. WOOD (Preston) seconded the amendment, on the ground that the proceeding was precipitate; it was a vote for war; and those that voted for it must be ready to vote a large property tax and the Bank restriction to be re-enacted. (Hear, hear.) If he never gave another vote, he should be glad to have had the opportunity of giving this; and feeling assured, distressed as our country was, that this was a precipitate proceeding.

Mr. BARING said, that though he had listened to the Right Hon. Gentleman with the greatest desire to evade the vote for the Message, he confessed that he had failed; that there were the strongest grounds made for the Address. What was the use of talking about property tax and Bank Restriction Act—there was the national faith and national honour. The treaty might be imprudent—but was this the time to complain of it? However, as the steps taken by Government—he wished like resolution had been displayed on a former occasion. (Hear.) If the people in Spain were now, as was represented, favourable to its Government, now there could be no reason on the part of France for not withdrawing her troops. (Hear, hear.) It was not politic for us that France should have a political dictation and influence in Spain. He doubted not that there was a party in Spain stronger than the Government itself. The invasion of Spain, it was notorious to all, was carried by a bigotted party, against the opinion of the Minister, Villele. There was a party behind—whether France or Russia he knew not; but whether France was sincere or not, in its representations to the Right Hon. Gentleman, he felt quite assured that the Ministers were pursuing the right course.—(Cheers.) He felt that the country would go along with the Government, and that would secure adequate means. If the Government did not pursue such course, it would become absolutely contemptible.

Mr. BANKES said, a strong case had been made out, but he thought they ought not to view war as inevitable. It was said, that this message was only a protection for Portugal: let them not deceive themselves—it was a declaration of war against Spain.—(Hear!) However, the amendment he could not support.

Mr. BROUGHAM said, he could not give a silent vote after the part he had taken. He did not doubt the motives of the amendment—but to approve of it he could not. He wished war could be avoided; he wished he could see how it was to be avoided. Then he should have a mind more equable to listen to the calculations about cost; but there were times when it would be equally disgraceful to individuals and governments, to hesitate and compute items. The Treaties were binding—they could not be avoided; but the Treaty was termed improvident. That would have been a good argument in 1815; but it ought not to be made now—(Hear.) It was impossible to deny the force of the obligations. If they were violated, what would henceforth be said of us? Why, that we kept no faith; that it was useless to treat with us; that we broke our treaties whenever it suited our purpose. And how could we deny its accuracy? The argument was preposterous. As to the case, it was clear that there had been Spanish aggression on Portugal, at different places. Could credulity go the length of saying that all this was accidental? If there was any man who could doubt that the invasion of Portugal was known by, and authorised by, Spain, he might doubt the justice of interference by this country. He was astonished to hear from his Hon. Friend (Mr. Hume) that we should forfeit our natural faith because our finances were not in a state to go to war. Even if the country were willing to submit to the degradation, the question was, whether, for a precarious disgraceful postponement of war, they would incur the certainty of meeting it with loss of character.—(Hear, hear.) And they would find that the risking a small sum now would probably be repaid with compound interest, by preventing a war that would be infinitely more expensive. (Hear.) He was one of those who held that we were bound over, under heavy recognizances by our debt, to keep the peace; but even if the present measure should fail in preventing war, now that we had such truly English feeling governing our foreign affairs, and avowedly the organ of our Government, we had a bulwark which, if it did not enable us to meet the world in arms, made it eminently improbable that we should ever have that world to meet in arms. If it should happen, which God forbid, while the Government acted on those principles, and this country was true to itself, he, for one, had no fear for the result. (Immense cheering.)

Mr. BRIGHT said, the measure he feared must be considered preparatory to an extensive war. He had read the treaties referred to by the Right Hon. Gentleman (Mr. Canning,) and did not think that they bore his interpretation. There was no evidence that Spain was waging war with Portugal; and if there was, the treaty bound us to wage war with Spain with all our might, which we were not going to do. We were merely going to take military possession of Portugal, in the manner of an armed neutrality.

Mr. CANNING said, he had purposely understated the case against Spain, not wishing to state so much as might make war indispensable. The Hon. Gentleman who spoke last told Spain she had not done enough, that we thought nothing of what she had done; but called upon her to make a declaration of war, and we would meet her. His Majesty's Government saw the design of Spain to interfere hostilely with Portugal; and they said beware, if you proceed to war, we will meet you; and in the mean time we will protect our ally. If the whole of the papers were now laid on the table, it might take from Spain the opportunity of repentance, which he was still anxious to afford her; but if the time should unfortunately arrive, it would be found that it was not for want of evidence that the statement had not been stronger. War was to be avoided if possible; but now we had no choice; our faith and honour were pledged. The whole conduct of Spain had been to do those things against Portugal, which she implored us not to do against her when we passed the Foreign Enlistment Bill. He believed the effect of the French army in Spain at present was to protect that party they entered to put down; and that their withdrawing at present, in a moment of irritation, would produce a great excitement. The effect of the French troops in Spain was greatly exaggerated. Look back to Spain, that was to have swallowed up the world, and see how long England was in possession of a part of that Spain—the fortress of Gibraltar. The entrance of the French army into Spain was a disparagement to England: but he did not think the redress was to be found by blockading Cadiz. He looked to Spain and the Indies, and called the new world into existence to avenge the old. (Cheering.) The object of this measure was not war, it was the last chance for peace.—(Hear.) If they waited till Spain had actually declared war against Portugal, they will then have war in the train of degradation. You will have the war of the pacificators; and see how that war will end. (The Right Hon. Gent. sat down amidst immense cheering.)

The question being put, was carried without a division, four voices only having said No.

WEDNESDAY, Dec. 13.

ADDRESS TO THE KING.

Mr. Secretary PEEL returned his Majesty's answer to the Address, expressing satisfaction at it, and the conviction that the Ministers had pursued the true course to prevent a war with Spain, and to secure the integrity of Portugal. (Cheers.)

ADJOURNMENT OF THE HOUSE.

Mr. Secretary PEEL, in the absence of Mr. Canning, who was indisposed on account of the great exertion of last night, rose to move the adjournment of the House, till Thursday, Feb. 6. He took the opportunity of expressing the conviction, that the only course had been adopted that was consistent with the character of England; no other alternative was left. He hoped war might yet be avoided, but resistance to the aggressions of Spain had become absolutely necessary. It had been mentioned that the adjournment was unusually long, but, on the re-assembly of the House, the corn question was to be considered. It would be brought forward on Monday, Feb. 12.

NEWSPAPERS.

Mr. HUME gave notice of a motion for a return of the Stamp and Advertisement Duty for the last thirty years on Newspapers, with a view to show that the increase of the Duty had decreased the circulation.

Mr. BROUGHAM, in seconding the motion, took occasion to observe on the present state of the law of libel. At present it was one of the greatest opprobria of our country, that for a publication, however true, a person was as liable to prosecution by indictment, to conviction, and to punishment, as if it was entirely false. There were now two such recorded convictions in the Court of King's Bench—one of Mr. Hunt, for a libel in the Examiner. If any man published of another that he had been convicted of felony, even though he had the record of his conviction in his pocket, he would not be allowed to give it in evidence, but must, as the law at present stands, be as certainly convicted, as if he had published the grossest falsehood. This was the case in the trial of Mr. Hunt. The remedy proposed by the Bill he brought in was, that in every case, on giving due notice, the defendant should be allowed to give evidence of the truth of the publication, which however, should not necessarily be a justification, but should be taken into consideration by the Jury, if the defendant were found guilty by the Court in their judgment. He was much minded to broach the subject once more, and would be very glad if the Right Hon. Gentleman (Mr. Peel) would become the foster-father of the Bill, which he thought would insure its coming to maturity.

Mr. PEEL said that, on such a subject on which he had not had any notice, and in the absence of all the law officers of the Crown, he could not give any answer.

Mr. Hume's motion was then agreed to.

The House adjourned to the 8th of February.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

FRENCH PAPERS.

PARIS, DEC. 12.—This day the King opened the Session of the Chambers, at the Louvre. At a quarter before one the King repaired to the gallery of the Museum to the Royal Sitting. Their Excellencies the Ministers, the Grand Dignitaries, their Royal Highnesses the Duke of Orleans, the Duke de Chartres, and the Dauphin, preceded the King. A salute from 21 pieces of cannon announced the King's departure. A deputation of 12 Peers of France, having the Chancellor at their head, and a deputation of 25 Deputies, conducted by the officers of the ceremonies, went to receive the King in the hall adjoining the Mosaic Saloon.

The King then delivered the following speech :—

"GENTLEMEN—Important labours have been prepared for this Session. Certain of your zeal, I have not hesitated to anticipate the ordinary period of your convocation.

"Two codes will be submitted to your examination. They have for their object to perfect the legislation of forests, and to fix the rules of military jurisdiction. I have permitted few innovations to be made in this labour. The bases are founded on the present system of the army, and on the ordonnance of my august ancestor on forests.

"I could have wished that it had been possible not to direct your attention to the press, but in proportion as the power of publishing writings is developed, it has produced new abuses, which called for more extensive and more efficacious means of repression. It was time to put an end to its scandalous outrages, and to preserve the liberty of the press itself from the danger of its own excesses. A plan for attaining this object will be presented to you.

"Imperfections have been remarked in the organization of juries. I shall cause to be submitted to you a new project for their amelioration, and for establishing regulations more conformable to the nature of this institution.

"The penalties enacted against the slave-trade are not efficacious, and their application is capable of being eluded. A legislation more complete was necessary. I have directed the projects to be submitted to you.

"I continue to receive from all foreign Governments the assurance of the most amicable dispositions—and the most conformable to my own sentiments for the maintenance of peace.

"Troubles have recently broken out in a part of the Peninsula. I shall unite my efforts to those of my allies to put an end to them, and to prevent their consequences.

"The progressive increase of the produce of the indirect taxes will permit us this year to augment the funds appropriated to the public services, by a sum equal to that imposed by the last law of the finances.

"This augmentation will be a real relief to my people; it will ease the communes of the supplementary tax which they pay to their official servants, and the indigent classes will find abundant resources in the new activity which will be assumed in the public works, on our great roads, our fortresses, and our naval arsenals.

"I have reason to hope that the appropriations which will be made for the public services will be sufficient to meet all their wants for several years, and that I shall henceforth be able to apply the surplus produce to the reduction of the most burdensome taxes.

"Let us, gentlemen, render thanks to Divine Providence for a situation so favourable, and labour in concert to improve and confirm it, in order that my people may long enjoy its fruits. France, industrious and tranquil, will acquire new greatness, and her success in peace will not shed around her less lustre than would, once more, her warlike virtues, if honour should again oblige her to display them."

(From the Constitutionnel.)

PARIS, Dec. 13.—The last sentence of the King's speech has produced upon the Exchange the most instantaneous effect. Scarcely had it been pronounced at the Louvre, when it was already explained, discussed, and commented upon in the vicinity of the new Rue Vivienne; and if not the precise words, at least the meaning and import of them were already known at two o'clock upon the Exchange. Every one drew more or less weighty conclusions from it. It was mentioned, and repeated, whether men were well-informed, or whether they wished to aggravate the importance of the matter only, that this concluding sentence, or ministerial epilogue, had been afresh discussed last Sunday in the Council, which had been protracted till six in the evening. The names of those ministers were even mentioned who had voted in favour of this phrase, namely, Messieurs de Clermont Tonnerre, le Damas, de Doudeauville, and de Peyronnet; from whence it follows, Messrs. de Villele, Corbiere, d'Hermopolis, and Chabrol, had voted against it. By applying these words, "Her success in peace (speaking of France) will not shed less lustre than what her warlike virtues will shed, if honour compelled her to display them," to the disturbances in the Peninsula, the real or supposed disposition of England, the last news from Portugal, announcing a landing of British troops at Lisbon; in calculating the bearing of this phrase, speculators have drawn such fine conclusions from thence, that M. de Villele's 3 per cents. have fallen 70 cents. on the first course of exchange to-day, and about one franc on the course of yesterday.

(From the Quotidienne.)

The public having placed some confidence in our news respecting Portugal, which, though precocious, was true, we feel it a duty to add further information, sons to enable them to understand the relative position of the Royalists and Constitutionalists in that kingdom.

The Royalist refugees, as has been seen, have entered their country by four different points; but the divisions, after quitting the Spanish territory, formed themselves into two bodies; that of the North, which has taken Braganza, and that of the East, which occupies Villa-Viciosa, Estremos, and, perhaps, Elvas, one of the strongest places of Portugal. We left the army of the North marching with rapid strides, under the command of the Marquis of Chaves, to Oporto. It is not yet known whether that important city has fallen into the hands of this wing of the army. That of the East, as we have already observed, is found much nearer Lisbon; it has already passed through all the defiles of the mountains without any opposition. Separated from the army of the North by a great extent of territory, and particularly by the Tagus, it seems destined to operate by itself, and it is probable, that after it becomes augmented by the Royalists from the provinces on the right of the Tagus, it will attack the capital behind, while the army under the Marquis of Chaves will menace it on the side towards Coimbra.

According to the latest intelligence, this Royalist army of the East has taken up a position at Evora-de-Monte, which is two leagues beyond Estremos, on the road from Elvas to Lisbon. The Constitutional troops that had been sent against this body, possessed at the same period the city of Evora, seven leagues to the south of Evora-de-Monte. It was no doubt this relative position of both armies, that gave currency to the report that they were in presence of each other. It however appears, that the Constitutional Generals hesitated to approach the Royalists, on account of the doubtful fidelity of the troops which they have under their command.

We shall soon know whether the Constitutional army on the left bank of the Tagus has come to an engagement with the Royalist army opposed to it, or whether, uniting with it, it will immediately march on the capital, and thus terminate the disasters of Portugal.

We have had no news at Paris from Madrid since the 5th of December, but expect shortly to hear of something decisive.

We know that the Marquis de Moustier, our Ambassador at Madrid, demanded his conge some time ago, in consequence of the difficulty he felt in his perilous situation, when our Ministry abandoned him to his instinct, in order that, at a future period, they might have a pretext for disavowing his proceedings. The journals saw, for a long time, nothing but a recall in this conge, and continued under a deception until the Etoile announced, that by the consent of his Cabinet, he was to take his seat in the Chamber. M. Moustier was really recalled on account of his not having faithfully adhered to the instructions which he had received respecting the affair of the Peninsula. Thus, that which had been considered a favour, turns out to be a disgrace. We are assured that his recall was transmitted by an English courier. For some time past we have corresponded with Madrid only through foreign opportunities, and surely Mr. Canning will not complain that the portfolios of his diplomatists contain despatches, the object of which is to recall the French Ministers who do not submit to his policy.

MADRID, DEC. 3.—The Superintendant-general of the Police has addressed the following circular to his subordinate officers:—

"All the intendants of the police will send to the general superintendence, in the term of a month, on account of all the persons, whatever may be their ages, sex, and condition, who belong to one of the following descriptions:—Being attached to the constitutional system; having been in the national volunteers, whether infantry or cavalry; member of the sacred battalion, reputed a freemason, known as a communero, regarded as a liberal, or an acquirer of national property. Moreover, it must be added if the individual was a member of the Supreme Junta of Government at Madrid; whether he was a minister, a member of some tribunal, a deputy to the Cortes, or secretary or political chief, or employed in any other way; member or curator of any political society, a public writer, or any thing else that may give an exact notion of the opinions he held during the reign of the Constitution. The conduct which he has held since the fall of that system till the present time must be noted; and the influence he has, or may have, by his fortune. As soon as any individual included in the above description, or his servants, or his children, ask for passports to leave his parish, the Superintendant-general is to be immediately informed, mentioning the suspicions his movements occasion, excited by his political opinions. Unless such persons have proper motives for travelling, they are not on any account to receive passports in this case. The passports of every one attached to the constitutional system are to describe the villages he is to pass through, and where he is to stop, which will enable the authorities to watch his proceedings. The police officer who deviates in the least from these instructions shall be dismissed, and tried, and punished. Every police officer who denounces a union of persons meeting to consider the affairs of Government shall be rewarded with 1000 reals. If the meeting consists of more than six persons, and the house is suspected, he shall receive 2000, and be promoted.

"The circular is to be preserved among the secret papers.

"Madrid, Nov. 10, 1825."

INTELLIGENCE FROM PORTUGAL.

DEC. 14.—The rebels who penetrated into the province of Alemtejo, belong, at least the greatest part of them, to the regiment No. 2 of cavalry and No. 17 of infantry, who had formerly deserted from the same province. They were positively furnished by the spanish authorities with arms and every equipment, notwithstanding the repeated promises made by the Spanish Government.

The deserters who entered Portugal through the province of Tras-os-Montes, belonged to the regiments 11 and 24, and were headed by the Marquis de Chaves, bringing, besides, in their train, many individual deserters from other corps, a number of Spanish lancers, and several peasants, Portuguese and Spaniards, armed and embodied in guerillas, which devastate the dwellings and villages through which they pass.

The Portuguese Government seems to take all possible means to crush the rebellion. The corps which have already marched from Lisbon are all commanded by persons of undoubted confidence. The enthusiasm throughout all classes in Lisbon, and the resolution of maintaining themselves, and preserving for their descendants the institutions freely granted by a generous Sovereign, are as strong as can be wished; and the two Houses, composing the General Cortes, have shown great spirit, tempered by an admirable moderation. The militia has been armed in part, and a number of young men, belonging to the nobility of the kingdom, had armed themselves, and had already marched against the rebels.

The famous circular which the Spanish Government addressed to the Portuguese and other Governments of Europe, pretending the expedition to have advanced under specific orders for the disarming of Portuguese deserters, the expulsion from Spain of the Marquis de Chaves, and Viscount de Canellas, &c. &c. which has already appeared in the newspapers, is signed the 27th November, namely, the day after the Spanish Government was fully acquainted with the entrance of those deserters into Portugal, and of course, with the impossibility of the execution of those orders which they pretended to give, as all the arms belonging to the Portuguese deserters had been previously restored to them, and as the Marquis de Chaves had already entered Portugal when the order was issued for his leaving Spain. Never was a greater or more palpable perfidy than this, committed by the Government of a civilized nation. Observing the unanimity which prevails in all the sensible part of the Portuguese nation, it appears evident that great arts must have been practised, and much money expended, to seduce the ignorant soldiery, who cannot distinguish betwixt right and wrong, and who, unhappily accustomed to think themselves entitled to interfere in the political changes of their country, (all former attempts to that effect having succeeded and never been punished), were led by a few despicable, low, ambitious courtiers, to raise the standard of revolt, and light the fire-brands of civil war in the country of their birth, expecting to be held up as true Royalists, and being perhaps received as liberators by some poor ignorant peasants on the frontiers, into whom fanatical ideas had been inspired, and who thought that liberal institutions were necessarily levelled against religion and the King; but even from those, the sentiments publicly expressed by the first men of the nation, and by the Patriarch himself, and by the Bishops before the assembled Cortes, will have the effect of removing their delusion, and opening their eyes upon the subject

PORTUGUESE ARMY.

The following is said to be an exact account of the present strength of the Portuguese army, extracted from official sources:—The army is divided into two grand divisions, of which the first or principal is called the "Troop of the First line," and forms the active force. This division consists of 57,219 men, thus made up; 24 regiments of infantry, forming a total of 37,258 men; 12 regiments of chasseurs, 8,316 men; 12 regiments of cavalry, 7,140 men; four regiments of artillery, 3,568 men; a battalion of artificers, 681 men; and 4 companies of guides, 261.

The second grand division is called the "Troop of the Second Line," and is composed of the provincial militia corps. These are armed and clothed at the expense of the Government, but receive no pay. They consist, for the greater part of husbandmen, and others engaged in agricultural pursuits, and are not obliged to perform active duty, except in cases of emergency. Of course they are, or will be, called out without delay.

This second section of the army consisted in 1822, when it was last called out, of forty old regiments, presenting a body of 55,104 men; and four new regiments of 4,723 men.

From this it will be seen, that the Portuguese army, exclusive of the additional forces which may be now raised, amounts to nearly 120,000 men.

Orders have been issued, since the Insurgents have crossed the frontier, to the Superiors of the Convents, to send out of their walls numbers of young men on the conscript list, who had sought to evade the performance of military duty, by living with the Holy Fathers.

PREPARATIONS FOR WAR.

It is Lieutenant-Gen. Sir William Henry Clinton, G.C.B., Lieutenant-General of the Ordnance, who is to command the troops destined for Portugal.

At an early hour on Wednesday morning, the left wing of the 2d battalion of His Majesty's 3d Regiment of Foot Guards left Portman-street barracks, under the command of Colonel Bowater, for Portsmouth. They were drawn up in Birdcage-walk previous to marching, and quitted the Park amid numerous spectators. One division will, it is understood, proceed as far as Croyden, the other to Kingston, where they will remain for the night. The men seemed to be in excellent spirits. The troops chosen are chiefly veterans. The first battalion of the Duke of York's regiment, the 1st Regiment of Foot Guards, were ordered to leave Portsmouth barracks on Friday last, at one o'clock. There is a general order given for the cavalry at Knightsbridge to hold themselves in readiness. It is said, that two detachments of the Royal Horse Guards (blue) will be sent off in the course of the week.

Four companies of the Royal Artillery have received orders to prepare for embarkation.

One company of the Royal Staff corps is ordered to Portsmouth for embarkation.

A detachment belonging to the Waggon Train is ordered for embarkation.

The 1st battalion of the Grenadier Regiment of Guards, which was ordered to embark on Thursday, at Deptford, did not, owing to the transports not being ready, embark until Friday last.

The cavalry will be commanded by Col. Wyndham.

The 2d battalion of the 3d Regiment of Guards marched on Thursday for Portsmouth.

The 10th Hussars and the 12th Lancers are marching on to Oxford, where they are expected to arrive on the 20th inst.

The troops from Portsmouth will be conveyed to Portugal in four line-of-battle ships. Lord Amelius Beauclerk will have the command of the whole naval force. The two regiments at Cork, which had been destined for Jamaica, will also sail for Lisbon, and two regiments are expected there from Gibraltar. The appointments and arrangements for the aid to Portugal have been made, for the most part, on the suggestions of the Duke of Wellington.

About eight o'clock on Thursday morning the right wing of the 2d battalion of the 3d regiment of Foot Guards, left the Mews, Charing-cross, and proceeded to the Birdcage-walk, in Saint James's-park, where they were drawn up, and marched off, the band playing an enlivening air. The men were in most excellent spirits and condition. The crowd presented laurels to the soldiers as they passed along, and exclaimed, "Bravo, my boys, you are sure of success." Several of the spectators also shook hands with the officers, who appeared delighted with the good feeling and affection displayed towards them and the soldiers. At Battersea the band quitted the regiment, and they then proceeded with the "merry fife and drum."

Captain Fairfield, on the Birdeage-walk, unluckily lost his Waterloo medal; and although he offered a handsome reward to the finder to restore it, we did not hear that he succeeded in recovering it.

The 10th, North Lincoln Regiment of Foot, now stationed at Limerick, and the 11th, North Devon Regiment of Infantry, at present stationed at Waterford, have received orders to prepare for immediate embarkation at Cork for Portugal.

The bustle in sending off troops continues with increasing energy. The George the Fourth steam-boat, which arrived in the river on Wednesday from Lisbon, sailed on Thursday with 400 or 500 troops. The english merchants, who have large properties at Oporto, have applied to Government for immediate protection, the place being threatened by a column of 3,000 rebels.

At half-past eight o'clock on Friday morning the 1st Battalion of the 1st or Grenadier Regiment of Guards, consisting of about 600 men, left their barracks at Knightsbridge, and proceeded in marching order to the Birdcage-walk in St. James's Park, where the battalion halted for a few minutes, and being then joined by their respective Commanding Officers, they were marched off the ground for their destination, amidst the shouts of the populace, and three hurras from their comrades. The battalion is a remarkably fine body of men, and appeared in the highest spirits on taking leave of their friends. They marched for Deptford, where they embarked for Portugal, under the command of Colonel Lambert.—Captain Boldero is acting Brigade Major. The veteran Colonel Townshend superintended the embarkation. The troops were accompanied by 23 of those among their wives who happened to have no children. Four companies of Artillery are ordered to proceed to Portugal immediately.

The Guards arrived at Deptford Dock-yard on Friday at eleven o'clock in the forenoon, and in an hour were all on board and on the move. The vessels in which they are embarked for conveyance to the Nore are to be towed down the river by steam-boats.

The 1st division of the 4th (King's Own) Regiment of Foot embarked on the 13th inst., on board the Romney, of 30 guns, and the 2d division embarked on Thursday, on board the Pyramus, at Portsmouth, for Portugal.

The following was posted at Lloyd's on Friday, dated Portsmouth, 14th instant:—"Arrived the Fanny Voase, Lester, from Oporto, sailed 7th inst. She has brought passengers, who report the Spanish Ambassador was ordered away from Lisbon, at 24 hours' notice; but he had petitioned to remain a few days as a private individual. The rebels had pillaged, burnt, and destroyed the town of Braganza, and ill-treated the inhabitants. The Marquis of Chaves, alias Silveira, the commander of the rebels, had reached Merandella, according to report, and fears were entertained that they would attack Oporto. It was likewise reported, the Ministers of State, with the exception of two, had proved faithless. Nine English vessels were left at Oporto."

PRICE OF STOCKS UP TO FOUR O'CLOCK YESTERDAY.

BRITISH.

Bank Stock, 200½	Long Anns. 18¾
Red. 3 per Cent. 77⅞ 9¼	India Stock,
3 per Cent. Cons.	India Bonds, 13 15 prem.
3½ per Cent. Cons.	Exch. Bills, 1000, 4 6 pm.
3½ per Cent. Red. 85 4⅞ 5⅜	Do. 500, 5 8 pm.
New 4 per Cent.	Do. Small, 6 9 pm.
4 per Cent. 1826, 94¼	Cons. Acc. 79¾¼½ 80¾ 78⅞ 9¼¾½

FLUCTUATIONS OF THE WEEK.

Monday, 81¾ to 80½	Thursday, 78½ 79 to 77⅜⅞
Tuesday, 81 to 79⅞ to 80⅞	Friday, 78¼ 77⅝ 78¾
Wednesday, 80⅝ to 79½

FOREIGN.

French Funds, Dec. 13.—Five per Cents. 98f. 75c. 50c. 55c. 60c. 80c. 70c. 60c. 75c. Three per Cents. ex. div. 66f. 90c. 95c. 67f. 20c. 15c. Bank Actions, 2035f. Neapolitan, 75f. 75c. 71f. 80c. Spanish Bonds, 10½c.

Exchange.—One Month, 25f. 40c. paper; 25f. 40c. money. Three Months, 25f. 25c. paper; 25f. 25c. money.

Chilian Bds. 37	Do. for Acc. 64 5¼ 4½ 2¾ 3¼
Col. Bds. 31	Peruvian Bds. 30
Do. 1824, 34½ 4 3	Portuguese for Acc. 69
Do for Acc. 34 3	Russian Bds. 82
Danish Bds. 57 6½ 7½	Do. for Acc. 81¾ 2
Do. for Acc. 57 6¾ 7¼	Spanish Bds. 13½¼⅜
Greek Bonds, 1825, 17	Do. for Acc. 13½¾
Mex. Bds. 1825, 64½ 5 4¼ 2¾ 3¼

SECOND EDITION.

PRIVATE INTELLIGENCE FROM THE CITY.

(Half past Four, yesterday.)

The Stock Exchange during the week has been a scene of the greatest confusion in consequence of the effect the political changes have upon public securities. We have given above the closing price of the British and Foreign Funds yesterday, with the various fluctuations from day to day. The usual effect of the depreciation of stock, and the great speculation it engenders, has been apparent in the failure of seven brokers of some consequence in the Foreign Market, but who speculated largely in the British, during the past week. The names of the defaulters are—Edwards, Demetz, Ellison, Jones, and Kilner (the treasury broker) Gustavus, Flindt, and Wm. Newman, who were declared yesterday. In addition to being a defaulter, William Newman has added the crime of forgery, by which he obtained a cheque for 3,000l. the circumstances of which are briefly these. Newman forged the name of one of the Bank clerks, as the subscribing witness to a stock receipt for 4,000l. Consols. by which he obtained of another broker of the name of Edward Lynn, a cheque for 3,000l.; the party for whom the purchase was made, however, went to the Bank to accept his stock, when it was found no stock had been entered in the books, upon which the cheque was stopped at the clearing house, and Newman was taken into custody while entertaining a party of friends at dinner; he said he should have replaced it on the following day. The Committee of the Bank of England investigated the matter yesterday, but came to the decision not to prosecute, as they could not have suffered in any way by the fraud, and left it to the other parties to act as they thought proper.

A great number of other failures have occurred, but have been kept from publicity by private arrangement.

Yesterday, at the opening, a great change for the better took place in the money market, Consols having reached to 80⅝, which might be attributed to the favourable reports received from Oporto, and the advance in the French funds on Thursday, when the 3 per Cents. closed at 67f. 75c.; however, Consols afterwards declined, and the closing price was 79½. Among the absurd reports of the afternoon was a "Rebellion in Ireland," and "Press Warrants being out."

Letters from Paris of Thursday, state, that the panic on the French Stock Exchange on the news of the Message to the House of Commons, and the fall in our funds, was by no means great, and that among the leading capitalists there were very few sellers. The depression of 2½ per cent. appears to have been caused by a strong effort of the minor speculators, who, in Paris, find no difficulty in creating alarm among the small holders of Rentes. Our King's Message was, it is said, sent to Calais on Monday evening by the French Ambassador at our Court, and communicated, by telegraph, from Calais on the following morning: so that not only had the French Ministers intimation of what was intended, as communicated by Mr. Canning to the French Ambassador on Sunday, but they had even the Message itself before the King of France delivered his speech in the Chamber.

Every kind of produce in the colonial market has had a limited sale this week, but prices are decidedly improving. Sugars have advanced from 1s. to 2s. per cwt. since the warlike demonstrations. Rum has advanced about 2d. per gallon; this is to be accounted for particularly, from the small stock there is on hand, and from the large demands that are expected for it, for the use of the navy, should hostilities proceed. Coffee has improved less than any other description of produce, because the stocks are so heavy on the Continent and other places,

NOTICES TO CORRESPONDENTS.

The vast quantity of political matter, with which our columns are this week occupied, must plead as our excuse for any omission of acknowledgment to our numerous correspondents, and more particularly with reference to the "Richmond affair," which we pledge ourselves to enter upon fully on Sunday next.

Mr. Simon Gillivray's letter must consequently stand over until this day week.

THE AGE.

LONDON, December 17.

His Majesty's message to Parliament, and particulars of the proceedings attendant thereon, will be found in another part of our Paper.

The warlike "note of preparation," which has within these few days been sounded, has, we find, been echoed back from the remotest parts of the empire, and the feelings which it has inspired appear to pervade in common the breast of every one, however divided on a general score of polity they may otherwise be. The first consideration to which our attention has naturally been directed, arising from a dispassionate contemplation of passing events, is the situation of Spain, which country, whether acting under the latent dictates of another nation, or proceeding solely on the results of his own councils, is the one materially involved in this great national question. We do not feel, for a moment, that any other conduct was to be expected from the King of Spain, whether we regard him in his dethronement and exile, or in his first moments of restoration to regal sway—he was cradled in bigotry, and very early in life manifested the symptoms of his birthright—his rule has been one of fanatic despotism over his people, and broken faith to his surrounding allies—as the protector of religious influence, he has become in turns the tool and the fool of priesthood—as the ruler of an almost lawless empire, he has become subject to subjects; and as a man, he has sunk in comparison even with the most vacillating, inane, and faithless of the race. But from Spain itself, disregarding as a land the councils of any Cabinet which do not hold out to its people self-acquirement and self-security, the reverse of all which has thus far transpired was naturally to be anticipated. She should not have encouraged even the bare idea of annoying her neighbour (situated as that neighbour has so long been with England), even if France abetted her desires; for her crimson annals are easily referred to, and she will therein read, to what end her former combinations with France, against this country, eventually led. But if, as we are at present taught to believe, that France not only discourage such proceeding, but totally denounce the deed, the commonest understanding, her commonest sons possess, must point out to themselves the madness of her movements. With the recollection of our Peninsular career, alone, so recent in her mind, she never can entertain the wild notion of marshalling her arms against those of Great Britain; and in contemplating, therefore, the unprincipled step which she at length has taken, she must naturally have imagined, that we should withhold the assistance which Portugal might seek from us—an impression of policy none could receive, but either men the most shallow, or who think the faith of other realms, as worthless as their own.

But degenerate as the Cabinet of Madrid is, chimeras like to this have never been nourished by them, we are quite free to believe. Spain, if it has purposed to prosecute the invasion of Portugal at all, has calculated on the countenance of France, and certainly with some degree of propriety, when its most important fortress—Cadiz—was then, and is now, garrisoned by twelve thousand French troops—a circumstance which may lead, in many other quarters, to the same conclusion, notwithstanding the apparently satisfactory tone of his Catholic Majesty's Speech to the Chamber of Deputies. This, then, we may consider the precise light in which Spain stands per se, and in which she is regarded by all other European Courts—and by this standard of estimation she must be prepared to abide. An armament from this country is now on march to the relief of Portugal, whoever her invader may be—in the hour of her distress she called before on England, and England answered her request—she has summoned her friendly offices again, and once again they are furnished. It is impossible to enlarge upon the view which has been taken, of our alliance with Portugal, by Mr. Canning, in the speech delivered by him on Tuesday, in acknowledgment of the Royal Message—an oration combining the eloquence of any senatorial or forensic display, the annals of either bar can produce—and it is therefore to that masterly effort, which now stands in its force and beauty almost isolated on the records of Parliament, we would refer the anxiety and research of the reader.

To the situation of France, at this particular crisis, we are well aware the attention of Europe is even more directed than it is towards Spain, although the Monarch of that country has told his own Senate of his determination to unite with his Allies to preserve the tranquillity of the Peninsula, and Mr. Canning has echoed the same sentiments to ours; and although, as earnest of his Majesty's intention, he has withdrawn his Ambassador from the Court of Spain, and intimated to it, through his Charge d'Affaires, a recommendation to abstain from the line of conduct it is pursuing. If any illiberality of sentiment now prevail towards France, it must arise from the circumstance of its possession of Cadiz, at the very moment the Court of Spain is contemplating this invasion—for, in addition to the other pacific feelings towards Great Britain which France has in this business indicated, if it had marched the force it has there across the Ebro, there could not have been a solitary pretext for engendering a single doubt. We would have it expressly understood, that, as it is, we are not sceptics on the point—on the contrary, we have no doubt—and are only calling into question the grounds on which, we presume, have arisen the doubts of others.

The unanimity which prevails respecting the measures that have been taken by this Government, is to be rejoiced at, but not wondered at—Great Britain is taking a step she would take for the security of her her own possessions—but far beyond that consideration, she is maintaining the faith of nations. No country can have a greater claim to protection than Portugal—as the lever on which the safety of European liberty so long, and so lately, moved, she is entitled to a grateful return from all nations to whom she may have been the medium of conveying it—but she has still stronger claims, when we remember to what devastation her land has been reduced, in order to accomplish this object. Where she once rose up, in all the pomp and beauty of luxuriant nature, she afterwards became one scene of ruin—the verdure of her domain was trampled down, while its cultivators were contending upon it for common freedom—her towns became tenantless, and their halls shattered to the earth, and the mark of the spoiler was branded along her shores. A short reign of peace may have restored some portion of her primitive situation, and it is ther[illegible], a prevention of any future infringement, that t[illegible]ds, this contest acquired for her, must direct th[illegible] energy.

But we are unnecessarily anticipating; for, before we again address the public, the power of Great Britain will be landed on her shores, or riding the waves which wash them; and Portugal may, therefore, feel well secured, if the combined forces of the whole world were arraigned against her.

BOXIANA!

"We should be glad to know the precise meaning of the letters T. F. which he is to bear should he return to France. In English, with a dash between them, their meaning would be pretty evident; but in French they are not so easily understood; and we shall feel obliged to any one for an explanation."—Examiner.

" Nous répondons à l'Examiner que les lettres T. F. se traduisent en français par TRAVAUX FORCES.

Maintenant prenons la défense de Mr. Nicholas Bochsa. On accuse Monsieur Nicolas Bochsa de vol, de faux, de bigamie, en un mot, de tous les crimes les plus épouvantables. L'accusation doit tomber d'elle-même et en voici les preuves !

" Si Monsieur Bochsa était un voleur, Monsieur D'Egville qui est un parfait honnête homme serait-il en relation avec Monsieur Bochsa!....... Si Monsieur Bochsa était un faussaire, Lord Burghersh consentirait il à ce que Monsieur Bochsa fut chargé de diriger la conduite des jeunes élèves du conservatoire!....... Si Monsieur Bochsa était condamné pour Bigamie, quelle mère voudrait que Monsieur Bochsa se présentât chez elle pour donner des leçons à sa fille!........

" Si Monsieur Bochsa était condamné aux galeres à perpétuité, ne serait-ce pas l'homme le plus infâme ou plutot le scélérat le plus exécrable et le plus impudent ....et aurait-il sollicité des places et à l'opéra et au conservatoire!.. ....Enfin si Mr. Bochsa n'était qu'un galérien échappé de France, les Curioni, les Spagnoletti, les Dumont, les Puzzi, les Torri, les Debegnis, les D'Egville, les Burghersh, risqueraient-ils un seul instant à être souillés par le contact d'un monstre tout dégoutant de crimes, comme le serait dans ce cas Monsieur Bochsa! .... Donc L'Examiner, L'harmonicon, Le Globe, Le Courier, Le New Times, Le Times, Le Morning Herald, et la plupart des journaux anglais sont des imposteurs et Monsieur Bochsa est la crême des honnêtes gens!!!—Le Mercure de Londres!

We entertained some faint hopes that the severe castigations which Mr. Hume has met with, from time to time, in the course of his Parliamentary career, for that laughable system of meddling on which he seems to have existed, would at least have taught him moderation and forbearance—to have expected good manners or intellect from him, was totally out of the question.

It will be remembered that some evening, in the week preceding the one now departed, Mr. Hume came under the lash of Lord Palmerston's irony, for the most impudent and unjustifiable motion a Member of Parliament could possibly make, respecting a subject not coming strictly within the pale of Parliamentary scrutiny, and of which, even if it had, he was evidently as ignorant as the floor he was standing upon. His language was not merely ungentlemanly and ignorant, but betrayed a total want of that tact which can alone compete with a person of the Nobleman's talents, to whom he was opposed; and consequently, when he found himself defeated in every position he had taken up, he had no other resort to fly to, than a most disgusting obstinacy. The tirade which was cannonaded against him by Lord Palmerston, is so fresh in the reader's mind, as to render its repetition unnecessary; but had it been of double violence, it would have produced no more effect on the impenetrable thickness of this man's skull, which he suffers to be beaten about by the anvil of one orator, and then another, as blacksmiths would a piece of iron. In spite of all this, there is no one so inimical to the absurdity Mr. Hume is so frequently guilty of, as to suppose, after such a thorough racketing as he received on this occasion, that he would so impose himself again, at least in the present session. But Josephus is a man not to be discouraged, either by laughter, ridicule, or abuse; and we should really doubt whether he would not rather put up with the next step to words, than be put down altogether. It is not on the records of Parliament, that an oration ever received more spontaneous approbation (the vehemence, attendant on which was most palpable on the opposition benches) than the brilliant speech of Mr. Canning on Tuesday. His Address, and the Motion which followed it, drew forth the unanimity of the full assembled Senate, and the orator sat down amidst the satisfaction and delight of his hearers—but no sooner had he so done, than Joseph popped up, and after talking a profusion of nonsense, received by the titters and contempt of the whole House, he moved an amendment to the Minister's motion. Hume's amendment! thrown in amidst the eloquence of Mr. Canning and Mr. Brougham! It is impossible to conceive a greater specimen of presumption—some of the oldest and ablest Members of the Senate wisely maintaining a proper silence during the delivery of these fine harangues, and on their termination most enthusiastically cheering them, and when every other person deemed it expedient and respectful to second the Address, the ignorant Representative of a Scotch burgh, presuming to throw out his trumpery opposition!! They had really better send the man to Bedlam at once.

BALL HUGHES was supping with a party the other evening at the Clarendon, and ordered for himself some "Colchester natives." A friend of his from Paris, who happened to come in shortly after, asked BALL what he had been eating? to which he replied, "Les habitants de Colchester"—which we need hardly say induced the Frenchman to look upon BALL HUGHES, for the rest of the evening, as a perfect cannibal.

CROSS READINGS.

We have received a long string of this odd jumble of language, and, just to flatter a correspondent who has been useful on other points, we suppose we must insert it. We should, however, apprize him, at the time we are meeting his wishes, that we cannot commit ourselves a second time in such a way; because, though there may be considerable ingenuity in compositions of this description, it is but a hackneied subject after all, and one the style of which is attained by many people, both with ease and ability. As they are, we present them to the reader, who ought, under any circumstances, to be particularly obliged to us, if, amidst the gloom, the rain, and the dirt of December, we can, by any process, extract a smile from his countenance.

Our Correspondent informs us, that on looking over the last quarter's file of one of the morning papers, his attention was attracted by some movements of great, as well as little, people—by the passing occurrences of the day—by sundry curious advertisements—by an occasional display of quackery and conceit, politics and passiveness, fashion and folly, almost in the same column—and that, having cut the passages out relating to all the pretensions we have here enumerated, he threw them into the wheel (which has been kept unemployed since the abolition of Lotteries) and after sundry evolutions, drew them out, and in again reading over the commingled mass, he found that by a Liverpool Paper of the 5th instant, one hundred and twenty-seven ladies of that town were lately, pickled and preserved, warranted to keep in the warmest climates; and that Mr. BALL HUGHES, some time since, increased his establishment, by taking in a lady's-maid, who can make herself useful in any capacity, and whose superfluous hairs are removed, under the patronage of the Earl of HARBOROUGH; for which reason, Miss A. TREE, who was passing down Parliament-street the other evening found, on admission to the gallery, the noes had it; for his Royal Highness the Duke of YORK is gradually recovering from his severe indisposition, through an excellent cook, who has lived many years in France, and the last new novel of "Almack's," which is not written by Lady FOLEY, but is supposed to be the production of a stray lamb, which has been regularly washed in ROWLAND'S Kalydor, by particular desire of Mr. RAIKES, who, on seeing YOUNG play Richard III. last Monday week, gave his evidence before the Jury, who returned a verdict of "Wilful Murder," and shortly after attended a distinguished party in Soho-square, where Mr. HORACE TWISS was acting tom-fool of the evening, and the Honourable EDWARD PETRE, who takes in washing at 10*l.* per quarter, while the mangling is done by JOSEPH HUME, M. P. who, on hearing Lord GLENGALL'S statement at White's, declared there was not a syllable of truth in such a report, that POPE, of Drury-lane Theatre had at a short notice undertaken to eat the best part of a haunch of venison, with one moderate sized tureen of Turtle, and a quantity of brown-stout, which Miss ——— has lately laid in, by the assistance of Sir GEORGE SMART, who says, that the paragraph in the Morning Herald, speaking of the late attempt on the life of a distinguished actor, is boding no good to the memoirs of a celebrated actress, just published, at the express desire of the Mendicity Society, which caused the stocks to fall to 79 5-8.

It is impossible to deny that this "motley mixture of the great and base" did make us laugh; and if it should have the same effect upon those who peruse it, we shall regret that our limits would not permit of our enlarging thereon.

LIBEL.

The law upon this point appears to be, at present, so totally undefined, that no positive conclusion can be arrived at. The recent cases which have come under public examination seem to be, in their decision, so much at variance with all precedent, that if the convictions lately passed be acted upon, either the free operations of the press will become suspended, or the judgments, under which their conductors will have to struggle, must be examined solely by reference, and the authority, by which they are given, be questioned by past events of similar character. The law of libel, as lately enforced in many instances, is calculated to destroy the organization of public morals, and the respectability of private society, both of which it was originally made to protect—for the purposes of a newspaper, which should be bent on promulgating the vices and abuses committed by either, will obviously be defeated—if publicity be held amenable to law, publicity will never be given; and silence, in most cases, is little better than connivance.

But the better way to bring this vital question before the public, is to proceed upon precedent, and if any of us are in error, to examine the basis upon which our errors are founded. Supposing, for instance, CHARLES WRIGHT, the renowned composer! (as SHERIDAN, on one occasion, called MICHAEL KELLY) was as celebrated, as he now is, some years ago, and had been sitting out O'KEEFE'S farce of the Son-in-law, and heard old Vinegar, on being asked by old Cranky to drink a glass of his wine, exclaim, "Your wine! I'd rather drink any other person's,"—or, supposing he had seen GRIMALDI in a bye-gone Pantomime, after drinking a glass of Champagne, cry out, "real PAIN," and leave the stage (holding his sides, as if he were griped by a vice)—why, the said CHARLES WRIGHT would have settled their business in a twinkling, as he did that of the Literary Gazette the other day. In times like these, if Mr. KEAN should return to play Richard III., he will not dare to deliver the following couplet, respecting conscience:—

> "Your lank-jaw'd hungry judge will dine upon it,
> And hang the guiltless, rather than eat his mutton cold!"

or, if he should, he will be committed by Judge PARK, on the Vagrant Act, and for contempt of Court also: and were CIBBER now living, he would be imprisoned for his natural life for writing it. Then, again, suppose that loyal and patriotic little gentleman, Mr. SHIEL, were, in any tragedy he might in future submit to the judgment of his English admirers, insert such a passage, as the following one, from his Evadne—

> "COL. I see your courtiers here do stand amazed.
> Of them I first would speak—There is not one
> Of this wide troop of glittering parasites,
> That circle you, but in soul
> Is your base foe. These smilers here, my liege,—
> These sweet melodious flatterers, my liege,—
> That flourish on the flexibility
> Of their soft countenances,—are the vermin
> That haunt a prince's ear with the false buzz
> Of villanous assentation.—These are they
> Who from your mind have flouted every thought
> Of the great weal of the people.—These are they
> Who from your ears have shut the public cry,
> And, with the poisoned gales of flattery,
> Create around you a foul atmosphere
> Of unresounding denseness, thro' the which
> Their loud complaints cannot reverberate,
> And perish ere they reach you.
> Do not think
> Because you load your people with the weight
> Of camels, they possess the camel's patience.
> A deep groan labours in the nation's heart:
> The very calm and stillness of the day
> Gives augury of the earthquake. All without
> Is as the marble smooth, and all within
> Is rotten as the carcase it contains;
> Tho' ruin knock not at the palace-gate,
> Yet will the palace-gate unfold itself
> To ruin's felt-shod tread.—
> Your gorgeous banquets—your luxuries—your pomps,
> Your palaces—and all the sumptuousness
> Of painted royalty, will melt away."

—why, he would instantly be committed to the Tower, and, probably, be beheaded into the bargain. As for GEORGE COLMAN, if he were to put into the mouth of any character such a line as this, in that of Job Thornberry, "People of fashion don't forgive, but braziers' do," he would no longer be "a beef-eater now;" and, if he should increase the offence, by making a justice say,

> "There are but two reasons for not trusting an attorney with your money:—one is, when you don't know him very well; and the other is, when you DO!!!"

or any other person deliver such irreverent language as this (which, it should be observed, is put by COLMAN in the mouth of a magistrate *!)—

> Simon Rochdale (vide JOHN BULL!)
> "Damn it, how like a modern man of the world that is!"——"Damn me, my dear Tom, if he isn't a brazier!!!"—"Oh, damn it, choose your own reading, and I'm content."——"Damn it, my dear lad, why can't you perceive I am laboring this marriage for your good?"——"Damn me! if it isn't the brazier!"——"Oh, damn the New School!"——"I don't know in what quantities you may sell brass at your shop; but when you come abroad, and ask a Baronet to marry his son to your daughter, damn me, if you ar'n't a wholesale dealer!"

—he would be, first of all, indicted by the Society for the Suppression of Vice, and then sent by Sir RICHARD BIRNIE to the Brixton Tread Mill. Another gentleman, Mr. FREDERICK REYNOLDS, the Dramatist, has ventured, in his Life and Times, to say of the late Mr. PITT, with reference to his haughty and independent bearing, that "he never once saw the floor of the House of Commons"—only let him say it again of any Member of the present Administration, and Mrs. COUTTS falling on him, even if he had no armour on, would be mercy to what he would have to endure for such an atrocious libel on a Member of Parliament; or only, by the same argument, let the mild, unoffending, talented Mr. ROGERS, who wrote this epigram on a celebrated M.P. who had annoyed him—

> "They say he has no heart, but I deny it,
> "He has a heart—and gets his speeches by it!"

ever again send forth to mankind so gross an opinion of the intellectual and personal qualifications of a British senator, and the commitment of such a breach of privilege will soon make the transit, from St. James's-place to Newgate, a very short affair.

The old saying of "truth being a libel" has lately been held in so much estimation, that however salutary the lessons, we have herein laid down, may be, it is not to these arguments alone, a writer of the present times must direct his attention. He has to make choice between the punishment for telling truth, and the stigma of telling a lie, and we, for one party, shall not hesitate in future, as long as we do write, to adopt at least the safe side of the question, however much, in so doing, we may endanger the morals of the people, or compromise our own. At the time those memorable events occurred, we did think that Dr. DODD and Mr. FAUNTLEROY were hung for forgery, and Messrs. THISTLEWOOD and Co. "departed this life" on a charge of high treason—we do not think so now, particularly as they may happen to have litigious executors, and therefore have no doubt, that their mode of exit "from this sublunary sphere" was entirely a matter of choice, though we differ with them in opinion, as to the choice they made. Our lament over the death of a former minister, consequently becomes less painful, when we are bound to believe, or at least to say, that it was occasioned by a political duel, and not by assassination—and all the denominated murders of late years are, comparatively speaking, respectable transactions, from the conviction we now must have of their being merely justifiable homicides. With this view of things, therefore, our literary fraternity will be enabled pro futuro to proceed in safety, secure from consequences falling upon themselves, and seeing that the lawgivers of the land will guard against the consequences which may fall upon the public; and they will therefore only have to follow the example of some, even "of high degree," whom we could name, that never have spoken or written one libellous line, from never in their lives having spoken or written one word of truth.

* According to Bow Street calculation (viz. 5s. per damn), this would amount to 1l. 15s.—but being a Magistrate, we think (with all respect to Mr. COLMAN) that Sir SIMON ought to be charged double.

THEATRICALS.

The Lottery Ticket, produced at Drury Lane Theatre on Wednesday, is one of the most agreeable bagatelles we have witnessed for many seasons, and having seen the original, from which we find Mr. BEAZLEY has so dexterously translated it, at the Tottenham Street Theatre, a few evenings before, we are enabled to draw a comparison, which to our faculties is decidedly in favour of the former. After witnessing the debut of Mr. LAPORTE in Amphytrion, we delivered an opinion on the following Sunday, that the dulness so discernible in its performance was greatly to be attributed to the omission of the music and paraphernalia, incidental to the piece, and that if LAPORTE was tried in something of a lighter character, the management would find its account in him. How far we were right, let the attraction to his present performance of Wormwood testify—the houses having been, as we are informed, literally crowded to every repetition of it. Of his representation of this character, it is quite impossible to be too laudatory—his action, though so nicely managed as if it were regulated by machinery, is still free, and never redundant, while his versatility of countenance, voice, and manner, are more decidedly comic, than those of almost any English artist we ever saw. As two peculiar features in his Wormwood, we cannot omit a notice of the excessively ludicrous manner in which he begs that his nose may be pulled, and the tone in which he says of the Lottery Ticket, where W. BENNETT rushes into his arms, "it is a blank." The extreme approbation which attends LAPORTE'S performance in this clever piece, though a very flattering testimony of his abilities, is not the most satisfactory one that a Manager looks for, in an actor—he is drawing more than applause—he is drawing a vast deal of money, and, if "nursed and taken care of" (we are using, we believe, technical words) during the remaining part of his visits to London, Mr. PRICE will find this "Lottery Ticket" as fine a Prize, as was ever distributed by his temporary predecessor in the Drury Lane Management.

We have been prevented hitherto of saying a word of another late farsical production at this theatre, entitled White Lies, but it has not proceeded from disinclination or displeasure, but from a want of limit, which is a plea we must even make to-day. We can, however, find just room enough to say that the success it has experienced, must be very mainly attributed to the inimitable performance of HARLEY, whose contortions convulsed the audience with laughter, throughout its representation.

In reference to the comments we last week thought proper to make, on the appearance of Mr. LISTON before his MAJESTY in a Court-suit, on the occasion of the KING'S late visit to this theatre, we perceive the following paragraph has figured in most of the daily papers; and, from its minuteness, we presume it comes from "Authority:"—

> Mr. Liston was in attendance upon His Majesty at his entrance on the evening the King visited Drury Lane, at the express desire of persons immediately connected with His Majesty, and from no "desire to intrude" on the part of Mr. Liston himself. The King, however, from Liston's having accidentally been engaged with Mr. George Colman, whilst the royal procession passed, did not see Mr. Liston, until he appeared with the whole company, and joined in the chorus of "God save the King."—Evening paper.

There can be no doubt that this is all very satisfactory to the parties concerned, but to us it certainly does appear very odd, that Mr. LISTON'S state appearance should be by the desire of some persons connected with the Court, while it intended to convey, that it received the ROYAL sanction, and yet his MAJESTY never saw Mr. LISTON, till he went to join in "God save the King;"—very funny all this. However, we beg most distinctly to be understood, as intending nothing unpleasant or unfeeling to Mr. LISTON, whose abilities we must ever speak of with the highest admiration; and, to the shrine of which, none of his admirers pay more willing, or more frequent homage, than ourselves—but even if we had so intended, it should not be so received, for, finding by the Drury Lane play-bills that Mr. LISTON makes "his first appearance this season" to-morro night, we joyfully come to the fact, that Mr. LISTON, did not appear on the evening in question; and, consequently, we have been directing our remarks all along evidently against his fetch!

The Pantomime toesin has been sounding throughout the week, to the inexpressible delight of all the open eyes, mouths, and hands, who are hastening to town for the Christmas holidays—Mother Shipton (one of RICH's best pantomimes) at Covent Garden, and the Man in the Moon, (said to be one of BARRYMORE's best Pantomimes) at Drury-lane, while the Adelphi, determined not to be outdone, at least in nomenclature, is not satisfied with simply the Man in the Moon, but adds thereto, "His wife."—We wish them every success, and would not miss them, even, in these warlike times, to be Colonel of the Tipperary militia.

LITERATURE.

Whims and Oddities, by T. HOOD—1 vol. octavo. LUPTON RELFE.

We exceedingly regret that our limits will not enable us to do the justice we could wish, to this volume of genuine wit. Mr. HOOD's former publication, and more particularly his design of the progress of cant, had prepossessed us highly in his favor: but the work now under our consideration, is as much beyond its predecessor in point of humour, as its predecessor was beyond most of its contemporaries. If we look round our present sphere of wit, thickly studded as it may be, and even there reading the names of COLMAN, REYNOLDS, MORTON, SMITH, HOOK, PEAKE, POOLE, and others, we are still free to say, that the author of Whims and Oddities may take his station by the side of any of them, and shine out with equal lustre. Among the etchings, may be particularly noticed, that of some little boys cleaning out a sugar-cask, and imbibing one anothers' fingers, under which the designer has written, "There's nothing half so sweet in life"—then, a rat between a dog and cat, exclaiming, "How happy could I be with either," and a tail-piped dog ejaculating, "Oh, listen to my tale of woe." There are many others equally admirable, and with reference to the poems, which some of them illustrate, we are sorry we cannot give more than one extract—but in submitting the ballad of Nelly Gray to our readers, we can assure them there is no composition in the volume, that is not as replete with infinite humour and point, as that embodied in the following:—

FAITHLESS NELLY GRAY.

A PATHETIC BALLAD.

Ben Battle was a soldier bold,
And used to wars alarms;
But a cannon-ball took off his legs,
So he laid down his arms!

Now, as they bore him off the field,
Said he, "Let others shoot,
For here I leave my second leg,
And the Forty-second Foot!"

The army-surgeons made him limbs:
Said he,—"They're only pegs:
But there's as wooden members quite
As represent my legs!"

Now, Ben he loved a pretty maid,
Her name was Nelly Gray;
So he went to pay her his devours,
When he devour'd his pay!

But when he called on Nelly Gray,
She made him quite a scoff;
And when she saw his wooden legs,
Began to take them off!

"O, Nelly Gray! O, Nelly Gray!
Is this your love so warm?
The love that loves a scarlet coat,
Should be more uniform!"

Said she, "I loved a soldier once,
For he was blythe and brave;
But I will never have a man
With both legs in the grave!

Before you had those timber toes,
Your love I did allow,
But then, you know, you stand upon
Another footing now!"

"O, Nelly Gray! O, Nelly Gray!
For all your geering speeches,
At duty's call, I left my legs
In Badajos's breaches!"

"Why, then," said she, "you've lost the feet
Of legs in war's alarms!"
And now you cannot wear your shoes
Upon your feats of arms!"

"O, false and fickle Nelly Gray!
I know why you refuse:—
Though I've no feet—some other man
Is standing in my shoes!

I wish I ne'er had seen your face;
But now a long farewell!
For you will be my death;—alas!
You will not be my Nell!

Now, when he went from Nelly Gray,
His heart so heavy got—
And life was such a burthen grown,
It made him take a knot!

So round his melancholy neck,
A rope he did entwine,
And, for his second time in life,
Enlisted in the Line!

One end he tied around a beam,
And then removed his pegs,
And, as his legs were off,—of course,
He soon was off his legs!

And there he hung, till he was dead
As any nail in town,—
For though distress had cut him up,
It could not cut him down!

A dozen men sat on his corpse,
To find out why he died—
And they buried Ben in four cross-roads,
With a stake in his inside!

STAFFORD ELECTION.

DEC. 13.—FIRST DAY'S POLL.

On the recent death of Mr. Ironmonger, Mr. Richard Spooner and Sir W. Wynne for some weeks canvassed the borough. A fortnight since, Sir W. Wynne withdrew his pretensions, and the party of the latter gentleman were greatly puzzled to supply his place. A deputation was dispatched to solicit Mr. Campbell to renew his former contest on the same interest, which that gentleman is understood to have immediately declined. For several days the party were completely at fault, and unable to meet with the object of their journey—a monied candidate. On Friday last the deputation arrived in Stafford with Mr. Beaumont, the ex-Member and unsuccessful candidate for Northumberland. On Saturday and Monday, that gentleman, a perfect stranger to the town, commenced an active and general canvass; the result, of course, is announced in his hand-bills, after the manner of Napoleon's bulletins, as ensuring success.

When the London post-bags were closed, the poll was as follows:—Beaumont, 53; Spooner, 36.

DEC. 14.—SECOND DAY'S POLL.

The first day's poll closed at four last night, and was declared as follows:—Beaumont, 136; Spooner, 127.

This morning the poll opened late. At 11 o'clock it was as follows; Beaumont, 187; Spooner, 162.

DEC. 15.—THIRD AND LAST DAY'S POLL.

The poll of last night (the second day) closed at four o'clock, as follows:—Beaumont, 245; Spooner, 181; and the increasing majority, during the whole day's polling, predicted the result, and final success of Mr. Beaumont.

This morning, after two or three burgesses had polled, the return was signed, and Mr. Beaumont declared duly elected. The chairing closed the week's uproar and excitement.

LORD HASTINGS.—The report in the French papers of the death of Lord Hastings is but too true. He died in consequence of the accident (a fall from his horse), producing some mischievous effect upon the hernia he had long laboured under.

We regret to state that Lord Kinnaird died on Monday morning last, at his house in Regency-squre, Brighton. His Lordship had for some time been in a very hopeless state. He was elder brother to the Hon. Douglas Kinnaird. The deceased was in the 47th year of his age.

The Duke of York makes his visit to the Duke of Rutland at Belvoir Castle in the Christmas week.

Lord Liverpool, whose attack of bilious fever was very severe, together with inflammation in his eyes, is proceeding favourable to convalescence.

The Duke of Richmond had a severe bilious attack towards the end of last week, but is now better.

Bolivar's plan of a Constitution for Bolivia has been unanimously adopted by the Constituent Assembly of that Republic.

By intelligence from Lima it appears that Bolivar was extremely unpopular, and that serious conspiracies had been formed against his life, in which several military officers of high rank were implicated. Executions had followed; and General Correa, one of those in custody, had cut his throat while in prison.

THE LATE MR. FARQUHAR.—Administration of the estate and effects of this weal hy man has been granted, by the unanimous consent of the parties interested, to J. F. Fraser, one of the nephews. The property is chiefly personal (the splendid estate of Fonthill having been sold by Mr. Farquhar some time previous to his death), and will, therefore, be divided equally among his nephews and neices. There are three nephews, viz.—George Mortimer, James Mortimer, and J. F. Fraser; and four nieces, who are married to the following gentlemen:—Sir William Temple Pole, Bart. James Lamsden, William Aitkin, and P. Trezevant, of America. It is supposed that the share of each will be about 100,000l. The landed property is comparatively small, and will go to the heirs-at-law.

Mr. Peel gave notice on Wednesday, that the subject of the Corn Laws will be brought before Parliament on the 12th of February, when the views of his Majesty's Ministers will be fully explained.

It is a coincidence not a little curious, that the panic of 1825 commenced, with the failure of the houses of Pole and Co., on Saturday, the 10th of December; that of 1826 commenced on Monday the 11th of December.

DOVER, DEC. 13.—Expresses between this country and France have passed very rapidly within the last few hours. No less than four despatch boats have arrived within as many hours from the other side, and another is now in sight. Latchford, the King's messenger, arrived by the Spitfire, on Friday from Calais. He passed a number of couriers on the road to Paris. A person, said to be an Austrian messenger, and who arrived too late for the packet, hired a vessel to take him to Boulogne. Sailed His Majesty's packet Fury, with the mails and passengers for Calais.

The General Steam-Navigation have very promptly offered the whole of their fleet, consisting of between 20 and 30 vessels, for the use of His Majesty's service on the present emergency. The Sir Edward Banks has, in consequence of this offer, been ordered by Government to be in readiness to proceed this day with one of His Majesty's messengers to Lisbon.

It will be seen, from the Parliamentary Reports, that Cobbett does not go on with his petition against the return for Preston. After all his blustering on the hustings, about the grand doings which were to take place next Spring, when the Preston people were to be treated with a new election, the members now in Parliament are not to be disturbed. We suppose Sir Thomas Beevor has become more careful of his money, and Cobbett is too wise to think any promise of his ought to be kept, which would cause him to spend a shilling in the cause of truth.

It is said, in letters from Paris, that some weeks ago, before the decision of the British Cabinet could have been dreamed of at Paris, a formal and peremptory communication proceeded from the hand of Charles X. himself, to Ferdinand, fixing a very early day in the approaching spring for the unconditional evacuation of the Spanish territory by the French forces. This we belive to be the fact. The Court of France could not adopt a measure more graceful in itself, or more tranquillizing to Europe, than the publication of that letter of King Charles, with the date of it. Nothing could more thoroughly demonstrate to the French people that their Sovereign was a spontaneous and determined friend to the harmony of councils which he professed with Great Britain, than this precedency of his promise to evacuate Spain, as compared with the date of the English Message and with the arrival of the Intelligence which produced it.—Times.

According to accounts from Constantinople, in the foreign papers, the late conspiracy was the work of a man named Luledji Ahmed, one of the lowest of the populace, and belonging to the sect of the Bekalchis. He spread reports of the re-establishment of the Janissaries, and induced a number of the soldiers of the new organization to join him in a plot to kill the officers of Mehemet Pacha's corps, after which they were to bring about an insurrection in Constantinople. The plot was discovered by some Topchis, and the troops implicated were on the 11th of October removed to the Dardanelles. Luledji Ahmed, being put to the torture, confessed every thing to the Grand Vizir, adding, "Had I succeeded, my name would have been immortal; but though I have failed, I have at least succeeded in giving you reason to distrust your new troops, and in teaching them to hate you."

APPEALS IN THE HOUSE OF LORDS, DEC. 13.

The Clerk read at the table the final Judgment of the House, in an Appeal from the Court of Session, in Scotland.

DICK, APPELLANT, V. DONALD, RESPONDENT.

This Appeal, which was heard at the Bar, on Wednesday, the 29th ult., relates to the validity of a title to a villa, in the neighbourhood of Glasgow, called Prospect Hill, which had been purchased at a public auction, on the 31st of January, 1817, by the appellant, from the respondent, in his character of trustee, on the sequestrated estate (or, as we should say, in this country, assignee on the bankrupt's estate) of James Corbet, formerly agent in Glasgow.

It appeared, from the pleadings, that the property had been conveyed, by a person of the name of M'Kendrick, not to the bankrupt himself, but to his wife (Mrs. Corbet), who, however, being satisfied that the property had been purchased by the money of her husband's creditors, transferred it to the respondent, for their benefit. In the conditions of sale, the respondent became bound to execute and deliver to the purchaser "a valid irredeemable disposition (assignment) of the aforesaid subjects;" but the only title, which he had to offer to the appellant, consisted—First, of the conveyance, by M'Kendrick to Mrs. Corbet—Secondly, of that lady's conveyance to the trustee—Thirdly, of the deed of transfer, by the trustee to the appellant.

The legal question raised by this Appeal came, therefore, to be, was this a sufficient title?

The Court of Session had repeatedly decreed, "That the respondent is not bound, at the expense of the bankrupt-estate, to make any addition to the title offered by him, but that he is bound, at the risk and expense of Mr. Dick (the appellant, to concur in any supplementary title he may wish to have executed." The Court also awarded costs to the Respondent.

The LORD CHANCELLOR, after a few observations, moved, "That the Decrees of the Court below be reversed; and that the cause be remitted back to that Court, with directions to take all proper steps for carrying this judgment into execution."

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

COURT OF CHANCERY.—WEDNESDAY, DEC. 13.

THE LORD CHANCELLOR'S HEALTH.

We were extremely sorry to observe that his Lordship had much difficulty in reaching his seat on the bench to-day, assisted by two attendants, from an attack of the gout. His Lordship stated, that he was suffering considerably, and was not sure whether or not he would be able to come out to-morrow, but that he should if possible.

IN THE MATTER OF WILLIAM LINE, A BANKRUPT.

His Lordship stated that he conceived Mr. Rose's clients (Messrs. Fisher and Spence) were the parties entitled to take out the commission in this matter, that was argued yesterday.

Mr. Rose applied for the costs as against Mr. Horne's client.

The Court ordered the costs out of the estate.

COURT OF KING'S BENCH, FRIDAY.

ASSAULT—THE KING V. R. MEUX, ESQ.

The defendant was indicted for assaulting Mr. Richard Leatham.

Mr. Scarlett (with whom was Mr. C. Phillips) observed, that it was with unfeigned regret he was compelled to bring a case of this nature before the consideration of a jury, but as no apology had been offered for conduct which it was impossible to justify or excuse, no other course was left for them to pursue. The Learned Counsel, after stating shortly the facts of the case, called

Mr. Richard Leatham, who stated, I am a partner of Mr. Meux's. On the 27th of April last, I went into the defendant's counting-house in Tottenham-court-road; a Mr. Hams, a collecting clerk to the house, and a Mr. Stringer, a publican, were there, as also Mr. Meux. Stringer had applied to me to give him up a promissory note which had been paid; he had applied frequently for that note, and knowing that Mr. Meux and Mr. Hams were in the counting-house, and fearing that some angry words might occur, I desired him to wait. I then went to the strong room and took out a bundle of notes, when Mr. Meux said, "Mr. Hams, how is the beer now?" To which he replied, "Sir, I have had a great many complaints of late, but it is now a great deal better." I said very coolly, "Mr. Hams, whenever the publicans complain of their beer, and cannot draw it, desire them to stop it up and send it back to the house." Mr. Meux then said, "Mr. Hams, I desire you will do no such thing." I replied, in a low tone, "Then, Sir, I shall call on the publicans myself and tell them." Mr. Meux then rose from his chair in a great passion, and said, "You are a cowardly rascal and an infamous blackguard." I was very much astonished at hearing such language from him, and I looked in his face, and said, "You are a bullying blackguard." He then struck at me three or four times across the desk with his fist: I retreated with great haste into my counting house through a spring door; I then seized the poker and said, "Now, Mr. Meux, if you dare strike me, I will knock your brains out." I found him still struggling to get at me. Mr. Hams, a very powerful man, was interposing, and he said, "Hams, get out of the way: if you don't get out of the way, I will knock you down." Mr. Meux is a most powerful man. He either knocked down Hams, or got him out of the way. I was holding the poker in my hand, with a chair between us. Seeing I had a poker in my hand, he paused and placed his hands on the back of the chair. I supposed he had given up the thing, and sat down. As I was about to pass the poker from my right hand to my left, he sprung on me, and folded his arms round me; he then struck me several blows, and gave me a black eye; I thought he had broke my finger, and he hurt my arm very much. At that time several persons, from the adjoining counting-houses, rushed in and extricated me. He then returned to his own counting-house, and I considered it was at an end; but in a minute or two after, he came in again; says I, "Mr. Meux, don't strike me, and I'll not strike you." "D——n you, says he, "you strike me, you cannot kill a fly." He then struck me again, and I defended myself as well as I could, with an umbrella: he then left me, and he returned a third time, and struck me again. I then retired into Mr. Barnett's counting-house, and he soon after made his appearance there, when I observed to him, "Mr. Meux, you are letting yourself down, your own clerks will laugh at you." I saw no more of him after that. I went afterwards before Sir Richard Birnie; when there, I proposed, by the advice of my friends, to shake hands, and he should hear no more of it; he said, "I make an apology to that man, to such a man as that!" Sir Richard Birnie said, "Recollect, Mr. Meux, you are speaking to your partner, and a gentleman; and if you will not do so, I must bind you over to keep the peace." I had at that time a black eye, and had consulted Sir Anthony Carlisle.

Cross-examined by Mr. Brougham—I had had no difference with Mr. Meux, except a difference of opinion; I had avoided him, because I knew his violence; he was offended with me because I would not consent to admit the son of Duncan Smith as a partner. Whenever I wanted any thing, I sent other persons to his counting-house. What I said to Mr. Hams was in perfectly a calm tone. When I said I would go round myself to the publicans, it was in an under-tone. I have been a partner for 17 years. When Mr. Meux quarrelled with his partners in Liquor-pond-street, his father wished me to go and assist in establishing their business, and offered to lend me 93,000l. for that purpose.

Sir Richard Birnie said he remembered the parties coming before him; Mr. Leatham was marked with a black eye, and his arm was in a sling. Feeling respect for the parties, and having a slight knowlege of them, I did my best to play the special pleader, in endeavouring to make up the difference between them, but I could not succeed; I could make nothing of it, and I was obliged to do as I was in duty bound, and bind Mr. Meux over.

Mr. Brougham, in addressing the Jury for the defendant, observed it was quite impossible to entertain any other than feelings of respect for the parties in the case, as had been observed by the worthy magistrate before whom they had appeared: but it was quite evident from the statement of the prosecutor that there had been some differences between them, and that the provocation which had led to this unfortunate affair had arisen from one of those complaints which were not always successful in states of greater magnitude. It appeared that some of the publicans, forgetful of their allegiance to their liege lords, had dared to present some complaints against the beer they were supplied with. The prosecutor, instead of waiting with that deference which was so befitting, had ventured to give his directions, without waiting for the Imperial decree of this Sovereign of all Butt. However he (Mr. Brougham) and the defendant might now deplore it, it was not to be wondered at that so great a degree of insubordination had excited those angry feelings which had stimulated not only the defendant but Mr. Leatham; and he was only sorry that they had been continued so long as to bring the present proceeding before them.

The Lord Chief Justice having stated his opinion on the nature of the case,

The Jury, without hesitation, found the defendant Guilty.

SECONDARIES' OFFICE, Dec. 11.

SPICER V. THE HON. AND REV. W. CAPEL.

This was an action for the recovery of the value of two asses, which had been seized on the highway by the Rev. defendant, and sold by him, without any legal right; and also for compensation for the loss of the services of the aforesaid asses, from the period of their seizure. The defendant has suffered judgment to go by default. Mr. Adolphus, for the plaintiff, stated, that his client was a man in very humble life, residing in the county of Hertford, and earned a livelihood by carrying sand about the neighbourhood on two asses. The defendant was the Hon. and Rev. Mr. Capel, a gentleman of large property, and brother of the Earl of Essex; and the action had been brought against the Hon. and Rev. Gent. for taking away two asses belonging to the plaintiff, and applying them to his own use. Compensation was also sought for the injury sustained in the plaintiff's business by the absence of the asses from their labour. The case was as follows:—A boy was driving the plaintiff's two asses, and three asses, the property of another person, along the high road, and was accosted by the Rev. defendant, who desired him to stop. This command the boy did not think proper to obey, upon which the Reverend defendant seized him, and ordered a man to take away the asses. This was speedily put into execution, and the whole sent to the pound, where the Rev. Gent. said they should remain, unless 11. for each donkey was paid for damage done to his hedges, &c. On application, he acknowledged that no damage was sustained by him, but he was determined not to allow any more asses to shew their faces in the country! The facts were proved; and the defendant's Council said, if his client had answered, the action, in the first instance, he could have put a different feature on the whole of the transaction, and that somebody behind the curtain had instigated the proceedings against his client. Mr. Capel, as was the case with many other country-gentleman, had neglected the matter until too late; and judgment had been suffered to go by default. As the present was an action of trover, no recompense could be claimed for loss of the asses' services; and the Secoudary agreeing in that objection, the Jury assessed the damages at 4l. the value of the asses.

On Tuesday, Uzzell v. the same defendant, damages were assessed for the three other dunkies at 5l. on similar grounds.

ASSIZE INTELLIGENCE.

CHELMSFORD, Dec. 12.

Thomas Kingen was indicted for having feloniously forged and counterfeited, on the 17th of July, at Walthamstow, a check upon Messrs. Curtis and Co., bankers, London, for the sum of 26l. 14s., with intention to defraud Thomas Linsell. There was a second count, for uttering the same check, knowing it to be forged. There were two other similar sets of counts, except that the intent was said to be to defraud other persons.

The case was in substance this:—The prisoner lived with Mr. Benjamin Cotton, the brother of the prosecutor, at Layton, in the capacity of footman, and was discharged from his situation on the 5th of July, receiving six guineas, the amount of the wages then due to him, by a check on Messrs. Curtis and Co., his master's bankers. Some time after the prisoner had quitted Mr. Cotton's service, it was discovered that five blank checks had been torn out of his master's check-books. On the 17th of July, the prisoner called upon a Mr. Linsell, a grocer, in Layton, and requested him to cash him a check for 26l. 14s., purporting to be drawn by Wm. Cotton on Messrs. Curtis and Co., payable to George Turnley. Mr. Linsell at first hesitated, but at the pressing request of the prisoner, cashed the check. Mr. Linsell's son was present at the transaction, and they both swore positively to the person of the prisoner. The check remained in the possession of Mr. Linsell till the 21st of July, when his son, by his desire, paid it to a Mr. Walker, the clerk of Mr. Strange, a cheesemonger in London, for a bill due to him from Linsell, and Mr. Strange paid it into his own bankers, Messrs. Hankey and Co., by whom it was presented to Curtis and Co., who declined paying it, allegiug that Mr. Wm. Cotton had no cash account with them. The check being then returned to Mr. Linsell, it was, upon inquiry, discovered to be a forgery, and suspicion arising against the prisoner, means were taken for his apprehension.

On the part of the prisoner, Mr. B. Cotton and a Mr. Hoppey, in whose service he had previously lived for nearly a twelvemonth, stated that he had lived with them, respectively, as a confidential servant; that they had received a good character of him from a respectable quarter, and that he had conducted himself with the strictest integrity while in their service.

Mr. Justice Gaselee recapitulated the whole of the evidence to the jury, telling them that there was no direct evidence of the prisoner having forged the check in this county; but it was for them to consider whether the proof of the check being in his hand-writing, followed up by the evidence of his having uttered it, which was very strong, did not satisfy them that he had uttered the forged check with a guilty knowledge. If they were of that opinion, it would be their duty to convict the prisoner; but if they entertained any reasonable doubt upon the subject, he ought to have the benefit thereof, and the good character he had received might also to operate in his favour.

The Jury, after a very short deliberation, found the prisoner guilty of uttering the check, knowing it to have been forged.

The Learned Judge passed the sentence of the law, holding out no immediate hopes of mercy to the unfortunate convict.

OLD BAILEY.

NEW COURT.—Wednesday, Dec. 13.

(Before Mr. Baron Hullock.)

Ann Garnett, aged 30, was indicted for stealing, on the 26th of July, a gold watch, value 40l., and a gold chain, value 4l., the property of the Marquis of Clanricarde.

The prosecutor lodged at the Clarendon Hotel, Bond-street, in the summer of 1824; he left there in July; he shortly after missed the watch; he had seen the watch the night before; he had again seen it lately at the Marlborough-street office.

Susannah Filliter, a laundress, stated that the prisoner lodged with her in 1824; after she left her lodgings she went to live at the Clarendon Hotel; she called upon her afterwards, and brought her a watch; it was in July, 1824; she wished witness to sell it: it was a small gold watch; she gave it to James Ross to ascertain its value; she never had it again.

The housekeeper at the Clarendon believed the prisoner lived there about a month in 1824. Lord Clanricarde was at the Clarendon in July; the prisoner was housemaid, and had to attend the rooms that the Marquis occupied.

The person who sold the watch to the Marquis identified it.

The Jury found the prisoner Guilty, but recommended her to mercy on the ground of her good character, in which the Marquis joined.

The Sessions having terminated, the Recorder passed sentence upon the several persons convicted.

After addressing them in a very feeling and appropriate manner, he passed the awful sentence of death upon the following persons:—

Royal Keates, aged 31, and William Keates, 18, for sheep-stealing—Richard Arnold, 20, Benjamin Brown, 20, John Andrew Meek, 16, and Henry Bayley, for burglary—William Stevens, 21, Thomas Brahney, 15, for highway robbery—James Wingfield, 25, for rape—George Hall, 18, Henry Dunn, (tried in September Sessions), John Smith, 19, Thomas Wilkinson, 17, Henry Wright, 19, Samuel Clark, 15, Isaac Harris, 13, Elizabeth Browne, 52, and Ann Garnett, 30, for stealing in a dwelling-house—Thomas Canning, 22, and Jonathan Battey, 15, for housebreaking—John Bunyan, 25, and George Horne, 19, for horse stealing.

To be Transported for Life—James Barfoot, Edward Sampson, and Henry Morland.

Besides a great many others for 14 and 7 years, for various degrees of crime.

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

BOW-STREET.—Poachers.—A young gentleman came to the office on Thursday afternoon, and presented a letter to Sir R. Birnie from the Earl of Kensington, dated from his Lordship's seat, in Norfolk, requesting the assistance of the police in the detection of a desperate gang of poachers, who had assembled to the number of no less than 35, and not only destroyed a great quantity of game, but had committed a desperate outrage upon the Noble Earl's keepers, and other servants.

The young gentleman stated, that the poachers in the neighbourhood of Lord Kensington's had become alarmingly numerous, and went about so well armed and in such strong parties, that it was a service of no small danger for the keepers, even with the aid of auxiliaries, to attack them. On the occasion in question, the poachers were thirty-five in number, and all armed with guns, and the keepers, accompanied by a Mr. Evans and others, went in search of them. They met, and a conflict ensued, when Mr. Evans was shot in the side very severely, but not so as to endanger his life. There can be little doubt that the man who seemed to be the leader of the poachers was killed, from this circumstance, that he was standing at the head of his gang, when Lord Kensington's head keeper called upon them to surrender, and his only reply was "Now give it them," and was presenting his piece, but the keeper being too quick for him, fired first, and the poacher fell. The parties were then at a very short distance from each other, and a stream of blood was traced to some distance the next day. He was of course taken away by his companions. The poachers were routed, and escaped in different directions. Endeavours were subsequently made to trace them, but without success, and it was deemed expedient by his Lordship to request assistance from this office.

Sir R. Birnie said, he would send one of his most active officers to the spot, and James John Smith was sent for, and received directions from Sir Richard to proceed without delay to Norfolk. Sir R. Birnie took occasion to remark, that between the armed smugglers on the coast, and the poachers inland, the country was in a lamentable state.

THE MURDERS NEAR LEATHERHEAD.

Since the apprehension of William Page, alias "Cobbler Will," and Mary Ayres, on suspicion of having perpetrated the late murders at Fetcham, several private examinations have taken place at Union-hall, in the course of which a great number of witnesses have been brought forward, and indeed no pains have been spared by the magistrate (R. J. Chambers, Esq.), who has been indefatigable in his exertions to bring to light the mysterious circumstances attending the murders. On Saturday the above magistrate, on his arrival at the office, announced it as his intention to have a public examination of the prisoners that day. He observed, that his sole object in having the previous investigations taken in the private room, was in order to have less difficulty in procuring witnesses on behalf of the prisoners, most of whom were trampers, and many of them scattered over different parts of the country. To the privacy which had heretofore been observed, Mr. Chambers remarked, was to be attributed the successful exertions of the officers employed on the occasion in procuring the attendance of those witnesses that were most essential on the part of the crown, as well as on behalf of the prisoners.

At eleven o'clock the prisoners, Page and Mary Ayres, were brought up to the office in a coach from Horsemonger-lane goal; their appearance is evidently much altered since their confinement, particularly the female, who has got exceedingly thin and languid. Page has also suffered in his appearance.

The depositions, which have been previously before the public, were then read, and the Magistrates having consulted together for a short time, Mr. Chambers addressed the prisoners, observing that no pains had been spared in order to bring forward those individuals whom they (the prisoners) wished, but they had failed completely in proving an alibi, all failing in the proof of either of them having been seen at Weyhill on Thursday. The Magistrate then remarked that there were such strong and powerful circumstances of suspicion against them, that he had made up his mind to commit them for trial, in which determination his brother Magistrates had perfectly concurred with him.

The prisoners were then taken from the office and conveyed to Horsemonger-lane gaol.

THE SPEAKING FRENCH GRAMMAR.

By J. V. Douville, Professor of the French Language, 2, Lawrence-lane, Cheapside, and 6, Coventry-street, Haymarket, London, 1827.

Mr. Editor,—The success which has attended the first edition of this French Grammar is sufficiently indicative that Mr. Douville's system for facilitating the speaking of French to English persons, is eminently distinguished by its obvious practical advantages. The merest Tyro, in running his eye over the framework of his Grammar, will instantly recognise this to be its distinguishing characteristic. Many persons know the French Language well in theory, who cannot converse with a native for five minutes. It is to the practical remedy, for this defect, that M. Douville chiefly applies himself. The pupil's essays are composed of passages and sentences used in ordinary discourse, which plan will be found a very superior performance, as the student will, thereby, store his mind with phrases necessary for conversation. Mr. Douville's system, also, for imbuing the pupil with an accurate familiarity with all the various modifications produced on meaning, by the tenses of the verbs, is excellent. The remarks on pronunciation, the explanation of idioms, the models of notes, letters of compliment and business, the vocabulary and compendium of familiar phrases, and the treatise on French Prosody and Versification, are peculiarly serviceable. The execution of the whole, in short, displays such a degree of critical acuteness and sagacity, that there is no doubt but this work will become a favourite with the public, and more especially with schools and teachers of the French Language.—I have the honour to be, Sir, your most obedient humble Servant, A CRITICAL JUDGE.

London, Dec. 15, 1826.

ACCIDENTS, &c.

A young man, of the age of 25, named John Woodhead, met a dreadful death. He was employed in one of the dams on the north side of the new London Bridge, when a piece of timber upwards of a hundred pounds in weight, sawn from the tops of the piles, raising on what is termed a skipper, fell from the height of 40 feet upon his head, and crushed it literally to atoms. The unfortunate being was immediately conveyed to Guy's Hospital, but too late to rescue him from the grave. An inquest was held on the body before the Coroner, Mr. Shelton, and a verdict returned, "that his death was occasioned by accident."

A few days ago the Falmouth mail-coach was overturned soon after leaving Exeter, and one passenger very severely hurt. It appears that the coachman had confided the reins at the time to a gentleman, a baronet, we believe, by rank, whose passion for the noble art of driving is frequently displayed in the western road, to the imminent peril of His Majesty's liege subjects. This practice of permitting individuals who have no responsibility to assume the guidance of the Royal mails, cannot be too severely reprobated, and it is to be hoped will be checked by the proper authorities. A less dangerous mode of qualifying for the Four-in-hand Club may surely be found out, if the preservation of that academy is thought important for men of rank and fortune. An inquiry is going on into the cause of the accident above-mentioned.

We regret to say, that the clergyman who was unhappily shot by his friend (mistaking him for a poacher) at Starston, Norfolk, as stated in our last, died yesterday morning; and it is feared the young man who shot him must have his arm amputated.—County Chronicle.

Fatal Shipwreck.—On Saturday last, during a tremendous gale from the N.W. the brig Lord Dupplin, of Torquay, Rowe, master, from Newport for London, laden with iron, after having declined the assistance of a pilot, was driven on the dangerous shoal called Dunbar-sands, near the mouth of Padstow harbour, where the waves broke violently over her. As soon as the accident was observed, a pilot-boat with four men on board put off to the assistance of the crew. On getting alongside, one of the four men got on board the vessel, but the boat, with the other three persons, was driven from its position, and forced amongst the breakers, where it upset, when the three men, two of whom were father and son, were drowned—the names of these unfortunate persons are, Henry and James Trebilcock, and Richard Chapman. Soon after the loss of the boat, another pilot-boat got alongside the wreck, and some of the boat's crew got on board; but as the vessel was going to pieces, and it being evident that all attempts to save her would be useless, they with the crew of the vessel, being in all ten men and a boy, got into the boat, and made for the shore. The cliffs were covered with people from the neighbourhood, who could clearly see the vessel breaking up, and who beheld the boat contending with a tremendous sea; when within a short distance of the shore, the boat upset, and the relatives and friends of the adventurous pilots, who had so bravely hazarded their lives for the preservation of their fellow-creatures, uttered the most piercing shrieks. Immediately, several boats put off, at all hazards, to attempt the rescue of the unfortunate persons, some of whom were seen clinging to the keel of the overturned boat; others, to oars, and others endeavouring to swim, whilst the spectators in the utmost anxiety watched the approach of the adventurous persons who, in imminent peril of their lives, hastened to the relief of the almost drowning strugglers. Most providentially, their efforts were successful, and the whole of the ten persons, who were in the boat when it upset, were saved. The vessel went to pieces immediately after the last boat left her, and, with her cargo, is totally lost.—West Briton.

OCCURRENCES IN BRIEF.

The Committee on Joint Stock Companies will continue sitting during the recess.—Sir William Curtis has given up his seat for Hastings.—In contemplation of a vacancy for Sudbury, a Colonel Jones has canvassed the electors.—A true bill was found on Saturday at the Middlesex Sessions against Mr. Noel, the attorney, for a fraud, in obtaining cash from a Mr. Rogers for 100l. cheque on Sir Claude Scott and Company, without having any effects to meet it.—D. W. Hervey, Esq. M.P. has been elected Executive Superintendent of the General Steam Navigation Company, with a salary of 600l. per annum.—Capt. F. A. Collier is appointed Commodore on the Coast of Africa, vice Bullen, whose period of service has expired; and Captain Sir J. A. Gordon to be resident Governor of Plymouth Royal Naval Hospital, vice Creyke, deceased.—M. C. L. Bonaparte, son of Lucien, visited the City on Saturday, on his return from America, whither he had gone on a visit to his uncle Joseph.—The manufacturers of woollen stuffs, near Halifax, last week made an advance of 6d. per piece to the weavers. Much distress, nevertheless, is prevailing in other quarters.—Messrs. Hawkes and Sheppard, of Norwich, were convicted, last week in 10l. penalty, for having paid one of their weavers in goods instead of money, contrary to the Act of the 12th of Geo. I.—A corn law petition at Glasgow has been signed by 15,000 persons.—The Post-horse Duties were let on Friday for three years, at 238,900l. This is an annual advance on the last letting of 95,000l.—On Sunday se'nnight, after a sermon by the Rev. Dr. Rudge, at Hampstead Church, 80l. 11s. 9d. was collected for the benefit of the Spanish and Italian Refugees.—Dr. Morrison and Captain Pearce, the companions of Captain Clapperton, on a voyage of discovery to the coast of Africa, are said, by letters brought by the Brazen, to have died from fever.—An Insolvent Court was appointed to be held at Aylesbury last Thursday. The Commissioner did not attend, there being no debtor in the county gaol.—Abraham Hill, a common carrier, from Bawdsey to Woodbridge, Suffolk, was convicted in 100l. penalty, on Thursday, with loss of horse and cart, for having contraband spirits in his possession. In default of payment he was committed to the county gaol till the fine be paid.—At Nottingham, last week, a butcher sold his wife for a gallon of ale.—The mansion-house, at Burton-park, Petworth, was destroyed by fire on Tuesday. Very little of the costly furniture was saved, and that was much damaged by removal.

We are requested to state, that the Second Edition of the New Novel of "Almack's," will be published to-morrow.

Colonel Denham, the enterprising African traveller, has sailed from Plymouth for Sierra Leone in his Majesty's ship Cadmus, Captain Hallowell.

A report has been current that the King of France was last week shot at by one of his forest gardes, when on a hunting excursion at Fontainbleau. He escaped the fatal ball by suddenly turning his horse, when the fellow, foiled in his attempt, immediately shot himself. Another report was, that his Majesty was slightly wounded in the knee. The French Papers, of course, are silent on the subject.

By the Alligator, arrived at Portsmouth on Wednesday, from the East Indies, we learn that the 2d division of the army had arrived at Madras from Rangoon.

On Thursday a General Quarterly Court of Proprietors was held at the Bank, to declare a half-yearly dividend for the term ending at Christmas next. A dividend of four per cent. was declared, payable at Christmas, and the Court adjourned.

By Tuesday's Gazette it appears a letter has been received from Commodore Bullen, senior officer of his Majesty's ships on the coast of Africa, and dated at Prince's Island the 15th of September last, in which he reports the capture of a slave vessel, under Brazilian colours, called the Prince of Guinea, by the Hope schooner, manned by a party of officers and men from his Majesty's ship Maidstone, under the orders of Lieutenant Wm. Tucker, of that ship.

INTELLIGENCE FROM PORTUGAL LAST NIGHT.

Advices have been received from Oporto to the 7th inst. at which time considerable alarm and anxiety prevailed in that city. The Marquis of Chaves, had, it was said, reached Mirandella (about fifty miles from Oporto), but the approach by that road, owing to the peculiar nature of the country, was considered to be one of great difficulty. Claudino was at Villa Real, and Mello at Salamonde, or Salvamonde, a pass near Braga. There are two roads from Braganza to Oporto; viz. by Braganza, Mirandella, Villa Real, Amarante, Penifel, Oporto; or Braganza, Chaves, Braga, Oporto. The Mirandella road opens on the crossing of the Douro, at St. Joaos de Rosquiera, and hence by Vizen to Celnabra and Lisbon. The latter, it is asserted, is the one which the rebels have chosen. Villa Real and Salvamonde are, both of them, roads by which an attack may be made upon Oporto; but if Claudino and Mello be at each of them respectively, they will find themselves so situated as to oppose the march of the Marquis de Chaves on Oporto. They will also be enabled to retire upon the latter city, and there unite with General Stubbs, who had proclaimed his determination to defend Oporto to the last, and fight in the streets, if his men would stand by him.

The march of the rebels on Mirandella appeared to leave no doubt of the course they would pursue. According to some, it was thought they would proceed at once to Lisbon.

Colonel Valdez, after much severe fighting, had been made prisoner, and his men, it was said, had gone over to the rebels, under the Marquis de Chaves.

No satisfactory accounts of the movements of Claudino and Mello, who commanded the Royal troops, had been received at Oporto on the 7th instaut; but it was supposed they had separated.

The cry of the rebels was, "Death to the English! Long live Don Miguel!"—At Oporto the popular feeling towards our countrymen was any thing but favourable.

A letter from Oporto, dated the 8th of December, says, that Mello had marched to defend the line of the Tamaga.

The whole of Tras-os-Montes, according to these accounts, had declared in favour of Don Miguel; or in other words, under the pretended sanction of his name, they had armed against the legitimate Government.

The Santa Marcite arrived in the River yesterday from Oporto, which place she left on the evening of the 7th. At that time no apprehensions were felt by the inhabitants, as it was reported the Marquis de Chaves had been defeated, with serious loss. Two steam-boats had arrived at Oporto, with troops from Lisbon. Two regiments, it was reported, had also arrived at Lisbon from Gibraltar. The Santa Marcite brought no passengers.

The Captain of one of the merchantmen which left Oporto on the 8th, states, that he met with two steam-boats with English troopt on board, entering the harbour. On being informed no such vessels had been detached from England, he still persisted in the correctness of his assertion, which appears to confirm the report of troops being sent from Gibraltar to Lisbon, and from thence to Oporto. The private accounts, in addition to the letter we have given, contain little information to be relied upon. The numbers of the rebels, and the motley group from Spain, are staten at 15,000 men; but this number (unless it is a mere blunder for 1,500), is inconsistent with the hesitation which is said to have taken place in the movement of the rebels after the pillage of Braganza. It was this pillage, and the promise to his ragamuffins of a similar license at Oporto for three days, that had so alarmed the English at the latter place.

FRIDAY'S GAZETTE.

INSOLVENTS.

T. B. WOOLBY, Stowmarket, Suffolk, bookseller——E. RUSSELL, White Horse-court, Southwark, hop-merchant.

BANKRUPTS.

G. TAYLOR, Meltham, Yorkshire, clothier——J. FRY, Artillery-street, Bermondsey, currier——H. W. ADCOCK, Birmingham, gilt toy-maker——C. IVES, Cumberworth, Yorkshire, clothier——S. HALLS, Stowmarket, Suffolk, plumber——W. NANGLE, Liverpool, jeweller——O. JONES, Liverpool, draper——J. PARKINSON, Bolingbroke, Lincolnshire, stuff-manufacturer——S. PARKER, Whitchurch, Shropshire, ironmonger——S. HOLL, Lakenham, Norwich, beer-brewer——G. L. FOX, Sunderland-near-the-Sea, grocer——J. NICKOLLS, Kidlington-mills, Oxfordshire, miller——W. W. EAGLE, High-street, Southwark, hop-factor——J. PROTHEROE, Bristol, hatter——W. CLARKE, Newcastle-street, Strand, victualler——C. INCE, Craven-street, Strand, and James-street, Haymarket, wine-merchant——J. VINING, Pall-mall, jeweiler——W. ARMSTRONG, Great Queen-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields, auctioneer——L. THOMPSON, Hessle, Kingston-upon-Hull, miller——WM. SUTTON, Beaumont-street, Marylebone, coachmaker.

TUESDAY'S GAZETTE.

INSOLVENT.

J. FRY, Artillery-street, Bermondsey, currier.

BANKRUPTCY SUPERSEDED.

T. WIGGLEWORTH, Colne, Lancashire, rope-manufacturer.

BANKRUPTS.

J. TAYLOR, Balham Hill, Surrey, builder——J. SIMONDS, Bartholomew-lane, stock-broker——J. DODSON, Over, Cheshire, salt-manufacturer——D. MORLING, Great Yarmouth, grocer——A. LOW and T. ROWLAND, Stockport, Cheshire, machine-makers——T. JAMES, Birmingham, draper——T. BROWN, Kingston-upon-Hull, and Sculcoates, Yorkshire, merchant——W. RICHARDS, Fifehead Magdalen, Dorsetshire, dealer and chapman——H. WARNER, Lamb's Conduit-street, linen-draper——W. CHAPMAN, St. Neot's, Huntingdonshire, currier——A. LEIGH, Manchester, builder——R. BURMAN, Southam, Warwickshire, money-scrivener——T. HARVEY, Warwick, horse dealer——T. STRANGE, Cheltenham, plasterer——G. CASTLE, Goole, Yorkshire, ship-builder——W. LINE, St. Paul's Terrace, Camden Town, builder——J. DWYER, New-street, Covent-garden, tailor——H. WINKLEY, Chorlton-row, Lancashire, victualler——J. HAYN, Fleet-market and Red Lion-square, wine and brandy merchant——J. GRIMSHAW, Manchester, check-manufacturer——S. ALMOSNINO and M. ALMOSNINO, Bevis Marks, merchants——A. MALIGLIER, Mincing-lane, merchant——J. C. BURCKHARDT, Northumberland-street, Strand, goldsmith——W. JARMAN, Thayer-street, Manchester-square, boarding-house-keeper——S. CALVERT, Fore-street, Cripplegate, flax-dresser——J. FULLER, Frederick-street, Hampstead-road, builder——J. BIGGS, Lewisham, Kent, builder——H. NEALE, Percy-street, Rathbone-place, warehouseman——J. ROSS, senior, Horfield, Gloucestershire, farmer.

PILES.—A Medical Gentleman from Edinburgh having been afflicted with this distressing complaint for more than seven years, and being aware of the danger of cutting, after consulting several eminent Surgeons, from whom he derived but little benefit, was recommended to Mr. Van Butchell, Surgeon Accoucheur, 3, Half Moon-street, Piccadilly, who has effected a perfect cure in the short space of two months.—In testimony of Mr. Van Butchell's superior treatment of this disease, he is induced to give publicity to his case. Cards of address may be had by applying to Mr. Craddock, Chemist and Druggist, 54, Crawford-street, Bryanstone-square,

AT SIMPSON'S MEDICINE WAREHOUSE, No. 28, Henrietta-street, Covent-Garden, London, are sold

The ARABIAN VEGETABLE PILLS, 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. per Box, free from mercury or antimony, inestimable as a Family Medicine for the removal of Indigestion, Bilious and Nervous Complaints, and as a mild Aperient.

The ROYAL ELIXIR of LIFE, in Bottles of 11s. each, strengthens the Stomach, increases the Appetite, dispels Spasms and Gout in the Stomach, and prevents all the inconveniences produced by excess at table.

The ANTISEPTIC BOTANICAL TOOTH-POWDER, 2s. 9d. per Box, cleanses, whitens, and preserves the Teeth, and fastens them, even if loosened by mercury.

These articles are sold (by appointment) at all respectable Medicine Venders, Chemists, and Druggists, throughout the kingdom.

Superior Eau de Cologne and Swiss Eau d'Arquebusade, Mason's Convent Soap, &c. &c.

CANDLES.—To Families and Consumers of Candles in general.—BIDDLE, Candle Manufacturer, Tallow-melter, Soap-maker, Importer and Dealer in Sperm and other Oils, &c. 49, Dorset street, Manchester-square, most respectfully informs the Public in general, he is selling the under-mentioned articles at wholesale prices, viz.—the best Store Candles, 6s. 6d. per dozen; Waxed-wick Moulds, 8s. per dozen; fine Wax Candles, 3s. 6d. per lb.; Sperm ditto, 2s. 6d. per lb.; Palace Wax Light, 3s. 2d. per lb. Mottled Soap, 78s. per cwt.; Yellow ditto, 68s. per cwt.; and Curd ditto, 10d. per lb.; Windsor and Palm ditto, 1s. 6d. per lb.; Brown Windsor, 1s. per lb.; the finest Sperm Oil, 5s. per gallon (the imperial measure). The above articles are warranted of the very best quality. J. B. flatters himself, in consequence of the extreme low prices above stated, and the respectability of his establishment, (having been established upwards of thirty-five years,) he shall ensure the patronage of the Public; and as the lowest price is affixed to each article, prompt payment will be required. Letters post paid. Country Orders duly attended to.

THE PATENT INVISIBLE UNDER GARMENT, composed of real Spanish Lambs' Wool, without the mixture of Cotton, are to be had exclusively at the Patentee's, Mrs. ROBERTSHAW'S, 99 and 100, Oxford-street. Likewise an article mixed with cotton, commonly called Merino, in Petticoats under Opera Dresses, Drawers, Waistcoats, &c.—Children's of every size, Gentlemen's Under-waistcoats, Drawers, Stockings, &c. Ladies' wash-leather Drawers and Waistcoats. Nos. 99 and 100, Oxford-street.—Mrs. Robertshaw personally attends at the Warehouse on Ladies.

THE IMPROVED SILK HAT ON BEAVER.—For Cash only.

They are made to suit the natural form of the Head. The Colour is permanent. For durability, shape, and quality, they are unrivalled..... } 15s.

HUGH FRANKS & Co.
Patentees of Improved Waterproof Hats,
Corner of Queen Street 70, CHEAPSIDE.

BRADBERRY'S PATENT SPECTACLES, upon unerring principles, to preserve the sight to extreme old age. It is necessary to caution the public against the use of improper Spectacles, as their effects prove injurious, instead of beneficial to the eye. The unremitted and anxious study Mr. BRADBERRY has paid to his glasses for upwards of 30 years, has called forth the most distinguished approbation of their merit from the medical profession, and from many thousands of persons of the highest rank and respectability.—To be had only at 28, Holles-street, the first door out of Oxford-street, next to the large Fruiterer's at the corner, facing Hanover-square, and at no other place in the United Kingdom.—Orders from the country immediately attended to. Removed from 332, Oxford-street.

HORSES.—WORM and CONDITION BALLS. They will effectually destroy every species of Worm to which Horses are subject, without requiring any alteration in Food or cessation from Labour. If these Balls be given two or three times a year, they supersede the use of other Medicines, as they not only improve the health and vigour of the Animal, but also purify the blood and materially add to the glossy appearance of the coat. The Proprietor, who is known as having himself kept a numerous Stud, has used them for Thirty Years with the most satisfactory results. They only require a trial to prove their efficacy. References can be given—Sold in Packets at 9s. containing Nine Balls, with Directions for Use, by Courtney, Regent Circus, Oxford-street; Sanger, 150, Oxford-street; Smith, 29, Haymarket; Prout, 226, Strand; Butler, corner of St. Paul's Church-yard; and Wilmott, 83, St. Margaret's Hill, Borough.

BRANDY equal to Cognac at 16s. per Imperial Gallon.

THE extensive demand for Spirits at the present season, induces the Directors of the FRENCH BRANDY DISTILLERY COMPANY to remind the Public, that they are selling Brandy, equal to Cognac, in quantities not less than Two Gallons, at 16s. per Gallon, for Cash on delivery.

As many persons have experienced great inconvenience by delay in the execution of their orders, and it being impossible to expedite them all with the dispatch desirable, it is necessary to observe, that Families requiring an immediate supply can only insure the same by sending for it direct to the Distillery.

No. 7, Smithfield Bars, Dec. 12, 1826.

TRY IT.

Fine Port, and bright Sherry, well worthy of name,
Two Shillings per bottle—Madeira the same;
Good Cape, Fifteen-pence—and, the marvel to crown,
Champagne, Five and Sixpence—the cheapest in town!

Opera Colonnade. CHARLES WRIGHT.

Depots,—65, Crawford-street, St. Marylebone.
4, Sussex Place, and Kent Road.
13, St. James's-street, Brighton.
Quiet-street, Bath.

THE LONDON and WESTMINSTER WINE and SPIRIT COMPANY, No. 16, STRAND, opposite St. Martin's Church, have constantly on Sale—

	Per Dozen.		Per Dozen.
Port, Vintage 1820	27s to 30s	Bucellas	42s to 48s
Ditto, Crusted	36s to 42s	Claret, St, Julien	42s to 48s
Ditto, 5 to 8 years in bottle	48s to 56s	Ditto, Lafitte and Margaux	72s to 96s
Sherry, Pale and Brown	27s to 36s	Sparkling Champagne	72s to 84s
Ditto, Amontillado	42s to 48s	Ditto, and Creaming, of the first quality	90s to 96s
Cape, from	16s to 24s	St. Peray, dry and sparkling	63s to 72s
Madeira, West India	36s to 42s	Chablis	50s to 63s
Ditto, East India	48s to 60s	Hermitage, Red and White	72s to 84s
Teneriffe, Lisbon, Vidonia, and Mountain	30s to 36s	Moselle, Sauterne, &c.	50s to 60s

Old Tom, Jamaica Rum, Cognac Brandy, Fern-tosh, &c. per imperial measure at reduced prices.—Bottled Stout, Cider, Perry, Burton and Edinburgh Ales.

☞ All Goods must be paid for on or before delivery.

Letters post paid, to be addressed William Godfree and Co. No. 16, Strand.

SILK and BEAVER HATS.—At a time like the present, it behoves the most opulent to act economically in the purchase of a HAT, particularly when all the vehicles of advertisements teem with pretended Cheap Goods! a name only, for one half of the Hats offered to public notice are in the end the dearest of all others. To purchase a good article, bearing a small profit, is the safe road to economy.

PERRING'S HATS are manufactured by workmen experienced in the trade, and are made of such qualities as cannot fail to meet the wishes of the wearer.

The Double-edged SILK HAT surpasses any attempt at imitation, and is really the best Hat ever invented, price 17s. Good Wearing Silk Hats in a variety of Shapes, made in the usual way, 12s. 15s.

BEAVER HATS can be made at almost any Price, but none are worthy the attention of the Wearer under 20s. 22s. 24s. such are of good texture, light, and Waterproof, and will in the end prove in value equal to the purchase.

GENTLEMEN'S TRAVELLING CAPS of every description, in Furs, Cloth, Oil, Silk, &c. &c. at 12s. Waterproof.

YOUTHS' and BOYS' HATS in great variety. Light Summer Hats, &c. 413, Strand, two doors west of the Adelphi Theatre, and at Hammersmith.

COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMAS, &c.

WILMOTT'S COUGH PILLS.—These Pills have been found, by long experience, to be a most effectual Remedy; their operation is by promoting expectoration, and gently relieving the bowels, by which means they will speedily remove the most obstinate Cough. In Asthmas, Hoarseness, and all diseases of the Breast and Lungs, the efficacy of these Pills is well known in a very large and extensive connection, they have stood the test of time, and the inventor can with confidence introduce them into very general use.

Sold in Boxes at 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. by Wilmott, 83, High-street, Borough; Butler's, Chemists, Cheapside, corner of St. Paul's; 73, Princes-street, Edinburgh; and 51, Sackville-street, Dublin; Savory and Co. 136, New Bond-street; and the principal Medicine Venders in the United Kingdom. Of whom may be had Dr. FOTHERGILL'S TONIC FEMALE PILLS, recommended in general Debility of the Constitution, also as a safe and excellent remedy in those periodical irregularities which Females, of delicate and languid circulation, more especially the younger part, are liable to. In Boxes, at 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. Also Dr. FOTHERGILL'S DROPS, so much celebrated for their efficacy in Nervous Disorders. In Bottles at 4s. 6d.; 11s.; and 22s.

THE BRITISH SPECIFIC, for re-producing and promoting the GROWTH of HAIR.—The principle of its operation is to cool and contract the pores which fire opened by a redundancy of heat, occasioning a relaxation of the roots, and render them incapable of retaining the hair; to counteract which nothing is better calculated than the British Specific, as, from its invigorating and oleaginous properties, it almost immediately arrests the falling off, and affords such effectual nourishment to the roots, that persons giving it a fair trial may assure themselves of its speedily restoring it, even where it has become completely bald, however long it may have been so, and, if grey, gradually to restore it to its natural colour. The superiority of this preparation (the invention of a medical man) derives additional recommendation from its being, unlike other compositions for the hair, so extremely clean and agreeable, that its application is a real pleasure, and is only requisite to be generally known to receive the preference of every article in use for similar purposes. To be had only of D. PEDEN, 209, Regent-street, and 15, Burlington Arcade, Piccadilly, in bottles, 6s. each, or cases of four bottles for £1., forward to order on receiving the amount, post paid.

EXPERIENCE IS THE TEST OF PRETENSION.

MANY years have now elapsed since the just appreciation, by a discerning Public, of ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL as the most infallible promoter of the growth, accelerator of the beauty, and antidote to decay, of the human Hair, of any specific of ancient or modern times, Uniformly successful in felicitous result, and unparalelled in universal estimation, this benign and balsamic fluid pervades, with creative energy, the pores of the head, cherishes the latent roots of the hair, and elicits a luxuriant flow of that fine adornment of manhood, and fascinating enhancement of female attractions.

Not less conspicuous for energetic virtues is ROWLAND'S KALYDOR, the ORIGINAL and GENUINE, as the faithful auxiliary of beauty, sustaining unimpaired the charms of loveliness in youth and maturity, and renovating age itself, with a juvenile bloom. So perfectly innoxious and efficacious, that Infant and Adult derive pleasure from its application, while it operates as a thorough cleanser of the skin from all unseemly impurities, by mild, yet powerful and imperceptible influence, irradiating with transparent whiteness, and adorning the neck and arms with transcendant and irresistless attraction. Rowland's Macassar Oil and Kalydor thus pre-eminently distinguished, and established as indispensable at the toilet and the dressing-table, have excited the envy of empiricism.

The Public are therefore CAUTIONED against the manœuvres of IMPOSITION, and respectfully recommended, in purchasing Macassar Oil, or the Kalydor, to ask for Rowland's; to attend to the labels on the respective bottles of the original specifics, each bottle bearing the autographical signature and address, in red ink, "A. ROWLAND and SON, No. 20, Hatton-garden," all other preparations vended as Macassar Oil, or the Kalydor, are gross impositions.

ALBION FIRE AND LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY, New Bridge-Street, Blackfriars,
EMPOWERED BY ACT OF PARLIAMENT.
CAPITAL—ONE MILLION.

The Premiums of Fire Insurances effected with this Company, of the three ordinary Classes, have, with certain exceptions, been reduced as follows:—
in the first Class.....to 1s. 6d. per Cent.
in the second Class.....to 2s. 6d. per Cent.
in the third Class.....to 4s. 6d. per Cent.

Fire Policies, the renewals of which become due at Christmas will expire, unless renewed within fifteen days from that period.

The Company continues to undertake Insurances on Lives, on liberal Terms. No charge is made on Life Insurances, in the way of Admission Fine, or Entrance Money: and a large Commission is allowed to Solicitors, and others, by whom such Insurances are effected. WARNER PHIPPS, Secretary.

SIXTY-TWO, HOLBORN HILL!
Next door but one west of St. Andrew's Church.

C. MEEKING particularly solicits the attention of Purchasers to the following prices of HOUSEHOLD LINENS, &c. now on sale, without reserve, at his extensive Warehouses, 61, and 62, Holborn-Hill.

		s.	d.
DAMBRO' & SILESIA DAMASK TABLE LINEN.	1½ yards long	1	6	each.
	2 do.	2	9
	2 do. fine	3	9
	3 do. superior, worth 16s.	6	6
	5 do. do.	11	0
RUSSIA & SCOTCH SHEETINGS.	4-4ths Strong for Servants	0	4	per yd.
	5-4ths do. fine	0	7½
	3 yds wide, real Russia) which prevents a seam	1	9
	6-4ths German Hollands	1	1
	Curiously fine Leipsic, do.	33	0	a pair.
7-8ths and 4-4ths IRISH LINENS.	7-8ths strong	0	4½	per yd.
	Do. fine	0	7½
	Do. very fine Coleraines	0	11
	4-4ths superior for gentlemens wear, from 1s. to 1s. 8d. per yard, those at 19d. and 20d. are worth	3	0

With every other requisite article suitable for household and domestic purposes, at equally low prices.—C. MEEKING'S Wholesale and Retail Warehouses, 61 and 62, Holborn Hill.

☞ Country orders attended to. All orders under Ten Pounds must be post paid.

BURGESS' ESSENCE of ANCHOVIES, Warehouse, 107, STRAND, corner of Savoy Steps, London.—JOHN BURGESS and SON, being apprised of the numerous endeavours made by many persons to impose a spurious article for their make, feel it incumbent upon them to request the attention of the public, in purchasing what they conceive to be the ORIGINAL, to observe the Name and Address correspond with the above. The general appearance of the spurious descriptions will deceive the unguarded, and for their detection J. B. and Son submit the following caution:—Some are in appearance at first sight "Burgess' Essence of Anchovies;" others, "Burgis's," and many more without address.—JOHN BURGESS and SON having been many years honoured with such distinguished approbation, feel every sentiment of respect towards the public, and earnestly solicit them to inspect the labels previous to purchasing what they conceive to be of their make, which they hope will prevent many disappointments.

Burgess' New Sauce for general purposes having given such great satisfaction, continues to be prepared by them, and is recommended as a most useful and convenient sauce; will keep good in all climates.

Warehouse, 107, Strand, corner of the Savoy Steps.—The Original Fish-Sauce Warehouse.

MOGUL, OR REAL CHETNA SAUCE.

C. HODGSON, ORIGINAL INVENTOR AND SOLE PROPRIETOR, is induced to caution his Friends and the Public against several spurious Sauces offered for sale, under the title of "MOGUL, or REAL CHETNA."

C. H. will feel obliged if each purchaser of the above delicious Sauce will please to observe the Label: which should be signed, "C. Hodgson," and the Cork, sealed and impressed, "Hodgson's Mogul Sauce," without which none can be genuine.

C. H. also begs to acquaint those who have not yet made a trial of this much approved Sauce, that the flavour will be found quite different, and far superior to any yet offered, for all kinds of Curries, Steaks, Stews, Chops, Hashes, Game, Grills, Broiled and Wild Fowl, Cold Meat, and for enriching Gravies, &c., and feels assured, that when tasted, it will fully justify what he has above stated. To Merchants and East and West India Captains, it is stongly recommended, being warranted to retain its full flavour in any climate.

To be had at the manufactory, No. 68, Long Lane, Borough, London, at the Piazza Coffee-house, Covent-garden, the Queen's Head Tavern, Holborn, and at any of the principal Oilmen and Grocers in Town and Country.

DR. COURTENAY'S NEW WORK, Price 4s.

AN HISTORICAL and PRACTICAL TREATISE on SYPHILIS, Gonorrhea, Gleets, Seminal Weakness, Strictures, Eruptions, Nodes, and Nocturnal Pains, so frequently mistaken for Rheumatism. These subjects are illustrated by a variety of highly-interesting cases, together with the miseries of a secret vice, so long and so unhappily pursued by the youth of both sexes. In the one it will be found the unfailing source of barrenness; the other have ravages fatally developed by a distressing state of debility, which, if not timely remedied, terminates in impotence; these are its remote and ultimate effects, while consumptions, loss of muscular power, and various nervous complaints, usually characterise the earlier stages of this most destructive and insidious habit, for the cure of which, a mode of treatment, the result of long and successful practice, and at once safe, speedy, and effectual, is adopted by the Author. With concluding remarks on the evils resulting from attempts at Self-cure.

Principiis obsta; sero medicina paratur.

By C. B. COURTENAY, M.D. Robert-street, Adelphi.—Printed for the Author. Published and sold by Sutherland, No. 9, Carlton-street, Edinburgh; Jones and Co. Paternoster-row; Onwhyn, 4, Catherine-street, Strand; Walker, 90, High Holborn; Chappell and Son, Cornhill; Marsh, 145, Oxford-street; Chappie, Pall-mall; and may be had of all Booksellers in town and country.

"Amongst the numerous medical and surgical works of the day, we consider that written by Dr. Courtenay, on Syphilis, and other frequently fatal complaints, to be worthy of the highest encomiums, and justly deserving the serious attention of all those persons who may unfortunately happen to be afflicted with the maladies which form the subject of this very interesting publication. The luminous view taken of these diseases, together with important warnings against excesses, entitle this work to great praise; and we may add, as a further recommendation, that it is written with much delicacy and morality."—Inspector and Literary Review.

IMPOSTURE UNMASKED.—The progress of Merit, although frequently assailed, is not impeded by Envy and Detraction. The aggression of ambuscade terminates in defeat; and conscious rectitude ultimately triumphs in the attainment of the grand object—public approbation. The test of experience is the guarantee of favour, and has established WARREN'S BLACKING in general estimation; of which there exists not a stronger proof than the tacit acknowledgment of a host of servile imitators, who surreptitiously obtrude on the unwary a spurious preparation as the genuine article, to the great disappointment of the unguarded purchaser, and manifest injury of WARREN, whose character and interest by this iniquitous system are equally subject to detriment. It becomes therefore an indispensable duty to CAUTION THE PUBLIC against the manœuvres of Unprincipled Venders, who having no character to lose, and stimulated by avarice in their nefarious pursuits, aim at the acquisition of money through any medium than that of honour! The original and matchless BLACKING bears on each bottle a short direction, with the signature

ROBERT WARREN

All others are counterfeits; and in many instances the imposition labels are artfully interlined with a different address, in very small characters, between the more conspicuous ones of "No. 30," and "STRAND." It is earnestly recommended to Shopkeepers and others who are deceived by base fabrications of WARREN'S BLACKING, to return the detected trash to the source whence it came, and expose the machinations of rascality to merited obloquy.

WARREN'S BLACKING is surpassingly brilliant;—it excludes damp; gives pliancy to the leather; retains its pristine virtue in all climates; and, combining elegance with comfort, is an article equally of indispensable fashion and utility. Sold by every respectable Veuder in Town and Country, in bottles, at 6d. 10 12d. and 18d. each.

BIRTHS.—On the 11th inst. at Swanbourne, Bucks, the Lady of Sir Thos. Fremantle, Bart. of a daughter—On the 10th inst. at East Sheen, Surrey, the Lady of William Gilpin, Esq. of a daughter.

MARRIED.—On the 11th inst. at Brede, Sussex, the Rev. J. G. Ash, A.M. of Queen's College, Cambridge, to Caroline Selby, daughter of the Rev. R. H. S. Hele, Rector of Brede, Norwich—At Chichester, on the 12th inst. Chas. S. Beckham, Esq. only son of Charles Smith, Esq. of Nyton, Sussex, to Sybella Jane Carr, daughter of the Bishop of Chichester—At Fulbourn, Cambridgeshire, Mr. Love Carter, in the 78th year of his age, to Phœbe Banyard, just past her minority.

DEATHS.—On the 9th inst. at Terrier's House, Bucks, the Right Hon. Lord Dormer—On the 7th inst. at Truro, John Vivian, Esq. in the 77th year of his age, many years one of the Chairmen of the Quarter Sessions of the county—On Sunday last, at Halstead, Essex, aged 82, the Rev. John Manistre, M.A. Rector of Stower Provost cum Todbere, Dorset—On the 8th inst. at Cranbrook, Mr. John French, one of the proprietors of the Cranbrook and Maidstone coach—On the 6th inst. at Grove House, Walthamstow, John Rigg, Esq. in his 81th year.

London: Printed by R. D. RICHARDS, No. 1, Blake-court; and Published at The Age Office, No. 1, Catherine-street, Strand.

THE AGE.

"THE VERY AGE AND BODY OF THE TIME."

VOL. II. No. 85. SUNDAY, DECEMBER 24, 1826. Price 7d.

THEATRE ROYAL, DRURY LANE. — On Tuesday the Tragedy of Barbarossa, after which will be presented the Christmas Pantomime, called the Man in the Moon, or, Harlequin Dog Star—On Wednesday, The Lottery Ticket, and The Lawyer's Clerk; after which, a new serious Drama, called The Murdered Guest—On Thursday (9th time) White Lies, or, the Major and the Minor, and other Entertainments—On Friday, The Hypocrite—On Saturday, The Lord of the Manor.—A New Grand Opera is in preparation, and will be produced immediately after Christmas.

ADELPHI THEATRE, Strand.—On Tuesday, and during the Week, will be presented a new Nautical Burletta, called The Flying Dutchman, or the Phantom Ship. After which, a new comic Burletta, in one Act, called 23, John-street, Adelphi. To conclude with the Grand Christmas Pantomime, entitled, Harlequin and the Eagle! or, the Man in the Moon and his Wife.—Doors open at 6, commence ½ before 7.

SADLER'S WELLS—12 NIGHTS ONLY—Opens for the HOLIDAYS, under the Management of Mr. T. Dibdin on Tuesday, Dec. 26th, and Wednesday 27th, with a New Burletta called, Double X, or the Islington Stage. A Melo Drama, founded on George Barnwell; and the popular Romance of Humphry Clinker, with Songs by Mr. Fitzwilliam, Mr. Williams, Mr. Forde of the Theatre Royal, Liverpool, &c. &c. On Thursday an entire Change of Amusements.

ARGYLL ROOMS, DECEMBER 27TH.

TO ROGER DODSWELL, Esq.

Gentle and most honor'd Sir!
Whom the destinies bestir
From the ernst wherein you've lain
(Ic'd like sprite in Wizard's chain,
Or a bottle of Champagne,)
For a century or twain,
Will it please you to bestow
At our Masque an hour or so
Of the Wednesday next, and be
A star amid our galaxy?
Truly 'twere a curious pleasure
Might we tempt you to a measure,
With some heauteous dame in hand,
Galliard, jig, or saraband.
Dear old Samuel Pepys there
Should be—must be had, I swear:
He and Dodswell, vis a vis!
"Lord! then, what a sight to see!"
I'll fill ye both a bowl to drain,
I' faith, shall make ye young again,
Shake off your mutual rust, and vow
Ye never truly liv'd till now!

Opera Colonnade. CHARLES WRIGHT.

DIORAMA, REGENT'S PARK will shortly Close, when the present Views, The Interior of Rosslyn Chapel, painted by Mons. Daguere, and a View of the City of Rouen, taken from Mount St. Catherine's, painted by Mons. Bouton, with various effects of light and shade, producing the most extraordinary illusion to the spectators, will be removed, and TWO NEW VIEWS, which have lately been exhibited in Paris, with great admiration, will be put up.

N.B. Fine weather is not essential for seeing the present Views, as the appearance of sunshine is produced with equal effect on the most cloudy day. The Dimension of each picture is 70 feet by 50—Open daily from 10 till 4 o'clock.

PIANOFORTES.—W. WALTER, (from Mr. Tomkison's) begs to recommend to those in want of a very superior Instrument, to inspect his stock of Grand, Cabinet, Cottage, and Square Pianos, which are warranted to be of the best description, at unusually low prices, and where the most decided satisfaction is not given, will be exchanged at the Manufactory, 113, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury.

Just published, by GOULDING and D'ALMAINE, Soho-square,

"RETURN, O! MY LOVE," the favourite Ballad sung by Miss Boden in the Romance of the Flying Dutchman; or the Phantom Ship, composed by G. Herbert Rodwell. Also the Overture to the same Piece, arranged for four Hands on the Piano Forte.

The admired Duett, "'Tis the Hour when Spirits Wander," will be published in a day or two.

NEW MUSIC.—HARP AND PIANO-FORTE.

MEYER'S "MEDEA in CORINTO," with Flute and Violoncello (ad lib) by N. C. Bochsa, in Books..... 10 6
——— Overture to ditto, ditto, ditto 6 0
Overture to "Caliph of Bagdad" ditto, ditto..... 5 0
Airs from "Il Crociato in Egitto," by W. H. Steil, in two Books (each) 7 6
——— Bishop's "Aladdin," by N. C. Bochsa..... 7 0

PIANO FORTE.

Boieldieu's "La Dame Blanche," and as Duets, in Books, by J. F. Burrowe's .....(each) 4 0
Rossini's "Semiramide" ditto, ditto .....(each) 4 0
Meyer's "Medea in Corinto," by C. Dumon, in two Books.....(each) 4 0
Bishop's "Buy a Broom," Rondo, by T. A. Rawlings 2 6
———"In my Bower a Lady Weeps," ditto, by G. Kiallmark.... 2 6

VOCAL.

'Buy a Broom!" sung by Miss Love, composed by H. R. Bishop 2 0
 The Public are respectfully cautioned that the original "Buy a Broom," is the one composed by H. R. Bishop.
'The Bonnie Lassie," composed by Mrs. Miles 2 0
'No longer the Song of the Lark," composed by J. Barnett 1 6
'Jane, the Mountain's Pride," ditto 1 6
'The King! God bless Him!" sung and composed by Mr. Braham.. 2 0

GOULDING and D'ALMAINE, 20, Soho-square.
Cabinet, Cottage, and Square Piano-fortes for Sale or Hire.

NEW MUSIC.—Just published, by F. T. LATOUR, Music-seller, 50, New Bond-street,

The favourite Airs in the Opera of "La Vestale," arranged for the Pianoforte, with Flute accompaniments, ad lib. in 2 books, by T. Latour, each 4 0
The ditto in "Medea," arranged for pianoforte, with flute accompaniments, ad lib. in 4 books, by ditto, each..... 4 0
The ditto in Rossini's "Mahomet Second, or the Siege of Corinth," arranged for ditto, with ditto, by ditto, each 5 0
The ditto in "The Interrupted Sacrifice," in 10 Nos. by ditto, each..... 1 0
"I have Fruit, I have Flowers," arranged for pianoforte, ditto 2 6
'Love was once a little Boy," ditto, ditto..... 2 0
The Songs, Duetts, &c. in the comic opera of "The two Houses of Grenada," composed by J. A. Wade, Esq.
The Songs, Duetts, &c. in the farce of "A Trip to Wales," by T. Parry.
'I have Fruit, I have Flowers," a favourite cavatina, sung by Miss Love, composed by J. A. Wade, Esq..... 2 0
'The Vesper Bell," sung by Miss Paton, ditto..... 2 0
'Meet me by Moonlight," ditto 2 0

MADAME VESTRIS'S NEW SONGS.

Just Published, by MAYHEW and Co., 17, Bond-street, London,

THE Bavarian Girl's Song, "BUY A BROOM," with an original and finely executed Portrait of Madame Vestris (in Character) by Gauci, arranged expressly for her, by Alexander Lee.—Price 2s.

New Songs.	Singers.	Composers.
Love's Labour Lost	Mad. Vestris,	Alex. Lee
Smiles and Tears	Ditto,	Ditto
England the Home of the World	Mr. Braham,	J. Barnett
Fancy dipp'd her Pen in Dew	Miss Stephens,	J. Whittaker
Light Guitar (4th edition)	Mad. Vestris,	J. Barnett
A Voice whispered softly, Dear Mary	Miss Love,	Geo. Perry
Yes, I will leave the festive Scene, in answer to the Light Guitar	Miss Paton,	J. Barnett
"Not a Drum was heard," the celebrated Ode on the Death of Sir John Moore	Mr. Sapio,	Ditto
Love's Delightful Hour	Mr. Pearman,	J. Emdin
The Queen of Bonnie Lasses	Mr. Braham,	J. Hart
The Joys of Liberty and Wine	Mr. Bedford,	Ditto
Paul Pry, "Hope I don't intrude," comic, with the original Portrait of Mr. Liston	Mr. Liston	Pigwiggin
The General Election, comic, written by Charles Dibdin the younger, with an illustration by Cruikshank	Mr. Mathews,	J. Barnett
Maiden, heedful be, The Token Flowers	Mad. Vestris,	Ditto
The Moorish Maiden	Mrs. Ashe,	J. Emdin
You ask a song, you bid me sing	Mr. Broadhurst,	G. Kiallmark
I left the Bowl in search of Love	Mr. Phillips,	Mr. Phillips.

"HAFEZ' LOVE," and the "FORGET ME NOT," two new Ballads, by Charles Edward Horn (Author of "Cherry Ripe," "I've been roaming," &c. published by WILLIAMS, 2, Strand, 2s.—Also the following admired Compositions, &c. of Mr. Horn:—Songs, "Buy a Broom," 2s.—"Childe Harold and his little Page," 2s.—"Love in the Heart," 1s. 6d.—"So fades the Rose," 1s. 6d.—"Rose of Love," 1s. 6d.—Duetts, "The Silent Tear," 1s. 6d.—"The Watch Word," 2s.—Glees, "Hark! Italy's Music," 3s.—"No, Mother, No," 2s.—"The Horn of the Chace," 2s.; and the celebrated Horn's "Buy a Broom" Quadrilles for 1827; Figures by an eminent professor, 3s.

N. B. For the great demand for the above, agents are appointed for their sale at every respectable Music Sellers in the kingdom.

NEW FLUTE MUSIC, by TULOU, with an accompaniment for the Pianoforte, his last Productions.

Published by MORI & LAVENU, 28, New Bond-street, viz.:—
"Sento nu interna voce," from Rossini's Opera Elizabetta, price 3s.
"Ah, come rapida fugge la speme," from Meyerbeer's Opera, Il Crociato in Egitto, price 3s.
"Vieni fraquesti braccia," from Rossini's Opera, La Garza Ladra; price 3s.
"Una voce poco fa," from Rossini's Opera Il Barbiere di Seviglia, price 3s. 6d.
"Ecco ridenti il cielo," do. do. do. 3s.
Se mi istante, duet, from Mercadanti's Opera, Elisa e Claudio, arranged as a duet for two flutes, price 5s.

PIANOFORTE MUSIC.

Meves's Petite Rondo "Ah Maiden Gardezvous," price 2s.
The White Lady Quadrilles, taken from Boieldieu's Opera, La Dame Blanche, arranged for the Pianoforte, by M. Dunois, price 3s.

VOCAL.

The Maiden at her wheel, sung by Mad. Vestris in the White Lady, Boieldieu, 1s. 6d.
The Secret, a Trio, from ditto, ditto, 1s. 6d.
A great assortment of Guitars by the most approved makers, for Sale or for Hire.

SPANISH GUITARS.—Just imported by WILLIS and Co. Royal Musical Reposit ry. No. 55, St. James's-street, opposite Jermyn-street, London, and No. 7, Westmorland-street, Dublin, an elegant and extensive assortment of the above Fashionable Instruments, of the finest quality and workmanship, which they are enabled to offer at unusually low prices; they have also published the following new Guitar Music:—

May's new and easy Instructions for the Spanish Guitar, with an elegant Frontispiece	5 0
Sola's 20th Set of favourite English Songs	5 0
Rugato's 1st Set of Favourite English Songs	3 0
Aurora che Sorgerai, with a Guitar Accompaniment, by Pauly	1 6
Bonnie wee Wife, ditto, by Sola	1 6
Buona Notte, ditto, by May	1 0
Cherry Ripe, ditto, by Sola	1 6
Carulli's Sixteen Exercises for the Spanish Guitar	3 6
Davies' Six Songs,—English, Italian, and French	3 0
Three French Romances, with Pianoforte, and Guitar Accompaniment by Bertioli	2 6
Three Familiar Duetts, with ditto, by C. M. Sola	3 6
Nunca de ti me, with ditto, by P. Verini	2 0

WILLIS and Co. beg leave to inform the Nobility and Gentry, that their Repository is constantly supplied with every description of Grand, Cabinet, Cottage, Square, and Circular Pianofortes, with the latest Improvements, by all the most approved Makers (which will afford the Public the great and peculiar advantage of forming their own judgment of their respective merits) at the lowest Manufacturers' prices.

N.B. Pianofortes, Harps, &c. let out on hire.

NEW MUSIC.—Just published at the ROYAL HARMONIC INSTITUTION, Argyll Rooms, 246, Regent-street, the Songs, Duets, &c. in The ORACLE, composed by WINTER, and newly arranged by W. HAWES.

	s.	d.
"Overture"	2	6
"The rosy dawn hath driven," Chorus.	5	0
"When battles conch is sounding," sung by Mr. Atkins	2	0
"The trumpet first is sounded," sung by Mr. Thorn	2	0
"We Maidens mark me," sung by Miss Goward,	1	6
"All hail to the God of our Fathers," Chorus	2	0
"Now by love and peace invited," Sestett and Chorus	3	6
"Oh when thine eye is throwing," Duet, Miss Paton and Sapio	2	6
"All powerful Sun," sung by Mr. Phillips	2	0
"There was a time ere sorrow," sung by Miss Paton	1	6
"Between my hopes and fears suspended," Duet, by Miss Paton and Phillips	2	6
"When will peace relieve my breast?" sung by Miss Hamilton	1	6
"How the plaguing varlet teases," Duet, by Miss Goward and Thorn	2	6
"We hail thee Lord of Light," Finale, 1st Act	10	0
"Tho' we all can feel thy sorrow," Quartett and Chorus	3	6
"In what sad hour," Trio	3	0
"Oh heavens! the thought is frightful," Duet.	2	6
"Hast never mark'd the flower," Song, Miss Boden	1	6
"The Maid who'd wish to slumber," Quartett	2	6
"The Gloomy terrors of the grave," Scena, Mr. Sapio	2	6
"Farewell, yet not for ever," Quartett	4	0
"The evening is descending," Finale	10	0

The Overture to "OBERON," arranged for a full Orchestra, by C. M. Weber, price 10s.

A New TREATISE on THOROUGH BASS, or the art of playing from a figured Bass, with examples, &c. &c. by Dr. Crotch.

Burrows's Selection of Airs from Weber's Opera of Oberon, arranged for the Piano Forte, with Flute adlib, in four books, each 4s.

I'VE BEEN ROAMING—Arranged by T. A. Rawlings, as a Rondo for the Pianoforte.

BOCHSA's Select Airs from the Oracle, for the Harp, and Pianoforte, with Flute and Violin accompaniments, 10s. 6d.; also the Overture to the above, arranged as above, price 5s.

DEATH FETCH.—The music in this admired and popular Opera, composed by C. E. Horn.

I'VE BEEN ROAMING.—Cavatina, sung by Madame Vestris, by C. E. Horn, price 2s.

OBERON.—The music in this popular Romantic and Fairy Opera, composed by the late Carl Maria Von Weber.

 The Proprietors of the ROYAL HARMONIC INSTITUTION beg most respectfully to acquaint the Public, that the only correct copies of the Opera now performing at the English Opera House, called "THE ORACLE," are published by them, and that all other copies are spurious and an Invasion of their rights.

N.B. The whole of the Music in the New Opera of PEVERIL OF THE PEAK, by C. E. Horn, now performing with such enthusiastic applause at the Theatre Royal Covent Garden, is now published, and may be had separate.

Splendid Christmas Presents, at Moderate Prices.

JUST PUBLISHED, by W. MARSHALL, Price Nine Shillings, THE PLEDGE of FRIENDSHIP for the year 1827; a greatly enlarged and splendid Volume of Moral Essays, interesting Tales, and Original Poetry; designed as a Christmas Present and New-Year's Gift. The Contributions in the various branches of Literature, are from Writers of well-known talent. The Embellishments comprise Fifteen splendid efforts of Art, from the designs of Stothard, R.A, Wright, Shephard, and Corbould, with an embossed Inscription Plate. The Engravings by Heath, Edwards, Laccy, and Ensom.

W. M. has also published a series of Twenty different POCKET BOOKS and ALMANACKS for 1827, on a scale of variety that every class of Purchasers are sure to be suited at Marshall's Establishment. The Ladies Pocket Books are embellished with full-length portraits of ladies of distinction in the newest Parisian costume, four pages of original music, eight views, and a variety of pleasing and useful information, price 2s. 6d. gilt edges, and may be had with an Almanack. The Gentlemen's Pocket Books contain correct Lists of the Members of the New Parliament, the House of Peers, Town and Country Bankers, useful Tables, the Army and Navy, Great Officers of State, &c. price 2s. 6d. and may be had with an Almanack; Marshall's Family Account Book, for keeping a regular statement of domestic Expences, with valuable Recipes, useful Tables the Art of Carving, &c. price 2s.; also Marshall's New Pocket Books, are only 1s. 6d. with fine engravings, List of Bankers, Public Funds, &c.—the gilt edge edition 2s. No. 36, and Vol. 3, of Marshall's Views, are ready. The whole published by W. MARSHALL, No. 1, Holborn Bars, corner of Middle Row.

In 3 vols. post 8vo. price 30s.

ALLA GIORNATA;

or, TO THE DAY—a Novel.

"There is much, very much, that distinguishes these volumes from their competitors. The interest is well sustained, and the language elegant; and sketches of charming description, and observations, whose truth and beauty must be felt by all, are scattered like flowers over the pages."—LITERARY GAZETTE.

Printed for SAUNDERS and OTLEY, Public Library, Conduit-street.

In 3 vols. post 8vo. Price £1 11s. 6d.

ALMACK'S.—A Novel.

Second Edition.

Fashionable Scenes described:—

Parisian Life—the Drawing Room—the Opera—Hyde Park—a Flirtation—Atherford Abbey—the Family in Portland Place—Fashionable Conversation—a Gallery of Portraits—the Dinner—Almack's Ball—a Lady Patroness—Resources on a Wet Day—Company—Fashionable Life in the Country—Grandees—a Female Coterie, &c. &c.

Printed for SAUNDERS and OTLEY, Public Library, Conduit-street.

AN ELEGANT CHRISTMAS PRESENT,

Just Published.

EUROPE in MINIATURE, a Geographical Amusement, consisting of 15 Maps, neatly coloured, and 56 Cards, exhibiting the Divisions, Rivers, principal Towns, Population, Productions, Form of Government, &c., of each Country: the whole fitted up in an elegant Box, price Fifteen Shillings.

Sold by TREUTTEL and Co., 33, Soho-square.

THE LITERARY SOUVENIR FOR 1827.—Just published, price 12s.

THE LITERARY SOUVENIR, or CABINET of POETRY and ROMANCE, for 1827. With numerous splendid engravings from original pictures, by Messrs. Howard, Newton, Farrier, Turner, Eastlake, Green, Martin, West, Corbould, &c. Edited by Alaric A. Watts.

The Literary Contents of this volume, consist of one hundred original articles in Prose and Verse, (contributed expressly for it's pages), by a very large proportion of the most popular Writers of the day, including, among others, Southey, Campbell, Washington Irving, S. T. Coleridge, the Author of "Lights and Shadows of Scottish Life," Montgomery, Mrs. Hemans, L. E. L., Barry Cornwall, Roscoe, Horace Smith, Miss Benger, Galt, Delta, the Author of "Odes and Addresses to Great People," Lord Francis Leveson Gower, Miss Mitford, Bowles, the Misses Jane and Anna Maria Porter, Sotheby, Lord Porchester, Neele, Bowring, Allan Cunningham, Shee, Clare, Dale, Crofton Croker, Mackworth Praed, Hodgson, Dr. Drake, Buckingham, the Author of "To-day in Ireland," Atherstone, Conder, William and Mary Howitt, the Author of "London in the Olden Time," Emerson, Mrs. Charles Gore, Miss Roberts, Mrs. C. B. Wilson, the Author of "The Lover's Quarrel," the Hon. and Rev. H. Howard, Alaric A. Watts, &c. &c. &c.

☞ Of the large paper Edition, with proof impressions of the plates on India paper, price £1 4s., only a few copies remain on hand.

London: Printed for Longman, Rees, Orme, Brown, and Green; and John Andrews, 167, New Bond-street; and sold by all the Booksellers in Town and Country.

A few copies of large and small paper of the Literary Souvenir for 1826, may still be had of the publisher.

DEDICATED TO THE KING.

Just Published by HENRY COLBURN, 8, New Burlington-street.

In 2 vols. 8vo. with a fine Portrait, engraved by Turner, from a Picture by Sir Thomas Lawrence. Price 28s.

MEMOIRS of the LIFE of Mrs. SIDDONS. By James Boaden, Esq. interspersed with Anecdotes of Authors and Actors, and intended as a Companion to the Author's Life of her Brother, Mr. Kemble.

2. LETTERS from the EAST. Written during a recent Tour through Turkey, Egypt, Arabia, the Holy Land, Syria, and Greece. By John Carne, Esq., of Queen's College, Cambridge. The Second Edition, in 2 vols. post 8vo. price 18s.

"These Volumes are rendered peculiarly valuable by their graphic descriptions, written on the spot, of the present actual state of the places which have been the theatres of the great events recorded in the Bible. Thus, we read of the wild country around Mount Sinai—of the scene of the miraculous passage of the Red Sea—of Mount Carmel—of Jerusalem, with its Mounts of Olives and Calvary, and its valley of Jehosaphat—of the Holy Sepulchre—of the Garden of Gethsemane—of Damascus, the most ancient city in the world—of the Cave in which Abraham and Isaac were interred—of the forlorn Shores of the Dead Sea—and of other scenes, which the inspired Writings have fixed for life in the heart of every Christian."

3. TALES of the O'HARA FAMILY, Second Series, comprising the Nowlans, and Peter of the Castle, in 3 vols. post 8vo. price 31s. 6d.

4. TALES of a VOYAGER. Stories told at Sea during a Voyage recently made to the Arctic Ocean. Interspersed with curious anecdotes, and a Narrative of the various Adventures and Perils of the Voyage. In 3 vols. post 8vo. £1 8s. 6d.

5. The TOR HILL. By the Author of "Brambletye House;" or Cavaliers and Roundheads; 3 vols. post 8vo. £1 11s. 6d.

And in a few days, embellished with Plates,

6. PERSONAL NARRATIVE of a JOURNEY from INDIA to ENGLAND, by Bussorah, Bagdad, the Ruins of Babylon, Curdistan, the Court of Persia, the Western Shore of the Caspian Sea, Astrakhan, Nisney Novogorod, Moscow, and St. Petersburgh, in the year 1821. By Captain the Hon. George Keppel.

7. TRUCKLEBOROUGH HALL. A Novel. In 3 vols. post 8vo. 28s. 6d.

Diego—Mungo, can you be honest?
Mungo—Vat you give me, Massa?

8. The NATCHEZ; an Indian Tale. By the Viscount de Chateaubriand, Author of "Atala," "Travels in the Holy Land," &c. Editions in French and English, in small octavo.

With every dispatch,

FOR VAN DIEMEN'S LAND and NEW SOUTH WALES, the beautiful new first class Brig LION, ALEXANDER KENN, (late of the William Shand), Commander. Burthen 275 Tons. Lying in the London Dock. Has excellent accommodations for Passengers.—For Freight or Passage apply to Buckles, Bagster, and Buchanan, 33, Mark-lane.

BARBARY WALL FLOWER SNUFF, to be had only of the Importer, GEORGE EDLIN, Importer of Foreign Snuffs and Segars, No. 6, Aldgate, corner of Saracen's Head Inn, and of his Agent Mr. J. Nohil, 81, Lower Grosvenor-street, Bond-street.

CHOCOLATE of the finest Quality, 3s. per lb.—COCOA-NUTS, the finest Grenada, 2s. per lb.—The Public are respectfully informed they may now purchase the above-mentioned Articles, warranted of the finest quality, at MARSHALL and Co.'s Tea and Coffee Warehouse No. 12, Southampton-street, Strand. Also, Turkey Coffee, warranted of the finest Quality, at 3s. per lb.

CAUTION.—OLD AND NEW MEASURE.

THE Public are respectfully requested to notice, that the difference between the Old and the New, or Imperial Gallon is one-fifth, viz. five Imperial Gallons are equal in quantity to six Gallons Old Measure.—As many persons are selling by the Old Measure, without explaining to the purchasers this disadvantage, it is hoped that the present Caution will not be considered as uncalled for.

UPTON and Co. Oilmen, &c.
Queen-street, Cheapside, London.
Dec. 19, 1826.
N.B. Rectified Sperm Oil, 6s. per Imperial Gallon.

CORNS, BUNIONS, &c.

MORRIS'S ROYAL BRUNSWICK CORN PLASTER, prepared from a Recipe belonging to her late Majesty, and now in general use by the Royal Family, is an excellent Remedy for eradicating Corns, and giving relief to those who have hard fleshy substances at the bottom of their feet, without the least pain or inconvenience, and will prove a very useful Family Plaster for fresh Wounds and Scalds, likewise for Bunions.

Sold in Boxes, at 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. by Butlers, Chemists, Cheapside, corner St. Paul's; 73, Prince's-street, Edinburgh; and 54, Sackville-street, Dublin; Savory and Co. 136, New Bond-street; Willmott, 83, High-street, Borough; and the principal Medicine Venders in the United Kingdom. Of whom may be had, PERRY'S ESSENCE, which has been declared in highly respectable Medical Journals, to be the "best thing ever discovered for the TOOTH AND EAR-ACHE." In Bottles, at 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. Also Dr. FOTHERGILL'S DROPS, so much celebrated for their efficacy in Nervous Disorders. In Bottles, at 4s. 6d.; 11s.; and 22s. And Dr. FOTHERGILL'S TONIC FEMALE PILLS. In Boxes, at 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d.

N. B. Ask for MORRIS'S BRUNSWICK CORN PLASTER.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

LISBON PAPERS.

LISBON, DEC. 6.—An official notice from the War Office says, "The service of the King Don Pedro IV., the defence of the country, its honour and safety, imperinusly requiring, that the corps of the army should be completed as soon as possible, her Highness the Regent has ordered, that the Generals of the Provinces shall immediately declare, that every volunteer who shall offer himself in the corps of infantry, cavalry, and caçadores, within twenty days from the publication of this order, at the head quarters of the garrison, shall serve for two years only."

DEC. 7.—The Gazette contains all the orders despatched to the Generals of Provinces for the recruiting of the army.

Extracts from the official despatches received at the War-office, Dec. 6th, 1826:—

"General Stubbs writes from Oporto on the 3d December, communicating the loyal sentiments of the inhabitants of that city, and of his efforts to maintain tranquillity and obedience to Don Pedro IV.

"The General of Lower Beira writes on the 2d and 3d Dec., that, in spite of the seduction and intrigues of the rebels to entice the militia with a deluge of inflammatory papers, the troops there remain constant in their obedience and discipline; that the regiment of militia of Tordella marched to Almeida to replace the 6th regiment of Foot, which was to garrison some parts to the left of the Douro.

"The Conde d'Alva writes from Alhuêra, that he marched to Villa Real de San Antonio, and was taking such defensive measures as were necessary for that part of the Guadiana.

"Various accounts from Alentejo, dated the 4th, confirm that the rebels remained in Mourao, where the deserter, Jose Jeronymo, commanded; and the ordinary judge of Barrancas announces, that, on the 28th ult., the deserters of Algarve were marching to Frexenal de Serra, and the troops of Alentejo were advancing to the Guadiana.

"As General Mello was to march from Chaves on the 29th to Braganza, no accounts have been received at this office up to this hour from that province.

"PINTO, Chief of the First Division."

WAR-OFFICE, DEC. 8.—Extracts from the official communications received to-day in this Office:—

"The Marquis of Angija, writes from Braga on the 4th of this month, that he had received a verbal communication from Colonel Zagallo, Governor of Chaves, that General Correa de Mello (who, on the 1st of December, was at Mirandella), was sending forces towards Villa Real, and that the deserter, Leitao, with a large body of guerillas, threatened the road of Montealegre; for which reasnn the Marquis detached the Lieutenant-Colonel of Cavalry, Joao Nepomuceno de Macedo, commanding a column of different troops, to Salamonde, and had taken other measures. The same Marquis also states, that, by virtue of the authority given him, he had armed the people of such places as he thought advisable.

"The Viscount of Beire, after giving up the military command in Alentejo to the Count de Villa Flor, accompanied that General, as a volunteer, desiring to fight in the first engagement in any command, except that of Commander-in-Chief.

"General Cacla writes from Elves, on the 6th, that General Conde de Villa Flor requested him to retain the Government of that fortress, to which he immediately assented, always preferring the service of her Highness, and the defence of the country, to every personal consideration.

"The Conde de Villa Flora was to be to-day in Redondo; the rebels had only a piquet at Monsaras, on this side of the Guadiana; the Count was preparing to attack them.

"General Stubbs writes from Oporto on the 5th, at ten o'clock at night, that Colonel Valdez had yielded for want of provisions, that the officers were prisoners, and the soldiers sent to Spain, because they would not listen to the promises of the rebels. General Mello and General Claudino, had their head-quarters at Murça on the 3d; the rebels had their advanced post at Mirandella the same day, desclating every thing; the guerillas think only of plunder and assassination. Such are the accounts that General Stubbs received from private information.

"The Conde d'Alva writes on the 4th, as follows:—"I have this moment received a despatch from the Captain-General of Andalusia, and another from the Military Governor of Ayamonte, of which I send Copies to your Excellency, to be laid before the Infanta Regent; and as it appears from their contents that the arms and accoutrements which were taken to Spain by the deserters of the 14th Regiment of Infantry, and the 14th of Caçadores, are to be delivered up to me, I am going to appoint two officers, one to receive the artillery, one the accoutrements.'

"The General of Lower Beira writes from Castello Branco, on the 4th December, at 9 o'clock in the morning:—

"'Up to this day the rebels have not appeared on this frontier with any armed force, but about two hours ago I was informed that a convoy of arms and ammunition had arrived at Valverde, two leagues from Penamacor. I am assembling the militia, and assure your Excellency, that if they do not enter in too large a force, I will do every thing possible to repel them.'

"The General of Upper Beira writes from Vizeu on the 5th, that, on the 2d of this month, about two in the afternoon, the Ex-Lieutenant-Colonel of the regiment of militia of Trancoza entered the frontier of that province with some armed men, and proceeded to the house of the Mayor of Castello Rodrigo, whom he grossly insulted, took away papers, released the prisoners, pasted up proclamations, and proceeded from that place to Almendra and other places, spreading confusion. A detachment of the 6th Regiment of Infantry put down an attempt at rebellion in Villa Nova de Fazcoa; the commander of the detachment behaved bravely. Similar conduct was shown by a piquet of cavalry, No. 10, which skirmished with some rebels who entered from the Aldeia da Ribeira.

"The same General writes, that Jose Ribeiro de Sa, Lieutenant of the Militia of Lamego, with some soldiers, and an Ensign of the same regiment, fired, and took prisoners some rebels of Villa de Bertianda. Up to the 3d, Lamego was tranquil. He had also given orders to organize the guerillas, as he had been desired.

"The Brigadier-General Antonio de Azevedo, Governor of Abrantes, states, on the 4th and 6th, the measures he has taken to put that place in a good state of defence; and he also mentions the arrival there of the battalion of the 1st Regiment of Infantry, and that the Militia of Castello Branco were marching from that place to this city.

"RODRIGO PINTO POIZARRO,
"The Chief of the 1st Division."

DECREE.

"The Councillor of State, Ignacio da Costa Quintella, having obtained leave to resign the office of Minister Secretary of State for the Marine and Colonies, and from the duties of Secretary of War, with which he was charged, in consequence of the circumstances which hinder the Councillor of State, Joao Carlos de Saldanha Oliveira e Daun, from performing those duties, I have thought fit, in the name of the King, to appoint the Marquis de Valenca, Peer of the Kingdom, to hold, provisionally, the said office of Minister for the War Department.

(Signed) "INFANTA REGENT.
"PEDRO de MELLO.
"BREYNER.

"Palace of Ajuda, Dec. 6, 1826."

CHAMBER OF PEERS.

DEC. 5.—This Sitting was chiefly occupied in the nomination of Committees.

DECEMBER 6.—The president stated that the committee appointed to congratulate the Princess Regent on the marriage of the Queen Maria II. with the Infant Don Miguel, had the honour to be presented to her on the 1st of December. Her Highness received them graciously, and answered them as follows:—

"It is with the most lively pleasure that I receive, on a day which recalls to our memory such remarkable facts, the deputation which the Chamber of Peers sends to compliment me on the happy celebration at Vienna, of the betrothing of her Majesty, Queen Maria II. my Niece and Sovereign, to my beloved Brother, the Infant Don Miguel. The full accomplishment of the orders and desires of the august founder of our wise institutions, will, doubtless, put an end to our misfortunes. If some degenerate Portuguese, to whom a neighbouring nation has given protection, attempt to disturb us, I cannot fear when I see myself surrounded by the illustrious descendants of those heroes who, on the 1st of December, 1640, rose so gloriously, to re-conquer—to preserve—the independence of our dear country."

The remainder of the Sitting was employed in discussing several chapters of the internal regulations, or standing orders.

CHAMBER OF DEPUTIES.

DECEMBER 5.—In this Sitting the discussion was continued on the project of law for the formation of a corps to be called Guards of Security.

A project of law for the election of the Chambers was read.

DECEMBER 6.—The Vice-Secretary, Sousa Carvalho, read the following project of law:—

"Every individual, not belonging to the army, who attacks the State in arms, spreads proclamations, or addresses speeches to the people against the legitimacy of Don Pedro IV. or shall excite rebellion, shall be provisionally tried by a Court Martial, notwithstanding any law to the contrary."

There was a long debate on this project, at the close of which the President moved, that the subject of the project was to be considered as decided by the powers already granted to the Government, to which the Chamber assented.

DECEMBER 7.—In this Sitting a project of law was read, for inviting all the Students, and other persons belonging to the University of Coimbra, voluntarily to take up arms during the present year. This project, consisting only of six articles, was approved.

PARIS.

CHAMBER OF PEERS, TUESDAY, DEC. 19.

The Minister for Foreign Affairs, Damas, began the Sitting by declaring that France was in perfect understanding with England on the affairs of Portugal and the arrangements of Spain. That a certain faction in Spain had, by its culpable intrigues, fomented disturbances in Portugal, which nobody more desired to see terminated than himself, and that his Most Christian Majesty, being dissatisfied with M. de Moustiers, his Ambassador at the Spanish Court, had recalled him. This declaration is now printing.

M. Baron de Pasquier defended Mr. Canning and the English Ministry, in their language respecting France, and the consequence of the French invasion of Spain. If any thing was too strong in Mr. Canning's speech, it should be ascribed to the heat of debate, and the hurry of extempore speaking. When M. de Chateaubriand was about to ascend the tribune, with his speech in his hand, M. de Pontecoulant, a member of the Liberal Opposition, rose and asked the Chamber to decide that their speeches should not be published. He assimilated the meeting of the Peers to discuss the address to the secret sitting of the Chamber of Deputies. M. Chateaubriand objected to this concealment, but submitted that his light should be put under a bushel, and read his harrangue as he had written it. It was to the following effect:—He said that the declaration of the Minister for Foreign Affairs was, in his opinion, one of the strongest diplomatic documents which existed, perhaps in the world. He declared that the enterprise of Chaves was real rebellion, and the overthrow of the Portuguese Charter would be a great calamity. The declaration of the Minister Damas, he said, justified all the vehemence of Mr. Canning's speech. It accused the Spanish authorities of perfidy; in fine, it would give England the right of making war on Spain, if England thought such a war useful to its interests. Mr. Canning might declare that war, and support its justice, on the speech of a French Minister. If England invaded Spain, the King of Spain might tell the French Generals that a French Cabinet had sanctioned such invasion; that the French Cabinet had recalled its Ambassador; that it had transmitted severe notes to Spain, might be well. But why let the public into all these secrets? In short, whatever may be the wrongs and blindness of Spain, has Ferdinand ceased to be a Bourbon, and have we shed our blood and spent our gold in Spain to entitle ourselves to be the denunciators of Ferdinand? The Address, as drawn up by the Duke de Levis, was entirely changed. The paragraph about the press was entirely rejected. The paragraphs about Spain and Portugal and "our Allies" were likewise struck out, or completely altered. In short, this poor Address was so mangled, that it was thought better to make a new one than to mend it. It was, therefore, sent to the bureaux with an order to draw up a new one. This one was presented to-day. Its fate I have not yet heard. The following is the speech of M. Damas, the Minister for Foreign Affairs, at length: it has been just given me by a particular friend:—

SPEECH OF THE FOREIGN MINISTER.

"Noble Peers,—The discussion about to be opened before you, imposes on us the obligation of making known to you the actual situation of our relations with the States whose interests are more particularly connected with the late events. This is the duty which I come to fulfil before you.

"At the time of the entry of the French army into Spain in 1823, the English Government demanded and obtained from France the promise that no hostility should be committed with respect to Portugal, and declared that it would consider itself obliged by former treaties to come to the aid of that power, if it were attacked.

"At the time the late troubles broke out in Portugal, a similar declaration was made by England to Spain, and communicated to France as well as to all the great Powers of the Continent, and it was agreed that Spain should undertake nothing against Portugal, and that on her part England would watch that Portugal committed no act of hostility against Spain.

"We owe it to truth to say, that England has fulfilled the obligation which she took upon herself, and that on their part all the powers have not ceased to act with a common consent towards the Cabinet of Spain, to induce that power not to furnish to Portugal any subject of complaint.

"However, at the very moment when that Cabinet gave its assurance that the arms taken from the refugees should be given up to the Portuguese Government; at the moment when orders were given that the refugees themselves should be removed from the frontiers, these men have entered Portugal in arms, and this sudden attack has been accompanied by circumstances which leave no doubt as to the co-operation of some of the Spanish authorities, who had been charged with the execution of the order to disarm and disperse the refugees among the interior provinces.

"France, which had the greatest reason to prevent all hostilities on the part of Spain,—France, which had the most right to be listened to,—France, whose intervention should have inspired Portugal and England with the greatest security as to the fulfilment of the engagements of the Spanish Cabinet—could not remain indifferent to events which made appear in a manner so evident, either contempt for its councils on the impotence of its influence, and the King's Government had immediately to testify its disapprobation, by recalling its Ambassador from Madrid. France does not contest with England the right resulting from its duty—the right imposed on it by a long series of treaties, to go to the aid of Portugal. It will continue its efforts to prevent the renewal of acts which have authorised the measures taken by the British Cabinet; it will omit nothing to prevent a rupture between Spain and Portugal, and it hopes to succeed: it has already taken, with regard to the Cabinet of Madrid, in concert with all its allies, steps the most likely to attain this object. It continues to receive from the British Cabinet, the most positive assurances of its entire co-operation. Nothing which has taken place up to the latest events, authorizes the King's Government to raise any doubts on the sincerity of these assurances: on their part, the Ministers of the King are firmly determined to advise his Majesty to refuse his support to the Spanish Government, if, by its own fault, it puts Portugal under the necessity of assuming a hostile attitude towards it.

"France cannot, then, be reduced to renounce the advantages of peace, except by circumstances which we are far from foreseeing. Her good faith and her dignity would not permit her to support unjust and passionate acts which have only taken place in contempt of councils which have been given and promises which have been made.

"It is by thus following the rules of justice—by respecting the faith of treaties, and the rights of other Powers, that France preserves all her advantages for sustaining her own rights, and even those of Spain, should she be unjustly attacked.

"It was by defending the principles of order and legitimacy, that England came out victorious from the long and sanguinary contest which she sustained against the French Revolution. The same success will attend us, if ever we should, in our turn, be called upon to defend the same principles."

DEFEAT OF THE PERSIAN ARMY.

Despatches have been received from Persia by Government, dated Tabree, Oct. 3.

They announce that a division of the Persian army, detached by his Highness the Prince Regent, under the command of his eldest son, Mahomed Meerza, and his uncle, Ameer Khan, was defeated, with severe loss, on the 26th September, near the village of Shamkhar, five farsecahs north west of Georgia.

The battle was fought on the banks of the Yezan, a second stream of which divided the contending armies. The Russian force amounted to about 6,000 infantry and 3,000 cavalry, with a proportionate number of guns; that of the Persians, to 5,000 infantry, and 5,000 irregular horse, with six field pieces.

After some hard fighting the Persians were compelled to retire, in the utmost confusion; and it is supposed that nearly the whole of their infantry were either killed or taken prisoners.

Three field pieces fell into the hands of the Russians, and Ameer Khan was killed by a Cossack, when in the act of rallying his troops. The young Prince, Mahomed Meerza, was taken prisoner by a Cossack, but was afterwards rescued, and borne away in triumph, by one of his sardars.

We perceive, that Ridgway's, of Piccadilly, have published the Speeches of Mr. Canning in a corrected form. At such a moment of high interest as the affairs of Portugal at present excite, such a publication, which may be regarded as an authentic avowal of Mr. Canning's sentiments and opinions, is highly interesting and desirable. These Speeches are important in a literary as well as a political point of view. Mr. Brougham, an authority on such a subject, described them as marked by a fervor and energy of eloquence unparalelled before in the House of Commons; and unprecedented even in the eloquence of the Right Honourable Gentleman.

The Duke of York is at present so much engaged in business immediately appertaining to his office as Commander-in-Chief, in consequence of the present situation of affairs in Portugal, that he has been obliged to postpone his visit to the Duke of Rutland to the middle of January.

The new novel of "Almack's," is, it appears, read every where, and with universal delight. It is considered in the higher circles as the best picture of fashionable life that has yet been given, and the lively view of wit and humour which pervades the whole, certainly renders it altogether one of the most amusing and attractive works that has for a considerable time been presented to the public.

A most dreadful murder was committed on Monday evening between St. Alban's and Colney, upon a Smithfield salesman, named Battams. It is supposed that he was watched receiving money in Smithfield-market, on the morning of that day, and overtaken at the above-named place. His body was discovered by some of the early coachmen.

It is said not to be the intention of His Majesty's Government to appoint a successor to the Marquis of Hastings, as Governor of Malta. The appointment is only to be that of Lieutenant-Governor, with a reduced allowance; and we understand that Major-General Frederick Ponsonby, who is now second in command in the Ionian Islands, has been selected for that appointment.

A considerable portion of the King's private collection of pictures, especially those of a large size, it is said, will be placed in the New National Gallery. The Dutch and Flemish pictures, great favourites with his Majesty, will, of course, be transferred to Buckingham Palace.

The Duke of Wellington, amongst his numerous collection of portraits of the Sovereigns of Europe, which are placed in his gallery at Apsley-house, has eight or ten portraits of Napoleon Buonaparte, painted by distinguished artists.

When a Grand Vizier is favourably deposed, that is, without banishing or putting him to death, it is signified to him by a messenger from the Sultan, who goes to his table, and wipes the ink out of his golden pen: this he understands as the sign of his dismissal.

HORSE-STEALING.—Notwithstanding the severe example about to be made on Treadgold for this crime, it has no effect in stopping its progress; for, on the very night (Friday last) Treadgold received sentence of death at Hertford, a valuable dark brown mare, the property of Mr. John Warner, was stolen from a field near Hoddesdon. A reward of ten guineas is offered for the recovery of it. On the night of Sunday last, or early on Monday morning, two horses were supposed to be stolen from Bedwell Park, near Hertford, the seat of Sir Culling Smith, Bart. At Stanton, Suffolk, the crime has been lately carried on to a great extent. A bay pouey, belonging to the Rev. G. Bidwell, was stolen last week from his stables; a valuable filly from the farm-yard of Mr. Debenham, at Ixworth Thorpe; and a bay mare from the stables of Mr. Sparrow, immediately opposite Mr. Sparrow's chamber. To avoid passing the house on the hard road, the villains led the animal round a field, to get her over a fence, but the ditch being too wide, they broke open the yard-gate, and made their escape!—County Chronicle.

The unhappy convict, White, who is shortly to answer to the laws with his life, continues, we are sorry to find, in a state of mind the most distressing—insensible to the consolations of religion, not from undervaluing its suggestions, but from that total prostration of strength, both mental and bodily, which renders him unable to contemplate the fate which hangs over him, with any degree of fortitude or calmness. The Rev. Ordinary is incessant in his attention to him, but he cannot bear for one moment to consider death inevitable, and is consequently either in the lowest state of dejection, or in paroxysms little short of frenzy. These latter are not unfrequently attended with violent convulsions. His wife, to whom he has been but six months married, and his mother, are with him every day, during those hours which the prison discipline allows, and endeavour to administer to him as much comfort as the state of her own feelings will permit; but when they quit him for the night, his despair exceeds description. From the nature of his offence, and the circumstances connected with it, no hopes are entertained that the Royal mercy will be extended to him.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

VICE-CHANCELLOR'S COURT, Dec. 21.
INJUNCTION.

WELLESLEY V. THE MISSES LONG AND JULIUS HUTCHENSON.

Mr. Hart—I have to move for an injunction ex-parte. I move on behalf of Wm. Tilney Long Wellesley, against Emma Long, Dorothy Long, and Julius Hutchenson, and my motion is, that they may be restrained by the injunction of this Court from destroying, interpolating, falsifying, or injuring, any of the documents, accounts, letters, or papers referred to in the bill. The bill stated, that the plaintiff, in the year 1812, inter-married with Miss Tilney Long, who died in the year 1825, and that at the time of her death she was residing at Richmond, and that she was in possession of a variety of jewels, watches, &c. part of the family property, and also of certain documents, accounts, letters, &c. ; that she made her will, and appointed executors ; but that she afterwards revoked the appointment, in consequence of which the plaintiff became entitled to be the administrator of her property ; that subsequently he obtained letters of administration, and so became the sole legal personal representative of his late wife, and therefore, either by his marital rights as her husband, or by her will, as administrator, he is entitled to all the effects and property belonging to his late wife. It is there stated, that after the death of his wife, he is informed, and verily believes, that Emma and Dorothy Long, who were living with her, caused seals to be put on the depositories of this property, which remained for some time ; that he has since been informed, and believes, that these seals have been broken, and the documents, papers, &c. given to Mr. Hutchenson. Application had been made to the Misses Long to deliver up this property to the plaintiff, which application had been refused. The plaintiff is unable to particularise or identify the property, so as to support an action to recover those particular articles which might be subject to an action. Mr. Hutchenson has also been applied to, and has threatened to destroy such of these documents, letters, and writings, as he shall think proper. The object of the application is therefore to restrain such destruction till the further order of the Court.

The Vice-Chancellor—What is your affidavit ?

Mr. Hart then read the affidavit, which concluded by stating, "That the defendants had insisted on selecting such of these documents and writings as they thought proper, and of destroying such others as they should think fit, and that in particular Mr. Hutchenson had threatened to destroy such of these papers as he should think fit. These documents, were, many of them, letters written by the plaintiff to his wife, and were of a confidential nature."

The Vice-Chancellor—Do you think there is sufficient ground to grant this injunction ? The Court will never grant an injunction of this kind, unless there be sufficient reason to apprehend the destruction of property. But it does not appear to me that there has been sufficient ground laid before the Court.

Mr. Hart—The weight and value of the affidavit is for the consideration of the Court.

The Vice-Chancellor—I am of opinion that from that affidavit the destruction of these papers is not to be apprehended.

Mr. Hart—Did your Honour hear that part of the affidavit which states that Mr. Hutchenson had threatened to destroy them ?

The Vice-Chancellor—You did not read that ; the affidavit only says "that the deponent has been informed and believes" that they have threatened to destroy them.

Mr. Hart—From the sort of distance which exists between the parties to this suit, Mr. Wellesley can only act by what he has been informed of, as he has no means of personally becoming acquainted with these things. But as the injunction can injure no one, and as it may prevent a very great injury, I hope your Honour will grant it.

Mr. Beames—Your Honour will perceive that they assert their right to select such of these writings as they think fit, and destroy what they please ; and, in particular, Mr. Hutchenson threatens to put this right into practice. I think, therefore, that your Honour will see ground sufficient to grant this injunction. Since the case of Lord Byron, and others of a similar character, there can be no doubt that a threat to destroy papers and letters is a sufficient reason to grant an injunction to restrain.

The Vice-Chancellor—I am quite certain that that is sufficient, but it does not appear from your affidavit that such a threat has been made. The injunction of this Court to restrain an improper act is a very strong reflection on the other parties, and therefore the Court never will grant such an injunction, unless such an intention does exist. Your affidavit does not satisfy me that such an intention exists in this case, and therefore I cannot throw such a reflection on the parties as my injunction would imply.—Injunction refused.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.

CHARGE OF LIBEL.—POLICE REPORTS.

Harris v. Wheldon.—This was an action brought by the plaintiff, Harris, a pawnbroker in the Strand, to recover damages from the defendant, the proprietor of The British Traveller, for two alleged libels contained in that Paper.—Mr. Serjeant Vaughan stated, that the libels complained of appeared in the shape of police reports. He was indulgent, or he would rather say just, to the Press, in all cases where he found it under prosecution. In these police accounts, as they appeared in the Paper in question, the plaintiff was made to cut, not only a very conspicuous, but a very abominable figure. He was an advocate for the publication of all proceedings in our Courts of Justice ; but in police cases, where only a preliminary inquiry was entered into, it was not right that the cases of individuals should be given to the public, because it was calculated to create a load of prejudice against them, and to place them under the greatest disadvantage ; it was therefore highly censurable to do so.—The learned Serjeant, having read the libels, contended that nothing could be more bitter and more virulent than the insinuation that the pawnbroker and the thief were leagued together, and acted in concert, and that the functions of a Jury could not be better exercised than in removing such unjust and unfounded charges from the head of a respectable tradesman.

Mr. Serjeant Wilde said, that his Learned Brother was, upon this occasion, in the usual situation of all Counsel for the plaintiff, in cases of libel ; he was a zealous advocate for the liberty of the press. When was it ever otherwise ? If any man was at a loss to find a friend and advocate of the freedom of the press, let him only wait until some Newspaper was proceeded against for a libel, and he might be sure to find him in the person of the plaintiff's Counsel. The public press had many friends and advocates of that description, all or the greater part of whom found it necessary to declare themselves its friends, at the moment they were straining every nerve to crush it. He did not mean to say that publishing the proceedings at Police Offices was strictly right ; but he did say, that it was doing that which the world in general thought conferred great public benefit ; and yet a defendant could not plead his truth, his impartiality, in mitigation of damages. What could a plaintiff expect in the shape of damages, when the Jury saw that the defendant was prevented from shewing that he had only given facts, and that he was not actuated in the slightest degree by malice? His Learned Brother said, that great benefit was derived from the publication of the proceedings in our superior Courts. But were the proceedings in our Courts of Law of more general public importance—was a greater number of persons interested in or affected by them, than by the proceedings in our Police Offices ? He believed it would be found, that the proceedings at Police Offices, and the inquiries and discoveries to which they led, were of greater public importance, and their publication of greater public benefit, than the general business of our superior Courts. This was, he believed, the general feeling in the public mind ; but the plaintiff, of course found an exception in his own particular case.—The Learned Counsel proceeded to maintain that no attack on the plaintiff's character was intended in the reports. He trusted, that in estimating the quantum of damages to which the plaintiff was entitled, they would not allow themselves to be influenced by the impression that the publication of Police Reports was injurious, and ought to be repressed. It was not his intention to justify Police-reporting in general ; there might be cases where publicity would cause injury ; but this case differed from an ex-parte statement, where a person was about to be sent to take his trial in a Criminal Court. Here the whole extent of imputation against the plaintiff was, that when his shopman had taken a pledge, as it alleged, improperly, he had shewn a greater degree of carelessness than he ought to have done.—The Chief Justice could not agree in the opinions expressed by his Learned Brother, as to the policy of publishing Police Reports ; and he was surprised to hear that Learned Gentleman, who had been so long acquainted with the administration of justice, express an opinion that the publication of such reports had been ever attended with any but bad consequences. The public Papers, instead of conveying useful and pleasing information, were made the vehicles of conveying to the innocent and the unwary a knowledge of every trick, of every degrading and disgusting exhibition to be found amongst the lowest and the worst portion of society. But the evil did not rest here—the unfortunate parties who were examined preparatory to their being sent before another tribunal, had a strong prejudice created against them in the public mind. A Juryman must have great confidence in the strength of his own mind, if he thought he could withdraw his mind from the consideration of an ex parte statement, and go without prejudice to the consideration of the case of which it formed a part. The Learned Judge then stigmatised the offensive statements to be libellous ; and, if the defendant, he said, for the purpose of increasing the sale of his paper, pandered to the base and degraded appetites of those who delighted in the grossest and the most wicked statements, and put the profits thereof into his pocket, then he was actuated by that which the law considered malice.—The Jury gave a verdict for the plaintiff—Damages One Hundred Pounds.

BREACH OF PROMISE OF MARRIAGE.—SEDUCTION.

Daniel v. Bowles.—This was an action brought by the plaintiff, Charlotte Augusta Daniel, to recover compensation in damages, from the defendant, Charles Bowles, for a breach of promise of marriage.—The damages were laid at 10,000*l*.—Mr. Sergeant Wilde, for the plaintiff, stated that in the present case, a young female, of the age of eighteen years, had fallen a victim to the seduction of a man whose age gave him the advantage of experience, and whose manners enabled him to give effect to his artful practices. The young lady was very young when she first became acquainted with the defendant. She is the daughter of a British Officer, a Deputy Commissary-General, who had retired to Italy with his family, where they had first the misfortune to meet the defendant. The young lady in question was educated in a convent, where she attracted the approbation of all who know her; from thence she was removed to her father's house in Italy, where the defendant, Captain Bowles, first met her. This gentleman is an officer in the British army, and a man of fortune. He was about forty years of age, and was first introduced to Mr. Daniel's family by an Italian nobleman. Shortly after his first acquaintance with Miss Daniels, he professed an attachment to her, and made overtures of marriage to the lady's mother, and the only delay which was to take place on his part in having the marriage celebrated, was until he heard from England respecting some property of his which was then in litigation, and it was necessary to ascertain the precise state of it before he could make the necessary settlements. The gentleman was received into the family as a son ; but a short time afterwards, to the great affliction of the young lady's father and family, she left her parental roof at night, and elopes with Captain Bowles. He brought her to England, where she was for some time secreted from her friends, when she was at length found by a female relative.—After the examination of witnesses, Mr. Serjeant Vaughan replied ; and the Lord Chief Justice in summing up expressed his regret to see a British officer taking advantage of an introduction to another in the same service. He regretted to hear it said that such things were common among military men. He did not believe it, it was a libel ; honour and courage were generally united, and the British officers were distinguished for both. If the Jury thought the young lady had been guilty of any levity of conduct, it would go to lessen the amount of damages, and he could not say that she had altogether acted prudently.—The Jury, after a moment's consultation, found a verdict for the plaintiff—Damages £1,500.

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

UNION-HALL.—A man, who gave his name Dennis Mullowny, was brought before the sitting Magistrate, charged with being drunk on the preceding night, and while in that state, with having assaulted several watchmen ; from whose evidence it appeared that a great number of Irishmen assembled at a house in Frying-pan-alley, for the purpose of "waking" one of their deceased countrymen. Dennis was amongst the company, and, as usual on such occasions, he, as well as others, got drunk in the apartment where the corpse was placed. A fight took place between a Munster and a Connaught man, which was the prelude to a general row, in which it appeared Dennis joined with all his heart and soul, and in the midst of the affray the coffin, containing the corpse, was knocked off the trestles on which it was placed. The disturbance now became so great, that the neighbours were afraid to approach the house ; when, after an interval, six watchmen proceeded to the spot, who, after meeting with some resistance on their entrance, at length got into the room, where a scene of the greatest confusion was described to have occurred. The moment the watchmen made their appearance, a general cry of "Douse the glim!" was raised, and in less than a second every candle in the room was extinguished. The battle now raged with great fury on all sides, the guardians of the night being attacked by the Irish party ; the former ultimately got the better of them, and cleared the room in a short time of all the rioters except Dennis Mullowny, who swore that he should stick by the corpse of Larry until he saw him safely laid in the ground. He made an attempt to eject the watchmen by flourishing a poker about, but he was at last dragged away from the coffin, (which he clung round on finding that he was overpowered,) and lodged in the watchhouse. The watchmen one and all declared that Dennis had given them a great deal of trouble, and that they were obliged to use their cudgels over his head before they could reduce him to a state of tranquillity.

Dennis—Your Worship, they have kilt me ; they have knocked my head quite off my shoulders ; and all for what ? Why, for taking a little drop too much to the memory of an ould friend.

Mr. Chambers—Were you drunk, Mullowny ?—By my soul, and that I was, your honour, many a time.

Magistrate—But I mean on this occasion ?—Yes, Sir, and that I was, as drunk as you please.

Magistrate—Do you make a point of always getting drunk when you attend the "wake" of one of your countrymen ?

Mullowny—Lord love you, Sir, it would be an insult to the friends of the corpse, and to the corpse itself, if you didn't get drunk at the wake.

Mr. Chambers—But when you get drunk at a wake, Mullowny, that is no reason that you should keep a whole neighbourhood awake. I must fine you 5*s.* for being drunk.

Mullowny—Your Worship, if you gave me the King's dominions, I couldn't raise 5*s.*

Mr. Chambers—Will you promise me that you will not get drunk at a wake again, for the next twelvemonths ?—By my soul, and that I can't, your honour, for so sure as I go to a wake I must get drunk.

Mr. Chambers—Then you must promise that you will not attend a wake.

Mullowny—Then, Sir, I give you the word of a man, that for the next twelvemonths I shall keep away from the wakes of all my dear countrymen that die at this side of the water.

Mr. Chambers was satisfied with this undertaking, and Dennis was permitted to leave the office.

DREADFUL FIRE AT BRISTOL.

The alarm of fire was first made about half-past eleven o'clock ; the first notice appeared to be given to the public by Mr. Oxley, at whose premises, in Wine-street, it occurred. We cannot vouch for our accuracy with respect to the origin of the fire ; but, from the inquiries we have made, corroborated by the evidence on the inquest, we do not doubt its correctness. There were in the house Mr. and Mrs. Oxley, an infant six weeks old, and a child about seven, who were sleeping in the front room on the first floor ; the shop-girl and a child about four years old in the attic, and the servant maid, with two others, in the garret. These were the whole of the inmates. The house is one of those built, like many others in large cities, more for the convenience of trade than residence ; the stair-case was narrow, and there were no back rooms. The fire originated in the bed-room on the first floor. It appears that a candle or rush-light was kept constantly burning, and from the smallness of the room, it was necessarily near the bed. Mrs. Oxley had awoke with the intention of suckling her infant, and while the child was at the breast she fell asleep. It is feared that in moving the bed-clothes, she must have put them in contact with the candle. Mr. Oxley was awoke by a sensation of apparent suffocation ; and what must have been his horror to find his bed, on which himself, his wife, and infant were lying, in flames, and the room filled to the most suffocating degree with smoke! He first attempted to extinguish the flames, but without effect ; but his face, his hands, and arms, are dreadfully burnt. He then tried to rouse his wife, but if she was awake she must have fainted instantly. Finding he could not rouse her, and losing his presence of mind from excess of pain, agitation, and suffocation, he ran down stairs naked as he was, and rushed into the street crying out for assistance. The flames in the window had, by this time, collected some half-dozen persons in front of the house ; in reply to their questions, the unhappy husband and father could only exclaim, "Oh, for God's sake, save my wife, save my children !—there are three children at the top of the house." He attempted to rush back into the house, but the moment he opened the door, the narrow stair-case acted like a flue, and put the whole premises in one blaze of liquid fire ; the burning element poured out of every window, and reached half across the street.

Just previous to this moment, the attick window was observed to open, and a young woman, with an infant four years old, both in a state of nudity, presented themselves to the view of the crowd, which was beginning to collect. They begged her to remain a few minutes, till a ladder was brought ; but so rapidly were the flames gaining on her, that, in her despair, she threw the child out ; it fell on the lead that projects from under the drawing-room window ; a man rushed across the street to catch it ; his arm broke the fall, but it rebounded to the pavement. It was taken up bruised, but not so severely as might be expected : it will recover. In a moment after the child reached the ground, the young woman was seen to throw herself from the window ; she also fell upon the leads, and she was then caught by the people below ; she is much bruised and cut about the head and legs, but she is doing well. The servant girl had escaped out of the back-garret window, through Mr. Batten's house, taking with her one of the children. The remaining three children, with the unfortunate mother, fell victims to the devouring element! The details of the appearance they presented, when found, are too horrible and disgusting to recapitulate. We must refer our readers to the evidence that was taken at the inquest.

The engines arrived within a quarter of an hour or twenty minutes of the first alarm of the fire ; and to the great exertions that were made may be attributed the safety of the adjoining premises, and that it was confined to the house where it first broke out. The fire was entirely got under about half-past one or two o'clock.

At 11 o'clock on Saturday morning, J. B. Grindon, Esq., the Coroner, held an inquest at the Plume of Feathers, in Wine-street. The Jury first went and inspected the mutilated remains of the four bodies. The body of Mrs. Oxley was lying on a pallet ; on partially removing the coverlet, one of the most shocking spectacles we ever witnessed presented itself: not a particle of flesh remained, and the bones appeared a mere cinder ready to crumble into ashes ; the legs and arms were all broken short off at the first joints. The bones of the two youngest were lying together in a box, and the other body was taken up in a sheet, all lying on one bed. The jury were strongly moved at this shocking spectacle, and withdrew, with feelings of grief and horror depicted in their countenances. The names of the sufferers were—Sophia Oxley, the mother, aged about 35 ; and William, Sophia, and Ann, the children, varying from six weeks to nine years, but we have not been able to ascertain the precise age of each.

The Jury were occupied for a long time in hearing evidence touching this disaster, after which they returned a verdict of—Accidentally burnt.

